Coronare Filium, To make one's ſon a prieſt. Anciently, Lords of Manors, whoſe tenants held by Villenage, did prohibit them coronare filios, leſt ſuch Lords ſhould loſe a villein by their entering into holy orders: For ordination changed their condition, and gave them liberty, to the prejudice of the Lord, who could before claim them as his natives or born ſervants——Homo Coronatus was one who had received the firſt tonſure, as preparatory to ſuperior orders; and the tonſure was in form of a corona, or crown of thorns, Cowel,

Coronatore Eligendo, Is a writ which lies on the death or diſcharge of any Coroner, directed to the Sheriff out of the Chancery, to call together the freeholders of the county, for the choice of a new coroner; and to certify into the Chancey, both the election and the name of the party elected, and alſo to give him his oath, &c. Reg. Orig. 177. F. N. B. 163. There are uſually four coroners in a county, in ſome counties fewer, and in ſome but one, according as the uſage is; and if any of them dieth, or is diſcharged, then ſhall iſſue this writ.

Coronatore exonerando, Is a writ for the diſcharge of a coroner, for negligence, or inſufficiency in the diſcharge of his duty: and where coroners are ſo far engaged in any other public buſineſs, that they cannot attend the office; or if they are diſabled by old age or diſeaſe, to execute it; or have not ſufficient lands, &c. they may be diſcharged by this writ. 2 Inſt. 32. 2 Hawk. P. C. 44. But if any ſuch writ be grounded on an untrue ſuggeſtion, the coroner may procure a commiſſion from the Chancery to inquire thereof; and if the ſuggeſtion be diſproved, the King may make a ſuperſedeas to the ſheriff, that he do not remove the coroner; or if he have removed him, that he ſuffer him to execute the office. Reg. Orig. 177, 178. F. N. B. 164.

Coroner, (Coronator, a Corona) is an ancient officer of this realm. Mention is made of him in King Athelſtan's charter to Beverly, Anno 925. and he is ſo called, becauſe he deals wholly for the King and Crown.

Herein is to be conſidered:

I. The Election and Juriſdiction of the Coroner.
II. His Power and Duty, with his Fees for the Execution of his Duty, and his Puniſhment for the Breach of it.

I. Of the Election and Juriſdiction of the Coroner.

This officer, by the ſtat. of Weſtm. c. 10. ought to be a ſufficient perſon, that is the wiſeſt and diſcreeteſt knight, that beſt would and might attend upon ſuch an office: and there is a writ in the regiſter, Niſi ſit Miles, &c. whereby it appears it was good cauſe to remove a coroner choſen, if he were not a knight, and had not an hundred ſhillings rent of freehold (now obſolete.) Coroners are to be men of good ability, and have lands in fee in the county where choſen, to anſwer all people; and if inſufficient, the county ſhall anſwer for them. 2 Inſt. 174. The Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, is the ſovereign coroner of the whole kingdom in perſon whereſoever he is. 4 Rep. 57. There are alſo ſpecial coroners, within divers liberties, as well as the ordinary officers in every county; as the Coroner of the Verge, which is a certain compaſs about the King's court; who is likewiſe called Coroner of the King's Houſe. Cromp. Juriſ. 102.

The King's Coroner ſhall execute his office within the Verge. 32 H. 8. c. 20. ſect. 7. And ſome corporations and colleges are licenſed by charter to appoint their coroners within their own precincts. 4 Inſt. 271. And for what ariſes on the high ſea, we read of coroners appointed by the King or his Admiral. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 53. See Coroner of the King's Houſhold.

II. Of the Coroners Power, Duty, and Fees, &c.

The office of coroners eſpecially concerns the pleas of the crown; and they are conſervators of the peace in the county where generally elected. Their authority is judicial and miniſterial: Judicial, where one comes to a violent death, and to take and enter appeals of murder, pronounce judgment upon outlawries, &c. And to inquire of lands and goods, and eſcapes of murderers, treaſure trove, wreck of the ſea, deodands, &c. The Miniſterial power is where the coroners execute the King's writs, on exception to the ſheriff, as being party to a ſuit, kin to either of the parties, on default of the ſheriff, &c. 4 Inſt. 271. 1 Plowd. 73. And the authority of coroners does not determine by the demiſe of the King. 2 Inſt. 174.

Where coroners are empowered to act as judges, as in taking an inquiſition of death, or receiving an appeal of felony, &c. The act of one of them is of the ſame force as if they had all joined; but after one of them has proceeded to act, the act of another of them will be void: And where they are authoriſed to act only miniſterially, in the execution of a proceſs directed to them upon the incapacity of the ſheriff, their acts are void if they do not all join. 2 Hawk. P. C. 52. Hob. 70.

So that coroners as miniſters muſt all join; but as judges, they may divide. But two coroners ought to be judges in rediſſeiſin; and though one ſerves to pronounce an outlawry, the entry ought to be in the name of all of them: And ſo of all proceſſes directed to the coroners. Staundf. 53. Jenk. Cent. 85.

If the ſheriff is either plaintiff or defendant, or one of the cogniſees, the writ muſt be directed to the coroner. Cro. Car. 300. But the coroner is not the officer of B. R. but where the ſheriff is improper; not where there is no ſheriff; for if the ſheriff die, the coroner cannot execute a writ. In caſe of two coroners, if one is challenged, the other may execute the writ, &c. yet both make but one officer: It is the ſame with two ſheriffs of a city, &c. 1 Salk. 144. A venire facias ſhall go to the coroner, where the ſheriff is a party, or the defendant is a ſervant to the ſheriff, &c. but it ought to be on a principal challenge to the favour. Moor 470.

On defaults of ſheriffs, coroners are to impanel juries, and return iſſues on juries not appearing, &c. 2 H. 5. cap. 8. As the ſheriff in his torn might inquire of all felonies by the common law, ſaving the death of a man; ſo the coroner can inquire of no felony but of the death of a perſon, and that ſuper viſum corporis. 4 Inſt. 271. By magna charta, cap. 17. no ſheriff, &c. or coroner, ſhall hold pleas of the crown: But by ſtat. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 10. it is enacted, that coroners ſhall lawfully attach and preſent pleas of the crown; and that ſheriffs ſhall have counter-rolls with the coroners, as well of appeals, as of inqueſts, &c.

Coroners, before the ſtat. Magna Charta, might not only receive accuſations againſt offenders, but might try them: But ſince that ſtatute, they cannot proceed ſo far; and appeals before them, are removable into B. R &c. by certiorari, directed to the coroners and ſheriffs, &c. Though proceſs may be awarded by the ſheriff and coroner, or the coroner only, in the county-court on appeals, till the exigent, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 51.

By the ſtatute de Officio Coronatoris, 4 Ed. 1. The coroner is to go to the place where any perſon is ſlain or ſuddenly dead, and ſhall by his warrant to the bailiffs, conſtables, &c. ſummon a jury out of the four or five neighbouring towns, to make inquiry upon view of the body; and the coroner and jury are to inquire into the manner of killing, and all circumſtances that occaſioned the party's death, who were preſent, whether the dead perſon was known, where he lay the night before, &c. Examine the body if there be any ſigns of ſtrangling about the neck, or of cords about the members, &c. Alſo all wounds ought to be viewed, and inquiry made with what weapons, &c. And the coroner may ſend his warrant for witneſſes, and take their examination in writing; and if any appear guilty of the murder, he ſhall inquire what goods and lands he hath, and then the dead body is to be buried. A coroner may likewiſe commit the perſon to priſon who is by his inquiſition found guilty of the murder; and the witneſſes are to be bound by recogniſance to appear at the next aſſizes, etc.

When the jury have brought in their verdict, the coroner is to inroll and return the inquiſition, whether it be brought in murder, manſlaughter, etc. to the juſtices of the next gaol delivery of the county, or certify it into B. R. where the murderers ſhall be proceeded againſt. 2 Rol. Abr. 32. Upon an inquiſition taken before the coroner, he muſt put into writing the effect of the evidence given to the jury before him; and bind them to appear, etc. which is to be certified to the court with the inquiſition; and neglecting it ſhall be fined. 1 and 2 P. and M. cap. 13. 1 Lil. Abr. 327.

The word Murdravit is not neceſſary in a coroner's inquiſition; though it is in an indictment for killing another perſon. 1 Salk. 377. It is not neceſſary that the inquiſition be taken in the place where the body was viewed. 2 Hawk. 48. But a coroner has no authority to take an inquiſition of death without a view of the body; and if the inqueſt be taken by him without ſuch view, it is void. 2 Lev. 140

The coroher may in convenient time take up a dead body that hath been buried, in order to view it; but if it be buried ſo long that he can diſcover nothing from the viewing it; or if there be danger of infection, the inqueſt ought not to be taken by the coroner, but by juſtices of peace, by the teſtimony of witneſſes; for none can take it on view, but the coroner. Bro. Coron. 167, 173. If the body is buried, the town ſhall be amerced; as it ſhall be if the body is ſuffered to lie ſo long that it ſtinks. 2 Danv. Abr. 209, etc. Where the body hath lain for ſome time, that it cannot be judged how it came by its death, that muſt be recorded, that at the coming of the juſtices of aſſiſe, the town where, etc. may be amerced on ſight of the coroner's rolls.

A coroner may find any nuſance by which the death of a man happens; and the townſhip ſhall be amerced on ſuch finding. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 536. If one is ſlain in the day, and the murderer eſcapes, the town where done ſhall be amerced, and the coroner is to inquire thereof on view of the body. 3 Hen 7. c. 1. A coroner may take an indictment upon view of the body; as alſo an appeal, within a year after the death of one ſlain. Wood's Inſt. 491. But a coroner, ſuper viſum corporis, cannot make an inquiſition of an accceſſary after the murder; though he may of acceſſaries before the fact. Moor 29.

Coroners ought to ſit and inquire on the body of every priſoner that dies in priſon: They have no juriſdiction within the verge of the King's courts; nor of offences, committed at ſea, or between high and low water mark when the tide is in; though they have in arms and creeks of the ſea. 3 Inſt. 134. If a body is drowned, and cannot be found to be viewed, the inquiſition muſt be taken by juſtices of peace, on the examination of witneſſes, etc. 5 Rep. 110.

Where a coroner's inqueſt is quaſhed, he muſt make a new one ſuper viſum corporis: And a coroner may attend and amend his inquiſition in matters of form: But if he miſbehaves himſelf, and a melius inquirendum is granted upon it, that inquiſition muſt be taken by the ſheriffs or commiſſioners, upon affidavits, and not ſuper viſum corporis; becauſe none but a coroner can take inquiſition ſuper viſum, etc. and he is not to be truſted again. 1 Salk. 190. 2 Danv. Abr. 210.

A coroner's inquiſition being final, the coroner ought to hear counſel and evidence on both ſides. 2 Sid. 90, 101. The coroner muſt admit evidence, as well againſt the King's intereſt, as for it; but it hath been held, that if a perſon be killed by another, and it is certainly known that he did it, the coroner's jury are to hear the evidence only for the King; and inquire whether the killing were by malice, or without malice, etc. Per Hale C. J. Where a coroner would not admit of evidence againſt the King, to prove a felo de ſe to be non compos mentis, his inquiſition was ſet aſide; and a new inquiſition taken, whereby it was found that the party was non compos. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 60. If there be an inquiſition of manſlaughter or murder, and alſo an indictment by the grand jury againſt one, and he is arraigned, and found Not Guilty on the indictment; here it is neceſſary to quaſh the coroner's inquiſition, or to arraign the party upon it, and acquit him on that alſo: For otherwiſe it ſtands as a record againſt him, whereon he may poſſibly be outlawed. 2 Hale 65. And where a perſon found guilty by the coroner's inqueſt, pleads, and is acquitted by the petit jury; they muſt give in who it was that killed the man, which ſerves as an indictment againſt that other perſon, and if they cannot tell who, they may mention ſome fictitious name. Ibid.

As to the Fees due for the Execution of his Office.

By the Stat. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 10. Coroners ſhall demand or take nothing for doing their offices: And by the ancient law of England, none having any office concerning the adminiſtration of juſtice, could take any fee for doing his office; and therefore this ſtatute was only in affirmance of the common law. By 3 Hen. 7. cap. 1. upon an inquiſition taken on view of the body, the coroner ſhall have 13*s.* 4*d.* fee of the goods of the murderer; and if he be gone, then out of the amercement of the town for the eſcape. Though the 1 H. 8. c. 7. enacts, that where a perſon is ſlain by miſadventure, the coroner is to take no fee, on pain of 40*s.*

Juſtices of aſſiſe and of peace have power to inquire of and puniſh extortions of coroners, and alſo their defaults. Stat. Ibid. By the Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 29. for every inquiſition, not taken upon the view of a body dying in gaol, which ſhall be taken by any coroner in any townſhip or place contributory to the rates directed by Stat. 12 Geo. 2. c. 29. the ſum of 20*s.* and for every mile which he ſhall travel from the place of his abode, the further ſum of 9*d.* ſhall be paid him out of the money ariſing by the ſaid rates. And that for every inquiſition taken upon the view of a body dying in gaol, ſo much money not exceeding 20*s.* ſhall be paid him as the juſtices at ſeſſions ſhall think fit to allow, out of the money ariſing from the ſaid rates. Provided that over and above the recompence hereby appointed for inquiſitions taken as aforeſaid, the coroner who ſhall take an inquiſition upon the view of a body ſlain or murdered, ſhall have the fee of 13*s.* 4*d.* payable by Stat. 3 H. 7. c. 1. payable out of the goods of the ſlayer or murderer, or out of the amerciaments upon the townſhip, if the ſlayer or murderer eſcape. Coroner taking further fees guilty of extortion.

Provided that no coroner of the King's houſhold, and of the verge of the King's palaces, nor any coroner of the Admiralty, nor of the County Palatine of Durham, nor of the city of London and borough of Southwark, or of any of the franchiſes belonging to the ſaid city, nor any coroner of any city, borough, town, liberty or franchiſe not contributory to the rates directed by Stat. 12 G. 2. c. 29. or within which ſuch rates have not been uſually aſſeſſed, ſhall be intitled to any fee, recompence or benefit given by this act.

With regard to the Puniſhment of Coroners for Miſbehaviour.

If a coroner be remiſs in coming to do his office, when he is ſent for, etc. he ſhall be amerced by virtue of the above mentioned ſtatute De coronatoribus. S. P. C. 51. Salk. 377. H. P. C. 170.

If a coroner hath been guilty of any corrupt practice, bribery, etc. in taking the inquiſition, a melius inquirendum may be awarded for taking a new one by ſpecial commiſſioners, etc. Coroners concealing felonies, etc. are to be fined, and ſuffer one year's impriſonment. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 9.

cap 9. Alſo for miſmanagement in the coroner, filing the inquiſition may be ſtopped. 1 Mod. 82. A coroner's inquiſition is not traverſable: If it be found before the coroner ſuper viſum corporis, that one was felo de ſe, the executors or adminiſtrators of the deceaſed, it is ſaid, cannot traverſe it. 3 Inſt. 55. But it has been held that the inqueſt being moved into B. R by certiorari, may be there traverſed by the executor or adminiſtrator of the deceaſed. 2 Hawk. 54. And it hath been adjudged, that the inquiſition of felo de ſe is traverſable; though fugam fecit is not. 2 Leo. 152.

If a coroner be convicted of extortion, wilful neglect of duty or miſdemeanor in his office, the court before whom he ſhall be ſo convicted, may adjudge that he ſhall be removed from his office.

Coroner of the King's Houſhold, Hath an exempt juriſdiction within the verge, and the coroner of the county cannot intermeddle within it; as the Coroner of the King's Houſe may not intermeddle within the county out of the verge. 2 Hawk. 45. If an inquiſition be found before the coroner of the county, and the coroner of the verge, where the homicide was committed in the county, and it is ſo entered and certified, it will be error. 4 Rep. 45. But if a murder be committed within the verge, and the King removes before any indictment taken by the Coroner of the King's Houſhold; the coroner of the county, and the Coroner of the King's Houſe ſhall inquire of the ſame: And according to Sir Edw. Coke, the coroner of the county might inquire thereof at the Common law. 2 Hawk. 45. 2 Inſt. 550. If the ſame perſon be coroner of the county, and alſo of the King's Houſe, an indictment of death taken before him as coroner, both of the King's Houſe, and of the county, is good. 4 Rep. 46. 2 Inſt 134.

By the Stat. 33 H. 8. 12. Par. 1 & 3. It is ordained, That all inquiſitions made upon the view of perſons ſlain, within any of the King's palaces or houſes, or any other houſe or houſes wherein his Majeſty ſhall happen to be abiding in his royal perſon, ſhall be taken by the Coroner for the time being of the King's Houſhold, without any aſſiſting of another coroner of any ſhire within this realm, by the oaths of twelve or more of the yeomen officers of the King's Houſhold, returned by the two Clerks Controllers, the Clerks of the Checks, and the Clerks Marſhal, or one of them, of the ſaid Houſhold, to whom the ſaid Coroner of the Houſhold ſhall direct his precept; and the ſaid Coroner ſhall certify under his ſeal, and the ſeals of ſuch perſons as ſhall be ſworn before him, all ſuch inquiſitions before the Maſter or Lord Steward of the Houſhold; who hath the appointment of ſuch coroner, &c.

Coroner of London. By the charter of King Ed. 4. the mayor and commonalty of London may grant the office of coroner to whom they pleaſe; and no other coroner but he that belongs to the city, ſhall have any power there: Alſo the Lord Mayor, &c. may chuſe two coroners in Southwark. When any one is killed, or comes to an untimely death in London, the coroner upon notice ſhall attend where the body is, and forthwith cauſe the beadles of the ward to ſummon a jury to make the neceſſary inquiry, how ſuch perſon came by his death: And after inquiſition taken, he ſhall give a certificate to the church-warden, clerk, or ſexton of the pariſh, to the intent the corpſe may be buried: The coroner's fees here formerly amounted to 25 s. now to above double that ſum; unleſs the friends of the deceaſed are poor, and then he ſhall execute his office for nothing. Cit. Lib. 46, 47. The coroners in London and Middleſex, and in other Cities, &c. may bail felons and priſoners, in ſuch manor as hath been heretofore accuſtomed. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13. ſect. 6. 1 Lil. Abr. 327.

What anciently belonged to coroners, you may read at large in Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 5, 6, 7 & 8. Britton, cap. 1. and Fleta, lib. 1. c. 18.

Corone, (Fr.) All matters of the crown, were heretofore reduced to this law head or title; they are the things that concern treaſon, felony, and divers other offences, by the Common law, and by ſtatute. Shep. Epit. 367.

Corporal Oath, And how it is adminiſtered. See Oath.

Corporation, (Corporatio) Is a body politic or incorporate, ſo called, as the perſons are made into a body, and of capacity to take and grant, &c. Or it is an aſſembly and joining together of many into one fellowſhip and brotherhood, whereof one is head and chief, and the reſt are the body; and this head and body knit together, make the corporation: Alſo it is conſtituted of ſeveral members like unto the natural body, and framed by fiction of law to endure in perpetual ſucceſſion.

Of corporations ſome are ſole, ſome aggregate; ſole, when in one ſingle perſon, as the King, a Biſhop, Dean, &c. Aggregate, which is the moſt uſual, conſiſting of many perſons, as Mayor and Commonalty, Dean and Chapter, &c. Likewiſe corporations are ſpiritual or temporal; ſpiritual, of Biſhops, Deans, Archdeacons, Parſons, Vicars, &c. Temporal, of Mayors, Commonalty, Bailiffs and Burgeſſes, &c. and ſome corporations are of a mixt nature, compoſed of ſpiritual and temporal perſons, ſuch as heads of colleges and hoſpitals, &c. All corporations are ſaid to be Eccleſiaſtical, or Lay.

Herein is to be conſidered:

I. How they are created.
II. Their Intereſt and Juriſdiction.
III. How far their Acts are binding.
IV. How they are diſſolved.

I. How Corporations are created.

Bodies politic or incorporate may commence and be eſtabliſhed three manner of ways, viz. by preſcription, by letters patent, or by act of parliament; but are moſt commonly by patent or charter. 1 Inſt. 250. 3 Inſt. 202. 3 Rep. 73.

In making aggregate corporations, there muſt be, 1. Lawful authority. 2. Proper perſons to be incorporated. 3. A name of incorporation. 4. A place, without which no corporation can be made. 5. Words ſufficient in law to make a corporation. 10 Rep. 29, 123. 3 Rep. 73. The words incorpora, funda, &c. are not of neceſſity to be uſed in making corporations; but other words equivalent are ſufficient: And of ancient time, the inhabitants of a town were incorporated, when the King granted to them to have Guildam Mercatoriam. 2 Danv. Abr. 214. He that gave the firſt poſſeſſions to the corporation, is the founder. The pariſhioners or townſmen of a pariſh or town; and tenants of a manor, are to ſome purpoſes a corporation. Co. Lit. 95, 342.

If the King grants lands to the inhabitants of B. hæredibus & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, rendering a rent, for any thing touching theſe lands, this is a corporation; though not to other purpoſes: But if the King grants lands inhabitantibus de B. and they be not incorporated before, if no rent be reſerved to the King, the grant is void. 2 Danv. 214. If the King grants Hominibus de Iſlington to be diſcharged of toll, this is a good corporation to this intent; but not to purchaſe, &c. And by ſpecial words the King may make a limitted corporation, or a corporation for a ſpecial purpoſe. Ibid.

London is a corporation by preſcription; but though a corporation may be by preſcription, it ſhall be intended that it did originally derive its authority by grant from the King; for the King is the head of the commonwealth, and all the commonwealth, in reſpect of him, is but one corporation; and all other corporations are but limbs of the greater body. 1 Lil. Abr. 330. A mayor and commonalty or corporation, cannot make another corporation, or commonalty. 1 Sid. 290. The city of London cannot make a corporation, becauſe that can only be created by the crown; but London, or any other corporation, may make a fraternity. 1 Salk. 193.

No perſons ſhall bear office in any corporation, &c. but ſuch as have received the ſacrament of the church, and taken the oaths. Stat. 13 Car. 2. c. 1. But ſee the Stat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 6. confirming officers in corporations. See By-Laws.

What perſons are capable of being elected members of a corporation, ſee Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, p. 23.

II. Of the intereſt and juriſdiction of corporations.

When a corporation is duly created, all incidents, as to purchaſe and grant, ſue and be ſued, &c. are tacitly annexed to it; and although no power to make laws is given by a ſpecial clauſe to a corporation, it is included by law in the very act of incorporating. Co. Lit. 264. A new charter doth not merge or extinguiſh any of the ancient privileges of the old charter. And if an ancient corporation is incorporated by a new name, yet their new body ſhall enjoy all the privileges that the old corporation had. Raym. 439 4 Rep. 37.

There are uſually granted in charters to corporations, divers franchiſes; as felons goods, waifs, eſtrays, treaſure trove, deodands, courts, and cogniſance of pleas, fairs, markets, aſſiſe of bread and beer, &c. 4 Rep. 65. Actions ariſing in corporations may be tried in the corporation courts; but if they try actions which ariſe not within their juriſdictions, and encroach upon the Common law, they ſhall be puniſhed for it. Lutw. 1571, 1572. Actions triable there, muſt, in general, mean, thoſe actions wherein the corporation is not intereſted.

There may be a corporation without a head: but where there is a head, all acts ought to be by and to the head; nor can they ſue without ſuch head; and if he dies, nothing can be done in the vacancy. 10 Rep. 30, 32 Co. Lit. 264. If land be given to a mayor and commonalty for their lives, they have an eſtate by intendment not determinable: ſo it is, if a feoffment be made of land to a dean and chapter, without mention of ſucceſſors.

In a caſe of ſole corporation, as biſhop, dean, parſon, &c. no chattel, either in action or poſſeſſion, ſhall go in ſucceſſion; but the executors or adminiſtrators of the biſhop, parſon, &c. ſhall have them: but it is otherwiſe of a corporation aggregate, as a dean and chapter, mayor and commonalty, and the like: for they in the judgment of law never die. And yet the caſe of the chamberlain of London differs from all theſe; his ſucceſſor, in his own name, may have execution of a recogniſance acknowledged to his predeceſſor for orphanage money; and the reaſon is, becauſe the corporation of the chamberlain is by cuſtom, which hath enabled the ſucceſſor to take and have ſuch recognizances, obligations, &c. that are made to his predeceſſor. Terms de Ley.

Though a ſole corporation cannot generally take in ſucceſſion goods and chattels, &c. yet it may take a fee-ſimple in ſucceſſion, by the word ſucceſſors. Co. Lit. 8, 9, 46. Aggregate corporations may take not only goods and chattels, but lands in fee-ſimple, without the word ſucceſſors, for the reaſon before mentioned. 4 Inſt. 249. And ſucceſſion in a body politic, is an inheritance in a body private. If a leaſe for years be made to a biſhop and his ſucceſſors, it is ſaid his executors ſhall have it in auter droit; for regularly no chattel can go in ſucceſſion in caſe of a ſole corporation, no more than if a leaſe be made to a man and his heirs, it can go to his heirs. Co. Lit 46.

Grants of corporations are to be by deed, under their common ſeal, and are good without delivery; for the common ſeal gives perfection to corporation deeds. Dav. 44. An obligation ſealed with the common ſeal of a corporation, if the mayor ſigns it, he is ſuable if the corporation be diſſolved: but if two of the members ſign it, the particular perſons are not bound by it. 2 Lev. 137. Raym. 152. A releaſe of a mayor for any ſum of money due to the corporation, made in his own name, is not good in law; the corporation muſt join and do it by their common ſeal. Terms de Ley.

A corporation which hath a head, may make a perſonal command without writing; but a corporation aggregate without a head cannot. Lutw. 1497. A corporation aggregate may employ any one in ordinary ſervices, without deed; though not to appear for them, in any act which concerns their intereſt or title. 1 Ventr. 47, 48. Such a corporation may appoint a bailiff to take a diſtreſs, without deed or warrant. 1 Salk. 191. But cannot without deed command a bailiff to enter into lands for a condition broken; for ſuch command without deed is void. Cro. 815.

Though a corporation cannot do an act in pais without their common ſeal, they may do an act upon record; and the reaſon is, becauſe they are eſtopped by the record to ſay it is not their act. 1 Salk. 192. A promiſe to a corporation is good without deed. 2 Lev. 252. The head of a corporation aggregate may not be charged with the act of his predeceſſor if it be not by common ſeal, or for ſuch things as come to the uſe of the whole body or ſociety. 1 And. 23, 196.

A corporation may do an act in that capacity, to one of themſelves in his natural capacity; and any member in his natural capacity may perform an act to the corporation it its politic capacity; and ſo they may ſue one another, in their diſtinct capacities. 1 Shep. Abr. 436. Treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery, &c. will not lie againſt a corporation; but it muſt be brought againſt the perſons that do the treſpaſs by their proper names: though if the beaſts of the corporation treſpaſs on a man in his ground, action of treſpaſs lies againſt them for this: proceſs of outlawry will not lie againſt a corporation; nor capias or exigent, but diſtreſs. 22 Aſſ. 67. 39 Ed. 3, 13. 21 Ed. 4.

A corporation cannot ſue, or appear in perſon, but by attorney: they cannot commit treaſon or felony, or be excommunicate, &c. They may not be executors, or adminiſtrators, be jointenants, truſtees, &c. Nor ſhall the members of a corporation be regularly witneſſes for the corporation. 10 Rep. 32. 11 Rep. 98. Co. Lit. 134. But they may be disfranchiſed, and then be witneſſes; though not ſurrender by conſent. Yet in ſome caſes the judges now admit their teſtimony without disfranchiſement, where the intereſt is remote. Attachment doth not lie againſt a corporation. Raym. 152.

Corporations may have power not only to infranchiſe freemen but to disfranchiſe a member, and deprive him of his freedom; if he doth any act to the prejudice of the body, or contrary to his oath, &c. Though for conſpiring to do any thing contrary to his duty, or for words of contempt againſt the chief officers, he may not be diſfranchiſed; but he may be committed till he find ſureties for his good behaviour. 11 Rep. 98. 5 Mod. 257. A corporation cannot disfranchiſe for breach of a by-law. 1 Lil. 331. And one wrongfully disfranchiſed may be reſtored, and have his remedy by mandamus, &c. in B. R. An alderman or freeman of a corporation cannot be removed from his freedom or place without good cauſe, and a cuſtom to remove them ad libitum is void, becauſe the party hath a freehold therein. Cro. Jac. 540.

A perſon may be bound to the good behaviour for words ſpoke againſt mayors, &c. but he may not be indicted for it: and if juſtices of a corporation deny to do right, it is a forfeiture of their exemption from the inquiry of the juſtices of the county. Mod. Caſ. 125, 164. Head officers of corporations are to redreſs abuſes of merchant-ſtrangers, &c. or the franchiſe ſhall be ſeized, Stat. 9 Eliz. c. 3. ſect. 1. and have authority in many caſes by ſtatute; for which ſee Mayors.

No ſtrangers ſhall ſell by retail any woollen or linen cloth, or mercery wares, in corporate towns, except at fairs, on pain of forfeiture, &c. But ſuch perſons may ſell wares by wholeſale, and cloth of their own making by retail. 1 & 2 P. & M. cap. 7. Bodies politic eccleſiaſtical may make leaſes for three lives, or twenty-one years, under the reſtrictions in the acts 1 Eliz. c. 19. ſect. 5, 13. Eliz. c. 20. If land is given in fee to a dean and chapter, or to a mayor and commonalty, &c. and after ſuch body politic or incorporate is diſſolved, the donor ſhall have the land again, and not the lord by eſcheat. Co. Lit. 31.

The corporation of the city of London is to anſwer for all particular miſdemeanors, which are committed in any of the courts of juſtice within the city; and for all other general miſdemeanors committed within the city: ſo it is conceived of all other corporations. 1 Lil. Abr. 329. If a common officer of a town doth any thing for their common uſe, it is reaſonable the corporate town ſhould be anſwerable for it. 1 Leon. 215.

III. How far the acts of corporations are binding.

A corporation is properly an inveſting the people of the place with the local government thereof, and therefore their laws ſhall be binding to ſtrangers; but a fraternity is ſome people of a place united together in reſpect of a myſtery and buſineſs into a company, and their laws and ordinances cannot bind ſtrangers, for they have not a local power. Salk. 193.

No maſters and wardens, &c. of any myſtery, or other corporation, ſhall make any by-laws or ordinances in diminution mination of the King's prerogative, or againſt the common profit of the people; except the ſame be approved by the Lord Chancellor, or Chief Juſtices, &c. on pain of 40 l.

And ſuch bodies corporate ſhall not make any acts or ordinances for the reſtraining perſons to ſue in the King's courts for remedy, &c. under the like penalty. Stat. 19 Hen. 7. cap. 7. Ordinances made by corporations, to be obſerved on pain of impriſonment, or of forfeiture of goods, &c. are contrary to Magna Charta. 2 Inſt. 47, 54.

But penalties may be inflicted by by-laws, which may be recovered by diſtreſs or action of debt: and a cuſtom for the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, to commit a citizen for not accepting of the livery, &c. was held a good cuſtom, being for the good government of the city. 5 Mod. 320.

Corporations may not, by bond, or otherwiſe, reſtrain any apprentice, &c. from keeping ſhop in the corporation under the penalty of 40 l. Stat. 28 H. 8. c. 5.

In acts done by corporations, the conſent of the major part ſhall be binding, by 33 H. 8. cap. 27.

IV. How corporations are diſſolved.

A corporation may be diſſolved, for it is created upon a truſt; and if that be broken it is forfeited. 4 Mod. 58.

Corporations are diſſolved by forfeiture of their charter, miſuſer, &c, upon the writ quo warranto brought; by ſurrender, or by act of parliament; and if they neglect to chooſe officers, or make falſe elections, &c. it is a forfeiture of the corporation. 4 Rep. 77.

But by Stat. 11 Geo. 1. c. 4. No corporation ſhall be diſſolved, for any default to chooſe a mayor, &c. but the electors are ſtill to proceed to election; and if no election be made, the court of King's Bench ſhall iſſue a mandamus requiring the electors to chooſe ſuch mayor, &c.

By 2 Ann. c. 20. Where perſons intrude into the office of mayor, &c. of a corporation, a quo warranto ſhall be brought againſt the uſurpers, who ſhall be ouſted, and fined: and none are to execute an office in a corporation for more than a year. See further Black. Com. 1 V. 467, 476, 477, 479, 484. 2 V. 430. 3 V. 80. 4 V. 57, 432. And the Index to Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly.

With reſpect to corporations, or communities of old, as obſerved by Robertſon, the forming of cities into communities, corporations, or bodies politic, and granting them the privilege of municipal juriſdiction, contributed more than any other cauſe to introduce regular government, police and arts, and to diffuſe them over Europe. Louis the Groſs, in France, to counterbalance his potent vaſſals, conferred new privileges on the towns ſituated within his domaine, called Charters of community, and formed the inhabitants into corporations, or bodies politic, to be governed by a council and magiſtrates of their own nomination. About the ſame period the great cities in Germany began to acquire like immunities; and the practice quickly ſpread over Europe, and was adopted in Spain, England, Scotland, and all the other feudal kingdoms. Corporeal Inheritance, In houſes, lands, &c. Vide Inheritance.

Corpſe, ſtealing of. If any one in taking up a dead body ſteals the ſhroud, or other apparel, it will be felony. 3 Inſt. 110. 12 Rep. 113. 1 Hal. P. C. 515. But ſtealing the corpſe itſelf, only, is not felony. Black. Com. 4 V. 236. But it is puniſhable as a miſdemeanor by indictment at Common law.

Corpus Chriſti Day, Is a feaſt inſtituted in the year 1264, in honour of the bleſſed ſacrament: to which alſo a college in Oxford is dedicated. It is mentioned in the Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 21.

Corpus cum Cauſa, Is a writ iſſuing out of the Chancery, to remove both the body and record, touching the cauſe of any man lying in execution upon a judgment for debt, into the King's Bench, &c. there to lie till he have ſatisfied the judgment. F. N. B. 251. See Habeas Corpus.

Corrector of the Staple, Is a clerk belonging to the ſtaple, that writeth and recordeth the bargains of merchants there made. 27 Ed. 3. ſtat. 2. cap. 22 & 23.

Corredium and Conredium, The ſame with corrodium. See Corody.

Corruption of Blood, (corruptio ſanguinis) Is an infection growing to the ſtate of a man, and to his iſſue; and is where a perſon is attainted of treaſon or felony, by means whereof his blood is ſaid to be corrupted, and neither his children, nor any of his blood, can be heirs to him or any other anceſtor: alſo if he is of the nobility, or a gentleman, he and all his poſterity by the attainder are rendered baſe and ignoble: but by pardon of the King, the children born afterwards may inherit the land of their anceſtor, purchaſed at the time of the pardon or after; but ſo cannot they, who were born before the pardon. Terms de Ley.

If a man that hath land in right of his wife hath iſſue, and his blood is corrupt by attainder of felony, and the King pardons him; in this caſe, if the wife dies before him, he ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy, for the corruption of the blood of that iſſue: though it is otherwiſe, if he hath iſſue after the pardon; for then he ſhould be tenant by the curteſy, although the iſſue which he had before the pardon be not inheritable. 13 H. 7. c. 17.

A ſon attainted of treaſon or felony in the life of his anceſtor, obtains the King's pardon before the death of his anceſtor, he ſhall not be heir to the ſaid anceſtor, but the land ſhall rather eſcheat to the lord of the fee by the corruption of blood. 26 Aſſ. pl. 32 H. 8.

If the father of a perſon attainted die ſeiſed of an eſtate of inheritance, during his life, no younger brother can be heir; for the elder brother, though attainted, is ſtill a brother, and no other can be heir to his father, while he is alive; but if he die before the father, the younger brother ſhall be heir. 2 Hawk. P. C. 457. See further Co. Lit. 8, 391. Dyer 48. 3 Inſt. 211.

Corruption of blood from an attainder is ſo high that it cannot be abſolutely ſalved but by act of parliament; for the King's pardon doth not reſtore the blood ſo as to make the perſon attainted capable either of inheriting others, or being inherited himſelf by any one born before the pardon. 1 Inſt. 391, 392. 2 Hawk. 458. A ſtatute which ſaves the corruption of blood, impliedly ſaves the deſcent of the land to the heir; and it prevents the corruption of blood ſo far: alſo it ſaves the wife's dower, &c. But nevertheleſs the land ſhall be forfeited for the life of the offender. 3 Inſt. 47. 1 Hawk. 107.

For counterfeiting the coin or clipping, there is no corruption of blood. Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 11. So on attainder of piracy, &c. And in felony by imbezilling the King's ordnance, armour, &c. 22, 23 Car. 2. c. 23. And therefore it ſhall not make any diſinheritance of an heir, &c. See Attainder. And Black. Com. 2 V. 251. 4 V. 381, 406, 431, 433.

Corſlet, (Fr. in Lat. corpuſculum) Signifies a little body: and it is uſed with us for an armour to cover the body or trunk of a man, wherewith pikemen commonly ſet in the front and flanks of the battle were formerly armed, for the better reſiſtance of the aſſaults of the enemy, and the ſurer guard of the ſoldiers placed behind, who were more ſlightly armed for their ſpeedier advancing to and retreating from fire. 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 2.

Corſepreſent, (from the Fr. corpſe preſent) Is a word ſignifying a mortuary: and the reaſon why it was thus termed ſeems to be, that where a mortuary became due on the death of any man, the beſt or ſecond beaſt was, according to cuſtom, offered or preſented to the prieſt, and carried with the corps.——Ego Brianus de Brompton, &c. Volo corpus meum ſepeliri in prioratu majoris Malverniæ inter prædeceſſores meos, & cum corpore meo Palefriddm meum cum herneſio & equum ſummarium, cum lecto meo, &c. In Codice MS. penes Gul. Dugdale, Mil. See Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 6. Mortuary. And Black. Com. 2 V. 425.

Corſned Bread, (panis conjuratus) Ordeal bread: it was a kind of ſuperſtitious trial uſed among the Saxons, to purge themſelves of any accuſation, by taking a piece of barley bread, and eating it with ſolemn oaths and execrations, that it might prove poiſon, or their laſt morſel, if what they aſſerted or denied were not punctually true. Theſe pieces of bread were firſt execrated by the prieſt, and then offered to the ſuſpected perſon to be ſwallowed by way of purgation: for they believed a perſon, if guilty, could not ſwallow a morſel ſo accurſed; or if he did, it would choak him.

The form was thus: We beſeech thee, O Lord, that he who is guilty of this theft, when the exorciſed bread is offered to him in order to diſcover the truth, that his jaws may be ſhut, his throat ſo narrow that he may not ſwallow, and that he may caſt it out of his mouth, and not eat it. Du Cange. The old form, or exorciſmus panis hordeacei vel coſei ad probationem veri, is extant in Lindenbrogius, pag. 107. And in the laws of King Canute cap. 6.——Si quis altari miniſtrantium accuſetur, & amicis deſtitutus ſit, cum ſacramentales non habeat, vadat ad judicium quod Anglice dicitur corſned, & fiat ſicut Deus velit, niſi ſuper ſanctum corpus Domini permittatur ut ſe purget: from which it is conjectured, that corſned bread was originally the very ſacramental bread, conſecrated and devoted by the prieſt, and received with ſolemn abjuration, and devout expectance that it would prove mortal to thoſe who dared to ſwallow it with a lie in their mouths; till at length the biſhops and clergy were afraid to proſtitute the communion bread to ſuch raſh and conceited uſes, when to indulge the people in their ſuperſtitious fancies, and idle cuſtoms, they allowed them to practiſe the ſame judicial rite, in eating ſome other morſels of bread, bleſt or curſt to the like uſes.

It is recorded of the perfidious Godwin, Earl of Kent, in the time of King Edward the Confeſſor, that on his abjuring the murder of the King's brother, by this way of trial, as a juſt judgment of his ſolemn perjury, the bread ſtuck in his throat, and choaked him.——Cum Godwinus comes in menſa regis de nece ſui fratris impetretur, ille poſt multa ſacramenta, tandem per buccellam deglutiendam abjuravit, & buccella guſtata continuo ſuffocatus interiit.—Ingulph. This, with other barbarous ways of purgation, was by degrees aboliſhed: though we have ſtill ſome remembrance of this ſuperſtitious cuſtom in our uſual phraſes of abjuration; as, I will take the ſacrament upon it;——May this bread be my poiſon;——or, May this bit be my laſt, &c.

Coſenage, (Fr. couſinage, i. e. kindred, couſinſhip) Is uſed for a writ that lies where the treſail, that is, the father of the beſail, or great grandfather, being ſeiſed of lands and tenements in fee at his death, and a ſtranger enters upon the heir and abates; then ſhall his heir have his writ of coſenage. Brit. c. 89. F. N. B. 221. A man ſhall not have a writ of coſenage of the ſeiſin of his great grandfather, but ſhall be put to his writ of beſail: and if a perſon may have a writ of aiel, he ſhall not bring a writ of coſenage. Alſo on the death of an uncle, writ of coſenage doth not lie, becauſe aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor may be had of his ſeiſin: and coſenage lies not between privies in blood, no more than aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, but the party muſt bring nuper obiit. New. Nat. Br. 492.

In writs of coſenage, aiel and beſail, the tenant's anſwer that the plaintiff is not next heir, of the ſame anceſtor by whoſe death he demandeth his lands, ſhall be admitted and inquired; and according to the ſame inquiſition, the juſtices ſhall proceed to judgment. Stat. 13 Ed. 3. c. 20. Coſts, Are expenſæ litis, recovered by the plaintiff in a ſuit, together with his damages: and if the plaintiff be nonſuit or overthrown by lawful trial in any action, the defendant ſhall have coſts. 4 Jac. 1. c. 3. Alſo putting off trials, inſufficient pleas, &c. on their amendment, are liable to coſts: but it has been held coſts ought not to be paid for the putting off a trial, where no fault was in the party; for coſts are only to be paid by ſuch perſons which by their occaſion have cauſed the other party to have been at extraordinary charges: and no coſts ſhall be allowed for unreaſonable motions, but only for ſuch as the party was neceſſarily put unto. 1 Lil. Abr. 335, 337. The Common law doth not give coſts in any caſe; but they are given by ſtatute. See Stat. of Glouceſter, 6 Ed. 1. c. 1.

For the defendant on a writ of error, brought to delay execution, if judgment be affirmed, coſts are allowed. 3 Hen. 7. c. 10. So in actions of waſte; debt upon the ſtatute for tithes; in all ſuits by ſcire facias, for malicious treſpaſs, &c. 13 Car. 2. cap. 2. And by ſome ſtatutes double and treble coſts, and damages, are given:

But in perſonal actions, actions of treſpaſs, aſſault and battery, actions on the caſe for words, &c. if the debt or damage amount not to 40 s. or the judge do not certify that the battery was ſufficiently proved, &c. no more coſts ſhall be allowed than damages. 43 Eliz. c. 6. 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 9. ſect. 136. Where ſeveral are made defendants in action of treſpaſs, aſſault, &c. and one or more is acquitted, they ſhall have coſts; unleſs the judge certify there was reaſonable cauſe for making them defendants. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 11.

In an action of treſpaſs removed out of an inferior court into B. R. by habeas corpus, the plaintiff ſhall have full coſts, though the damages are under 40 s. And ſo it has been held in action on the caſe for words, where ſpecial damage is received, &c. 1 Ld. Raym. 395. 2 Ld. Raym. 1588.

On a judgment on demurrer upon a plea in abatement, coſts are not allowed; they are given only where the merits of the cauſe are determined on the demurrer. Ibid. 992. No coſts ſhall be allowed the defendant where the ſuit is commenced for the uſe of the King. 24 H. 8. cap. 8. And coſts are not awarded againſt executors or adminiſtrators. Ibid. Nor for or againſt one that ſues in forma pauperis. Though it has been adjudged that the King ſhall pay coſts for amendment; but contra for not going to trial, &c. 1 Salk. 193. And if executors bring an action in their own right, as for converſion or treſpaſs, &c. in their own time, and a verdict paſs againſt them, they ſhall pay coſts. 2 Danv. Abr. 224.

If a plaintiff, being admitted in forma pauperis, be afterwards nonſuited, the uſual courſe is to tax coſts, and if not paid, to puniſh the plaintiff by whiping; but it is in the diſcretion of the court to ſpare both. 2 Sid. 261. Where a pauper plaintiff has a decree to recover with coſts; he ſhall be allowed no more than he is out of pocket. Preced. Canc. 219. An executor, defendant in equity pays no coſts. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 125.

An heir at law, ſuing for the family eſtate, where he ſhall not pay coſts, ſee 1 Peer Williams 482. If a ſum certain is given to a ſtranger by ſtatute, as where it is given to the proſecutor, he ſhall have no coſts, as he had no right of action till he commenced it; ſo in popular actions, whether the penalty is certain or not, there ſhall be no coſts. 1 Salk. 206. 1 Lutw. 201. Where coſts are allowed, it is not neceſſary that the jury ſhould give the coſts; but they may leave it to the court to do it, who are beſt able to judge of what coſts are fitting to be given. 23 Car. B. R.

It is the courſe of the court of B. R. to refer the taxing of the coſts to the ſecondary of the office, and not to make any ſpecial rules for ſuch matters; except it be in extraordinary caſes. 1 Lil. Abr. 338. Where a plaintiff is nonſuit, action of debt may be brought on the judgment for the coſts; alſo the defendant may have a capias ad ſatisfaciendum againſt him. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 550. Where coſts are given after a verdict, the court will ſtay proceedings in the ſame court till they are paid, on motion made: but when coſts are given for not going on to trial, a party may proceed, though they are not paid. Sid. 279. Sed qu. if on a motion, the court would not ſtay proceedings till coſts paid?

The awarding of coſts (in equity) is always diſcretionary in the court: and in caſe of a great fraud, a perſon may be obliged to pay ſuch coſts as ſhall be aſcertained by the injured party's oath. 2 Vern. 123. Where damages were before recoverable, and a ſtatute increaſes them to double or treble the value, the plaintiff ſhall recover his double or treble damages; and coſts alſo, as parcel of the damages, ſhall be trebled. 10 Co. 116. a. 2 Inſt. 289. Hard. 152. Carth. 297.

But where a new ſtatute gives either ſingle, double or treble damages, where there were no damages recoverable before, there no coſts ſhall be allowed, becauſe the party can have nothing more than ſuch new ſtatute has already given, and that his damages only; for the ſtatute of Glouceſter cannot operate to add coſts to what is given by a ſubſequent ſtatute; becauſe the new ſtatute muſt be conſtrued from itſelf, which gives damages only. 2 Inſt. 285. 1 Salk. 205. Carth. 297.

Coſts are allowed in Chancery, for failing to make anſwer to a bill exhibited; or making an inſufficient anſwer: and if a firſt anſwer be certified by a maſter to be inſufficient, the defendant is to pay 40*s. coſts*; 3*l.* for a ſecond inſufficient anſwer; 4*l.* for a third, &c. But if the anſwer be reported good, the plaintiff ſhall pay the defendant 40*s. coſts*. Cot, In the old Saxon ſignifies cottage, and ſo is ſtill uſed in many parts of England.

Cotarius, A cottager: the cotarii, or cottagers, are mentioned in Domeſday.

Cote and Cot. The names of places which begin or end with theſe words or ſyllables, have the ſignification of a little houſe or cottage: there are likewiſe dove-cotes, which are ſmall houſes or places for the keeping of doves or pigeons. Game Law, 2 par. fol. 133, 135. See Pigeon-Houſe.

Cotellus, Coteria, Both ſignify a ſmall cottage, houſe or homeſtall. Cowel.

Coterellus, Cotarius and coterellus, according to Spelman and Du Freſne, are ſervile tenants: but in Domeſday and other ancient MSS. there appears a diſtinction as well in their tenure and quality, as in their name. For the cotarius had a free ſocage tenure, and paid a ſtated firm or rent in proviſions or money, with ſome occaſional cuſtomary ſervices; whereas the coterellus ſeems to have held in mere villenage, and his perſon, iſſue and goods, were diſpoſable at the pleaſure of the lord.——Edmund Earl of Cornwall, gave to the bon-bommes of Aſherugge, his manor of Cheſterton and Ambroſden—una cum villanis, coterellis, eorum cotallis, ſerviciis, ſectis, & omnibus ſuis ubicunque pertinentibus. Paroch. Antiq. 310.

Coteswold, Is uſed for ſheep cotes and ſheep feeding on hills: from the Sax. cote and wold, a place where there is no wood.

Cotgare, A kind of refuſe wool, ſo clung or clotted together, that it cannot be pulled aſunder. By Stat. 13 R. 2. cap. 9. It is provided, that neither denizen nor foreigner ſhall make any other refuſe of wools but cotgare and villein.

Cotland and Cotſethland, Land held by a cottager, whether in ſocage or villenage.—Dimidia acra terræ jacet ibidem inter cotland, quam Johannis Goldering tenet ex una parte, & cotland quam Thomas Webb tenet ex altera. Paroch. Antiq. 532.

Cotſethla, Cotſetle, The little ſeat or manſion belonging to a ſmall farm.—Ego Thomas de C. dedi Deo & eccleſiæ Malmſbury unam Cotſetle in Culern, cum omnibus pertinentiis. Cartular. Malmſbur. MS.

Cotſethus, A cottage-holder, who, by ſervile tenure, was bound to work for the lord. Cowel. Cotſets are the meaneſt ſort of men, now termed cottagers. And cotſeti are thoſe who live in cottages. Villani vero vel cotſeti, vel perdingi, vel qui ſunt hujuſmodi viles, vel inopes perſonæ, non ſunt inter legum judices numerandi. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 30.

Cottage, (cotagium) Is properly a little houſe for habitation, without lands belonging to it. Stat. 4 Ed. 1. ſtat. 1. But by a later ſtatute, the 31 El. cap. 7. No man may build a cottage, unleſs he lay four acres of land thereto; except it be in market-towns or cities, or within a mile of the ſea, or for the habitation of labourers in mines, ſailors, foreſters, ſhepherds, &c. and cottages erected by order of juſtices of peace, &c. for poor impotent people, are excepted out of the ſtatute. The four acres of land to make it a cottage within this law, are to be freehold, and land of inheritance: and four acres of ground holden by copy, or for life or lives, or for any number of years, will not be ſufficient to make it a lawful cottage. 2 Inſt. 737. Alſo the four acres in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, muſt lie near the cottage, and be occupied therewith, ſo long as the cottage ſhall be inhabited. 2 Rol. Abr. 139.

But this ſtatute doth not extend to houſes that are copyhold. 1 Bulſt. 50. The penalty of erecting cottages contrary to the ſtatute, is 10*l.* for every erection, and 40*s.* a month for the continuance of it; which is inquirable in the leet, or the offenders may be puniſhed by indictment at the quarter-ſeſſions of the peace, &c. And no owner or occupier of any cottage ſhall ſuffer any inmates, or more families than one to inhabit therein, on pain to forfeit to the lord of the leet 10*s.* a month: but in cottages built for the poor, more families than one may be placed.

Cottages are oftentimes erected on the waſte at the charge of pariſhes, for poor impotent perſons, by the church-wardens and overſeers of the poor, having obtained leave of the lord of the manor in writing under hand and ſeal; but then it muſt be confirmed by the juſtices in ſeſſions. Mod. Juſt. 152. Cottagers of new erected cottages within the memory of man, ought not to have common in the lord's waſte, though they have four acres of land laid to them. Wood's Inſt. 445. An exception muſt be underſtood, where right of common originally belonged to the land, by preſcription: the annexing it to, and uſing it with a cottage, cannot bar the right.

Every cottager, &c. is obliged to work towards the repairs of the highways, or to hire an able labourer to work on the days appointed by the ſtatute, on pain of forfeiting 1*s.* 6*d.*

Covenable, (Fr. convenable, Lat. rationabilis) Is what is convenient or ſuitable.—Every of the ſame three ſorts of goods, &c. ſhall be good and covenable, as in old time hath been uſed. Stat. 31 Ed. 3. cap. 2. Covenably indowed, that is, indowed as is fitting. 4 H. 8. c. 12. See Plowd. 472.

Covenant, (conventio) Is the conſent and agreement of two or more perſons to do or not to do ſome act or thing, contracted between them. Alſo it is the declaration the parties make, that they will ſtand to ſuch agreement, relating to lands or other things; and is created by deed in writing, ſealed and executed by the parties: A covenant may likewiſe be implied in the contract, as incident thereto. 2 Mod. Entr. 91. If the perſons do not perform their covenants, an action of covenant is the remedy to recover damages for the breach. Ibid.

Under this head is to be conſidered,

I. The ſeveral kinds of covenants, and by what words they are created.

II. What covenants are good and binding, and by whom they may be made.

III. Who ſhall take advantage of covenants, and who are bound by them.

IV. What ſhall be a performance, and what a breach of covenant.

I. Of the ſeveral kinds of covenants, and by what words they are created.

A covenant is generally either in fact or in law: in fact is that which is expreſly agreed between the parties, and inſerted in the deed; and in law, is that covenant which the law intends and implies, though it be not expreſſed in words; as if a leſſor demiſe and grant to his leſſee a houſe or lands, &c. for a certain term, the law will intend a covenant on the leſſor's part, that the leſſee ſhall, during the term, quietly enjoy the ſame againſt all incumbrances. 1 Inſt. 384.

There is alſo a covenant real, and covenant perſonal: a covenant real is, that whereby a man ties himſelf to paſs a thing real, as lands or tenements; or to levy a fine of lands, &c. And covenant perſonal, is where the ſame is annexed to the perſon and merely perſonal; as if a perſon covenants with another by deed to build him a houſe, or to ſerve him, &c. F. N. B. 145. 5 Rep. 10.

Covenants are likewiſe inherent, that tend to the ſupport of the land or thing granted; or are collateral to it; and are affirmative, where ſomewhat is to be performed; or negative; executed, of what is already done, or executory: but a covenant being to bind a man, to do ſomething in futuro, is for the moſt part executory. 1 Vent. 176. Dyer 112, 271. And where a covenant ſhall be conſtrued dependant upon another, and when diſtinct by itſelf, ſee Winch 74. 3 Cro. 107.

As to the words by which covenant may be created.

It is held in all caſes where words that begin any ſentence are conditional, and give another remedy, they ſhall not be conſtrued a covenant; and yet if words of condition and covenant are coupled together in the ſame ſentence, as Provided always, and it is covenanted, &c. in that caſe they may be adjudged both a condition and covenant. March 103.

The law does not ſeem to have appropriated any ſet form of words, which are abſolutely neceſſary to be made uſe of in creating a covenant; and therefore it ſeems that any words will be effectual for that purpoſe, which ſhew the parties concurrence to the performance of a future act; as if leſſee for years covenants to repair, &c. Provided always, and it is agreed, that the leſſor ſhall find great timber, &c. this makes a covenant on the part of the leſſor to find great timber, by the word agreed, and it ſhall not be a qualification of the covenant of the leſſee. 1 New Abr. 527.

There is this difference however between a covenant and condition; a condition gives entry, and covenant gives an action only. Owen 54. A perſon cannot have action of covenant upon a verbal agreement, for it cannot be grounded without writing, except by ſpecial cuſtom. F. N. B. 145.

II. What covenants are good and binding, and by whom they may be made.

All covenants between perſons muſt be to do what is lawful, or they will not be binding; and if the thing to be done be impoſſible, the covenant is void. Dyer 112. But where the thing is lawful at the time of the covenant made, and afterwards the matter agreed to be done is prohibited by act of parliament, yet ſuch covenant will be binding. 3 Mod. 39. And if a man covenants to do a thing before a certain time; and it becomes impoſſible by the act of God, this ſhall not excuſe him, inaſmuch as he hath bound himſelf preciſely to do it. 2 Danv. Abr. 84.

If a perſon covenants expreſly to repair a houſe, and it is burnt down by lightening, or any other accident, yet he ought to repair it; for it was in his power to have provided againſt it by his contract. Alleyn 26, 27. 1 Lil. Abr. 149. But he is not ſo bound by covenant in law. Where houſes are blown down by tempeſt, the law excuſes the leſſee in action of waſte; though in a covenant to repair and uphold, it will not. 1 Plowd. 29. If a leſſee for years, rendering rent, covenants for him and his aſſigns to repair the houſe, and after the leſſee aſſigns over the term, and the leſſor accepts the rent from the aſſignee, and then the covenant is broken; notwithſtanding acceptance of rent from the aſſignee, action of covenant lies againſt the firſt leſſee, on his expreſs covenant to repair: and this perſonal covenant cannot be transferred by the acceptance of the rent. 2 Danv. Abr. 240.

Action of covenant alſo lies on covenant for payment of rent againſt ſuch leſſee; but not action of debt after acceptance. 3 Rep. 24. In covenant upon a demiſe, rendering rent, the defendant cannot ſay, that part of it was to be allowed; for this is a covenant againſt a covenant. Comb. 21.

An infant within age may bind himſelf apprentice; but neither at Common law nor by ſtatute may be bound by covenant for his apprenticeſhip, ſo as to make him liable to an action of covenant, if he depart, &c. But by the cuſtom of London he may bind himſelf by his covenant at fourteen years old. 1 Cro. 129. Winch 63.

III. Who ſhall take advantage of covenants, and who are bound by them.

There may be an agreement and covenant, only to be performed by the parties themſelves; and there are ſome covenants which none but the party and his heirs may take advantage of, being ſuch as concern the inheritance, and deſcend to the heir, as knit to the eſtate: Covenants in groſs go to the executors, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 520. 2 Danv. 235. Not only parties to deeds, but their executors and adminiſtrators, ſhall take advantage of inherent covenants, though not named; and every aſſignee of the land may have the benefit of ſuch covenants: Likewiſe executors and aſſigns are bound by them, although not named, as a covenant to repair, &c. 5 Rep. 16, 17. 1 Cro. 552. If a man covenants with another to do any thing, his heir ſhall not be bound, unleſs he be expreſly named: And yet where a leſſee covenants to repair, the heir ſhall have the benefit of the covenant, though not named, becauſe it runs with the land. 2 Lev. 92. 5 Rep. 8.

The grantee of a reverſion may bring action of covenant againſt a leſſee, as well in the county where the demiſe was made, as in the county where the lands lie. Carthew 183. And grantees of reverſions have the like remedy by action of covenant againſt termors, as the leſſors and their heirs, &c. by Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. A perſon covenants with another, to pay him money at a time to come, and doth not ſay to his executors, &c. if the covenantee die before the day, yet his executors or adminiſtrators ſhall have the money. Dyer 112, 257. And in every caſe where the teſtator is bound by a covenant, the executor ſhall be bound by it; if it be not determined by his death. 48 Ed. 3. 2. 2 Danv. 232. Aſſignees ſhall not have an action upon breach of any covenant, before their time. Cro. Eliz. 863. An aſſignee ſhall be charged in a writ of covenant for breach, after the death of the firſt leſſee; as it is a charge on the land, i. e. in caſe of repairs. 2 Danv. 238.

If A. ſeiſed of land in fee, conveys it to B. and covenants with B. his heirs and aſſigns, to make any other aſſurance upon requeſt; and after B. conveys it to C. who conveys it to D. and then D. requires A. to make another aſſurance, according to the covenant; if he refuſes, D. ſhall have an action of covenant againſt him, as aſſignee to B. 2 Danv. 236. A leſſor made a leaſe of an houſe for years, excepting two rooms, and free paſſage to them; the leſſee aſſigned the term, and the leſſor brought covenant againſt the aſſignee for diſturbing him in his paſſage to thoſe rooms; and adjudged, that the action lies: For the covenant goes with the tenement, and binds the aſſignee. (N. B. This relates to the paſſage.) 1 Salk. 196. If a man who leaſes for years, ouſts the leſſee, he ſhall have covenant againſt him. 48 Ed. 3. 2. See 2 Danv. 234. A man grants a watercourſe, and afterwards ſtops it; for this voluntary misfeaſance, covenant lies. 1 Saund. 322. Though where the uſe of a thing is demiſed, and it runs to decay, ſo that the leſſee cannot have the benefit of it, for this nonfeaſance no action of covenant lieth: Nor may covenant be brought for a thing which was not in eſſe at the making of the leaſe. 2 Danv. 233.

If one makes a leaſe for years, reſerving a rent, action of covenant lies for non-payment of the rent; for the reddendum of the rent is an agreement for payment of it, which will make a covenant. 2 Danv. 230. A leaſe is made to two, and one ſeals the deed, but the other doth not; if he accepts the eſtate and occupies the land, he is bound to perform the covenants for payment of the rent, reparations and the like. 1 Shep. Abr. 458.

If one man covenants to pay another 20*l.* at a day; although he may have action of debt for the 20*l.* yet it is ſaid he may have covenant at his election. 2 Danv. 229.

It is agreed that A. B. ſhall pay to C. D. 100*l.* for lands in E. this is a mutual covenant, whereon action of covenant may be brought if C. D. will not convey. 1 Sid. 423. But where there are mutual covenants, and the one not to be performed before a precedent covenant, in ſuch caſe the covenant is not ſuable till the other is performed: Though if the covenants are diſtinct and mutual, ſeveral actions may be brought by and againſt the parties. 1 Lil. Abr. 350. 2 Mod. 74. In a covenant to pay another ſo much money, he making him an eſtate in ſuch land, &c. it has been adjudged, that if he tender the covenantor a feoffment, and offer to make livery, he may have action of covenant for the money, as if he had made a title. 3 Salk. 107. If a perſon covenants that he hath good right to grant, &c. and he hath no right, it is a breach of covenant, for which action of covenant lies. 2 Bul. 12. Where a man covenants that he hath power to grant, and that the grantee ſhall quietly enjoy notwithſtanding any claiming under him; theſe are diſtinct covenants, for one goes to the title, and the other to the poſſeſſion. 1 Mod. 101. A covenant for the leſſee to enjoy againſt all men; this extends not to tortious acts and entries, &c. for which the leſſee hath his proper remedy againſt the aggreſſors. Vaugh. 111, 120.

Where there is a covenant to ſave harmleſs againſt a certain perſon, there the covenantor muſt ſave the covenantee harmleſs againſt the entry of that perſon, be it by wrong or rightful title: But if it be to ſave harmleſs againſt all perſons, the entry and eviction muſt be by lawful title. Cro. Eliz. 213. Where the covenant is to do a thing, and no time appointed for performance, it muſt be done in convenient time. 2 And. 73. Dyer 57, 150. Hob. 28.

But a covenant muſt wait upon and join with the grant; ſo that if it be to make ſuch aſſurance as ſhall be reaſonably deviſed, it muſt be of an aſſurance that differs not from the bargain: and when the eſtate to which a covenant is annexed is at an end, the covenant is gone. Hob. 276. 1 Leon. 179. In an indenture, the word covenant, is a word both of leſſor and leſſee; and therefore if the leſſee covenants to pay the rent, this is a reſervation. Though when there is a covenant for a leſſee to repair, and he makes an under-leaſe to one who is in poſſeſſion, the under leſſee is not liable to that covenant, in law or equity. 1 Rol. Rep. 80. 1 Vern. 87.

An expreſs covenant in a deed, will qualify the general covenant in law: though, on a covenant in law, the leſſee cannot charge the executors or adminiſtrators of the leſſor; as he may upon an expreſs covenant for quiet enjoyment. Dyer 257. See 4 Rep. 80. If a leſſor covenant with the leſſee that he ſhall have houſe-bote, &c. by aſſignment of his bailiff, this is a good covenant: and yet it doth not reſtrain the power that the leſſee hath by law to take thoſe things without aſſignment: But if a leſſee covenants, that he will not cut any timber, without the leave or aſſignment of the leſſor; by this he will be reſtrained. Dyer 19, 115.

IV. What ſhall be a performance, and what a breach of Covenant.

Not any duty or cauſe of action ariſes on a covenant, till it is broken: and as to breaches of covenant, if a perſon by his own act diſables himſelf to perform a covenant, it is a breach thereof. 5 Rep. 21. Though there can be be no covenant or breach, where a leaſe, &c. is void. Yelv. 18, 19. But here, although when a covenant concerns the intereſt of the leaſe, as where it is for paying rent, it is void, if the leaſe be ſo: yet where covenants are collateral to the leaſe and intereſt, though that be void, the covenants may be good. Owen 136. And if a covenant to do a thing is performed in ſubſtance, and according to the intent, it is good, though it differs from the words; and on the other hand, although the covenantor performs the letter of his covenant, if he does any act to defeat the intent and uſe of it, he is guilty of a breach. Mod. Ent. Engl.

In covenant that a perſon ſhall hold land free from all incumbrances, and be kept indemnified from arrears of rent; there, till an action is brought, or diſtreſs made, he is not damnified; and a ſuit in Chancery is no breach in ſuch caſe; but where a jointure, or dower is recovered, it is. Skin. 397. Moor 859. Palm. 339. If covenants perpetual are once broken, and an action is brought, and recovery thereon; upon a new breach, a ſcire facias ſhall be had on that judgment, and the plaintiff need not bring a new writ of covenant. Cro. Eliz. 5. By 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. When the intention of the parties can be collected out of a deed, for the doing or not doing of the thing, covenant ſhall be had thereupon. Chanc. Rep. 294. A covenant, being one part of a deed, is ſubject to the general rules of expoſition of all parts of the deed: And in a covenant the laſt words, that are general, ſhall be expounded by the firſt words, which are ſpecial and particular. Vent. 218. Alſo a later covenant cannot be pleaded in bar to a former.

When a covenant is to two perſons jointly, one of them may not bring action of covenant, or plead alone, but both muſt join. 1 Nelſ. 558. If a man is bound to perform all the covenants in an indenture, and they are all in the affirmative, he may plead performance generally. Co. Lit. 303. Covenants in the negative muſt be pleaded ſpecially. Ibid. 330. When ſome covenants are in the negative, and ſome in the affirmative, the defendant is to plead ſpecially to the negative covenants, that he had not done the thing, and performance generally as to the affirmative: (ſed qu. and vide poſt.) And where the negative covenants are againſt law, and the affirmative agreeable to law, performance generally may be pleaded. Moor 856. If any of the covenants are in the disjunctive, ſo that it is in the election of the covenantor to perform the one, or the other, the performance ought to be ſpecially pleaded, that it may appear what part hath been performed. Cro. Eliz. 23. 1 Nelſ. 573. And commonly where an act is to be done, according to a covenant, he who pleads performance ought to do it ſpecially. 1 Leon. 136.

In debt upon bond for performance of covenants, one whereof for peaceable enjoyment, and free from all incumbrances, and another for farther aſſurance, &c. the defendant ſhould plead ſpecially, that the houſe was free from incumbrances at the time of the conveyance made, and not charged at any time ſince, and that no farther aſſurance had been required, or ſuch an aſſurance which he had executed, &c. yet where a defendant pleaded generally, in this caſe it was held good. 1 Lutw. 603.

Covenants are generally taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the covenantor, and for the covenantee. Plowd. 287. But it is a rule in law, that where one thing may have ſeveral intendments, it ſhall be conſtrued in the moſt favourable manner for the covenantor. 1 Lut. 490. The common uſe of covenants is for aſſuring of land; quiet enjoyment free from incumbrances; for payment of rent reſerved; and concerning repairs, &c. And in deeds of covenant, ſometimes a clauſe for performance, with a penalty, is inſerted in the body of the deed: Other times, and more frequently, bonds for performance, with a ſufficient penalty, are given ſeparate; which laſt being ſued, the jury muſt find the penalty; but on covenant, only the damages. Wood's Inſt. 250. Vide the Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. And vide ante & poſt.

Covenant for non-payment of rent, was referred to the maſter as to the rent, and on payment thereof proceſs to ſtay as to that, but there being another breach as to not repairing, the plaintiff might proceed for that. Anon. Wilſ. Rep. Par. 1. p. 75. In an action of covenant, it is not neceſſary to aver that the plaintiff performed his covenants. Jodderell v. Cowell. Rep. Temp. Hardw. 343-4.

By the 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. In actions on bonds, &c. plaintiff may aſſign as many breaches as he pleaſes, and the jury may aſſeſs damages: on defendant's paying damages, execution may be ſtayed, but judgment ſhall remain to anſwer any farther breach, and plaintiff may have a ſcire facias againſt the defendant.

It is held an action of covenant may be laid in London, for non-payment of rent on a leaſe of lands in any other place. 1 Sid. 401. And if, in this action, a ſum be miſcaſt, either two little or two much; it is amendable; and not like to the action of debt, which if alledged leſs than it is, without ſhewing the reſt to be ſatisfied, it is ill. 3 Keb. 39. 2 Cro. 247. In action of covenant, the plaintiff muſt have recourſe to the deeds or writings, and the circumſtances of time, place, &c. and take notice what particular covenant in the deed it is beſt to inſiſt upon, to lay a breach right, &c. the words of covenanting are, covenant, grant, promiſe, and agree, &c. but there needs no great exactneſs in words to make a covenant. See Bonds.

Further, this word is taken for the ſolemn league and covenant; which was a ſeditious conſpiracy, invented in Scotland, voted illegal by parliament, and proviſion is made againſt it, by Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 4.

Covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to Uſes, Is when a man that hath a wife, children, brother, ſiſter, or kindred, doth by covenant in writing under hand and ſeal agree that for their or any of their proviſion or preferment, he and his heirs will ſtand ſeiſed of land to their uſe; either in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or for life. The uſe being created by the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. which conveyeth the eſtate as the uſes are directed; this covenant to ſtand ſeiſed is become a conveyance of the land ſince the ſaid ſtatute. The conſiderations of theſe deeds, are natural affection, marriage, &c. and the law allows in ſuch caſes conſideration of blood and marriage, to raiſe uſes, as well as money and other valuable conſideration when a uſe is to a ſtranger. Plowd. 302. There are no conſiderations now to raiſe uſes upon covenants to ſtand ſeiſed, but natural love and affection, which is for advancement of blood; and conſideration of marriage, which is the joining of the blood and marriage together: other conſiderations, as money, &c. for land, though the words in the deed are ſtand ſeiſed, yet they are bargains and ſales, and without inrolment they raiſe no uſe. Carter 138. Lil. Abr. 353.

The uſual covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to uſes need not be by deed indented and inrolled: (ſee above). And where a man limits his eſtate to the uſe of his wife for life, this imports a ſufficient conſideration in itſelf: Alſo if a perſon covenants to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of his wife, ſon, or couſin it will raiſe an uſe without any expreſs words of conſideration, for ſufficient conſideration appears. 7 Rep. 40.

In caſe of a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, ſo much of the uſe as the owner doth not diſpoſe of, remains ſtill in him. 1 Ventr. 374. And where an uſe is raiſed by way of covenant, the covenantor continues in poſſeſſion; and there the uſes limited, if they are according to law, ſhall riſe and draw the poſſeſſion out of him: but if they are not, the poſſeſſion ſhall remain in him until a lawful uſe ariſeth. 1 Leon. 197. 1 Mod. 159, 160.

If on a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to uſes, no uſe doth ariſe, yet it may be good by way of covenant and give remedy to the covenantee in an action; as if the covenant be future, that, in conſideration of a marriage, lands ſhall deſcend or remain to a ſon and the heirs of his body on the body of his wife; in this caſe the covenantee may have writ of covenant upon the covenant againſt the covenantor. But if a covenant be that a man and his heirs, ſhall from henceforth ſtand and be ſeiſed to ſuch and ſuch uſes, and the uſes will not ariſe by law: here no action of covenant lies on the covenant, for this action will never lie upon any covenant but ſuch as is either to do a thing hereafter, or where the thing is already done, and not when it is for a thing preſent. Plowd. 307, 398. Finch's Law. 49. See Baron and Feme.

Covert Baron, A married woman. Stat. 27 Eliz. cap. 3. See Black. Com. 1 V. 442. and Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Baron and Feme.

Coverture, (Fr.) Any thing that covers; as apparel, a coverlet, &c. but it is by our law particularly applied to the ſtate and condition of a married woman, who is ſub poteſtate viri; and therefore diſabled to contract with any to the damage of herſelf or huſband, without his conſent and privity, or his allowance and confirmation thereof. Bract. lib. 1. c. 10. lib. 2. c. 15, &c. Bro. Abr. When a woman is married, ſhe is called a Feme Covert; and whatever is done concerning her, during the marriage, is ſaid to be during the coverture: All things that are the wife's, are the huſband's; nor hath the wife power over herſelf, but the huſband: And if the huſband aliene the wife's land, during the coverture, ſhe cannot avoid it during his life; but after his death, ſhe may recover by cui in vita. Terms de Ley. See Baron and Feme.

Covin, (Covina) Is a deceitful compact between two or more to deceive or prejudice others, as if tenant for life or in tail, conſpires with another, that he ſhall recover the land which he the tenant holds, in prejudice of him in reverſion. Plowd. 546. Covin is commonly converſant in and about conveyances of land by fine, feoffment, recovery, &c. And then it tends to defeat purchaſers of the lands they purchaſe, and creditors of their juſt debts; and ſo it is uſed in deeds of gift of goods: It may be likewiſe ſometimes in ſuits of law, and judgments had in them. But wherever covin is, it ſhall never be intended, unleſs it appears and be particularly found: for covin and fraud though proved, yet muſt be found by the jury, or it will not be good. Brownl. 188. Bridgm. 112.

If one make a leaſe to a perſon by covin, and after grant another leaſe to another bona fide, but without any fine or rent; in this caſe the ſecond leſſee may not avoid the firſt leaſe, becauſe he is not a purchaſer that comes in for money. 3 Rep. 83. On recovery by a good title, there may be covin; as where tenant for life by aſſent, &c.

ſuffers a recovery by Nil dicit, without making any defence: And if a man hath a rightful and juſt cauſe of action, and of covin and conſent ſhall raiſe up a tenant by wrong againſt whom he may recover; the covin doth ſo ſuffocate the right, that the recovery, although it be upon good title, ſhall not bind. Bro. Covin. 47. Co. Lit. 357. 1 Shep. Abr. 365. A. is tenant for life, remainder in tail to B. and a præcipe is brought againſt them as jointenants, by covin between the demandant and A. and an anſwer procured for B. as jointenant, and they join the miſe, (or iſſue) and after make default, whereby final judgment is given; this ſhall not defeat the eſtate of B. who may bring a writ of diſceit, and ſhall be reſtored to his land. Rol. Abr. 621.

If a man that has a right to certain lands, by covin cauſes another to ouſt the tenant of the land, to the intent to recover it from him, and he recovers accordingly againſt him by action tried; yet he ſhall not be remitted to his ancient right; but is in of the eſtate of him who made the ouſter; and an aſſiſe lies againſt him. 2 Danv. Abr. 309. Land is aliened, pending a writ of debt, by covin, to avoid the extent thereof for the debt; the land ſo aliened ſhall be extended, when the covin appears upon the return of the elegit by the ſheriff. Ibid. 311. If a man makes a deed of gift, &c. of his goods in his life-time by covin, to ouſt his creditors of their debts, after his death the donee or vendee ſhall be charged for them. See 50 H. 3. c. 6. and the ſeveral ſtatutes of frauds. If goods are ſold in market overt by covin, on purpoſe to bar him that hath right, this ſhall not bar him thereof. 2 Inſt. 713. See Frauds, &c.

Council. In the city of London, there are common council-men choſen in every ward at a court of wardmote held by the aldermen of the reſpective wards on St. Thomas's day yearly; They are to be choſen out of the moſt ſufficient men; and ſworn to give true council for the common profit of the city, &c. Lex Londinen. 117. In the court of common council, are made laws for advancement of trade; and committees yearly appointed, &c. But acts made by them, are to have the aſſent of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, by Stat. 11 Geo. 1. c. 18. and ſee 19 Geo. 2. c. 8.

Counſellor, (Conſiliarius) Is a perſon retained by a client to plead his cauſe in a court of judicature. A counſellor at law hath a privilege to enforce any thing which is informed him by his client, if pertinent to the matter, and is not to examine whether it be true or falſe; for it is at the peril of him who informs him. Cro. Jac. 90. But after the court hath delivered their opinions of the matter in law depending before them, the counſel at the bar are not to urge any thing further in that cauſe. 1 Lil. Abr. 355. A counſellor muſt not ſet his hand to a frivolous plea, to delay a trial; which argues ignorance or foul practice. Ibid. And as counſellors have a ſpecial privilege to practice the law, they are puniſhable by attachment, &c. for miſbehaviour. 1 Hawk. P. C. 157. But ſometimes men, ſued for money owing, may be under ſuch circumſtances, without default of their own, as to render it abſolutely neceſſary to obtain time, by thoſe means the law muſt unavoidably allow, and by obtaining time, an innocent man frequently avoids ruin to himſelf and family. In ſuch caſes, perhaps, a counſel may, in foro conſcientiæ, think himſelf excuſed for ſigning ſuch a plea, as may anſwer ſo ſalutary a purpoſe. No recuſant convict, or non-juror, ſhall practice the law, as a councellor, or otherwiſe, under penalties, by Stat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. 13 & 14 W. 3. c. 6.

Counſel, for priſoners. No counſel is allowed a priſoner upon a general iſſue, on indictment of felony, &c. unleſs ſome doubtful point of law ariſe: The court is the priſoner's only counſel; and the behaviour of the priſoner in his own defence, is one means of diſcovering the truth. In appeals, and upon ſpecial pleas, &c. the priſoner ſhall have counſel aſſigned him by the court: though counſel is not to prompt the priſoner in matters of fact. 2 Hawk. 400, 401. Proviſion is made for counſel for priſoners in treaſon, by Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 3. which is extended to trials, upon impeachments, by 20 Geo. 2. c. 30.

A man of humanity might wiſh counſel was allowed to priſoners, in every caſe: And it ſeems ſomething peculiar, that in all civil ſuits, in the moſt trifling cauſes, counſel is allowed; and yet, where a man is tried for his life, except in the foregoing caſes, that aſſiſtance is denied him.

Count, Signifies the original declaration of complaint in a real action. As declaration is applied to perſonal, ſo count is applicable to real cauſes: but count and declaration are oftentimes confounded, and made to ſignify the ſame thing. F. N. B. 16, 60. In paſſing a recovery at the common pleas bar, a ſerjeant at law comnts upon the præcipe, &c. See Countors and Declarations.

Countee, (Fr. Comte) Was the moſt eminent dignity of a ſubject, before the conqueſt; and thoſe who in ancient times were created countees, were men of great eſtate: for which reaſon, and becauſe the law intends that they aſſiſt the King with their counſel for the public good, and preſerve the realm by their valour, they had great privileges; as they might not be arreſted for debt or treſpaſs; or be put on juries, &c. Of old the countee was præfectus, or præpoſitus comitatus, and had the charge and cuſtody of the county; but this authority the ſheriff now hath. 9 Rep. 46. A countee or count, is an earl, in the law French. Law Fr. Dict.

Countenance. This word ſeems to be uſed for credit or eſtimation. Old Nat. Br. 111. And in the Stat. 1 Ed. 3. c. 4. See Contenement.

Counter, (Computatorium from the Lat. Computare) Is the name of two priſons in London, the Poultry counter, and Woodſtreet-counter, for the uſe of the city, to confine debtors, peace-breakers, &c. Cowel.

Counterfeits. Perſons obtaining any money, goods, &c. by counterfeit letters or falſe tokens, being convicted before juſtices of aſſiſe, or juſtices of peace, are to ſuffer ſuch puniſhment as ſhall be thought fit, under death; as impriſonment, pillory, &c. Stat. 33 H. 8. cap. 1. It was the opinion of Sir Edward Coke, that upon this ſtatute the offender could not be fined; and that only corporal pains ought to be inflicted: But it hath been otherwiſe adjudged in Terry's caſe, who, by a falſe note in the name of another, obtained into his hands a wedge of ſilver, of the value of two hundred pounds; and, on conviction thereof, was ſentenced to ſtand in the pillory, pay a fine of five hundred pounds to the King, and be impriſoned during the King's pleaſure. Cro. Car. 407.

The obtaining of money from one man to another's uſe, upon a falſe pretence of having a meſſage and verbal order to that purpoſe, is not (at Common law) puniſhable by criminal proſecution; it depending on a bare naked lie, againſt which, common prudence and caution may be a ſecurity. 6 Mod. 105. 1 Hawk. P. C. 188. Now per Stat. 30 Geo. 2. c. 24. Obtaining money, goods, &c. by falſe pretences, (a very vague expreſſion) the offender is liable to fine and impriſonment, or pillory, or tranſportation for ſeven years.

Counterfeiting the King's ſeal, or money, &c. which is treaſon, vide Treaſon: And counterfeiting Exchequer bills, bank-bills, lottery-orders, &c. which is felony. See Felony, Fraud.

Countermand, Is where a thing formerly executed, is afterwards by ſome act or ceremony made void by the party that firſt did it. And it is either actual, by deed; or implied: Actual, where a power to execute any authority, &c. is by a formal writing, for that very purpoſe put off for a time, or made void: and implied, is where a man makes his laſt will and teſtament, and thereby deviſes his land to A. B. if he afterwards enfeoffs another of the ſame land, here this feoffment is a countermand to the will, without any expreſs words for the ſame, and the will is void as to the diſpoſition of the land: Alſo if a woman ſeiſed of land in fee-ſimple, makes a will and deviſeth the ſame to C. D. and his heirs, if he ſurvives her; and after ſhe intermarries with the ſaid C. D. there, by taking him to huſband, and coverture at the time of her death, the will is countermanded. Terms de Ley. But if a woman makes a leaſe at will, and then marries, this marriage is no countermand to the leaſe, without expreſs matter done by the huſband to determine the will.

Where land is deviſed, and after a leaſe made thereof for years only; it ſhall not be a countermand of the will, which is good notwithſtanding for the reverſion after the leaſe for years is ended: But in caſe a man have a leaſe for years, and gives it by his will, and after ſurrenders it;

i ; it is a countermand of the deviſe, and the deviſee ſhall not have his leaſe. Dyer 47. Goldſb. 93. If a copyholder like to die, do ſurrender his eſtate to the uſe of his wiſe or children, without any conſideration of money, &c. and he recover before the preſentment and admittance, it may be countermanded: It is otherwiſe if it be to the uſe of a ſtranger. Kitch. 82. If there be a feoffment with letter of attorney to make livery and ſeiſin; and before it is made the feoffor makes a feoffment, or bargain and ſale of the land, or leaſe to another, it will be a countermand in law of the authority given by the letter of attorney. 2 Brownl. 291. A perſon may countermand his command, authority, licence, &c. before the thing is done; and if he dies, it is countermanded. There is a countermand of notice of trial, &c. in law proceedings.

Counterpart. When the ſeveral parts of an indenture are interchangeably executed by the ſeveral parties, that part or copy which is executed by the grantor is uſually called the original, and the reſt are counterparts: though of late it is moſt frequent (and better) for all the parties to execute every part; which renders them all originals. Black. Com. 2 V. 296.

Counterplea, Is when the tenant in any real action, tenant by the curteſy, or in dower, in his anſwer and plea, vouches any one to warrant his title, or prays in aid of another, who hath a larger eſtate; as of him in reverſion, &c. Or where one that is a ſtranger to the action, comes and prays to be received to ſave his eſtate; then that which the demandant alledgeth againſt it, why it ſhould not be admitted, is called a counterplea: In which ſenſe it is uſed Stat. 25 Ed. 3. cap. 7. So that counterplea is in law a replication to Aid Prier; and is called counterplea to the voucher: But when the voucher is allowed, and the vouchee comes and demands what cauſe the tenant hath to vouch him, and the tenant ſhews his cauſe, whereupon the vouchee pleads any thing to avoid the warranty; that is termed a counterplea of the warranty. Term: de Ley. Stat. 3 E. 1. cap. 39. If on demurrer to a counterplea of the voucher upon a warranty, it be found againſt the vouchee, judgment ſhall not be peremptory, but only ſtet vocare: It is otherwiſe upon a plea to the writ tried by the country. 4 Rep. 80 10 Rep. 34.

Counter-Rolls, Are the rolls which ſheriffs of counties have with the coroners of their proceedings, as well of appeals, as of inqueſts, &c. Stat. 3. Ed. 1. c. 10.

Countors, (Fr. Contours) Have been taken for ſuch ſerjeants at law, which a man retains to defend his cauſe, and ſpeak for him in any court, for their fees. Horn's Mirror, lib. 2. And as in the court of C. B. none but ſerjeants at law may plead; they were anciently called Serjeant Countors. 1 Inſt. 17.

County, (Comitatus) Signifies the ſame with ſhire, the one coming from the French, the other the Saxons; and contains a circuit or portion of the realm, into which the whole land is divided, for the better government of it, and the more eaſy adminiſtration of juſtice: So that there is no part of this kingdom that lies not within ſome county; and every county is governed by a yearly officer whom we call a ſheriff. Forteſcue, cap. 24. Of theſe counties, there are in England forty, beſides twelve in Wales, making in all fifty-two.

County Palatine. There are four counties of ſpecial note, which are therefore termed Counties Palatine; as Lancaſter, Cheſter, Durham, and Ely; and we read anciently of the counties palatine of Pembroke and Hexam, though they have long ſince loſt their privileges. The chief governors of the counties palatine, by ſpecial charter from the King, heretofore did all things touching the adminiſtration of juſtice as abſolutely as the prince himſelf in other counties, only acknowledging him their ſuperior and ſovereign: But by the Stat. 27 H. 8. cap. 24. their power is abridged. 4 Inſt. 204, 221.

The counties palatine are reckoned among the ſuperior courts: And are privileged as to pleas, ſo as no inhabitant of ſuch counties ſhall be compelled by any writ to appear or anſwer out of the ſame; except for error, and in caſes of treaſon, &c. and the counties palatine of Cheſter and Durham, are by preſcription, where the King's writ ought not to come, but under the ſeal of the counties palatine; unleſs it be writs of proclamation. Cromp. Juriſ. 137. 1 Danv. Abr. 750.

But certiorari lies out of B. R. to juſtices of a county palatine, &c. to remove indictments, and proceedings before them. 2 Hawk. P. C. 286.

There is a court of Chancery in the counties palatine of Lancaſter and Durham, over which there are Chancellors; that of Lancaſter called Chancellor of the Duchy, &c. and there is a court of Exchequer at Cheſter, of a mixt nature, for law and equity, of which the Chamberlain of Cheſter is judge. There is alſo a Chief Juſtice of Cheſter; and other juſtices in the other counties palatine, to determine civil actions and pleas of the crown.

The biſhops of Durham and Ely, have thoſe counties palatine; and if any erroneous judgment be given in the courts of the biſhoprick of Durham, a writ of error ſhall be brought before the biſhop himſelf; and if he give an erroneous judgement thereon, a writ of error ſhall be ſued out returnable in B. R. 4 Inſt. 218. But it has been held, that Ely is not a county palatine, only a royal franchiſe, having cogniſance of pleas like unto the Cinque Ports. Carthew 109. Infants in counties palatine enabled to convey by order of the reſpective courts belonging to thoſe counties. 4 Geo. 3. c. 16.

Counties palatine, with Jura Regalia, were probably erected at firſt, becauſe they were adjacent to the enemies countries heretofore; as Lancaſter and Durham to Scotland, and Cheſter to Wales; that the inhabitants might have adminiſtration of juſtice at home, and remain there to ſecure the country from incurſions. 1 Vent. 155. The King may make a county palatine by his letters patent without parliament. 4 Inſt. 201.

Counties Corporate. Beſides the counties above mentioned, there are counties corporate. Stat. 3 E. 4. c. 5. And they are certain cities, with lands and territories, having liberties and juriſdiction by grant from the King: As the county of Middleſex annexed to the city of London by King Hen. 1. The county of the city of York, anno 32 H. 8. The county of the city of Cheſter, 42 Eliz. The county of the city of Briſtol, Norwich, Worceſter, &c. and the county of the town of Kingſton upon Hull, Newcaſtle, &c. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. Cromp. Juſt. 59. And county, in another ſignification, is uſed for the county-court, kept by the ſheriff within his charge, or by his deputy. Stat. 2 Ed. 6. cap. 25. Bract. lib. 3. cap. 7. See Comitatus.

County-Court, (Curia Comitatus) Is by Lambert called Conventus, in his explication of Saxon words, and divided into two ſorts; one retaining the general name, as the county-court held every month, by the ſheriff or his deputy: the other called the turn, held twice in every year, viz. within a month after Eaſter and Michaelmas; of both which you may read Cromp. Juriſd. fol. 241. All adminiſtration of juſtice was at firſt in the King's hands; but afterwards, when by the increaſe of the people the burden grew too great for him; as the kingdom was divided into counties, hundreds, &c. So the adminiſtration of juſtice was diſtributed amongſt divers courts; of which the ſheriff had the county-court for government of the county, and lords of liberties had their leets and law-days, for the ſpeedier and eaſier adminiſtring juſtice therein, &c.

Before the courts at Weſtminſter were erected, the county-courts were the chief courts of the kingdom: And among the laws of King Edgar it is ordained, that there be two county-courts kept in the year, in which there ſhall be a biſhop and an alderman, or earl, as judges; one to judge according to the Common law, and the other according to the eccleſiaſtical law: But theſe united powers of a biſhop and earl, to try cauſes, were ſeparated by William the Firſt, called the Conqueror; and ſoon after the buſineſs of eccleſiaſtical cogniſance was brought into its proper courts, and the common law buſineſs into the King's Bench. Blount.

That the county-court in ancient times, had the cognition of great matters, appears by Glanv. lib. 1. cap. 2, 3, 4. by Bracton, and Briton, in divers places, and Fleta, lib. 2. c. 62. But the power of this court was much reduced by Magn. Chart. c. 17. and by 1 Ed. 4. cap. 1. It had formerly, and now hath the determination of certain debts, &c. under 40*s.* And this court holdeth not plea (de juris) of any debt or damage to the value of 40*s.* or above; nor of treſpaſs vi & armis, &c.

But of debt and other actions perſonal above that ſum, the ſheriff may hold plea by force of a writ of juſticies, which is in nature of a commiſſion to him to do it. 4 Inſt. 266. Here the plaintiff takes out a ſummons, and if the defendant do not appear, an attachment or diſtringas is to be made out againſt him; but if the defendant appears, the plaintiff is to file his declaration, and after the defendant is to put in his anſwer or plea; and the plaintiff having joined iſſue, the trial proceeds, &c. whereupon, if verdict is given for the plaintiff, judgment is entered, and a fieri facias may be awarded againſt the defendant's goods, which may be taken by virtue thereof, and be appraiſed and ſold to ſatisfy the plaintiff: But if the defendant hath no goods, the plaintiff is without remedy in this court; for no capias lies therein, but an action may be brought at Common law, upon the judgment entered. Greenwood of Courts, p. 22.

No ſheriff is to enter in the county-court, any plaint in the abſence of the plaintiff; nor above one plaint for one cauſe, under penalties: The defendant in the county-court is to have lawful ſummons; and two juſtices of peace are to view the eſtreats of ſheriffs, before they iſſue them out of the county-court, &c. By Stat. 11 Hen. 7. c. 15. Cauſes are removed out of the county-court, by recordare, pone, and writ of falſe judgment, into B. R. &c.

See Stat. 23 Geo. 2. c. 33. for preventing delays and expences in the proceedings in the county-court of Middleſex, and for the more eaſy and ſpeedy recovery of ſmall debts in the ſaid county-court.

County-Rates, Are thoſe ordered by juſtices of peace at their quarter ſeſſions, who may make one general rate, to anſwer all former diſtinct rates, which ſhall be aſſeſſed on every pariſh, &c. and collected and paid by the high conſtables of hundreds to treaſurers appointed by the juſtices; which money ſhall be deemed the public ſtock, and be laid out in repairing of bridges, gaols, or houſes of correction, on preſentment made by the grand jury at the aſſiſes or quarter ſeſſions, of their wanting reparation; but appeal lies by the church-wardens and overſeers of the poor of the pariſhes to the juſtices at the next ſeſſions, againſt the rate on any particular pariſh. 12 Geo. 2. c. 29.

Counting-Houſe of the King's Houſhold, (Domus Computus Hoſpitii Regis) Is uſually called the Green Cloth; where ſit the Lord Steward, and Treaſurer of the King's Houſe, the Comptroller, Maſter of the Houſhold, Cofferer, and two Clerks of the Green Cloth, &c. for daily taking the accounts of all expences of the Houſhold, making proviſions, and ordering payment for the ſame; and for the good government of the King's Houſhold ſervants, and paying the wages of thoſe below ſtairs. Stat. 39 Eliz. cap. 7.

Courier, (from the Fr. Courir to ruin) An expreſs meſſenger of haſte.

Courracier, A French word ſignifying a horſe courſer. 2 Inſt. 719.

Court, (Curia) Signifies the King's palace, or manſion; but is more eſpecially the place where juſtice is judicially adminiſtered. The ſuperior courts are thoſe at Weſtminſter; and of courts, ſome are of record, and ſome not; which are accounted baſe courts, in reſpect of the reſt: a court of record is that court which hath power to hold plea, according to the courſe of the Common law, of real, perſonal, and mixed actions, where the debt or damage is 40*s.* or above; as the King's Bench, Common Pleas, &c.

A court not of record is where it cannot hold plea of debt or damages amounting to 40*s.* but of pleas under that ſum; or where the proceedings are not according to the courſe of the Common law, nor inrolled; as the county-court, and the court-baron, &c. 1 Inſt. 117, 260. 4 Rep. 52. 2 Rol. Abr. 574.

Every court of record is the King's Court, though his ſubjects have the benefit of it; and the free uſe of all courts of record and not of record, is to be granted to the people: The leet and tourn are the King's courts, and of record. 2 Danv. 259. The rolls of the ſuperior courts of record are of ſuch authority, as no proof will be admitted againſt them; and they are only triable by themſelves. 3 Inſt. 71. But as the county-court, court-baron, &c. are not courts of record, the proceedings therein may be denied, and tried by a jury: And upon their judgments, a writ of error lies not; but writ of falſe judgment. 1 Inſt. 117.

In the courts at Weſtminſter, the plaintiff need not ſhew at large in his declaration, that the cauſe of action ariſes within their juriſdiction, it being general: Inferior courts are to ſhew it at large, becauſe they have particular juriſdictions. 1 Lil. Abr. 371. Alſo nothing ſhall be intended to be within the juriſdiction of an inferior court, but what is expreſly ſo alledged: And if part of the cauſe ariſes from the inferior juriſdiction, and part thereof without it, the inferior court ought not to hold plea. 1 Lev. 104. 2 Rep. 16. An inferior court, not of record cannot impoſe a fine, or impriſon: But the courts of record at Weſtminſter may fine, impriſon, and amerce. 11 Rep. 43.

The King being the ſupreme magiſtrate of the kingdom, and intruſted with the executive power of the law, all courts ſuperior or inferior ought to derive their authority from the crown. Staundf. 54. 2 Hawk. P. C. 2. Though the King himſelf cannot ſit in judgment in any court upon an indictment, becauſe he is one of the parties to the ſuit. Hawk. Ibid. The King hath committed all his power judicial to one court or other. 4 Inſt. 71. And by ſtatute it is enacted, that all perſons ſhall receive juſtice in the King's court, and none take any diſtreſs, &c. of his own authority, without award of the King's courts. Stat. 52 Hen. 3. cap. 1.

It is ſaid the cuſtoms, precedents, and common judicial proceedings of a court, are a law to the court: And the determinations of courts, make points to be law. 2 Rep. 16. 4 Rep. 53. Hob. 298. All things determinable in courts, that are courts by the Common law, ſhall be determined by the judges of the ſame courts; and the King's writ cannot alter the juriſdiction of a court. 6 Rep. 11. The court of B. R. regulates all the inferior courts of law in the kingdom, ſo that they do not exceed their juriſdictions, nor alter their forms, &c. 22 Car. B. R. And as the court of King's Bench hath a general ſuperintendency over all inferior courts, it may award an attachment againſt any ſuch court, uſurping a juriſdiction not belonging to it: But it is ſometimes uſual firſt to award a writ of prohibition, and afterwards an attachment, upon its continuing to proceed. 2 Hawk. 149, 150.

If a court, having no juriſdiction of a cauſe depending therein, do nevertheleſs proceed, the judgment in ſuch court is coram non judice, and void; and an action lies againſt the judges who give the judgment, and any officer that executes the proceſs under them: Though where they have authority, and give an ill judgment, there the party who executes the proceſs, &c. upon the judgment, ſhall be excuſed. 1 Lil. Abr. 370.

Judges of inferiour courts may be puniſhed for miſbehaviour either by information or attachment. Moravid's Caſe. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 135. Any defects in the proceedings of an inferior court cannot be amended, by the return which is not part of the record. Ibid. The King v. Holmes, 365. Where an inferior court returns its proceedings, no diminution can be alledged. Ibid. Sayer v. Curtis, 367.

Action on the caſe lies againſt the plaintiff in an action for ſuing one in an inferior court, where the cauſe of action is out of its juriſdiction. 1 Vent. 369. And if a plaintiff on a contract for a large ſum, ſplits it into ſeveral actions for ſmall ſums to give an inferior court juriſdiction, a prohibition ſhall go. Mod. Caſ. 90.

Lord Hardwicke ſaid, he had ſeen good opinions, that an action of debt by original will lie in B. R. Bounds v. Allen, Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 317. And now it is every day's practice.

Striking, in the courts at Weſtminſter, is puniſhed by cutting off the right hand, and forfeiture of goods, &c. How contempts to courts are puniſhable by fine and impriſonment, &c. Vide Attachment. See more of Courts under Judges.

Court of Admiralty, (curia admiralitatis) Was erected as generally held, by King Ed. 3. for deciding maritime cauſes; and the title of its judge is Supremæ curiæ admiralitatis Angliæ locum tenens, judex ſive præſidens. The admiralty court is not allowed to be a court of record, becauſe it proceeds by the civil law; and the judge has no power to take ſuch a recogniſance, as a court of record may: the proceſs and proceedings are in the name of the Lord Admiral, and by libel; and the plaintiff and defendant enter into a ſtipulation, or bond, for appearance, and to abide the ſentence. 4 Inſt. 134, 135. This court hath juriſdiction to determine all cauſes ariſing wholly upon the ſea, out of the juriſdiction of a county: and a judgment of a thing done upon land is void. 1 Inſt. 260. If the court of admiralty hold a plea of an agreement made at ſea, but put in writing and ſealed in foreign lands, a prohibition may be granted; but not if only a bare remembrance had been made of it at land. Hob. 69, 211. See Latch 11. By the cuſtom of the admiralty, goods may be attached in the hands of a third perſon in cauſa civili & maritima. March 204. See Admiralty.

Court-Baron, (curia baronis) Is a court which every lord of a manor hath within his own precinct: it is an inſeparable incident to the manor; and muſt be held by preſcription, for it cannot be created at this day. 1 Inſt. 58. 4 Inſt. 268. A court-baron muſt be kept on ſome part of the manor: and is of two natures.

1. By Common law, which is the barons or freeholders court, of which the freeholders being ſuitors are the judges; and this cannot be a court-baron without two ſuitors at leaſt.

2. By cuſtom, which is called the cuſtomary court: and concerns the cuſtomary tenants and copyholders, whereof the lord, or his ſteward, is judge. The court-baron may be of this double nature, or one may be without the other: but as there can be no court-baron at Common law without freeholders; ſo there cannot be a cuſtomary court without copyholders or cuſtomary tenants. 4 Rep. 26. 6 Rep. 11, 12. 2 Inſt. 119.

The freeholders court, which hath juriſdiction for trying actions of debt, treſpaſſes, &c. under 40*s.* may be had every three weeks; and is ſomething like a county-court, and the proceedings much the ſame: though on recovery of debt, they have not power to make execution, but are to diſtrain the defendant's goods, and retain them till ſatisfaction is made.

The other court-baron, for taking and paſſing of eſtates, ſurrenders, admittances, &c. is held but once or twice in a year, (uſually with the court-leet) unleſs it be on purpoſe to grant an eſtate; and then it is holden as often as requiſite. In this court the homage jury are to inquire that their lords do not loſe their ſervices, duties, or cuſtom; but that the tenants make their ſuits of court; pay their rents and heriots, &c. and keep their lands and tenements in repair; they are to preſent all common and private nuſances, which may prejudice the lord's manor; and every public treſpaſs muſt be puniſhed in this court, by amercement, on preſenting the ſame. By ſtatute, it ſhall be inquired of cuſtomary tenants, what they hold, by what works, rents, heriots, ſervices, &c. And of the lord's woods, and other profits, fiſhing, &c. Stat. Extent. Manerii, 4 Ed. 1. See Compleat Court-Keeper.

Court of Chivalry, (curia militaris) Otherwiſe called the Marſhal-court; the judges of it are the Lord Conſtable of England, and the Earl Marſhal: this court is ſaid to be the fountain of the martial law, and the Earl Marſhal hath both a judicial and miniſterial power; for he is not only one of the judges, but to ſee execution done. 4 Inſt. 123. See Conſtable.

Court-Chriſtian, (curia Chriſtianitatis) Is an eccleſiaſtical judicature, oppoſed to the civil court, or lay tribunal: and as in ſecular courts, human laws are maintained; ſo in the Court Chriſtian, the laws of Chriſt ſhould be the rule. And therefore the judges are divines; as archbiſhops, biſhops, archdeacons, &c. 2 Inſt. 488. Courts Chriſtian are ſo called, becauſe they handle matters eſpecially appertaining to Chriſtianity; and were held heretofore by our biſhops from the pope, as he challenged the ſuperiority in all cauſes ſpiritual: but ſince his ejection, they hold them by the King's authority, virtute magiſtratus ſui, &c. and as the appeal from theſe courts did lie to Rome, now by the Stat. 25 H. 8. cap. 19. it lies to the King, in his Chancery. 4 Inſt. 339. &c. Theſe courts were complained againſt long before the reformation; the biſhops having extended their juriſdiction ſo far, that they had left very little buſineſs for the ſecular judges; for they aſſumed an authority over the clergy, even in criminal caſes, though they had no legal power, but only in the execution of the ſentence of degradation, &c. and took upon them to judge in a great many other things that did not belong to them.

Court of Conſcience, (curia conſcientiæ) In the 9th year of King Hen. 8. the court of conſcience in London was erected: there was then made an act of common council, that the Lord Mayor and Aldermen ſhould aſſign monthly two Aldermen and four diſcreet Commoners, to be commiſſioners to ſit in this court twice a week, to hear and determine all matters brought before them between party and party, between citizens and freemen of London, in all caſes where the debt or damage was under 40*s* And this act of Common Council is confirmed by Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 14. which impowers the commiſſioners of this court to make ſuch orders between the parties touching ſuch debts, as they ſhall find ſtand to equity and good conſcience. Alſo the Stat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 15. further eſtabliſhes this court; the courſe and practice whereof is by ſummons, to which if the party appear, the commiſſioners proceed ſummarily; examining the witneſſes of both parties, or the parties themſelves on oath, and as they ſee cauſe give judgment. And if the party ſummoned appear not, the commiſſioners may commit him to the Compter priſon till he does; alſo the commiſſioners have power to commit a perſon refuſing to obey their orders, &c.

By a late ſtatute, the proceedings of the court of conſcience are regulated; and in caſe any perſon affront or inſult any of the commiſſioners, on their certifying it to the Lord Mayor, he ſhall puniſh the offender by fine, not exceeding 20*s.* or may impriſon him ten days. 14 Geo. 2. c. 10.

There are many other courts of conſcience eſtabliſhed of late years by act of parliament, too many to enumerate. See the Table to the Statutes.

Court of Delegates, (curia delegatorum) Is ſo called, becauſe the judges are delegated, and ſit by force of the King's commiſſion, under the Great Seal, upon appeals to the King, in three caſes.

1. When a decree or ſentence is given in an eccleſiaſtical cauſe, by the archbiſhop, or any of his officials.

2. When any decree or ſentence is given in an eccleſiaſtical cauſe in places exempt, or peculiars, belonging to the king, or an archbiſhop.

3. When a ſentence is given in the court of admiralty in a civil and marine cauſe, according to the Civil law. 4 Inſt. 339. Stat 25 Hen. 8. c. 19.

If the delegates in eccleſiaſtical cauſes are ſpiritual perſons, they may proceed to excommunication, &c. This is the higheſt court for civil affairs that concern the church. See Appeal to Rome.

Courts Eccleſiaſtical, (curiæ eccleſiaſticæ) Are thoſe courts which are held by the King's authority as ſupreme governor of the church, for matters which chiefly concern religion. 4 Inſt. 321. And the laws and conſtitutions whereby the church of England is governed, are, 1. Divers immemorial cuſtoms. 2. Our own provincial conſtitutions; and the canons made in convocations, eſpecially thoſe in the year 1603. 3. Statutes or acts of Parliament concerning the affairs of religion, or cauſes of eccleſiaſtical cognizance; particularly the rubricks in our Common Prayer-Book, founded upon the ſtatutes of uniformity. 4. The articles of religion, drawn up in the year 1562, and eſtabliſhed by 13 Eliz. cap. 12. And it is ſaid, by the general Canon law, where all others fail. See the 25 Hen. 8. c. 28.

As to ſuits in ſpiritual or eccleſiaſtical courts, they are for the reformation of manners, or for puniſhing of hereſy, defamation, laying violent hands on a clerk, and the like; and ſome of their ſuits are to recover ſomething demanded, as tithes, a legacy, contract of marriage, &c. And in cauſes of this nature the courts may give coſts, but not damages: things that properly belong to theſe juriſdictions are matrimonial and teſtamentary; and ſuch defamatory words, for which no action lies at law; as for calling one adulterer, fornicator, uſurer, or the like. 11 Rep. 54. Dyer 240.

The proceedings in the eccleſiaſtical courts are according to the Civil and Canon law, by citation, libel, anſwer upon oath, proof by witneſſes, and preſumptions, &c. and after ſentence, for contempt, by excommunication: and if the ſentence is diſliked, by appeal.

The juriſdiction of theſe courts is voluntary, or contentious: and the puniſhments inflicted by them are cenſures and puniſhments pro ſalute animæ, by way of penance, &c. They are not courts of record. Vide Conſultation and Prohibition.

Court of Huſtings, (curia huſtingi) Is the higheſt court of record, holden at Guildhall, for the city of London, before the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, the Sheriffs, and Recorder. 4 Inſt. 247. This court determines all pleas real, perſonal, and mixt: and here all lands, tenements, and hereditaments, rents and ſervices, within the city of London and ſuburbs of the ſame, are pleadable in two huſtings; one called huſtings of plea of lands, and the other huſtings of common pleas.

In the huſtings of plea of lands, are brought writs of right patent directed to the ſheriffs of London, on which writs the tenant ſhall have three ſummonſes at the three huſtings next following; and after the three ſummons there ſhall be three eſſoins at three other huſtings next enſuing; and at the next huſtings after the third eſſoin, if the tenant makes default, proceſs ſhall be had againſt him by grand cape, or petit cape, &c. If the tenant appears, the demandant is to declare in the nature of what writ he will; without making proteſtation to ſue in nature of any writ: then the tenant ſhall have the view, &c. and if the parties plead to judgment, the judgment ſhall be given by the Recorder: but no damages, by the cuſtom of the city, are recoverable in any ſuch writ of right patent. Practiſ. Solic. 416, 417.

In the huſtings of common pleas are pleadable writs ex gravi querela, writs of gavelet, of dower, waſte, &c. alſo writs of exigent are taken out in the huſtings; and at the fifth huſtings the outlawries are awarded, and judgment pronounced by the recorder.

If an erroneous judgment is given in the huſtings, the party grieved may ſue a commiſſion out of Chancery, directed to certain perſons to examine the record, and thereupon do right. 1 Rol. Abr. 745.

Court Leet, (leta, viſus franci plegii) Is a court of record, ordained for puniſhing offences againſt the crown; and is ſaid to be the moſt ancient court of the land. 2 Danv. Abr. 289. It enquires of all offences under high treaſon; but thoſe which are to be puniſhed with loſs of life or member, are only inquirable and preſentable here, and to be certified over to the juſtices of aſſiſe. Stat. 1 Ed. 3. And this court is called the view of frankpledge, becauſe the King is to be there certified by the view of the ſteward, how many people are within every leet, and have an account of their good manners and government; and every perſon of the age of twelve years, who hath remained there for a year and a day, may be ſworn to be faithful to the King, and the people are to be kept in peace, &c. Alſo every one from the age of twelve to ſixty years, that dwells within the leet, is obliged to do ſuit in this court; except peers, clergymen, &c. unleſs they are under the ſheriff's torn. 4 Inſt. 261, 263, &c.

A leet is incident to a hundred, as a court-baron to a manor; for by grant of a hundred, a leet paſſeth, and a hundred cannot be be without a leet. Kitch. 70. Leets may be held by charter or preſcription; but are commonly claimed by preſcription; and are to be kept twice a year, one time within a month after Eaſter, and the other within a month after Michaelmas, at a certain place within the precinct: theſe are the uſual times of holding the leet; but if it hath been a cuſtom to keep this court at any other time of the year, it is good if due warning be given. 1 Inſt. 115. 2 Inſt. 72. The ſteward is the judge of this court, as the ſheriff is in the torn: and he hath power to elect officers, as conſtables, tithingmen, &c. as well as puniſh offenders. 6 Rep. 12. 2 Inſt. 199.

A preſentment in a court-leet, or ſheriff's torn, after the day of preſentment, ſubjects the party to a fine or amerciament; and is not traverſable, except it toucheth the party's freehold; as that one ought to cleanſe the highways, &c. by reaſon of his tenure: though ſuch preſentment may be removed into B. R. by certiorari, where it may be traverſed. Dyer 13. 2 Inſt. 52. Kitch. 86, 91, &c.

A court-leet may fine, but not impriſon; a ſteward may impoſe a reaſonable fine for a contempt in court; or commit thoſe who make an affray before him, in the execution of his office, or bind them to the peace or good behaviour: but he may not grant ſurety of the peace, unleſs by preſcription. 8 Rep. 38. 1 Saund. 135.

The uſual method of puniſhment in the court-leet, is by fine and amercement; the former aſſeſſed by the ſteward, and the latter by the jury: for both of which, the lord may have an action of debt, or take a diſtreſs, &c. Twelve freeholders, or reſiants, are to be of the jury: and the particular articles to be inquired into, by ſtatute, are, if all that owe ſuit of court are preſent; of cuſtoms withdrawn; purpreſtures in lands, woods, &c. of houſes ſet up or beat down, cottages erected contrary to law, and other annoyances; of bounds taken away; ways or waters turned or ſtopped; of thieves, and hues and cries not purſued; of bloodſhed, eſcapes, perſons outlawed, money coiners, treaſure found; aſſiſe of bread and ale, perſons keeping alehouſes without licence; falſe weights and meaſures, unlawful games, offences relating to the game; offences of tanners in ſelling inſufficient leather, of foreſtallers, &c. of markets, victuallers and labourers, unlawful fiſhing, idle perſons, &c. by ſeveral ſtatutes. All theſe articles are drawn up in form, and given in charge by the ſteward.

The lord of the leet ought to have a pillory and tumbrel, to puniſh offenders; and for want thereof the lord may be fined, or the liberty ſeized. 2 Danv. 289. Alſo all towns in the leet are to keep ſtocks in repair; and the town that hath none ſhall forfeit 5 l. Ibid. Stewards of leets, &c. are not receive profits to their own uſe, belonging to the lord, on pain of 40 l. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 5. Vide Compleat Court-Keeper.

Court of Marſhalſea, (curia palatia) A court of record to hear and determine cauſes between the ſervants of the King's houſhold and others within the verge; and hath juriſdiction of all matters within the verge of the court, and of pleas of treſpaſs, where either party is of the King's family; and of all other actions perſonal, wherein both parties are the king's ſervants; and this is the original juriſdiction of the court of marſhalſea. But the curia palatii, erected by King Charles I. by letters patent, in the 6th year of his reign, and made a court of record, hath power to try all perſonal actions, as debt, treſpaſs, ſlander, trover, actions on the caſe, &c. between party and party, the liberty whereof extends twelve miles about Whitehall; which juriſdiction hath ſince been confirmed by King Charles the Second: and the judges of this court are the ſteward of the King's houſhold, and knight-marſhal for the time being, and the ſteward of the court, or his deputy, being always a lawyer. Crompt. Juriſd. 102. Kitch. 199, &c. 2 Inſt. 548.

This court is kept once a week, in Southwark: and the proceedings here are either by capias or attachment; which is to be ſerved on the defendant by one of the knight marſhal's men, who takes bond with ſureties for his appearance at the next court; upon which appearance, he muſt give bail, to anſwer the condemnation of the court; and the next court after the bail is taken, the plaintiff is to declare, and ſet forth the cauſe of his action, and afterwards proceed to iſſue and trial by a jury, according to the cuſtom of the Common law courts. If a cauſe is conſiderable, it is uſually removed into B. R. or C. B. by an habeas corpus cum cauſa: otherwiſe cauſes are here brought to trial in four or five court-days. Practiſ. Solic. 409, 410.

By ſtatute, the ſteward and marſhal of the King's houſe are not to hold plea of freehold, &c. 28 Ed. 1. c. 3. Error in the marſhalſea court may be removed into the King's Bench. 10 Ed. 3. And the fees of the marſhalſea are limited by the Stat. 2 H. 4. c. 23. This marſhalſea is that of the houſhold; not the King's marſhalſea, which belongs to the King's Bench.

Court Martial, (curia martialis) Is a court for puniſhing the offences of officers and ſoldiers in time of war. And it appears by our books, that if any perſon in commiſſion, in time of peace, put to death any man by martial law, it is againſt Magna Charta, and murder. 3 Inſt. 52. Though temporal acts of parliament have of late enabled our Kings to hold courts martial in time of peace, &c. By 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 13. Deſertion and mutiny is puniſhable by a court martial: and the King, or the General of the army, may grant commiſſions to any field officer, &c. to call a court martial, of thirteen at leaſt commiſſion officers, who are to take an oath for trying truly; and ſentence of death is not to be given unleſs nine concur: and a field-officer is not to be tried by any under the degree of a captain. By a ſubſequent act, courts martial may be called within the realm, for trying offenders againſt the laws of war out of the realm; or a deſerter abroad may be ſent back to his regiment to be proceeded againſt. And an acquittal or conviction in a court martial is a good bar to an indictment. Stat. 7 Ann. c. 4. See 1 Geo. 1. c. 9. 7 Geo. 1. c. 6. Court martial at Sea, vide Navy.

Court of Piepowders, (curia pedis pulveriſati) Is a court held in fairs, to do juſtice to buyers and ſellers, and for redreſs of diſorders committed in them: ſo called, becauſe they are moſt uſual in ſummer, when the ſuitors to the court have duſty feet; and from the expedition in hearing cauſes proper thereunto, before the duſt goes off the feet of the plaintiffs and defendants. 4 Inſt. 272. It is a court of record incident to every fair; and to be held only during the time that the fair is kept. Doct. & Stud. c. 5. As to the juriſdiction, the cauſe of action for contract, ſlander, &c. muſt ariſe in the fair or market, and not before at any former fair, nor after the fair: it is to be for ſome matter concerning the ſame fair or market; and be done, complained of, heard and determined the ſame day. Alſo the plaintiff muſt make oath that the contract, &c. was within the juriſdiction and time of the fair. Stat. 17 Ed. 4. c. 2. 2 Inſt. 220.

The court of piepowders may hold a plea of a ſum above 40*s.* and it is ſaid, judgment may be given at another fair, at a court held there, and a writ of error lies upon a judgment given. Dyer 133. F. N. B. 18. This court may not meddle with any thing done in a market, without a ſpecial cuſtom for it; but for what is done in a fair only: and not there for ſlanderous words, unleſs they concern matters of contract in the fair; as where it is for ſlandering the wares of another, and not of his perſon in the ſame fair, Moor, ca. 854. The ſteward before whom the court is held, is the judge: and the trial is by merchants and traders in the fair; and the judgment againſt the defendant ſhall be quod amercietur. If the ſteward proceeds contrary to the ſtatute 17 Ed. 4. c. 2. he ſhall forfeit 5 l.

Court of Requeſts, (curia requiſitionem) Was a court of equity, of the ſame nature with the court of Chancery, but inferior to it; principally inſtituted for the relief of ſuch petitioners, as in conſcionable caſes addreſſed themſelves by ſupplication to his majeſty. Of this court, the Lord Privy Seal was chief judge, aſſiſted by the Maſters of Requeſts; and it had beginning about the 9 H. 7. according to Sir Julius Cæſar's Tractate on this ſubject: though Mr. Gwyn, in his Preface to his Readings, ſaith it began from a commiſſion firſt granted by King Hen. 8.

This court having aſſumed great power to itſelf, ſo that it became burdenſome, Mich. anno 40 & 41 Eliz. in the court of Common Pleas it was adjudged, upon ſolemn argument, that the court of Requeſts was no court of judicature, &c. And by the Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 1. c. 10. it was taken away. 4 Inſt. 97. See Court of Conſcience.

Court of the Lord Steward of the King's Houſe. The lord ſteward, or, in his abſence, the treaſurer and controller of the King's houſe, and ſteward of the marſhalſea, may inquire of, hear and determine in this court, all treaſons, murders, manſlaughters, bloodſheds, and other malicious ſtrikings, whereby blood ſhall be ſhed, in any of the palaces and houſes of the King, or in any other houſe where his royal perſon ſhall abide. And this juriſdiction was given by the Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 12. 3 Inſt. 140. But this court was at firſt intended only to inquire of and puniſh felonies, &c. by the King's ſervants againſt any lord or other perſon of the King's council. 3 H. 7. c. 14.

Court of Star-Chamber, (curia cameræ ſtellatæ) A court erected by 3 H. 7. c. 8. which ordained, That the Lord Chancellor, Treaſurer, and Lord Privy Seal, calling a Biſhop, and Lord of the King's Council, and the two Chief Juſtices to their aſſiſtance, on bill or information might make proceſs againſt maintainors, riotors, perſons unlawfully aſſembling, and for other miſdemeanors, which, through the power and countenance of ſuch as did commit them, lifted up their heads above their faults, and puniſh them as if the offenders had been convicted at law, by a jury, &c. But this act was repealed, and the court diſſolved by Stat. 17 Car. 1. c. 10. To the very great benefit of the ſubject!

Courts of Univerſities. The courts of the univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge are of a particular nature: they were granted by charters, and confirmed by authority of parliament. See Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 29. 4 Inſt. 227. Theſe courts are called the chancellor's courts, and are kept by the vice-chancellors of the univerſities: their juriſdiction extends to all cauſes eccleſiaſtical and civil, (except for maihem, felony, and relating to freehold) where a ſcholar, ſervant, or miniſter of the univerſities is one of the parties to the ſuit. The cauſes are managed by advocates and proctors: and they proceed in a ſummary way, according to the practice of the Civil law; and the judges, in their ſentences follow the juſtice and equity of the Civil law, or the laws, ſtatutes and cuſtoms of the univerſities, or the laws of the land, at their diſcretion. Cro. Car. 73. If any erroneous judgment be given in theſe courts, appeal lies to the congregation; thence to the convocation; and thence to the King in Chancery, by his delegates. Wood's Inſt. 526. See Cognizance.

Courts of Wales, (curia principalitatis Walliæ) The courts of the principality of Wales, and their juriſdiction, are ſettled by acts of parliament: and beſides county courts, hundred-courts, courts-leet, &c. by 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 26. ſect. 5. it is enacted, that there ſhall be a court of grand ſeſſions, kept twice in every year in every of the twelve counties of Wales; and the juſtices of thoſe courts may hold pleas of the crown in as large a manner as the King's Bench, &c. And alſo pleas of aſſiſes, and all other pleas and actions real and perſonal, in as large a manner as the Common Pleas, &c. And errors in judgment before any of the juſtices in the great ſeſſions, ſhall be redreſſed by writ of error out of the Chancery of England returnable in B. R. The proceedings in theſe courts are according to the laws of England: and the King's writs ought not to go into Wales; though a quo minus out of the Exchequer is often ſent thither. Sed. qu. if a latitat or capias will not run into Wales? Or elſe, what neceſſity was there for the Stat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 9. whereby it is enacted, ſheriffs in Wales, ſhall not hold to bail, on proceſs, iſſuing out of any of his majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter, unleſs the debt be ſworn to be 20 l.

Wills and deviſes of lands, &c. as to creditors on bonds or other ſpecialties, are declared void; and the creditors may have actions of debt againſt the heir at law and deviſees. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14. And in favour of creditors, whenever it appears to be the teſtator's intent, in a will, that his lands ſhould be liable for paying his debts; in ſuch caſe equity will make them ſubject, though there are not expreſs words; but there muſt be more than a bare declaration, or it ſhall be intended out of the perſonal eſtate. 2 Vern. Rep. 708. Where one deviſes that all his debts, &c. ſhall be firſt paid; if his perſonal eſtate is not ſufficient to pay the creditors, it ſhall amount to a charge on his real eſtate for that purpoſe. Preced. Canc. 430. See Debtor and Executor.

Creek, (creca crecca) Is a part of a haven where any thing is landed from the ſea: ſo that it is obſerved, if when you are out of the main ſea within the haven, you look round and ſee how many landing places there are, ſo many creeks may be ſaid to belong to that haven. Cromp. Juriſd. fol. 110. It is alſo ſaid to be a ſhore or bank whereon the water beats, running in a ſmall channel from any part of the ſea; from the Lat. crepido. This word is uſed in the Stat. 4 H. 4. c. 20. and 5 Eliz. c. 5.

Crementum Comitatus, The ſheriffs of counties anciently anſwered in their accounts for the improvement of the King's rents above the ancient vicontiel rents, under the title of Crementum Comitatus, or Firma de Cremento Comitatus. Hales's Sher. Acco. p. 36.

Crocia, The croſier or paſtoral ſtaff, ſo called a ſimilitudine crucis, which biſhops, &c. had the privilege to carry as the common enſign of their religious office; and being inveſted in their prelacies, by the delivery of ſuch a croſier: hence the word crocia did ſometimes denote the collation to, or diſpoſal of biſhopricks and abbies, by the donation of ſuch paſtoral ſtaff; ſo as when the King granted large juriſdictions, exceptis crociis, it is meant; except the collation or inveſtiture of epiſcopal ſees, &c. Addit. to Cowel.

Crociarius, The crociary or croſs-bearer, who like our virger, went before the prelate, and bore his croſs.——Robertus de Wycombe, cleritus epiſcopi Dunelm. quem vulgo crociarium ejus vocant. Liber de Miraculis Tho: Epiſc. Heref. MS. anno 1290.

Croft, (Sax. croftum and crofta) A little cloſe adjoining to a dwelling-houſe; and encloſed for paſture or arable; or any particular uſe. In ſome old deeds cruſta occurs as the Latin word for a croft; but cum toſtis & croftis, is moſt frequent. Ingulph. It ſeems to be derived from the old Engliſh word creaft, ſignifying handy craft; becauſe ſuch grounds are uſually manured and extraordinarily dreſt by the hand and ſkill of the owner.

Croiſes, and croiſado, Are mentioned in our ancient law books. See Croyſes.

Crok, (crocus) Turning up the hair into curls or croks; whence comes crook, crooked, &c.—Sciatis quod poteſtatem vobis dedimus ſcindendi capillos clericorum noſtrorum, longas crines habentium, & ad crocos capillorum ſuorum deponendos, &c. Pat. 21 H. 3.

Croſs-Bows. None ſhall ſhoot in, or keep any croſsbow, hand-gun, hagbut, &c. but thoſe who have lands of the value of 100*l.* per annum: and no perſon ſhall travel with a croſsbow bent, or gun charged, except in time of war; or ſhoot within a quarter of a mile of any city, or market-town, unleſs for defence of himſelf or his houſe, or at a dead mark, under the penalty of 10*l.* Stat. 33 H. 8. cap. 6.

Croſſes. By Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 2. Croſſes, beads, &c. uſed by the Roman Catholicks, are prohibited to be brought into this kingdom, on pain of a præmunire, &c. And it was uſual in former times for men to erect croſſes on their houſes, by which they would claim the privileges of the Templars to defend themſelves againſt their rightful lords; but this was condemned by the Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 37. It was likewiſe cuſtomary in thoſe days to ſet up croſſes in places where the corps of any of the nobility reſted, as it was carried to be buried, that a tranſeuntibus pro ejus anima deprecetur. Walſing. anno 1291. There were ſeveral of theſe croſſes erected over England, eſpecially in honour to the reſting-places of our Kings, on their bodies being tranſmitted to any diſtant place for burial: but theſe ſuperſtitions ſunk in this kingdom with the Romiſh religion.

Croy, Signifieth marſh land.——Et quia paluſtris hujus Croyland ipſum nomen indicat, nam crudam terram & cænoſam ſignificat. Ingulphus, p. 853.

Croyſes, (cruce ſignati) Is uſed by Britton for pilgrims, becauſe they wear the ſign of the croſs upon their garments. Of theſe and their privileges, Bracton hath treated, lib. 5. par. 2. cap. 2. and par. 5. cap. 9. Under this word are alſo ſignified the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, created for the defence of pilgrims; and likewiſe all thoſe perſons who in the reigns of K. Hen. 2. Ric. 1. Hen. 3. and Ed: 1. cruce ſignati took upon them the croiſado, dedicating and liſting themſelves to the wars, for the recovery of Jeruſalem and the Holy Land. Greg. Syntag. lib. 15. cap. 13, 14. See a general account of the croiſades in Robertſon's Hiſt. Emp. C. V. vol. 1. pa. 22. and Seq. alſo refer to the index to that volume.

Crown, (corona) Signifies the poſſeſſions and dignity of a King of any kingdom. The crown of England, according to Dr. Blackſtone, is, by Common law and conſtitutional cuſtom hereditary; and this in a manner peculiar to itſelf: as the right of inheritance may, from time to time, be changed or limited by act of parliament; under which limitations the crown ſtill continues hereditary. Black. Com. 1 V. 191. which vide. Sometimes our Kings, for political reaſons, have conferred their principalities on whom they pleaſed, eſteeming it lawful to appoint their ſucceſſors after them. For Edward the Confeſſor appointed the crown after his deceaſe, at ſeveral times, to William called the Conqueror, and Edgar and Harold; and Harold, after the deceaſe of his father, upon the title left him, was crowned by the Archbiſhop of York; but William of Normandy having ſlain Harold at the battle of Haſtings, he claimed the kingdom as well by the nomination of Edward the Confeſſor, as by right of conqueſt, and he was crown'd and enjoyed the kingdom for his time. Bac. Coron. 4, 27. But, according to Blackſtone and others, conqueror, from conqueſtor, in the feudal times, meant the firſt of the family who acquired the domaine.

To come further down, we find that the parliament, (which had the beſt right) have aſſerted their authority in theſe caſes: the crowns of England and France were entail'd on King Henry the Fourth, and his four ſons by act of-parliament. Stat. 7 H. 4. c. 2. And the parliament entail'd the crown on Henry the Sixth, and his iſſue; alſo Richard the Third was recogniſed by parliament. But the moſt extraordinary inſtance of this nature was, the nomination and appointment of King Henry the Eighth, to whom the parliament granted power by his laſt will and teſtament to make conditions and limitations at his pleaſure, for ſettling the inheritance of the crown; and he by his will ordained, that his ſon Edward ſhould ſucceed him, and he dying without iſſue, his daughter Mary, and, for her want of iſſue, his daughter Elizabeth to enjoy the crown in ſucceſſion; with remainders to ſuch as the King by his letters patent, &c. ſhould appoint. Stat. 35 Hen. 8. c. 1.

After the death of King Henry 8. his ſon Edward the Sixth ſucceeded; and he was prevailed upon to appoint the Lady Jane, daughter to the Duke of Suffolk, (who married King Henry's ſiſter) a proteſtant lady, by his letters patent to ſucceed him: but this appointment, ſoon after the death of K. Edward, was vacated by Queen Mary; the Lady Jane beheaded, and the proteſtant reformed religion eclipſed during her reign; but it revived again and received perfection, by her ſucceſſor the glorious Q. Elizabeth.

By the Stat. 1 Eliz. c. 1. the parliament acknowledged the Queen to be right heir to the crown; and by this act the limitation of the crown contained in 35 H. 8. is declared to ſtand and remain law for ever. And when King James the Firſt came to the crown the parliament made a recognition, that upon Queen Elizabeth's death. the crown of England, and all the kingdoms, dominions, and rights belonging to the ſame, did by lawful birthright and ſucceſſion deſcend to King James. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 1.

After this we do not find that the parliament intermeddled in ſettling the ſucceſſion of the crown till the abdication of King James the Second; when the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, lawfully repreſenting all the eſtates of the people of the realm, invited over William, Prince of Orange, and the Princeſs Mary, (eldeſt daughter of King James II.) to take care of their rights and liberties; whom they declared to be King and Queen of England. And by Stat. 1 W. & M. c. 2. reciting the declaration of the Lords and Commons for ſecuring the liberties of the kingdom, upon which the Prince and Princeſs of Orange accepted the crown, the ſaid Prince and Princeſs were recogniſed King and Queen of England, &c. for their lives, and the life of the ſurvivor of them; and after their deaths, the crown was ſettled on the heirs of the body of the ſaid Princeſs; and for want of ſuch iſſue, to the Princeſs Anne of Denmark, ſiſter to the Queen, and the heirs of her body.

Alſo by 12 W. 3. c. 2. (after the deceaſe of Q. Mary without iſſue) the Princeſs Sophia of Hanover (daughter of Elizabeth, eldeſt daughter of King James the Firſt) was declared next in ſucceſſion after King William, and the Princeſs Anne, and their iſſue; and the crown to remain to the Princeſs Sophia, and the heirs of her body being proteſtants. By virtue of which laſt ſtatute, his Majeſty King George the Firſt, eldeſt ſon of the Princeſs Sophia, on the death of her Majeſty Queen Anne without iſſue, the ſaid Princeſs Sophia being likewiſe dead, came to the poſſeſſion of the crown of theſe realms: by theſe laſt acts, papiſts are rendered incapable to inherit the crown of England; and ſubjects are abſolved from their allegiance to ſuch perſons coming to the crown, and are to join in the communion of the church of England.

And this nation is not to be engaged in a war for defence of dominions not belonging to the crown.

Perſons endeavouring to deprive the next in ſucceſſion to the crown from ſucceeding, and who attempt it by any overt act, are guilty of high treaſon. Stat. 1 Ann. c. 2. And if any affirm by writing, &c. that the King or Queen of England cannot make laws by the authority of parliament to bind the crown, they are guilty of treaſon: and preaching or ſpeaking it incur a præmunire. 4 Ann. c. 3. Affirming by writing or printing, that any other perſon hath a right to the crown, otherwiſe than according to the Stat. 1 W. & M. &c. is declared high treaſon. Stat. Ibid.

There is no interregnum in this kingdom; for when the crown deſcends to the right heir, he is Rex before coronation, as there muſt always be a King in whoſe name laws are to be maintained and executed. Hill. 1 Jac. See Deſcent of the Crown and King.

Crown-Office. This is an office belonging to the court of King's Bench, of which the King's Coroner or Attorney there is commonly Maſter. The Attorney General, and Clerk of the Crown exhibit informations in this office, for crimes and miſdemeanors; the one ex officio, and the other uſually by order of court; and here informations may be laid for offences and miſdemeanors at Common law, as for batteries conſpiracies, libelling, nuſances, contempt, ſeditious words, &c wherein the offender is liable to pay a fine to the King. Finch 340. Show. 109. By Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18.

The Clerk of the Crown in B. R. is not to receive or file any information for treſpaſs, battery, &c. without expreſs order of court; nor to iſſue any proceſs without taking a recogniſance in 20 l. penalty to proſecute with effect; and if the party appear, and the plaintiff do not procure a trial in a year, or if verdict paſs for the defendat, &c. the court ſhall award the defendant coſts: but this act doth not extend to informations in the name of the King's Coroner or Attorney, &c.

When a battery is committed privately, ſo that the perſon injured can make no proof thereof by witneſſes at law; it is uſual to bring an information in this office, or to prefer an indictment, the moſt legal method, where the party may be a witneſs for the King, it being his ſuit.

But unleſs the aſſault and battery are very violent, or attended with peculiar circumſtances, it is very oppreſſive, to indict the party in the Court of King's Bench, as an indictment may be preferred and tried at the ſeſſions. And if puniſhment is the object of the proſecutor, perhaps the end might be better anſwered at the ſeſſions, for the Court of King's Bench, conſidering the expence, which is principally born by the Defendant, is very merciful: a rigorous judgment is ſeldom known, and that only in particular caſes, which well deſerve ſevere puniſhment.

Informations in the nature of quo warranto's brought by the Attorney General, againſt corporations, &c. Vide Quo Warranto.

Cruſtum, Was a garment of purple, mix'd with many colours.——Duas patenas argenteas auro ornatas cum duobus urceolis & cruſto aureo. Mon. Ang. tom. 1. pag. 210.

Cry de Pais, On a robbery or other felony done, hue and cry may be raiſed by the country in the abſence of the conſtable, which is called cry de pais. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 100.

Crypta, A chapel or oratory under ground: egreſſo toto conventu, accepta abſconſa ſi nox eſt vadit per cryptam. Du Cange.

Cuckingſtool, (tumbrellum) Is an engine invented for the puniſhment of ſcolds, and unquiet women, by ducking them in water, called in ancient time a tumbrel; and ſometimes a trebuchet. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. c. 12. And Bracton writes this word tymborella. In Domeſday it is called cathedra ſtercoris: and it was in uſe even in the Saxons time, by whom it was deſcribed to be cathedra, in qua rixoſæ mulieres ſedentes aquis demergebantur. It was anciently alſo a puniſhment inflicted upon brewers and bakers, tranſgreſſing the laws; who were thereupon in ſuch a ſtool immerged over head and ears in ſtercore, ſome ſtinking water. Some think it is a corruption from ducking ſtool; others from choaking ſtool; quia hoc modo demerſæ aquis fere ſuffocantur. Blount. See Caſtigatory.

Cude. A cude cloth is a chryſom or face-cloth for a child baptized. Vide Chriſmale.

Cui ante Divortium, Is a writ that a woman divorced from her huſband hath to recover her lands and tenements which ſhe had in fee ſimple, or in tail, or for life, from him to whom her huſband did alienate them during the marriage, when ſhe could not gainſay it. Reg. Orig. 233. F. N. B. 240. And the heir ſhall have a ſur cui ante divortium, where the wife dieth before the action brought; as well as ſhe ſhall have a ſur cui in vita: But of an eſtate-tail, the heir ſhall not have ſur cui in vita ante divortium, but ſhall be put to his formedon in the deſcender. New Nat. Br. 454. See Black. Com. 3 V. 183.

Cui in Vita, Is a writ of entry, which a widow hath againſt him to whom her huſband alienated her lands or tenements in his life-time; which muſt contain in it, that during his life ſhe could not withſtand it. Reg. Orig. 232. F. N. B. 193. If huſband and wife be jointenants before the coverture, and the huſband alieneth all the land, and dieth, ſhe ſhall have a cui in vita for a moiety, and no more: But if they are joint purchaſers, during the coverture, and he alien all the land, and dieth, his wife ſhall have a cui in vita of the whole land; becauſe that during the coverture, as to purchaſe, they are but one perſon in law. F. N. B. 187. And from this reaſon, if huſband and wife, and a third perſon, purchaſe jointly, and the huſband alieneth all in fee, and dieth, the wife ſhall have a cui in vita of a moiety. Ibid.

Where the huſband and wife exchange the lands of the wife for other lands, if the wife agree unto the exchange after the huſband's death, ſhe ſhall not have a cui in vita. Alſo if the wife do accept of parcel of the land in dower, of which ſhe hath a cui in vita, by that acceptance ſhe ſhall be barred of the reſidue. New Nat. Br. 430. If the huſband and wife loſe by default the wife's lands, after the death of her huſband, ſhe ſhall have a cui in vita to recover thoſe lands ſo loſt by default. F. N. B. 187. By Stat. 13 Ed. 1. c. 3. Cui in vita is given to the wife where the deceaſed huſband loſt her lands by default in his life-time: And ſhe ſhall be admitted to defend her right during his life, if ſhe come in before judgment. Likewiſe if tenant in dower, by the curteſy, or for life, do make default, &c. the heirs and they to whom the reverſion belongeth, ſhall be admitted to their anſwer, if they come before judgment: And if on default judgment happen to be given, ſuch heirs, &c. ſhall have a writ of entry for recovery of the ſame, after the death of ſuch tenants. See Booth on real actions, and F. N. B. and Black. Com. 3 V. 183.

Culagium, Is when a ſhip is laid up in the dock to be repaired. MS. Arth. Trevor. Arm. de Plac. Edw. 3.

Culprit, Is a reply of a proper officer in behalf of the King, affirming a criminal to be guilty, after he hath pleaded Not guilty, without which the iſſue to be tried is not joined: It is compounded of two words, viz. Cul and prit; the one an abbreviation of culpabilis, and the other derived from the French word preſt, i. e. ready; and it is as much as to ſay that he is ready to prove the offender guilty. See Black. Com. 4 V. 333.

Cultura, This word is often found in old writings, and ſignifies a parcel of arable land. Blount.

Culvertage, (Culvertagium) Is ſaid by ſome perſons to be derived from Culum & Vertere, to turn tail: And in this ſenſe, ſub nomine culvertagii, was taken to be on pain of cowardice, or being accounted cowards. But in the opinion of others, it rather ſignifies ſome baſe ſlavery, or the confiſcation of an eſtate; being a feudal term for the lands of the vaſſal forfeited and eſcheating to the lord: and ſub nomine culvertagii, in this ſignification, was under pain of confiſcation. Matt. Pariſ. Anno 1212.

Culward and Culverd, Words uſed for a coward, or cowardice. Chart. Temp. E. 1.

Cuna Cerviſiæ, A tub of ale. Domeſday. But this word is truly Cuva.

Cuneus, A mint or place to coin money: Cuneum monetum ſignifies the King's ſtamp for coinage; and from the word cune, is derived coin. See Coin.

Cuntey-Cuntey, Is a kind of trial, as appears by Bracton, in theſe words: In brevi de recto, negotium terminabitur per Cuntey-Cuntey, &c. which is taken to be the ordinary jury. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 3. c. 18.

Curagulus, One who taketh care of a thing. Mon. Ang. Tom. 2.

Cura Monaſterii, An officer ſo called, who had the charge of a monaſtery.

Curate, (Curatus) Is he who repreſents the incumbent of a church, parſon or vicar, and officiates divine ſervice in his ſtead: And in caſe of pluralities of livings, or where a clergyman is old and infirm, it is requiſite there ſhould be a curate to perform the cure of the church. He is to be licenſed and admitted by the biſhop of the dioceſe, or by an ordinary, having epiſcopal juriſdiction: and when a curate hath the approbation of the biſhop, he uſually appoints the ſalary too; and in ſuch caſe, if he be not paid, the curate hath a proper remedy in the eccleſiaſtical court, by a ſequeſtration of the profits of the benefice; but if he hath no licence from the biſhop, he is put to his remedy at common law, where he muſt prove the agreement, &c. Right Clerg. 127.

By ſtatute, where curates are licenſed by the biſhop, they are to be appointed by him a ſtipend not exceeding 50 l. per ann. nor leſs than 20 l. a year, according to the value of the livings, to be paid by the rector or vicar: And the ſame may be done on any complaint made. Stat. 12 An. c. 2. One perſon cannot be curate in two churches, unleſs ſuch may ſatisfy the law, by reading both morning and evening prayers at each place: Nor can he ſerve one cure on one Sunday, and another cure on the next; for he muſt not neglect to read morning and evening prayer in his church every Lord's day; if he doth he is liable to puniſhment. Comp. Incumb. 572. But it is otherwiſe where a church or chapel is a member of the pariſh-church; and where one church is not able to maintain a curate. Can. 48.

A curate having no fixed eſtate in his curacy, not being inſtituted and inducted, may be removed at pleaſure by the biſhop or incumbent. Noy. But there are perpetual curates, as well as temporary, who are appointed where tithes are impropriate, and no vicarage endowed: Theſe are not removeable; and the impropriators are obliged to find them, ſome whereof have certain portions of the tithes ſettled on them. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 8. Every clergyman that officiates in a church, (whether incumbent or ſubſtitute) is in our liturgy called a curate: Curates muſt ſubſcribe the declaration, according to the act of uniformity, or are liable to impriſonment, &c.

Curfeu, (of the Fr. Couvrir, i. e. Tegere, and Feu, Ignis,) ſignifies the ringing of a bell, or evening peal, by which William the Firſt, called the Conqueror, commanded every perſon to rake up or cover over his fire, and put out his light: And in many places of England at this day, where a bell is cuſtomarily rung towards bed-time, it is ſaid to ring curfew. Stow's Annals.

In the Welch language, curfa. ſignifies a beating; alſo, a ſtroke. Richards's Antiquæ Linguæ Britanicæ Theſaurus.

Curia, This word was ſometimes taken for the perſons, as feudatory and other cuſtomary tenants, who did their ſuit and ſervice at the court of the lord. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. 139. And it was uſual for the King's of England, in ancient times, to aſſemble the biſhops, peers, and great men of the kingdom to ſome particular place, at the chief feſtivals in the year; and this aſſembly is called by our hiſtorians curia; becauſe there they conſulted about the weighty affairs of the nation. And it was therefore called Solemnis Curia, Auguſtalis Curia, Curia Publica, &c. See Court.

Curia adviſare vult, Is a deliberation which a court of judicature ſometimes takes, where there is any point of difficulty, before they give judgment in a cauſe. New Book Entr. And when judgment is ſtaid, upon motion to arreſt it; then it is entered by the judges curia adviſare vult. Shep. Epit. 682.

Curia Curſus Aquæ, A court held by the lord of the manor of Graveſend for the better management of barges and boats uſing the paſſage on the river Thames from thence to London, and plying at Graveſend bridge, &c. mentioned in the Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 26.

Curia Claudenda, Is a writ to compel another to make a fence or wall, which he ought to make between his land and the plaintiff's, on his refuſing or deferring to do the ſame. Reg. Orig. 155. This writ doth not lie but againſt him who hath a cloſe adjoining to the plaintiff's land, who is obliged to incloſe it; and it lieth not but for him who hath a freehold, &c. It may be ſued before the ſheriff in the county-court, or in the common pleas: And the judgment is to recover the incloſure and damages. New Nat. Br. 282, 283. But, if the occupier of a cloſe adjoining to mine, ought to repair the fence between the cloſes, and do not, and his cattle ſtray into my cloſe and do damage, I may diſtrain them damage feaſant, or drive them out, and bring an action of treſpaſs. If my cattle ſtray into his cloſe and do damage, he has not a right to diſtrain them, nor can he ſupport treſpaſs againſt me for the ſame. Should my cattle after ſtraying into his cloſe, ſtray out of the ſame into any highway, or other place, and be loſt, or treſpaſs in the ground of a third perſon, and be by him diſtrained damage feaſant, and kept till replevied, or I have made ſatisfaction, I may maintain an action againſt the defaulter, i. e. againſt the occupier of the adjoining cloſe, for not repairing his fence, whereby ſuch damage hath happened to me. The writ of curia claudenda therefore is grown out of uſe.

Curia Domini, The lord's houſe, hall or court, where all the tenants attend at the time of keeping courts.

Curia Penticiarum, Is a court held by the ſheriff of Cheſter, in a place there called the Pendice or Pentice: And it is probable its being originally kept under a Penthouſe, or open ſhed covered with boards, gave it its denomination.

Curnock, A meaſure containing four buſhels, or half a quarter. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 12.

Curriculus, The year, or courſe of a year: Actum eſt hoc annorum Dominicæ incarnationis quatuor quinquagenis & quinquies, quinis luſtris, & tribus curriculis. This is the year 1028; for four times 50 make 200, and five times 200 make 1000. Then five luſtra are twenty-five years, and three Curriculi, three years, making in all the very year.

Curriers, Are perſons that curry and dreſs leather. No currier ſhall uſe the trade of a butcher, tanner, &c. or ſhall curry ſkins inſufficiently tanned, or gaſh any hides of leather, on pain of forfeiting for every hide or ſkin 6*s.* 8*d.* And perſons in London putting leather to be curried to any but freemen of the Curriers Company; and ſuch curriers not currying the leather ſufficiently, ſhall forfeit the ware or the value, &c. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 22. The clauſe relating to freemen is repealed; but if any currier do not curry leather ſent him, within ſixteen days between Michaelmas and Lady-Day, and in eight days at other times, on conviction before a juſtice, he ſhall forfeit 5*l.* to be levied by diſtreſs, &c. yet ſubject to mitigation. 12 Geo. 2. c. 25. Curriers and ſuch as deal in leather, may cut and ſell it in ſmall pieces in their ſhops to any perſons whatſoever. Stat. Ibid. See Leather, Skins, &c.

Curſitors, (Clerici de Curſu) Clerks belonging to the Chancery, who make out original writs; and are called Clerks of Courſe, in their oath appointed 18 Ed. 3. ſtat. 5. There are of theſe clerks twenty-four in number, which make a corporation of themſelves; and to each clerk is allotted a diviſion of certain counties, in which they exerciſe their functions. 2 Inſt. 670.

Curſones terræ, Is uſed for ridges of land. 14 Ed. 2.

Curſoriæ, A ſort of light ſhips or ſwift ſailers: This word is mentioned in Hoveden, R. 1. Applicuerunt ibi Naves & Buſciæ 500. exceptis Galeis & Curſoriis, &c.

Curteſy of England, (Jus Curialitatis Angliæ) Is where a man taketh a wife ſeiſed in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail general, or as heireſs in ſpecial tail, and hath iſſue by her, male or female, born alive, which by any poſſibility may inherit, and the wife dies; the huſband holds the lands during his life; and is called Tenens per legem Angliæ, or tenant by the curteſy of England; becauſe this privilege is not allowed in any other country, except Scotland.

Four things are requiſite to give an eſtate by the curteſy, viz. Marriage, ſeiſin of the wife, iſſue, and death of the wife. Co Lit. 30. If land deſcend to the wife after the huſband hath iſſue by her; or if the iſſue be dead at the time of her death, being born alive; the huſband ſhall be tenant by the curteſy. Alſo if a child is born alive, it is not material whether it is baptiſed, or ever heard to cry, to make the huſband tenant by the couteſy; for if it is born alive, it is enough. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 578. But the child muſt be ſuch as by poſſibility may inherit; and therefore if land be given to a woman, and the heirs male of her body, and ſhe takes huſband and hath iſſue a daughter, and dies; as this iſſue cannot poſſibly inherit, the huſband ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy. Terms de Ley.

If the child is rip'd forth of the mother's belly, after her death, though it be alive, it will not entitle tenancy by the curteſy; for this ought to begin by the iſſue, and be conſummate by the death of the wife, and the eſtate of tenant by the curteſy ſhould avoid the immediate deſcent. Ibid. A man ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy of a bare right, title, uſe, reverſion, &c. expectant upon an eſtate of freehold, unleſs the particular eſtate is determined during the coverture; nor of a ſeiſin in law: But if a wife dies before a rent becomes due; or in the caſe of an advowſon, before the church becomes void; the huſband ſhall be tenant by the curteſy, though the wife had only a ſeiſin in law; for in this caſe no other ſeiſin could be attained. F. N. B. 149. Co. Lit. 29, 30, 40.

There is no tenancy by the curteſy of copyhold lands, except there be a ſpecial cuſtom for it. And where a huſband is entitled to this tenancy, if after the wife is an ideot, and her eſtate in the land found: when ſhe dies, he ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy, for the King's title by relation prevents it. Plowd. 263. If the wife be ſeiſed in fee of lands, and attaint of felony, but have iſſue by her huſband, and ſhe is hanged, &c. it is ſaid the huſband ſhall be a tenant by the curteſy: But yet the land will be forfeited according to Kitch 159. 21 Ed. 3. 49.

A woman ſeiſed of land had two daughters, and covenanted to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of E. her eldeſt daughter in tail; on condition that ſhe ſhould pay to her other daughter within a certain time 300*l.* And if E. made default, or died without iſſue before ſuch payment, then the land to go to the ſecond daughter; the mother dying, E. took a huſband, and had iſſue, and died afterwards without any iſſue living, before the day of payment: It was here held, that her huſband ſhould be tenant by the curteſy. 1 Leon. ca. 233. See Kitch. 159.

Curteyn, (Curtana) Was the name of King Edward the Confeſſor's ſword; which is the firſt ſword carried before the Kings of England at their coronation: And it is ſaid the point of it is broken as an emblem of mercy. Mat. Pariſ. in Hen. 3.

Curtilage, (Curtilagium) from the Fr. Cour, Court, and Sax. Leagh locus) Is a court-yard, back-ſide, or piece of ground lying near and belonging to a dwelling-houſe. 4 Ed. 1. cap. 1. 35 H. 8. c. 4. 39 Eliz. c. 10. 6 Rep. 64.——Mihi dici videtur curtilagium à curtillum & ago, ſcil. locus ubi curtis vel curtilli negotium agitur. Spelm. And though it is ſaid to be a yard or garden, belonging to a houſe; it ſeems to differ from a garden, for we find, cum quodam gardino & curtilagio. 15 Ed. 1. n. 34.

Curtiles Terræ, Court lands. It is recorded, that among our Saxon anceſtors, the Thanes or nobles who poſſeſſed Bockland, or hereditary lands, divided them into Inland and Outland: The Inland was that which lay moſt convenient for the lord's manſion-houſe; and therefore the lords kept that part in their own hands, for the ſupport of their families, and for hoſpitality: Afterwards the Normans called theſe lands Terras Dominicales, the demains, or lord's lands: The Germans termed them Terras Indominicatas, lands in the lord's own uſe: And the Feudiſts, Terras Curtiles, lands appropriate to the court or houſe of the lord. Spelm. of Feuds, c. 5.

Cuſtantia, The ſame with Cuſtagium, which ſignifies coſts.

Cuſtode admittendo, and Cuſtode amovendo, writs for the admitting or removing of guardians. Reg. Orig.

Cuſtodes Libertatis Angliæ Authoritate Parliamenti, Was the ſtyle in which writs and all judicial proceſs did run during the grand rebellion, from the murder of King Charles I. till the uſurper Oliver was declared Protector, &c. mentioned and declared traiterous, by ſtatute 12 Car. 2. c. 3.

Cuſtodiam dare, Was taken for a gift or grant for life. Du Cange.

Cuſtom, (Conſuetudo) Is a law not written, eſtabliſhed by long uſage, and the conſent of our anceſtors. No law can oblige a free people without their conſent: So whereever they conſent and uſe a certain rule or method as a law, ſuch rule, &c. gives it the power of a law; and if it is univerſal, then it is common law: if particular to this or that place, then it is cuſtom. 3 Salk. 112. And as to the riſe of cuſtoms, when a reaſonable act once done was found to be good and beneficial to the people, then they did uſe it often, and by frequent repetition of the act, it became a cuſtom; which being continued without interruption time out of mind, it obtained the force of a law, to bind the particular places, perſons, and things concerned therein. Thus a cuſtom had beginning and grew to perfection: And a good cuſtom muſt be grounded on antiquity, continuance, certainty, and reaſon:

Antiquity, for that it hath been time out of memory, or threeſcore years, as limited by ſtatute; and time out of mind is where no man then living hath heard or known any proof to the contrary: If two or more witneſſes can depoſe that they heard their fathers ſay it was a cuſtom all their time; and that their fathers heard their grandfathers ſay it was ſo alſo in their time; it is enough for the proof of a cuſtom. Blount. Davis Rep. 32.

Continuance of a cuſtom ought to be without any interruption time out of memory; for if it be diſcontinued within time of memory, the cuſtom is gone.

Certainty, a cuſtom muſt be certain, becauſe an uncertain thing may not be continued time out of mind:

And cuſtom muſt be reaſonable, for unreaſonable things are unlawful. It is otherwiſe ſaid that,

Cuſtoms have four inſeparable incidents: They are to have a reaſonable commencement, to be certain, and not ambiguous; to have uninterrupted continuance; and not be againſt the King's prerogative. And the two pillars of cuſtom, are common uſage, and that they be time out of mind. Davies 32. 4 Leon. 384.

A cuſtom contrary to the public good; or injurious to a multitude, and beneficial only to ſome particular perſons, is repugnant to the law of reaſon, and conſequently void. 2 Danv. 424, 427. Cuſtoms ought to be beneficial to all, but may be good where againſt the intereſt of a particular perſon, if for the public good. Dyer 60. A cuſtom is not unreaſonable for being injurious to private perſons or intereſts, ſo as it tends to the general advantage of the people. 3 Salk. 112. which vide.

A cuſtom may be good in ſome caſes where a preſcription is not: But cuſtoms that are good for the ſubſtance and matter of them, may yet be bad for the manner; if they are uncertain, or mixed with any other cuſtom that is unreaſonable, &c. 2 Bulſt. 166. 2 Brownl. 198.

A cuſtom extends over ſome place or vill: A preſcription extends only to particular perſons. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly. Sharp v. Lowther, f. 293. A preſcription muſt always be had by way of que eſtate. Ibid.

Cuſtom that every one who paſſeth over ſuch a bridge, within the lord's manor, and which the lord doth repair, ſhall pay him one penny, is a good cuſtom; but if it be to pay the lord 12*d.* it will be naught, for it is unreaſonable. Calth. Cop. 35. 1 Bulſt. 203.

A cuſtom that a lord ſhall have within his manor liberam faldam, or free-fold throughout the village; and that no other ſhall have it but by agreement with him, and if any take it, the lord may abate the ſame; this hath been held a good cuſtom. 1 Rol. 560. Cuſtom for inhabitants, as ſuch, to have common adjudged void. Gatewood's Caſe. 6 Co. 60. A cuſtom, that tenants of a manor ſhall grind all the corn they ſpend in their own houſes, in the lord's mill, &c. is good: But a cuſtom that every inhabitant of a houſe held of the lord, ſhall grind the corn that he ſpends, or ſhall ſell, at his mill, is void. Moor, ca. 1217. Hob. 149. Cuſtom to have a common bakehouſe in a manor or pariſh, for all the tenants or inhabitants, is a good cuſtom. 2 Bulſt. 198.

Cuſtom is and muſt always be alledged to be in many perſons, and ſo it may be claimed by copyholders, or the inhabitants of a place, and when it is claimed, it muſt be as within ſuch a county, hundred, city, borough, manor, pariſh, hamlet, &c. Co. Lit. 110, 113. 4 Rep. 31. A good cuſtom or preſcription hath the force of a grant; as where one and his anceſtors have had a rent time out of mind, and uſed to diſtrain, &c. But a cuſtom that begins by extortion of lords of manors, is judged wanting a lawful commencement, and therefore void: And where cuſtom is amongſt many, and they are all dead but one, the cuſtom is gone. Plowd. 322. Dyer 199. Cuſtoms muſt be conſtrued according to vulgar apprehenſion: And are to be taken ſtrictly, being in derogation of the Common law. 2 Rol. Abr. 270. They are not good which are merely in the negative; but if mixed with an affirmative, they may be good. 1 Rol. 565.

A cuſtom which may be intended to have had lawful beginning, is a good cuſtom; otherwiſe not: nor will continuance of time make malum in ſe good. 1 Lil. Abr. 375. Cuſtoms againſt common right and the rule of law, are held good. 8 Rep. 126. The law takes notice of cuſtoms of Gavelkind, &c. which alter deſcents from the Common law, in favour of all the ſons, &c.

A cuſtom may extend to and give an infant a power of doing that, which, by the rules of the Common law, he could not do; as an infant at the age of fifteen, may make a feoffment of lands of the nature of gavelkind; but this, like all other cuſtoms, is to be conſtrued ſtrictly, and in ſuch manner as that no prejudice may accrue to the infant thereby; and therefore ſuch feoffment muſt be for valuable conſideration, muſt be made in perſon, and not by attorney, cannot be with warranty, muſt be of lands which deſcend to him in gavelkind, and not of lands by purchaſe; and muſt be of lands in poſſeſſion, not in remainder or reverſion. 1 New Abr. 670, 671.

And cuſtoms for an eldeſt daughter to inherit, or a youngeſt ſon, may be good: For theſe, though contrary to a particular rule of law, may have a reaſonable beginning. Nelſ. Abr. 579. And by cuſtom a woman may be endowed of a moiety of the huſband's lands, &c. Alſo by cuſtom, infants may bind themſelves apprentices, &c. 2 Danv. Abr. 438.

Regularly a man cannot alledge a cuſtom againſt a ſtatute, becauſe that is the higheſt matter of record in law: But a cuſtom may be alledged againſt a negative ſtatute, which is made in affirmance of the Common law. 1 Inſt. 115. And acts of parliament do not always take away the force of cuſtoms. Cuſtom pleaded againſt cuſtom is not good. 2 Danv. Abr. 436. A cuſtom is to be poſitively alledged, by uſage in fact. Lutw. 1319.

General cuſtoms which are uſed throughout England, and are the Common law, are to be determined by the judges: But particular cuſtoms, ſuch as are uſed in ſome certain town, borough, city, &c. ſhall be determined by jury. Doct. & Stud. c. 7, 10 1 Inſt. 110. Conſuetudo pro lege ſervatur, &c. ſaith Bracton, lib. 3. c. 3. And cuſtom is ſaid to be altera lex: But the judges of the court of B. R. or C. B. can over-rule a cuſtom though it be one of the cuſtoms of London, if it be againſt natural reaſon, &c. 1 Mod. 212.

As to the manner of laying a cuſtom, and the difference between alledging a thing by way of cuſtom, or by way of preſcription. See 6 Co. 60. Hob. 113. Cro. Eliz. 441. Popb. 201. Style 477. 1 Lev. 176. 1 Vent. 386. 3 Lev. 160. Cartb. 192.

Cuſtom of London. The city of London hath divers particular cuſtoms, different from any other place. By the cuſtom of London, when a citizen and freeman dies, his goods and chattels ſhall be divided into three parts; the wife to have one part, the executors another, to diſcharge legacies, &c. and the children unprovided for the other third part. 2 Danv. Abr. 311, 312. If a freeman of London hath no wife, but children, the half of his perſonal eſtate goes to them, and he may diſpoſe of the other moiety; ſo if he have a wife and no children, the half belongs to her; but if he have both wife and children, then one third part belongs to the wife, another third to the children, and he may diſpoſe of the other third; and if he dies inteſtate, the remaining third is to be diſtributed according to the ſtatute. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1139. But ſee 11 Geo. 1. c. 18. poſt.

An after-born child ſhall come in with the others, for a cuſtomary ſhare of a freeman's eſtate. And where any child dies, before one and twenty, his ſhare ſurvives to the other children; but in caſe he die after that age, at which time he might make a will of it, there, on his dying inteſtate, it ſhall go according to the ſtatute of diſtributions. Preced. Canc. 499, 537. A deviſe or ſettlement of lands, does not bar a child of his part of the perſonal eſtate by the cuſtom: but where a wife is to have a certain ſum out of the huſband's eſtate, it ſhall be intended in ſatisfaction of her ſhare. 2 Vern. 753. 1 Chan. Caſ. 160.

A freeman of London dies without iſſue, his widow is to have her widow's chamber, and a moiety of the reſt of the eſtate; and in an extraordinary caſe, ſhe was allowed the benefit of the other moiety for life by virtue of her huſband's will. 1 Vern. 132. 2 Vern. Rep. 110.

By the ſtatute 11 Geo. 1. c. 18. Freemen, by will, may now give and diſpoſe of their perſonal eſtates, to whom they think fit; yet if they die inteſtate, ſuch eſtates ſhall be ſubject to, and be diſtributed agreeable to the cuſtom of the city. Where a freeman dies, and leaves orphan children under age, unmarried, the court of orphans hath the cuſtody of their bodies and goods, by the cuſtom of London: It is alſo the ſame, though he dies, or the children were born out of London. 1 Mod. 80.

By the city cuſtom, action on the caſe lies for calling a married woman a whore; for in London ſuch woman may be carted: And this reaches to all the inhabitants within London. 2 Danv. 310. 1 Lil. 378.

A woman that uſeth a trade in London, without her huſband, is chargeable without him as a feme ſole merchant: She ſhall plead as ſole, and if condemned, be put in priſon till ſhe pay the debt; alſo the bail for her are liable, if ſhe abſent herſelf; and the huſband ſhall not be charged. Privil. Londini.

It is the cuſtom of the city of London, that where a perſon is educated in one trade, he may ſet up another. 1 Saund. 312. If a debtor be about to fly, he may be arreſted by the cuſtom of London, before the day, to find better ſecurity. Hob. 86. Where two perſons are bound as ſureties for another, and recovery is had againſt one of them, he may have contribution againſt the other, by the city laws. 2 Danv. Abr. 310. Debts on ſimple contract will maintain an action in London, as well as debts on ſpecialty: And it is the cuſtom of the city, that action of debt ſhall be maintained upon ſuch a contract againſt executors or adminiſtrators, who ſhall be chargeable therewith, as if it were upon a bond or obligation. 8 Co. Rep. 126. 5 Rep 82.

There is a foreign attachment, by the cuſtom of London, of money, &c. in the hands of a third perſon, where one man owes another any debt, &c. See Attachment.

By a cuſtom of London, every tenant at will of any houſe above 40*s*. per ann. in the city, ought to give, or to have, half a year's warning, on leaving it: And a landlord recovered half a year's rent, where the tenant had left the houſe, &c. without ſuch warning. Comber. 384. If any cuſtom of London be pleaded and denied, it ſhall be tried by writ to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, to certify whether there be ſuch a cuſtom; who ſhall make certificate by the mouth of their Recorder. Cro. Car. 516. The courts of Weſtminſter of courſe take notice of the cuſtoms of London; but not of any other place, without being alledged. 1 Rol. Rep. 106.

Cuſtom of Merchants. If two joint merchants occupy their ſtock and merchandiſe in common, one of them naming himſelf a merchant, ſhall have an account againſt the other, and charge him as receiver. Co. Lit. 172. By the cuſtom of merchants, where a merchant orders his factor to buy goods of a particular perſon, there the merchant is debtor, and not the factor: but it is otherwiſe where the merchant orders his factor to buy goods generally, without ſaying of whom; here the factor is debtor, though the goods come to the uſe of the merchant. 1 Lil. 376. The cuſtom of merchants as to bills of exchange, &c. See Bills of Exchange.

Cuſtoms (Cuſtuma) Are uſed for the tribute or toll that merchants pay to the King, for carrying out and bringing in merchandiſe. Stat. 14 Ed. 3. c. 21. They are duties payable to the crown for goods exported and imported, and are due to the King of common right; firſt, becauſe the ſubject hath leave to depart the kingdom, and to export the commodities thereof; ſecondly, for the intereſt which the King hath in the ſea, and as he is guardian of, and maintains all the ports, wherein the commodities are exported or imported; and laſtly, for that the King protects merchants from enemies and pirates. Dyer 43.

The word cuſtom comprehends Magna & Antiqua Cuſtuma, which is payable out of our own native commodities, as for wool, woolfels, and leather; and parva cuſtuma, which are cuſtoms payable by merchants, ſtrangers, and deniſens; and theſe began in the reign of Edw. I. when the parliament granted him 3*d*. in the pound for all merchandiſes exported and imported. Ibid. 165. But that which is granted by parliament, is properly called a ſubſidy; and ſometimes granted to the King for life; and there are ſeveral ſorts of theſe ſubſidies, as tonnage, a duty granted out of every ton of wine imported, which was firſt granted by parliament to King Edward III. And poundage, a ſubſidy granted for all goods exported and imported, except wines, &c. and is uſually the twentieth part of the value of the goods, or 12*d*. in the pound; and this was firſt given to Hen. 6. for life. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 583, 584.

In the reign of Edward III. the great charter for free traffick was confirmed; And anno 6 Ed. III. it was enacted, that no new cuſtoms could be levied, nor ancient increaſed, but by authority of parliament. 2 Inſt. 60. But though the King cannot lay any impoſition on merchandiſe without conſent of parliament; yet by his prerogative he may reſtrain merchants from trading without his royal licence. In the 14th year of Ed. 3. it was enacted in parliament, that a mark ſhould be paid as cuſtom for a ſack of wool. Anno 4 H. 8. Collecters were appointed of the ſubſidy of cloth of gold, ſilver, velvet, &c. And 1 Eliz. Duties were granted on ſweets, wines, &c. And ann. 12 Car. 2. c 4. The ſubſidies of tonnage and poundage, &c. were granted to King Charles during his life; as they have been ſince to his royal ſucceſſors, down to his Majeſty King George III. And many and various are the duties of cuſtoms granted on foreign goods and merchandiſe, in the reign of King James II. K. William, Q. Anne, and his late and preſent Majeſty.

The tonnage duty granted to King Charles II. was for every ton of french wine, brought into the port of London, by merchants natural ſubjects, 4*l*. 10*s*. by alien ſtrangers, 6*l*. for Malmſeys, Tents, Alicants, Sacks, Canaries, Malagas, Maderaſs, and all other ſweet wines, by native ſubjects, 2*l*. 5*s*. the ton; by ſtrangers and aliens 3*l*. &c. The poundage duty was 12*d*. in the pound value for all merchandiſe goods, according to the book of rates, except woollen cloths made in England, and for all woollen broad cloths, to be paid after the rate of each 64 pounds in weight, by ſubjects 3*s*. 4*d*. and ſtrangers 6*s*. 8*d*. Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 4.

If goods and merchandiſe are brought by a merchant to a port or haven, and there part thereof ſold but never put on land, they muſt pay the cuſtoms; and diſcharging them out of the ſhip into another upon the ſale, amounts in law to a putting them upon the land, ſo that if the cuſtom duties are not paid, the goods will be forfeited. Hill. 24 Eliz. 12 Co. Rep. 18.

By the ſtatute 21 Geo. 2. c. 2. over and above all ſubſidies of tonnage and poundage, and other duties whatſoever already payable on any goods or merchandiſes imported, a further ſubſidy of poundage of 12*d.* in the pound is given to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, payable by the importer according to the rate of the ſame goods, as valued in the book of rates. Unrated Eaſt-India goods are to pay 5 l. per cent. of the groſs price, for they ſhall be ſold at the candle.

By the Stat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 34. If any perſons, to the number of three, or more, armed with offenſive weapons, ſhall be aſſembled in order to be aiding in the illegal exportation of goods prohibited to be exported, or the running uncuſtomed goods, or the illegal relanding any goods, or reſcuing the ſame, after ſeizure, from any officer, or from the place where they ſhall be lodged, or in the reſcuing any perſon apprehended for any offence made felony by any act relating to the cuſtoms or exciſe, or preventing the apprehending any perſon guilty of any ſuch offence; or in caſe any perſons to the number of three, or more, ſo armed, ſhall be ſo aſſiſting, or, if any perſon ſhall have his face blacked, or wear any maſk, or other diſguiſe, when paſſing with ſuch goods, or ſhall forcibly hinder, obſtruct, aſſault, oppoſe, or reſiſt any officer of his Majeſty's revenue, in ſeizing ſuch goods, or ſhall maim or dangerouſly wound any ſuch officer in his attempting to go on board any veſſel, or ſhoot at or dangerouſly wound any ſuch perſon when on board and in the execution of his office, every ſuch perſon ſhall be guilty of felony. and ſuffer death.

On information on oath of any perſon's being guilty of any of the above offences, the juſtice may certify the information to one of the Secretaries of State, who is to lay it before his Majeſty; whereupon his Majeſty may make an order, requiring the offender to ſurrender himſelf in forty days after publication thereof in the Gazette; and in default thereof, the order being publiſhed twice in the Gazette, and proclaimed in two markets near where the offence was committed, and a copy thereof affixed in ſome public place there, the offender ſhall be attainted of felony, and ſuffer death. Any perſon habouring or aiding any ſuch offender after the time for his ſurrender expired, knowing him to have been ſo required to ſurrender, being proſecuted within a year, ſhall be tranſported for ſeven years. Offences made felony by this act, may be ſued in any county.

If any officer, &c. in the ſeizing, &c. ſuch goods, or in the endeavouring to apprehend any ſuch offender, ſhall be beat, wounded, maimed, or killed, or the goods be reſcued, the inhabitants of the rape, lath or hundred, unleſs the offender be convicted within ſix months, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* to the executors of any officer killed; and pay damages to any officer beat, &c. not exceeding 40*l.* and for any goods reſcued, not exceeding 200*l.* A reward of 500*l.* for apprehending any offender; a perſon wounded in apprehending an offender to have 50*l.* extraordinary, and the executors of a perſon killed, to have 100*l.*

Ships and veſſels outward-bound, are not to take in any goods, till the veſſel, &c. is entered with the collectors of the cuſtoms; and before departure, the contents of the lading is to be brought in under the hands of the laders, &c. Alſo when ſhips arrive from beyond ſea, the maſters are to make a true entry upon oath, of the lading, goods, ſhip, &c. under the penalty of 100*l.* And if any concealed goods are found after clearing, for which the duties have not been paid, the maſter of the veſſel ſhall be ſubject to the like penalty. Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 11.

Officers of the cuſtoms may ſearch ſhips. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 11. ſect. 4. Having writ of aſſiſtance, may ſearch houſes, ſect. 4. The penalty of abuſing officers, ſect. 6. Keepers of wharfs, keys, &c. landing or ſhipping goods, without the preſence of ſome officer of the cuſtoms, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* And reſiſting officers of the cuſtoms, in the execution of their office, is liable to a fine not exceeding 100*l.* Stat. Ibid. But by 6 Geo. 1. c. 21. Where officers of the cuſtoms are hindered in the execution of their duty, by perſons armed to the number of eight, the offenders are to be tranſported for ſeven years.

If any goods are put into any veſſel to be carried beyond ſea; or be brought from beyond ſea, and unſhipped to be landed, the duties not being paid, nor agreed for at the cuſtom houſe; the ſame ſhall be forfeited; one moiety to the King, the other to the ſeizer, &c. And by late ſtatutes, foreign goods taken in at ſea, by any coaſting veſſel, &c. ſhall be forfeited, and treble value.

To prevent clandeſtine running of goods, foreign brandy, &c. imported in veſſels under forty tons, the veſſel and brandy to be forfeited: If any perſon conceal run goods, he ſhall forfeit them, and treble value; and the like penalty is inflicted for offering ſuch goods to ſale. 8 Geo. 1. c. 18. & 11 Geo. 1. c. 7.

The commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, &c. ſhall cauſe all goods ſeized for unlawful importation, or non-payment of duties, to be publickly ſold; and damaged wines for diſtillation, &c. And one or more juſtices of peace, of the county where any ſeizure ſhall be made by officers of run goods, &c. mentioned in informations before them, may adminiſter an oath to any perſon ſkilled in the nature and quality of the goods, to view the ſame, and make a return of the ſpecies and value; and after they ſhall be condemned and ſold. Stat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 26.

By a late act, where three perſons are aſſembled and armed with fire-arms, &c. to be aſſiſting in the running of goods, they ſhall be guilty of felony and tranſported, and 50*l.* to be paid for apprehending ſuch offenders; alſo the like reward to any of them for diſcovering others. All perſons two or more in company, found paſſing within five miles from the ſea-coaſts, with any horſes, cart, &c. wherein are put above ſix pounds of tea, or five gallons of brandy, or other foreign goods of 30*l.* value, landed without entry, and not having permits, and who ſhall carry offenſive weapons, &c. or aſſault any of the officers of the cuſtoms, ſhall be adjudged runners of goods, and be tranſported as felons, and all the goods to be ſeized and forfeited: And ſuſpected perſons lurking near the coaſts, not giving a good account of themſelves, may be ſent by a juſtice to the houſe of correction for a month; and informers to have 20*s.* for every offender ſo taken.

If any perſon offers any tea, brandy, &c. to ſale, without a permit, the perſons to whom offered may ſeize and carry it to the next warehouſe belonging to the cuſtoms or exciſe; and the ſeizers ſhall have a third part, &c. And watermen, carmen, porters, &c. in whoſe cuſtody run goods are found, ſhall forfeit treble value, or be committed for three months.

Ships and veſſels from foreign parts, having on board tea, or brandy, rum, &c. in caſks under ſixty gallons, (except for the uſe of ſeamen) found at anchor, or hovering near any port, or within two leagues of the ſhore, and not proceeding in their voyages, unleſs in caſes of unavoidable neceſſity, all ſuch tea, &c. ſhall be forfeited.

Perſons offering any bribe to officers of the cuſtoms, to connive at the running of goods, to forfeit 50*l.* and obſtructing ſuch officers in entering or ſearching ſhips, incurs a forfeiture of 100*l.* And if an officer be wounded or beaten on board a ſhip, the offenders to be tranſported, &c. Stat. 9 Geo. 2. c. 35.

There is a draw-back allowed merchants for ſome goods and merchandiſe; and they have allowances of ſo much per cent. out of the cuſtoms, where goods are defective, or receive damage, &c.

By ſtatute, no cuſtomer or comptroller of the cuſtoms, ſhall have any ſhips of his own, or meddle with the freight of ſhips, 14 R. 2. c. 10. And no ſearcher, ſurveyor, &c. or their clerks, deputies, or ſervants, may have any ſuch ſhips of their own; nor ſhall uſe merchandiſe, keep a wharf, inn or tavern, or be factor, attorney, &c. to a merchant, under the penalty of 40*l.* Stat. 20 H. 6. c. 5. Cuſtomers, collectors, or comptrollers, ſhall not conceal cuſtoms duly entered and paid, on pain to forfeit the treble value of merchandiſe ſo cuſtomed, and to make fine and ranſom to the King. 3 H. 6. c. 3. If any perſons employed about the cuſtoms and ſubſidies take a bribe, bribe, or connive at any falſe entry, they ſhall forfeit 100*l.* and be incapable of any employment under the King. Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 11. Alſo if any officer of the revenue, ſhall make any colluſive ſeizure of foreign goods, to the intent the ſame may eſcape payment of the duties, he is to forfeit 500*l.* and be incapable of ſerving his Majeſty; and the importer and owner ſhall forfeit treble the value of the goods ſo colluſively ſeized, &c. 5 Geo. 1. c. 11. Officers of the cuſtoms, &c. are not to trade in brandy, coffee, &c. or any exciſeable liquor, on pain of 50 l. and forfeiture of offices. 12 Geo. 1. c. 28. Cuſtoms and Services, Belonging to the tenure of lands, are ſuch as tenants owe unto their lords; which being with-held from the lord, he may have a writ of cuſtoms and ſervices. See Conſuetudinibus & Servitiis.

Cuſtos Brevium, Is a principal clerk belonging to the court of Common Pleas, whoſe office is to receive and keep all the writs returnable in that court, and put them upon files, every return by itſelf; and to receive of the prothonotaries all the records of Niſi prius, called the Poſtea's; for they are firſt brought in by the clerk of aſſiſe of every circuit to the prothonotory, who enters the iſſue in the cauſes, to enter the judgment: And four days after the return thereof, the prothonotory enters the verdict and judgment thereupon, into the rolls of the court; whereupon he afterwards delivers them over to the cuſtos brevium, who binds them into a bundle. He makes entry likewiſe of all writs of covenant, and the concord upon every fine; and maketh forth exemplifications, and copies of all writs and records in his office, and of all fines levied.

The fines after they are engroſſed, are divided between the cuſtos brevium and the chirographer; the chirographer always keeps the writ of covenant and the note, and the cuſtos brevium the concord and the foot of the fine; upon which foot of the fine, the chirographer cauſeth the proclamations to be indorſed, when they are proclaimed. This officer is made by the King's letters patent: And in the court of King's Bench, there is alſo a cuſtos brevium & rotulorum, who fileth ſuch writs as are in that court filed, and all warrants of attorney, &c. and whoſe buſineſs it is to make out the records of Niſi prius, &c.

Cuſtos Placitorum Coronæ, An officer which ſeems to be the ſame with him we now call cuſtos rotulorum. Bract. lib. 2. c 5.

Cuſtos Rotulorum, Is he who hath the coſtody of the rolls or records of the ſeſſions of the peace, and alſo of the commiſſion of the peace itſelf. He is always a juſtice of the peace of the quorum in the county where appointed, and uſually ſome perſon of quality: But he is rather termed an officer or miniſter, than a judge. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 4. cap. 3. p. 373. The cuſtos rotulorum in every county, is appointed by a writing ſigned by the King's hand, which ſhall be a warrant to the Lord Chancellor to put him in commiſſion: And he may execute his office by deputy; and hath power to appoint the clerk of the peace, &c, Stat. 37 H. 8. cap. 1. By ſtat. 1 W. & M. c. 21. The cuſtos rotulorum is to nominate and appoint the clerk of the peace; but not to ſell the place, on pain of forfeiting the office of cuſtos rotulorum, and other penalties, &c. The cuſtos rotulorum, two juſtices of the peace, and the clerk of the peace, are to inroll deeds of bargain and ſale of lands of papiſts, &c. by 3 Geo. 1. cap. 18.

Cuſtos of the Spiritualties, (Cuſtos Spiritualitatis) Is he that exerciſeth the ſpiritual or eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction of a dioceſe, during the vacancy of any ſee; who with us in England is the archbiſhop by preſcription: But (according to Gwyn) ſome deans and chapters challenge this right by ancient charters from the Kings of this land. Cowel.

Cuſtos of the Temporalties, (Cuſtos Temporalium) The perſon to whoſe cuſtody a vacant ſee or abbey was committed by the King, as ſupreme Lord; who, as a ſteward of the goods and profits, was to give an account to the Eſcheator, and he into the Exchequer: His truſt continued till the vacancy was ſupplied, and the ſucceſſor obtained the King's writ De Reſtitutione Temporalium, which was uſually after conſecration.

Cut-purſe. If any perſon clam & ſecrete, and without the knowledge of another, cut his purſe or pick his pocket, and ſteal from thence to the value of 12 d. it is felony excluded clergy. 8 Eliz. c. 14. See Black. Com. 4 V. 241. 3 Inſt. 68. See Felony.

Damage, (Damnum) Signifies generally any hurt or hindrance that a man receives in his eſtate: But particularly, a part of what the jurors are to enquire of and bring in, when an action paſſeth for the plaintiff: For after verdict given of the principal cauſe, the jury are aſked touching coſts and damages, which comprehend a recompence for what the plaintiff hath ſuffered, by means of the wrong done him by the defendant. Co. Lit. 257. This word damage is taken in law, in two ſeveral ſignifications, the one properly and generally, the other relatively: Properly, as it is in caſes wherein damages are founded upon the ſtatute of 2 H. 4. c. 1. and 8 H. 6. c. 9. where coſts are included within the word damages, and taken as damages:

But when the plaintiff declares for the wrong done to him, to the damage of ſuch a ſum, this is to be taken relatively for the wrong which paſſed before the writ brought, and is aſſeſſed by reaſon of the foregoing treſpaſs, and cannot extend to coſts of ſuit, which are future, and of another nature. 10 Rep. 116, 117. Greater coſts may be given in ſome caſes, than the damages laid in the plaintiff's declaration; for the plaintiff's declaration is only for the damage done him by the defendant; But the coſts are given in reſpect of the plaintiff's ſuit to recover his damages, which may be ſometimes greater than the damage. 1 Lil. Abr. 384.

Herein is to be conſidered,

I. In what actions damages may be recovered, and againſt whom.

II. How damages are to be aſſeſſed, increaſed, and mitigated.

I. In what actions damages may be recovered, and againſt whom.

In perſonal and mixed actions, damages were recovered at common law: But in real actions, no damages were recoverable, becauſe none were demanded by the count or writ: Whereas in actions perſonal, the plaintiff counts ad dampnum for the injury; and if he recovers no damages, he hath no coſts. 10 Rep. 111, 117. In a perſonal action, the plaintiff ſhall recover damages only for the tort done before the action brought; and therein he counts for his damages: In a real action, he recovers his damages pending the writ; and therefore never counts for his damages. 10 Rep. 117. By the ſtat. of Glouc. 6 Ed. 1. cap. 1. Damages are given in real actions, aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, mort d' anceſtor, &c. and ſhall be recovered againſt the alienee of a diſſeiſor, as well as againſt the diſſeiſor himſelf; and the demandant ſhall have of the tenant likewiſe coſts of ſuit; but not expences for trouble and loſs of time. 2 Inſt. 288. See farther Stat. 6 Ed. 1. c. 1. 2 Inſt. 284, 286. 2 Danv. Abr. 448.

No damages could be recovered at the common law, but againſt the wrong doer, and by him to whom the wrong was done. 2 Inſt. 284. Damages ſhall be recovered in writ of admeaſurement of dower; but not in a writ of admeaſurement of paſture. 2 Danv. 457. In writ of partition, by one coparcener againſt another, it is ſaid no damages ſhall be had: In a formedon, no damages ſhall be recovered: ſo in a nuper obiit, writ of account, writ of execution, &c. Ibid. 455, 456. Damages and coſts are due in a writ of annuity; and if the jury find for the plaintiff, and do not aſſeſs damages, it will be error; though he may after verdict releaſe the damages, and take judgment for the annuity. 11 Rep. 56. Dyer 320, 369.

In battery, impriſonment, and taking of goods, againſt three perſons; one commits the battery, another the impriſonment, the third takes the goods, all at one time, all are guilty of the whole, and to be charged in damages. 3 Lev. 324. See 10 Rep. 66, 69.

II. How damages are to be aſſeſſed, increaſed, and mitigated.

In real actions, damages are aſſeſſed by writ of enquiry: When the jury find the iſſue for the plaintiff, they are to aſſeſs the damages. And in actions upon the caſe, &c. where damages are uncertain, it is left to the jury to inquire of them: In debt, which appears certain to the court what it is, the damages aſſeſſed by the jury are ſmall, in fact only nominal, as one ſhilling; and the maſter in B. R. taxeth the coſts; which is added thereto, and called damages. 1 Lill. 390. When judgment is given by default, in action of debt, the court is to aſſeſs the damages, and not the jury: So if judgment by nil dicit, in action of debt.

Where exceſſive damages have been given, or there hath been any miſdemeanor in executing a writ of enquiry; the court hath ſometimes relieved the defendant by a new writ of enquiry. 2 Danv. 464. And where damages are exceſſive, on motion the defendant may have a new trial. Style 465. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 587. In treſpaſs againſt two, one comes and pleads Not guilty, and it is found againſt him; and afterwards another comes and pleads the like, and is found Guilty by another inqueſt; in this caſe, the firſt jury ſhall aſſeſs all the damages for the treſpaſs. New Nat. Br. 236. Treſpaſs againſt divers defendants, they plead Not guilty ſeverally, and the jury finds them all Guilty: The jury muſt aſſeſs the damages jointly, for it is but one entire treſpaſs, and made joint by the declaration. 11 Rep. 5.

If action is brought for two ſeveral cauſes of action, one of which is not actionable, if intire damages are given, the verdict is void: Contra if the damages are ſevered. And where damages are intirely aſſeſſed, and they ought not to be given for ſome part; no judgment can be given on the verdict. 10 Rep. 130. Where damages are awarded for delay of execution, and being kept out of the money, they are uſually aſſeſſed by allowing the party what lawful intereſt he might have. 1 Salk. 208.

Where the plaintiff ſhall have no more coſts than damages, unleſs the jury finds more than 40*s.* in actions of treſpaſs, on the caſe, &c. See Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 6. 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 9. ſec. 136. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 9. but in wilful treſpaſs certified by the judge, the plaintiff ſhall have coſts. Per 8 W. 3. c. 11. ſ. 4.

In action upon the caſe the jury may find leſs damages than the plaintiff lays in his declaration; but ought not to find more, though coſts may be increaſed beyond the ſum mentioned in the declaration for damages: The plaintiff may releaſe part of the damages, upon entering up his judgment. 10 Rep. 115. If he does not, but takes judgment for damages (excluſive of coſts) to a larger amount, than laid in the declaration, it is error, and not within any of the ſtatutes of amendment or jeofails ſo lately determined in B. R. Sandiford v. Benn.

In actions upon any bond, &c. for non-performance of covenants, the jury ſhall aſſeſs damages for thoſe the plaintiff proves broken; and the plaintiff may aſſign as many breaches as he thinks fit. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11.

Damages are not to be given for that which is not contained in the plaintiff's declaration; and only for what is materially alledged. 1 Lill. 381.

When damages double or treble are given in an action newly created by ſtatute; if no damages were formerly recoverable, there the demandant or plaintiff ſhall recover thoſe damages only, and ſhall not have coſts, being a new creation in recompence where there was none before: As upon ſtat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12. for driving of diſtreſſes out of the hundred, &c. whereby damages are given, the plaintiff ſhall recover no coſts, only his damages, becauſe this action is newly given. But in an action upon the ſtat. 8 H. 6. c. 9. of forcible entry, which giveth treble damages, the plaintiff ſhall recover his damages and his coſts to the treble, by reaſon he was entitled to ſingle damages before by the common law; and the ſtatute, as part of the damages, increaſes the coſts to treble; and when a ſtatute increaſes damages, coſts ſhall likewiſe be increaſed. 2 Inſt. 289. 10 Rep. 116.

In ſome caſes double, treble damages, &c. are allowed: For not ſetting forth tithes; diſtreſſes wrongfully taken; reſcous, &c. Treble damages are incurred by ſtatute. Though if it be not found by the jury, that the plaintiff hath ſuſtained ſome damage in caſes where treble damages, &c. are inflicted by law, no damages can be awarded. 2 Danv. Abr. 449.

How damages given to a perſon ſued for an act done in the execution of his office, are to be aſſeſſed and recovered, ſee Valentine and Fawcet, Rep. temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 138, 139.

Plaintiff may take judgment de melioribus damnis where ſeveral damages are given, or enter a remittitur. Sabin v. Long, Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. fo. 30.

The court in their diſcretion may increaſe the damages in mayhem. Id. Brown v. Seymour, par. 1. fo. 5. and vide 3 Salk. 115. 2 Inſt. 200. 2 Danv. 449, 452. In debt for a penalty in articles of agreement, the jury ought to aſſeſs damages on the breach aſſigned, according to the Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 10. and ſhall not find the debt; if they do, a venire facias de novo ſhall iſſue. Id. Drage, Eſq; v. Brand, par. 2. fo. 377.

In what caſes double, treble, and quadruple damages are given, ſee Table to Statutes at large, quarto edition, title Damages.

Damage-cleer, (damna clericorum) Was a fee aſſeſſed of the tenth part in the Common Pleas, and the twentieth part in the King's Bench and Exchequer, out of all damages exceeding five marks, recovered in thoſe courts, in actions upon the caſe, covenant, treſpaſs, battery, &c. wherein the damages were uncertain; which the plaintiff was obliged to pay to the prothonotary, or the chief officer of the court wherein recovered, before he could have execution for the damages: this was originally a gratuity given to the prothonotaries and their clerks, for drawing ſpecial writs and pleadings; but it is taken away by ſtatute, and if any officer in the King's courts, take any money in the name of damage-cleer, or any thing in lieu thereof, he ſhall forſeit treble the value. Stat. 17 Car. 2. c. 6.

Damage-feaſant, or faiſant, Is when a ſtranger's beaſts are found in another perſon's ground without his leave or licence, (and without the fault of the poſſeſſor of the cloſe, which may happen from his not repairing his fences,) and there doing damage, by feeding, or otherwiſe, to the graſs, corn, woods, &c In which caſe, the tenant whom they damage may diſtrain and impound them, as well by night as in the day, leſt the beaſts eſcape before taken; which may not be done for rent, ſervices, &c. only in the day-time. Stat. 51 H. 3. ſtat. 4. 1 Inſt. 142. If a man take my cattle, and put them into the land of another, the tenant of the land may take theſe cattle damage-feaſant, though I who am the owner, was not privy to the cattle's being there damage-feaſant; and he may keep them againſt me till ſatisfaction of the damages. 2 Danv. Abr. 364.

But if one comes to diſtrain damage-feaſant, and to ſeize the cattle, and the owner drives them out before they are taken, he cannot diſtrain them damage-feaſant, but is put to his action of treſpaſs; for the cattle ought to be actually upon the land damage-feaſant, at the time of the diſtreſs. 1 Inſt. 161. 9 Rep. 22. He that hath but the poſſeſſion of, and no title to the land, may juſtify taking a diſtreſs damage-feaſant. Plowd. 431. If a man puts cattle to paſture at ſo much a week with another, who after gives notice that he will not have them there any longer; in this caſe the owner of the ground may diſtrain them damage-feaſant, though the cattle be in lawfully at firſt: ſo where a leſſee holds after his eſtate is ended. 43 Edw. 3. Kelw. 69 But the owner of the cattle ſhould have proper notice and reaſonable time allowed for taking away his cattle.

Beaſts belonging to the plough, or beaſts of huſbandry, ſheep, horſes joined to a cart, and it is ſaid a horſe with a rider on it, may be diſtrained damage-feaſant, though not for rent. 1 Sid. 422, 440. But the owner may tender amends, before the cattle are impounded; and then the detainer is unlawful: alſo if when impounded the pound-door is open, the owner may take them out. 5 Rep. 76.

A greyhound may be taken damage-feaſant, running after conies in a warren: ſo a man may take a ferret that another hath brought into his warren, and taken conies with. If a perſon bring nets and gins through my warren, I cannot take them out of his hands. 2 Danv. 633 But if men are rowing up my water, and endeavouring with nets to catch fiſh in my ſeveral piſcary, I may take their oars and nets, and detain them as damage-feaſant, to ſtop their further fiſhing; though I cannot cut their nets. Cro. Car. 228. See Black. Com. 3 V. 6.

Dam, A boundary, or confinement; as to dam up, or dam out: infra damnum ſuum, within the bounds or limits of his own property or juriſdiction. Bract. lib. 2. c. 37.

Damiſella, A light damoſell or miſs. Stat. 12 Ed. 1. See Pimp Tenure.

Damnum abſque injuria. If one man keeps a ſchool in ſuch a place, another may do ſo likewiſe in the ſame place, though he draw away the ſcholars from the other ſchool; and this is damnum abſque injuria: but he muſt not do any thing to diſturb the other ſchool. 3 Salk. 10.

Dan. Anciently the better ſort of men in this kingdom had the title of Dan; as the Spaniards Don, from the Lat. Dominus.

Danegelt, or Dane-geld, (danegildum) Is compounded of the words dane and gelt, the latter in Dutch ſignifying money; and was a tax or tribute of 1 s. and after of 2 s. upon every hide of land through the realm, laid upon our anceſtors the Saxons by the Danes, when they lorded it here. Camb. Brit. 83, 142. According to ſome accounts, this tax was levied for clearing the ſeas of Daniſh pirates; which heretofore greatly annoyed our coaſts: but King Ethelred being much diſtreſſed by the continual invaſions of the Danes, to procure his peace, was compelled to charge his people with very heavy payments called danegelt, which he paid to the Danes at ſeveral times. Hoveden par. poſt. Annal. 344. Ingulph. 510. Selden's Mare Clauſ. 190. This danegelt was releaſed by St. Edward the Confeſſor; but levied again by William the Firſt and Second: then it was releaſed again by King Henry the Firſt, and finally by King Stephen. It is probable that this antient tax might be a precedent for our land-tax of 3 s. and 4 s. in the pound, when firſt granted.

Danelage, Was the law of the Danes when they governed a third part of this kingdom. See Merchenlage, and Black. Com. 1 V. 65. 4 V. 405.

Dangeria, A payment in money made by foreſt tenants, that they might have liberty to plough and ſow in time of pannage or maſt-feeding. Manw. For. Laws.

Dapifer, (a dapes ferendo) Was at firſt a domeſtick officer, like unto our ſteward of the houſhold: or rather clerk of the Kitchen: but by decrees it was uſed for any fiduciary ſervant, eſpecially the chief ſteward or head bailiff of an honour or manor. There is mention made in our ancient records of dapifer regis; which is taken for ſteward of the King's houſhold. Cowel.

Date of a deed, Is the deſcription of the time, viz. the day, month, year of our Lord, year of the reign, &c. in which the deed was made. 1 Inſt. 6. But the ancient deeds had no dates, only of the month and the year; to ſignify that they were not made in haſte, or in the ſpace of a day; but upon longer and more mature deliberation. Blount. If in the date of a deed, the year of our Lord is right, though the year of the King's reign be miſtaken, it ſhall not hurt it. Cro. Jac. 261. A deed was dated 30th March 1701, without anno Domini and anno Regni; and it was adjudged that both the year of the Lord and of the King were implicitly in the deed. 2 Salk. 658. A deed is good, though it hath no date of the day or place, or if the date be miſtaken, or though it hath an impoſſible date, as the 30th of February, &c. But he that doth plead ſuch a deed, without any date, or with an impoſſible date, muſt ſet forth the time when it was delivered. 2 Rep. 5. 1 Inſt. 46. If no date of a deed be ſet forth, it ſhall be intended that it had none; and in ſuch caſe it is good from the delivery; for every deed or writing hath a date in law, and that is the day in which it is delivered: and a deed is no deed till the delivery, and that is the date of it. Mod. Ca. 244. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 525.

An impoſſible date of a bond, &c. is no date at all; but the plaintiff muſt declare on the bond as made at a certain time: and if the expreſs date be inſenſible, the real date is the delivery. 2 Salk, 463. Where there is none, or an impoſſible date, the plaintiff may count of any date. 1 Lill. Abr. 393. If there be a miſtaken date, or a date be impoſſible, &c. the plaintiff may ſurmiſe a legal date in the declaration, whereupon the defendant is to anſwer to the deed, and not to the date. Yelv. 194. If a deed bears date at a place out of the realm, it may be averred that the place mentioned in the deed is in ſome county in England; and here the place is not traverſable; without this the deed cannot be tried. 1 Inſt. 261. A deed may be dated at one time, and ſealed and delivered at another: but every deed ſhall be intended to be delivered on the ſame day it bears date, unleſs the contrary is proved. 2 Inſt. 674. Though there can be no delivery of a deed before the day of the date; yet after there may. Yelv 138. So that a deed may be dated back on a time paſt, but not at a day to come. See Deed, and Black. Com. 2 V. 304.

Dative, or Datif, (dativus) Signifies that which may be given or diſpoſed of at will and pleaſure. Stat. 9 R. 2. c. 4.

Davata terræ, Davach, A portion of land ſo called in Scotland. Skene.

Day, (dies) Is a certain ſpace of time, containing twenty-four hours; and if a fact be done in the night, you muſt ſay in law proceedings in nocte ejuſdem diei. Dierum alii ſunt naturales, alii artificiales: dies naturalis conſtat de 24 horis, & continet diem ſolarem & noctem, & eſt ſpatium in quo ſol progreditur ab oriente in occidentem, & ab occidente iterum in orientem: dies artificialis, ſive ſolaris, incipit in ortu ſolis & deſinit in occaſu. Co. Lit. 135. By this deſcription, the natural day conſiſts of twenty-four hours, and contains the ſolar day and the night: and the artificial day begins from the riſing of the ſun, and ends when it ſets. Day, in legal underſtanding, is the day of appearance of the parties, or continuance of the ſuit where a day is given, &c. And there is a day of appearance in court by the writ, and by the roll; by writ, when the ſheriff returns the writ; by roll, when he hath a day by the roll, and the ſheriff returns not the writ, there the defendant, to ſave his freehold, and prevent loſs of iſſues, impriſonment, &c. may appear by the day he hath by the roll. Co. Lit. 135.

In real actions there are dies communes, common days; and in all ſummons there muſt be 15 days after the ſummons before the appearance: and before the ſtatute of articuli ſuper chartas, in all ſummons and attachment in plea of land, there ſhould be contained 15 days. Co. Lit. 134.

As to offences in B. R. if the offence be committed in another county than where the court ſits, and the indictment be removed by certiorari, there muſt be fifteen days between every proceſs and the return thereof; but if it be committed in the ſame county where the bench ſits, they may ſit de die in diem; but this they will very rarely do. Ibid. There is a day called dies ſpecialis, as in an aſſiſe in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, the attachment need not be 15 days before the appearance; otherwiſe it is before juſtices aſſigned; but generally in aſſiſes the judges may give a ſpecial day at their pleaſure, and are not bound to the common days; and theſe days they may give as well out of term as within.

There is alſo a day of grace, dies gratiæ, and generally this is granted by the court at the prayer of the demandant or plaintiff, in whoſe delay it is; but it is never granted where the King is party, by aid prier of the tenant or defendant; nor where any lord of parliament, or peer of the realm is tenant or defendant.

And ſometimes the day that is quarto die poſt, is called dies gratiæ, for the very day of return is the day in law, and to that day the judgment hath relation, but no default ſhall be recorded till the fourth day be paſt; unleſs it be in a writ of right, where the law alloweth no day but the day of the return. Co. Lit. 135.

There are ſeveral return days in the terms; and if either of them happen upon a Sunday, the day following is taken inſtead of it; for Sunday is dies non juridicus; and ſo is Aſcenſion-day in Eaſter term, St. John Baptiſt in Trinity term, All Saints and All Souls in Michaelmas term, and the Purification of the Virgin Mary in Hilary term. 2 Inſt. 264.

Days in Bank are days ſet down by ſtatute, or order of the court, when writs ſhall be returned, or when the party ſhall appear upon the writ ſerved. Stat. 51 H. 3. ſtat. 2. & ſtat. 3. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 21. And by the ſtatute de anno biſſextili 21 H. 3. the day increaſing in the leap-year, and the day next going before are to be accounted but one day. It is commonly ſaid that the day of Niſi prius, and the day in the Bank, is all one day; but this is to be underſtood as to pleading, not to other purpoſes. 1 Inſt. 135. But after iſſue found for the plaintiff at the Niſi prius, if a day be given in Banco, and the defendant makes default, judgment ſhall be given againſt him. 2 Danv. Ab. 477. and vide Id. 476.

To be diſmiſſed without day, is to be finally diſmiſſed the court: and when the juſtices before whom cauſes were depending, do not come on the day to which they were continued, whether ſuch abſence be occaſioned by death, or otherwiſe, they are ſaid to be put without day: but may be revived, or recontinued by re-ſummons, re-attachment, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 300. Vide 1 E. 6. c. 7. Alſo by the Common law, all proceedings upon any indictment, &c. whereon no judgment had been given, were determined by the demiſe of the King, and nothing remained but the indictment, original writ, &c. which were put without day, till re-continued by re-attachment to bring in the defendants to plead de novo: though this is remedied by Stat. 4 and 5 W. 3. c. 18. and 1 Ann. c. 8. by which ſuch proceſs, etc. are to continue in the ſame force after the King's demiſe, as they would have done if he had lived.

In action of treſpaſs, if the day laid in the declaration be either before or after the actual day on which the treſpaſs is committed, it is not material, if a treſpaſs be proved. Co. Lit. 283. a. But N. B. The day laid muſt be before the firſt day of that term of which the declaration is intituled, or if the treſpaſs be committed within the term, there muſt be a ſpecial memorandum of ſome particular day, (if by bill) or of ſome general return day, (if in C. P. or B. R. by original writ) ſubſequent to the day whereon the treſpaſs was committed: and ſo as to other actions, where the cauſe of action ariſes within the term.

Day-light. In reſpect to day-light, before ſun-riſing and after ſun-ſetting, is accounted part of the day by the Common law; as to robberies committed in the day-time, when the hundred is liable. 7 Rep. 6. The law regularly rejects all fractions and diviſions of a day, for the incertainty. 5 Rep. 1. 1 Inſt. 135. See Computation.

Day-rule. See Day-writ.

Day-writ. The King may grant writ of warrantia diei to any perſon, which ſhall ſave his default for one day, be it in plea of land or other action, and be the cauſe true, or not; and this by his prerogative, quod nota. Br. Prerogative, pl. 142. cites F. N. B. 7.

No priſoner committed by B. R. ought to have the benefit of the day-rule of going abroad in term time, for their impriſonment is their puniſhment for their contempt, or miſbehaviour. 2 Show. 88. pl. 80. Hill. 31 and 32 Car. 2. B. R. The King v. Deane.

One in execution had a habeas corpus from the Lord Keeper (which they call a day-writ) returnable three or four days after its teſte. By virtue of this writ, he went to the wine-licence office, but never to any inn of court or Chancery, or to the Lord Keeper's, and this in the vacation. Per Pemberton Ch. J. This is a habeas out of Chancery, which they may ſend at any time, and by virtue of the King's writ, the party was brought out of the priſon-houſe, and that is juſtifiable. Then all the day, ſo long as there was a keeper with him, he was in cuſtody ſtill, and returning to priſon at night, it is well enough, and no eſcape; though Chancery may examine the contempt, that is nothing to *B. Days-man, In the North of England, an arbitrator, or elected judge, is uſually termed a dies-man, or days-man: and Dr. Hammond ſaith, that the word day in all idioms ſignifies judgment.

Dayeria, Dairy, from dey, deie, Sax. dag, was at firſt the daily yield of milch-cows, or profit made of them. In Lorrain and Champaign they uſe the word dayer, for the meeting of the day-labouring people to give an account of their daily work, and receive the wages of it. Deadly Feud, Is a profeſſion of an irreconcileable hatred, till a perſon is revenged even by the death of his enemy. It is mentioned in Stat. 43 El. c. 13. And ſuch enmity and revenge were allowed by the old Saxon laws; for where any man was killed, if a pecuniary ſatisfaction was not made to the kindred of the ſlain, it was lawful for them to take up arms againſt the murderer, and revenge themſelves on him: and this is called deadly feud; which it is conjectured was the original of an appeal. Blount. Vide Feud, and *Black. It appearing by oath, that the defendant was both ſenſeleſs and dumb, and therefore could not inſtruct his counſel to draw his anſwer; it was ordered that no attachment, or other proceſs of contempt, ſhould be awarded againſt the defendant for not anſwering, without ſpecial order of the court. Cary's Rep. 132. cites 22 *Eliz. One that is deaf and wholly deprived of his hearing cannot give, and ſo one that is dumb and cannot ſpeak. Yet (according to the opinion of ſome) they may conſent by ſigns and nods; but it is generally held, that he that is dumb cannot make a gift, becauſe he cannot conſent to it. Co. Inſt. 107. But generally thoſe who are deaf and dumb can, in ſome meaſure, converſe with people acquainted with them by ſigns, with the fingers, &c. therefore qu. if a gift by ſuch a one would not be good, if depoſed to, by perſons acquainted with his ſigns, if ſuch perſons are unintereſted? Dean, (decanus, from the Greek Δίκα, decem) Is an eccleſiaſtical governor or dignitary, ſo called, as he preſides over ten canons or prebendaries at the leaſt. And we call him a dean, that is next under the biſhop, and chief of the chapter, ordinarily in a cathedral church, the reſt of the ſociety being called capitulum, the chapter. As there are two foundations of cathedral churches in England, the old and the new, the new erected by King Hen. VIII. ſo there are two means of creating thoſe deans: for thoſe of the old foundation, as the dean of St. Paul's, York, &c. are exalted to their dignity much like biſhops; the King firſt ſending out his conge d'elire to the chapter to chooſe ſuch dean, and the chapter then chooſing, the King afterwards yielding his royal aſſent, and the biſhop confirming him, and giving his mandate to inſtall him.

Thoſe of the new foundation, whoſe deaneries were tranſlated from priories and convents, to dean and chapter, as the deans of Canterbury, Durham, Ely, Norwich, Wincheſter, &c. are donative, and inſtalled by a ſhorter courſe, by virtue of the King's letters patent, without either election or confirmation; and are viſitable only by the Lord Chancellor, or by ſpecial commiſſion from the King: but the letters patent are preſented to the biſhop for inſtitution, and a mandate for inſtalment goes forth. 1 Inſt. 95. Davis 46, 47.

There are ſome cathedral churches which never had a dean; as that of St. David and Landaff, where the biſhop is head of the chapter, and in his abſence the archdeacon: and there is alſo a dean without a chapter, ſuch as the dean of Battel in Suſſex: then there is a dean without a juriſdiction, as the dean of the Chapel Royal, &c. in which ſenſe this word is applied to the chief of certain peculiar churches or chapels. Spelm.

There are four ſorts of deans; a dean who hath a chapter, ſuch as the dean of Canterbury, &c. A dean without a chapter, as the dean of Bocking, who hath a court and juriſdiction to hold plea of all eccleſiaſtical matters ariſing in ſeveral pariſhes within his peculiar; and who is conſtituted by commiſſion from the archbiſhop of Canterbury, like to the dean of the arches. The dean of Battel, founded by William the Firſt, ſtiled the Conqueror, who hath eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction within the liberty of Battel, and is preſentable by the Duke of Montagu, and inſtituted and inducted by the biſhop of Chicheſter; but not ſubject to his viſitation. And rural deans, who had firſt juriſdiction over deaneries, as every dioceſe is divided into archdeaconries and deaneries; but afterwards their power was diminiſhed, and they were only the biſhops ſubſtitutes to grant letters of adminiſtration, probate of wills, &c. And now their office is wholly extinguiſhed, for the archdeacons and chancellors of biſhops execute the authority which rural deans had through all the dioceſes of England. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 596, 597.

There are likewiſe deputy deans and commendatory deans, who cannot confirm any grants, &c. But a commendatory dean may, with the chapter, chooſe a biſhop. And if a dean be elected biſhop, and before conſecration doth obtain diſpenſation to hold his deanery in commendum, ſuch dean may well confirm, &c. for his old title remains, and therefore confirmations, and other acts done by him, as dean, are good in law. Latch 237, 250. Palm. Rep. 460.

A dean and chapter are the biſhop's council, to aſſiſt him in the affairs of religion, &c. to conſult in deciding difficult controverſies, and conſent to every grant which the biſhop ſhall make to bind his ſucceſſors, &c.

A dean that is ſolely ſeiſed of a diſtinct poſſeſſion, hath an abſolute fee in him as well as a biſhop. 1 Inſt. 325. A deanery is a ſpiritual promotion, and not a temporal one, though the dean be appointed by the King: and the dean and chapter may be in part ſecular, and in part regular. Dyer 10. Palm. 500. As a deanery is a ſpiritual dignity, a man cannot be dean and prebendary in the ſame church. Dyer 273. See Chapter.

Death of Perſons, There is a natural death of a man, and a civil death: natural, where nature itſelf expires, and extinguiſhes; and civil, is where a man is not actually dead, but is adjudged ſo by law; as where he enters into religion, &c. If any perſon for whoſe life any eſtate hath been granted, remain beyond ſea, or is otherwiſe abſent ſeven years, and no proof made of his being living, ſuch perſon ſhall be accounted naturally dead; though if the party be after proved living at the time of eviction of any perſon, then the tenant, &c. may re-enter, and recover the profits. Stat. 19 Car. 2. c. 6. And perſons in reverſion or remainder, after the death of another, upon affidavit that they have cauſe to believe ſuch other dead, may move the Lord Chancellor to order the perſon to be produced; and if he be not produced, he ſhall be taken as dead; and thoſe claiming may enter, &c. 6 Ann. c. 18.

A man ſeiſed in fee of lands, made a leaſe in reverſion to L. D. for ninety-nine years, to commence after the deaths of J. D. and E. D. who had then a leaſe in poſſeſſion for the like term, if they or either of them ſo long lived: the plaintiff poſitively proved the death of J. D. but as to the death of E. D. the proof was that he had been reputed dead, and no body had heard of him for fifteen years paſt, and the defendant not being able to prove that he was alive at any time within ſeven years, this caſe was adjudged within the act 19 Car. 2. c. 6. Carthew 246.

In law proceedings, the death of either party, between the verdict and judgment, ſhall not be error; ſo as judgment be entered in two terms. 17 Car. 2. c. 8.

A corporation never dies. Wilſ. par. 1. fo. 184.

De bene eſſe. To take or do any thing de bene eſſe, is in law ſignification to accept or allow it as well done for the preſent; but when it comes to be more fully examined or tried, to ſtand or fall according to the merit of the thing in its own nature. As in Chancery, upon motion to have one of the leſs principal defendants in a cauſe examined as a witneſs, the court (not then thoroughly examining the juſtice of it, or not hearing what may be objected on the other ſide) will often order ſuch a defendant to be examined de bene eſſe, viz. That his depoſitions ſhall be taken, and allowed or ſuppreſſed at the hearing of the cauſe, upon the full debate of the matter, as the court ſhall think fit; but in the interim they have a well being, or conditional allowance. 3 Cro. 68.

Where a complainant's witneſſes are aged, or ſick, or going beyond ſea, whereby the plaintiffthinks he is in danger of loſing their teſtimony, the court of Chancery will order them to be examined de bene eſſe; ſo as to be valid, if the plaintiff hath not an opportunity of examining them afterwards; as if they die before anſwer, or do not return, &c. In either of which caſes, the depoſitions may be made uſe of in the court of Chancery, or at law: but if parties are alive and well, or do return, &c. after anſwer, theſe depoſitions are not to be of force, for the witneſſes muſt be re-examined. Practiſ. Attorn. edit. 1. p. 232.

So alſo at Common law, the judges frequently take bail de bene eſſe, that is, to be allowed or diſallowed upon the exception, or approbation of the plaintiff's attorney; however, in the interim, they are good, or have a conditional allowance. Cowel. Declarations likewiſe are ſometimes delivered de bene eſſe. See the books of practice. Debenture. A ſoldier's debenture, (ſtipendia debita) is in the nature of a bond or bill, to charge the government to pay the ſoldier creditor, or his aſſigns, the ſum due upon the auditing the account of his arrears: it was firſt ordained by an act made during Oliver's uſurpation, anno 1649, and is mentioned in the act of oblivion, 12 Car. 2. cap. 8. They uſe debentures likewiſe in the Exchequer; and debentures are given to the King's ſervants, for the payment of their wages, board-wages, &c. Alſo there are cuſtom-houſe debentures, etc.

Debet & detinet, Are Latin words uſed in the bringing of writs and actions. And an action ſhall be always in the debet et detinet, when he who makes a bargain or contract, or lends money to another, or he to whom a bond is made, bringeth the action againſt him who is bounden, or party to the contract and bargain, or unto the lending of the money, etc. See New Nat. Br. 119.

In debt againſt huſband and wife, for a debt due from the wife before coverture, the writ ſhall be in the debet et detinet. Ibid. Debt againſt an heir, is to be in the debet et detinet, or it will be nought; if an heir be to bring debt, it ſhall be in the detinet: and if a man be bound to another, and makes his executor, and dies, if the money due in the time of the teſtator be refuſed to be paid by the executor, the action muſt be brought againſt him only in the detinet; and ſo in all actions brought by executors as executors, though the duty accrued in their own time.

But debet et detinet lies by an executor on his own contract: and if a leſſee for years makes his executor and dies, for rent due after the teſtator's death, there the action ſhall be in the debet et detinet. It is the like law in caſes of adminiſtrators, as it is not certain what ſhall be recovered, only according to the aſſets. 5 Rep. 31.

An executor upon a devaſtavit ſhall be charged in the debet et detinet, the action being upon a judgement. 1 Lil. Abr. 399. See Debt and Executor.

Debet & ſolet, Are alſo formal words made uſe of in writs: and ſome writs have theſe words in them, which ought not to be omitted. Likewiſe according to the diverſity of the caſe, both debet and ſolet are uſed, or debet alone: as a quod permittat may be in the debet et ſolet, or in the debet only, as the demandant claims. And if a perſon ſues to recover any right, whereof his anceſtor was diſſeiſed by the tenant of his anceſtor, then he uſeth the word debet alone in his writ, becauſe his anceſtor only was diſſeiſed, and the eſtate diſcontinued: but if he ſue for any thing that is now firſt of all denied him, then he uſeth debet et ſolet, by reaſon his anceſtor before him, and he himſelf uſually enjoyed the thing ſued for, until the preſent refuſal of the tenant. Reg. Orig. 140. The writ of ſecta molendini is a writ of right, in the debet et ſolet, etc. F. N. B. 98.

Debt, (debitum) In common parlance is a ſum of money due from one perſon to another. And if an action be brought, and plaintiff recovers judgment, he may by our law take either the perſon, or his real or perſonal eſtate in execution, i. e. the moiety of his real eſtate, or the whole of the perſonal, if not more than ſufficient for payment of the ſum recovered and charges.

It may not be improper to obſerve, that the firſt hint of attaching moveables, for the recovery of a debt was taken from the Canon law. Robert. Hiſt. Emp. Charles V. 1 V. 316.

In the legal ſenſe of the word, debt is ſaid to be an action which lieth where a man oweth another a certain ſum of money, by obligation, or bargain for a thing ſold, or by contract, etc. and the debtor will not pay the debt at the day agreed; then the creditor ſhall have action of debt againſt him for the ſame. And if money be due upon any ſpecialty, action of debt only lies; for no other action may be brought for it: if a man contract to pay money for a thing which he hath bought; and the ſeller takes bond for the money, the contract is diſcharged, ſo that he ſhall not have action of debt upon the contract, but on the bond. New Nat. Br. 268.

Herein it is to be conſidered,

I. In what caſes it will lie, and by whom, and againſt whom it may be brought.
II. In what manner it may be brought, as where in the debet and detinet, and where in the detinet only.
III. How it may be extinguiſhed.

I. In what caſes debt will lie, and by whom, and againſt whom it may be brought.

If one binds himſelf in a ſingle obligation, or with condition, to pay money at a day; or to deliver corn, or the like, and do not perform it accordingly, the obligee may bring action of debt for it. F. N. B. 120. A man acknowledges by deed, that he hath ſo much of the money of J. S. due to him in his hands; here debt may be brought: and debt will lie on a talley ſealed. F. N. B. 122. 1 H. 6. 55. A. delivers 20*l.* to B. to buy goods, and B. gives a receipt to A. teſtifying the delivery and receipt of the 20*l*. but doth not promiſe to deliver the goods, &c. A. may maintain debt upon this receipt. Dyer 20. 2 Bulſt. 256. If one binds himſelf to pay A. B. 10*l*. at one day, and 10*l*. at another, after the firſt day action of debt lies for 10*l*. being a ſeveral duty. 2 Danv. Abr. 501. The nature of the bond, and of the condition, (if there is any) muſt be carefully attended to, to ſee if by non-payment of the firſt ſum the bond is forſeited. Vide. Co. Lit. 292. b.

If I agree with a taylor for a certain price to make me a ſuit of clothes, the taylor may have a general action of debt againſt me for the money; though if the price is not agreed on, there lies action on the caſe only, or ſpecial action of debt upon the ſpecial contract, which the law may imply on a quantum meruit. Wood's Inſt. 544. And debt may be made action on the caſe, by proving money lent, or goods delivered, &c. whereupon promiſe of payment is implied in law. A man owes another a ſum of money, and hath his note under hand, without ſeal, action of debt on a mutuatus lies; but the defendant may wage his law: in action on the caſe brought upon promiſe of payment, the defendant cannot wage his law. 4 Rep. 93.

Action of debt lies upon a parol contract, and ſo doth action on the caſe. 1 Lil. 403. And vide 9 Rep. 87. If goods or money are delivered to a third perſon for my uſe, I may have action of debt or account for them. 2 Danv. 404. Where money is delivered to a perſon, to be re-delivered again, the property is altered, and debt lies: but where a horſe, or any goods are thus delivered, there detinue lies, becauſe the property is not altered; and the thing is known, whereas money is not. Owen 86. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 603.

Action of debt lies againſt the huſband, for goods which were delivered or ſold to the wife, if they come to the uſe of the huſband. 1 Lil. 400. If one delivers meat, drink, or clothes, to an infant, and he promiſes to pay for them, action of debt, or on the caſe, will lie againſt the infant. Though debt may not be brought on an account ſtated with an infant: and what is delivered muſt be averred to be for the neceſſary uſe of the infant. 1 Lil. Abr. 401. That is, in the plaintiff's replication, ſuppoſing the defendant pleads infancy. An attorney ſhall have action of debt againſt his client, for money, which he hath paid to any perſon for the client, for coſts of ſuit, or unto his counſel, &c.

An heir mediate may be ſued in debt as if he were immediate heir, &c. The heir may not bring action of debt for a debt due to his anceſtor; though it be by ſpecialty, by which the party is bound to pay it to him and his heirs: the executor ſhall nevertheleſs have the action. Dyer 368. F. N. B. 120. Action of debt lies not againſt executors, upon a ſimple contract made with the teſtator. 9 Rep. 87.

Before the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 37. the heirs or executors of a man ſeiſed of a rent-ſervice, rent-charge, &c. in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, had no remedy for the arrearages incurred in the life-time of the owner of ſuch rents: but by that ſtatute, the executors and adminiſtrators of tenants in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or for life, of any rent, ſhall have action of debt for all arrearages of rent due in the life of the teſtator. 1 Inſt. 162. 2 Danv. 492.

A feme ſole ſeized of a rent in fee, &c. which is behind and unpaid, takes huſband, and the rent is behindagain, and then the wife dieth, by the Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 37. the huſband ſhall have the arrears due before marriage, and he hath a double remedy for the ſame. 1 Inſt. 162.

But by Stat. 8. Ann. cap. 17. Any perſon having rent in arrear upon any leaſe for life or lives, may bring action of debt for ſuch rent, as where rent is due on a leaſe for years. Action of debt will lie againſt a leſſee, for rent due after the aſſignment of the leaſe; for the perſonal privity of contract remains, notwithſtanding the privity of eſtate is gone. 3 Rep. 22. But after the death of the leſſee, it is then a real contract, and runs with the land. Cro. Eliz. 555. When a leaſe is ended, the duty in reſpect of the rent remains, and debt lieth by reaſon of the privity of contract between leſſor and leſſee. 2 Cro. 227. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 604. If debt be brought by an executor for arrears of rent ended, it is local ſtill, and muſt be laid where the land lies. Hob. 37. Action of debt may be had againſt the leſſee in any place; but if it be brought againſt an aſſignee, it muſt be where the land lieth: and upon the privity of contract, it is to be brought againſt the leſſee where the land is. Latch 197, 271. 2 Leon. c. 28.

Debt for rent on a leaſe againſt aſſignee is local. See the caſe of Barker v. Dormer, Shower, 1 V. (the ſecond in point of time) fo. 191, &c. an excellent caſe containing much uſeful learning on the locality of actions, &c. contra; in debt and covenant.

In ſome caſes action of debt will lie, although there be no contract betwixt the party that brings the action, and him againſt whom brought; for there may be a duty created by law, for which action will lie. 2 Saund. 343, 366. Debt lieth againſt a ſheriff, for money levied in execution. 1 Lil. Abr. 403. Action of debt lies againſt a gaoler for permitting a priſoner committed in execution to eſcape; becauſe thereupon the law makes the gaoler debtor: but where the party is not in execution, there action on the caſe only lies for damages ſuffered by the eſcape. 1 Saund. 218. 1 Lil. Abr. 402.

A perſon may have debt upon an arbitrament: alſo debt lies for money recovered upon a judgment, &c. And upon a recovery in the ſuperior courts at Weſtminſter, he muſt bring the action in Middleſex, the record being there; but a ſci. fac. to execute judgment, muſt be where the original was, and follow it. New Nat. Br. 267, 268, &c. When judgment is had in the King's Bench, and a writ of error brought in the Exchequer chamber, or in Parliament; yet an action of debt will lie on the judgment: in this caſe, if the plaintiff levies part of his money, by elegit, he may likewiſe bring debt for the reſidue. 1 Sid. 184, 236.

If a man recovers debt or damages in London, on action brought there by the cuſtom of the city, which lies not at Common law; when it is become a debt by the judgment, action of debt lies in the courts at Weſtminſter upon this judgment. 2 Danv. 449.

Action of debt will lie for breach of a by-law; or, for amercement in a court-leet, &c. 1 Lil. 400. And action of debt is ſometimes grounded on an act of parliament; as upon the 2 Ed. 6. c. 13. for not ſetting out tithes: the 27 El. c. 13. againſt the hundred for a robbery, &c. Againſt phyſicians in London, for practiſing without licence, by 14 & 15 H. 8. c. 5. By aſſignees of a commiſſion of bankrupt. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15, &c. A college ſhall have action of debt for commons of any ſtudent, adjudged, Paſch. 9 Jac. B. R.

The inns of court, particularly the Inner and Middle Temple, take bonds in the name of their treaſurer, &c. of ſtudents, in which, generally, two gentlemen of the ſociety are bound as ſureties.

For debt to a biſhop, or parſon, after his death, his executors ſhall have the action: but of a dean and chapter, mayor and commonalty, &c. the ſucceſſors are intitled to the action of debt. F. N. B. 120. Action of debt lies on a recogniſance; ſo upon a ſtatute merchant, it being in nature of a bond or obligation: but it is otherwiſe in caſe of a ſtatute ſtaple. 2 Danv. 497.

In bringing this action, it is a general rule, that the party himſelf, to whom the debt is originally due, whilſt he doth live muſt bring the action; and after his death, his executors, &c. And the action muſt be brought againſt the party himſelf that doth originally owe the debt, whilſt he is living; and after his death, it may be brought againſt the executor, if he make any; or otherwiſe againſt the adminiſtrator; and if the ordinary appoint none, againſt the ordinary himſelf; and if he die poſſeſſed of the goods, againſt his executor, &c. And alſo againſt executors of executors in infinitum. Dyer 24, 471. 3 Rep. 9. 2 Brownl. 207.

II. In what manner it may be brought, as where in the debet and detinet, and where in the detinet only. See Diviſion I.

In debt, if it be demanded by original, the proceſs is ſummons, attachment and diſtreſs; and upon a default of ſufficiency, on a nihil returned, proceſs to the outlawry, &c. And the judgment in debt, where the demand is in the debet & detinet, is to recover the debt, damages and coſts of ſuit; and the defendant in miſericordia. 1 Shep. Abr. 523. Where the plaintiff in debt declares on ſome ſpecialty, or contract for a ſum of money, it muſt be certainly demanded, and no other; and the demand can't be of a leſſer ſum, but it muſt be ſhewn how the remainder was ſatisfied: but in an action upon a ſtatute, that gives a certain ſum for the penalty; though leſs be recovered than the plaintiff lays, it will be good. Cro. Jac. 498. If action of debt is brought on a ſpecialty, bill, bond, leaſe, &c. the ſeveral writings muſt be well conſidered by which the plaintiff warrants his action, and the ſum due is to be rightly ſet forth; and if it be debt for rent, the time of commencement, and ending, &c. In debt on ſingle bill the defendant may plead payment (before the action brought) in bar; and pending an action, on bond, &c. the defendant may bring in principal, intereſt and coſts: and the court ſhall give judgment to diſcharge the defendant. Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16.

If the action be brought for money, it muſt be in the debet & detinet; but if goods or chattels, it muſt be in the detinet only. 50 E. 3. 16. 1 Rol. Abr.—If an executor brings debt for any thing in right of his teſtator, it muſt be in the detinet only. Moor 566. 1 Rol. Abr. 602, 603.

If an executor brings an action upon an obligation made to the teſtator, where the day of payment incurred after the death of the teſtator, yet the writ ſhall be in the detinet only, for he brings the action as executor. Lane 80. S. P. 20 H. 6. 5. 1 Rol. Abr. 602. S. C.

So if a man binds himſelf to the teſtator to pay him 100 l. when ſuch a thing ſhall happen; if it happens after the death of the teſtator, yet the writ by the executor ſhall be in the detinet only. 20 H. 6. 6. 1 Rol. Abr. 602.

If in an account an executor recovers a debt due to his teſtator, in action for the arrearages thereupon, the writ ſhall be in the detinet only, for though the action is converted into a debt by the account, yet it is the ſame thing which was received in the life of the teſtator, Cro. Eliz. 326. Cro. Jac. 545. 5 Co. 31.

If the executor ſells the goods of the teſtator for a certain ſum, he ſhall have action for this in the debet & detinet. 1 Rol. Abr. 602.

If an executor having lands by an extent upon a ſtatute made to the teſtator, and naming himſelf executor, by deed leaſes them for three years, rendering rent, &c. if an action is afterwards brought by him for his rent, it muſt be in the debet & detinet, becauſe it is founded upon his own contract. Lane 80. Cro. Jac. 685. Winch 80. S. C. Brown. 205. 1 Mod. 185. S. P.

So an executor, being leſſee for years of a rectory in the right of the teſtator, may have action upon 2 E. 6. c. 13. for not ſetting out tithes in the debet & detinet, becauſe founded upon a wrong in his own time, and by the ſtatute it is given to the party grieved. Cro. Jac. 545.

Alſo action againſt an executor ſhall be in the detinet only, for he is chargeable no farther than he has aſſets. 11 H. 4. 16. 1 Rol. Abr. 603.

In an action againſt an executor for rent, incurred in the life of the teſtator, the writ ſhall be in the detinet only. 11 H. 6. 36. 1 Rol. Abr. 603.

But if an action be brought againſt an executor for the arrearages of a rent, reſerved upon a leaſe for years, and incurred after the death of the teſtator, the writ ſhall be in the debet & detinet, becauſe the executor is charged of his own poſſeſſion. 1 Rol. Abr. 603. Cro. Eliz. 711. Moor 566. 1 Brownl. 56. Cro. Jac. 411. And the declaration is againſt him as aſſignee, not as executor.

If an action is brought againſt baron and feme, upon an obligation entered into by the feme before marriage, it ſhall be in the debet et detinet; for by the marriage all the perſonal goods and power of diſpoſing of the real eſtate are by law given the huſband, which he has to his own uſe, and not as executors, who have them only to the uſe of another. 5 Co. 36. 3 Leon. 206. S. C.

So if an action is brought upon a bond againſt the heir of the obligor, it ſhall be in the debet et detinet, becauſe he hath the aſſets in his own right. 5 Co. 36.

III. How a debt may be extinguiſhed.

If a man accepts an obligation for a debt due by ſimple contract, this extinguiſhes the contract, but the acceptance of an obligation, for a debt due by another obligation, is no bar of the firſt obligation. 13 H. 4. c. 1. 1 Roll. Abr. 604. i. e. if between the ſame parties.

In debt upon an obligation, the defendant cannot plead nil debet, but muſt deny the deed by pleading non eſt factum, for the ſeal of the party continuing, it muſt be diſſolved eo ligamine quo ligatum eſt. Hard. 332.

But if the debt be due by ſimple contract, then he may plead nil debet, for it does not appear that there is any debt continuing. Hob. 218.

In debt for rent, if it be by deed, the proper plea is non eſt factum; but if it be without deed, the defendant may plead non dimiſit, nothing in arrear, or that he never entered. 2 Inſt. 651. Hard. 332.

In debt for the arrears of an annuity granted for life, nil debet is no good plea, for the action is merely founded upon the deed, for without it no action can be maintained, and tho' by the death of the grantee the nature of the action is changed, the annuity being determined; yet this proves not but that the action is founded upon the deed. Keilw. 147.

But in debt for the arrears of a rent-charge, by will deviſed to the plaintiff's wife for life, againſt the adminiſtrator of the occupier of the land, nil detinet is a good plea, for the will is no deed, nor wants any delivery; adjudged, and ſaid the action was not ſo much grounded upon the will itſelf as upon the ſtatute, by which men are enabled by will to diſpoſe of their lands and rents iſſuing out thereof. Hard. 322.

In debt upon 2 & 3 E. 6. c. 13. for not ſetting forth tithes, Not guilty, or nil debet are good iſſues. 2 Inſt. 651. Cro. Eliz. 621. S. P.

The reaſon why Not guilty is a good plea in this caſe is, becauſe by the action the defendant is charged with a tort, and if he is not guilty of the tort, he does not owe the debt. So on the coal act, for not meaſuring with a lawful meaſure, or not delivering the ingrain, &c. &c.

In debt upon a contract, the defendant cannot plead the contract was for a leſs ſum, or otherways than the plaintiff has declared, and traverſe the contract in the declaration laid, but may wage his law. Moor 49. In ſuch caſe, quære if on plea of nil debet, the plaintiff will not be nonſuited on proving a contract, varying in ſubſtance, from that laid in the declaration? See farther Black. Com. 2 V. 464. 3 V. 153, &c. 158, 9.

Debt to the King. Under this word debitum all things due to the King are comprehended; as all rents, fines, iſſues, and amercements, and other duties received or levied by the ſheriff; for debt in the larger ſenſe ſignifies whatever any man owes. 2 Inſt. 198. The King's debt is to be ſatisfied before that of a ſubject, and until his debt be paid, he may protect the debtor from the arreſt of others. 1 Inſt. 130. But by ſtatute, notwithſtanding the King's protection, creditors may proceed to judgment againſt his debtor, with a ceſſet executio till the King's debts be paid. 25 Ed. 3. St. 5. c. 19. Lands, &c. of the King's debtor and accountant, may be ſold as well after his death, as in his life-time: But if the accountant or debtor to the King had a quietus during his life, his heir ſhall be diſcharged of the debt. 27 Eliz. cap. 3. A perſon being in debt to the King, purchaſes a leaſe to him and his wife, and dies: the term in the wife's hands is liable to the debt. 2 Rol. Abr. 157. Though it is ſaid if he purchaſe lands to him and his wife for life, and to their heirs; ſuch lands in the hands of the wife, are not extendible after the huſband's death, for the King's debt. Dyer 255.

If a tenant in tail, becomes indebted to the King, by receipt of the King's money, or otherwiſe; unleſs it be by judgment, recogniſance, obligation, or other ſpecialty originally due to the King, or ſome other to his uſe; and then dies, the land in the hands of the iſſue in tail ſhall not be extended: But it may, in either of thoſe four caſes. 7 Rep. 21, 22. By the Common law, the King for his debt had execution of the body, lands, and goods of the debtor: By Magna Charta, 9 H. 3. c. 8. the King's debt ſhall not be levied on lands, where the goods and chattels of the debtor are ſufficient to levy the debt; for in ſuch caſe, the ſheriff ought not to extend the lands and tenements of the King's debtor, or of his heir, &c. 2 Inſt. 19.

Alſo pledges ſhall not be diſtrained, when the principal is ſufficient: Though in both caſes it muſt be made appear to the ſheriff; in the one. that there are goods and chattels enough, and in the other, that the ſheriff may levy the King's debt on the principal. Ibid. Sheriffs having received the King's debts, upon their next account are to diſcharge the debtors, on pain to forfeit treble value; and the ſheriffs are to give tallies to the King's debtors on payment. Stat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 19. See Execution, and Black. Com. 5 V. 420.

The King's debtor committed by the court of Exchequer to the Fleet, brought into B. R. by habeas corpus, and ſurrendered in diſcharge of his bail, may be removed again to the Fleet by an habeas corpus from the Exchequer. Wilſ. Rep. Par. 1. fo. 248. Chitty's Caſe.

Debtee Executor. If a perſon indebted to another makes his creditor or debtee his executor; or if ſuch creditor obtains letters of adminiſtration to his debtor; he may retain ſufficient to pay himſelf before any other creditors whoſe debts are of equal degree. 1 Rol. Abr. 922. Plowd. 543. Black. Com. 3 V. 18. &c.

Debtors. It is held, that debt follows the perſon of the debtor, being on ſimple contract; and not of the creditor, as to actions brought, &c. 3 Keb. 163. Where a debtor is made executor of a will, the debt is ſaid to be aſſets, becauſe it is extinguiſhed not by releaſe, but in the way of legacy. 1 Salk. 303. By ſtatute 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 18. Two thirds in number and value of creditors might make compoſitions with debtors, and bind all the reſt; making oath before a maſter in Chancery how their debts became due, &c. But this act was repealed by 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 29. and ſee 10 Ann. c. 20. There have been ſeveral ſtatutes for diſcharging poor inſolvent debtors out of priſon, where they have had no eſtate or effects to pay their creditors, &c. Robertſon in his Hiſt. Emp. Char. V. 1 V. 254,5, &c. ſays, By the ancient law of France no perſon could be arreſted or confined in priſon on account of any private debt. Ordon. des Rois de France, tom. 1. p. 72, 80. If any perſon was arreſted upon any pretext, but his having been guilty of a capital crime, it was lawful to reſcue him out of the hands of the officers who had ſeiſed him. Ordon. 3. p. 17. Freedom from arreſt on account of debt ſeems likewiſe to have been enjoyed in other countries. Gudenus Sylloge Diplom. 473. In ſociety, while it remained in its rudeſt and moſt ſimple form, debt ſeems to have been conſidered as an obligation merely perſonal. Men had made ſome progreſs towards refinement before creditors acquired a right of ſeizing the property of their debtors in order to recover payment. The expedients for this purpoſe were all introduced originally in communities, and we can trace the gradual progreſs of them. 1. The ſimpleſt and moſt obvious ſpecies of ſecurity was, that the perſon who ſold any commodity ſhould receive a pledge from him who bought it, which he reſtored upon receiving payment. Of this cuſtom there are veſtiges in ſeveral charters of community. D'Ach. ix. 185. xi. 377. ——2. When no pledge was given, and the debtor became refractory or inſolvent, the creditor was allowed to ſeize his effects with a ſtrong hand, and by his private authority; the citizens of Paris are warranted by the royal mandate, "ut ubicumque, et quocumque modo poterunt, tantum capiant, unde pecuniam ſibi debitum integre et plenariè habeant, et inde ſibi invicem adjutores exiſtant." Ordon. &c. tom. 1. p. 6. This rude practice, ſuitable only to the violence of a ſtate of nature, was tolerated longer than one can conceive to be poſſible in any ſociety, where laws and order were at all known. The ordonance authorizing it was iſſued, A. D. 1134. and that which corrects the law, and prohits creditors from ſeizing the effects of their debtors, unleſs by a warrant from a magiſtrate, and under his inſpection, was not publiſhed until the year 1351. Ordon. tom 2. 438. It is probable, however, that men were taught, by obſerving the diſorders which the former mode of proceeding occaſioned, to correct it in practice long before a remedy was provided by a law to that effect. Every diſcerning reader will apply this obſervation to many other cuſtoms and practices which I have mentioned. New cuſtoms are not always to be aſcribed to the laws which authorize them. Theſe ſtatutes only give a legal ſanction to ſuch things as the experience of mankind has previouſly found to be proper and beneficial.—3. As ſoon as the interpoſition of the magiſtrate became requiſite, regular proviſion was made for attaching or diſtraining the moveable effects of a debtor; and if his moveables were not ſufficient to diſcharge the debt, his immoveable property, or eſtate in land, was liable to the ſame diſtreſs, and was ſold for the benefit of his creditor. D'Ach. ix. p. 184, 185. xi. p. 348. 380. As this regulation afforded the moſt compleat ſecurity to the creditor, it was conſidered as ſo ſevere, that humanity pointed out ſeveral limitations in the execution of it. Creditors were prohibited from ſeizing the wearing apparel of their debtors, their beds, the door of their houſe, their inſtruments of huſbandry, &c. D'Ach. ix. 184. xi. 377. Upon the ſame principles, when the power of diſtraining effects became more general, the horſe and arms of a gentleman could not be ſeized. D'Ach. ix. 185. As hunting was the favourite amuſement of martial nobles, the Emperor Lodovicus Pius prohibited the ſeizing of a hawk on account of any compoſition or debt. Capitul. lib. iv. ſect. 21. But if the debtor had no other moveables, even theſe priviledged articles might be ſeized.——4. In order to render the ſecurity of property compleat within a community, every perſon who was admitted a member of it, was obliged to buy or build a houſe, or to purchaſe lands, within its precincts, or at leaſt to bring into the town a conſiderable portion of his moveables per quæ juſtitiari poſſit, ſi quid forte in eum querelæ evenerit. D'Ach. xi. 326. Ordon. 1. 367. Libertates S. Georgii de Eſperanchia. Hiſt. de Dauphine, tom. 1. p. 26.——5. That ſecurity might be as perfect as poſſible; in ſome towns the members of the community ſeem to have been bound for each other. D'Ach. x. 644.——6. All queſtions with reſpect to property were tried within the community, by magiſtrates and judges, which the citizens elected or appointed. Their deciſions were more equal and fixed than the ſentences which depended on the capricious and arbitrary will of a baron who thought himſelf ſuperior to all laws. D'Ach. x. 644, 646. xi. 344. & paſſim. Ordon. 3. 204. 7. No member of a community could be burdened by any arbitrary tax; for the ſuperior lord who granted the charter of community, accepted of a fixed cenſus or duty in lieu of all demands. Ordon. tom. 3. 204. Libertates de Calma. Hiſt. de Dauphine. tom. 1. p. 19. Libert. St. Georgii de Eſperanchia, ibid. p. 26. Nor could the members of a community be diſtreſſed by an unequal impoſition of the ſum to be levied on the community. Regulations are inſerted in the charters of ſome communities concerning the method of determining the quota of any tax to be levied on each inhabitant. D'Ach. xi. 350, 365. St. Louis publiſhed an ordonance concerning this matter, which extended to all the communities. Ordon. tom. 1. 186. Theſe regulations are extremely favourable to liberty, as they veſt the power of proportioning the taxes in a certain number of citizens choſen out of each pariſh, who were bound by ſolemn oath to decide according to juſtice.—That the more perfect ſecurity of property was one great object of thoſe who inſtituted communities, we learn, not only from the nature of the thing, but from the expreſs words of ſeveral charters, of which I ſhall only mention that granted by Alienor, Queen of England and Dutcheſs of Guienne, to the community of Poitiers, "ut ſua propria melius defendere poſſint, et magis integre cuſtodire." Du Cange Voc. Communia, v. 11. p. 863.——Such are ſome of the capital regulations eſtabliſhed in communities during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. Theſe may be conſidered as the firſt rudiments of law and order, and contributed greatly to introduce regular government among all the members of ſociety. See Priſoners.

Debts, priority of. An executor or adminiſtrator in payment of debts, muſt obſerve the rules of priority; otherwiſe, on deficiency of aſſets, he muſt anſwer thoſe of a higher nature out of his own eſtate. And, firſt, He may pay funeral charges and expences of proving the will, or taking letters of adminiſtration, and the like. If the eſtate is inſolvent, the funeral expences allowed, will be only 40*s.* Secondly, Debts due to the King on record or ſpecialty. Thirdly, Such debts as are by particular ſtatutes to be preferred to all others; as the forfeitures for not buryiug in woollen, money due on poor rates, for letters to the poſt-office, and ſome others. Fourthly, Debts of record; as judgments, (docketted according to the ſtatute

4 & 5 W. & M. c. 20.) ſtatutes and recogniſances. Fifthly, Debts due on ſpecial contracts; as for rent, (for which the leſſor hath often a better remedy in his own hands, by diſtraining) or upon bonds, covenants, and the like under ſeal. Laſtly, Debts on ſimple contracts, viz. Upon notes unſealed, and verbal promiſes. Among theſe ſimple contracts, ſervants wages are, by ſome, with reaſon, preferred to any other. Black. Com. 2 V. 511.

Deceit, (Deceptio) Is a ſubtle trick or device, whereunto may be drawn all manner of craſt and colluſion, uſed to deceive and defraud another, by any means whatſoever, which hath no other or more proper name than deceit to diſtinguiſh the offence. Weſt. Symb. Sect. 68. And there is a writ called Breve deceptionis that lies for one that receives injury or damage from him that doth any thing deceitfully in the name of another perſon; which writ is either original or judicial. Reg. Orig. 112. Old Nat. Br. 50. Deceit is an offence at Common law, and by ſtatute: And all practices of defrauding or endeavouring to defraud another of his right, are puniſhable by fine and impriſonment; and if for cheating, pillory, &c. Serjeants, counſellors, attornies, and others doing any manner of deceit, are to be impriſoned a year and a day; alſo pleaders by deceit ſhall be expelled the court. Stat. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 29. For obtaining money, &c. by falſe pretences, ſee 30 Geo. 2. c. 24.

If a fine be levied by deceit; or if one recover land by deceit, the fine, and the recovery, ſhall be void. 3 Rep. 77. And if a man be attorney for another in a real action againſt the demandant, and afterwards by covin between ſuch attorney and the demandant, the attorney makes default, by which the land is loſt, the tenant who loſt the land ſhall have a writ of deceit againſt the attorney. F. N. B. 96.

In a præcipe quod reddat, if the ſheriff return the tenant ſummoned, where he was not ſummoned, by which the defendant loſeth his land by default at the grand cape returned; the tenant ſhall have a writ of deceit againſt him who recovered, and againſt the ſheriff for his falſe return; and by that writ the tenant ſhall be reſtored unto his land again: and the ſheriff ſhall be puniſhed for his falſity. Ibid. 97. If a man bring a writ of deceit againſt him that recovers in the firſt action, and the ſheriff return him ſummoned, upon which for non-ſummons in that action on finding the ſame the recovery is reverſed; in this caſe the defendant ſhall not have writ of deceit to recover the land again, if he were not ſummoned: But he ſhall have his remedy againſt the ſheriff. Rol. Abr. 621. And where debt was brought, and the defendant pleaded in abatement, and the plea was over-ruled; the attornies on both ſides by deceit between them, to the end the plaintiff might recover his debt, entered another judgment when it ſhould have been a reſpondeas ouſter; and it was held that the writ of deceit would not lie to reverſe the record, but only to recover damages. Ibid. 622.

If in a ſuit or action, another perſon ſhall come into court and pretend he is party to the ſuit, and ſo let judgment be had, or ſome other damage done to the party himſelf; or if I have cauſe to have an action, and another brings it in my name, and lets judgment go againſt me by nonſuit, or the like; I may have this writ of deceit againſt him. F. N. B. 96. March. 48.

If any one forge a ſtatute, &c. in my name, and ſueth a capias thereupon, for which I am arreſted; I ſhall have a writ of deceit againſt him that forged it, and againſt him who ſued forth the writ of capias, &c. Ibid. And if a perſon procure another to ſue an action againſt me to trouble me, I ſhall have a writ of deceit.

There are many frauds and deceits provided againſt by ſtatute, relating to artificers, bakers, brewers, victuallers falſe weights and meaſures, &c. which are liable to penalties and puniſhment in proportion to the offence committed. And writ of deceit lies in various caſes, for not performing a bargain; or not ſelling good commodities, &c. 1 Inſt. 357. See Action on the Caſe.

A writ of deceit lies to ſet aſide a fine and recovery in C. B. of lands in antient demeſne. Wilſ. Rep. Par. 2. fo. 17. Rex v. Serjeant Mead & al. See Black. Com. 3 V. 165-6.

Decennary. A town or tithing conſiſting (originally) of ten families of freeholders. Ten tithing compoſed an hundred. The inſtitution of decennaries (or frankpledges) is imputed to Alfred. In theſe decennaries the whole neighbourhood or tithing of freemen were mutually pledges for each other's good behaviour. Black. Com. 1 V. 114. 4 V. 249.

Decem Tales, Is when a full jury doth not appear at a trial at bar; then a writ goes to the ſheriff apponere decem tales, &c. whereby a ſuppy is made of jurymen to proceed in the trial.

Decies tantum, Is a writ that lies againſt a juror, who hath taken money of either party for giving his verdict; ſo called, becauſe it is to recover ten times as much as he took: And every perſon that will may bring this writ and recover the ſame, one half whereof ſhall be to the proſecutor, and the other to the King. This writ alſo lies againſt embraceors that procure ſuch an inqueſt; who ſhall be further puniſhed by impriſonment for a year Reg. Orig. 188. F. N. B. 171. Stat. 38 Ed. 3. cap. 13. But decies tantum doth not lie againſt the embraceor, if he embrace and take no money; for he ought to take money, and alſo embrace. Yet it lies againſt the jurors, although they do not give a verdict. if they take money; and ſo it is ſaid, if they give a true verdict, decies tantum lies, if they take money. Dyer 95. New Nat. Br. 380.

Decimation, (Decimatio) The puniſhing every tenth ſoldier by lot, was termed decimatio legionis: It likewiſe ſignifies tithing, or paying a tenth part. There was a decimation during the time of the Uſurper 1655.

Deciners, Decenniers, or Doziners, (Decennarii) Derived from the Fr. Dizeine, i. e. Decas, Ten, ſignify, in our ancient law, ſuch as were wont to have the overſight of the Friburghs, or views of frank-pledge, for the maintenance of the King's peace; and the limits or compaſs of their juriſdiction was called Decenna, becauſe it commonly conſiſted of ten houſholds; as every perſon bound for himſelf and his neighbours to keep the peace, was ſtiled Decennier. Bract. lib. 3. Tract. 2. cap. 15.

Theſe ſeemed to have large authority in the time of the Saxons, taking knowledge of cauſes within their circuits, and redreſſing wrongs by way of judgment, and compelling men thereunto, as appears in the laws of King Edward the Confeſſor, publiſhed by Lambard, Numb. 32. But of late times decennier is not uſed for the chief man of a Dizein, or Dozein; but he that is ſworn to the King's peace, and by oath of loyalty to the Prince, is ſettled in the ſociety of a dozein.

A dozein ſeemed to extend ſo far as a leet extendeth; becauſe in leets the oath of loyalty is adminiſtred by the ſteward, and taken by all ſuch as are twelve years old, and upwards, dwelling within the precinct of the leet, where they are ſworn. F. N. B. 161. There are now no other dozeins but leets; and there is a great diverſity between ancient and modern times, in this point of law and government, 2 Inſt. 73. See Black. Com. 4 V. 249.

Declaration, (Declaratio, Narratio) Is a ſhewing in writing the cauſe of complaint of the plaintiff in an action againſt the defendant, wherein the party is ſuppoſed to have received ſome wrong. And this ought to be plain and certain, becauſe it impeacheth the defendant, and compels him to anſwer thereunto; it muſt ſet forth the plaintiff's and defendant's names, the nature and cauſe of the action, the manner thereof, &c. and the damage received. 1 Inſt. 17.

A count or declaration ought to contain demonſtration, declaration, and concluſion: In demonſtration, are included three things; Quis queritur, contra quem, & pro qua cauſa; in declarations, there ought to be compriſed, Quomodo inter partes actio accrevit, quando & qua die, anno & loco, & cui dabitur: And in the concluſion, ſhould be averred and offered to prove the ſuit and damage, &c. ſuſtained. Terms de Ley. See Co. Lit. 303. a. &c.

A declaration is an expoſition of the writ, with the addition of time, circumſtances, &c. and muſt be true and clear, for the court is not to take things in it by implication: but it is not neceſſary to ſet forth matters of fact, as in a bill in Chancery, becauſe they are to be tried by a jury. Wood's Inſt. 582.

The law requires four things in declarations and pleadings, viz. 1. Truth. 2. Certainty. 3. Order. 4. Congruity. In perſonal actions, the day, year, and place ought to be expreſſed in the declaration; but not in real actions: And if in a treſpaſs the plaintiff declares, that it was committed ſuch day, &c. and continued diverſis diebus & vicibus, without ſhewing the days of the continuance of it, this is good: For that is to be proved in evidence, for the increaſe of damages. Jenk. Cent. 124. But it muſt be ſuch a treſpaſs as may be continued: And the form of laying the continuance in different treſpaſſes, muſt be attended to, according to the nature of the cauſe of action.

In action of debt, upon a bond, the plaintiff in his declaration muſt alledge a place where the bond was made, becauſe the jury ſhould come from that place; and if this be omitted, the declaration is ill. Dyer 15, 39. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 619. In action of covenant, no other covenant need be mentioned in the declaration, than the covenant where the breach is aſſigned: And if a defendant pleads non eſt factum to a deed, he allows a covenant therein to be broken, as laid in the declaration, and makes the declaration good, unleſs really bad in ſubſtance, tho' the breach be too generally aſſigned. 2 Cro. 369. But a defendant ſeldom relies on the plea of non eſt factum only, unleſs the deed is not in reality his, but, by leave of the court, pleads alſo ſome other plea, or pleas.

In ſlander there ſhould be no more inducement than is neceſſary: The like is to be obſerved in actions upon general ſtatutes, concluding contra formam ſtatuti, &c. But in declarations for words, the words ſpoken are to be laid expreſly and poſitively; not with an hæc verba vel conſimilia, nor with a quorum tenor ſequitur, &c. Cro. Eliz. 645, 857. 5 Mod. 72. And where the plaintiff declares on, and recites a ſtatute, he muſt recite it truly, and it is erroneous to miſrecite it; though as to the ſubſtance of the declaration, the plaintiff might have omitted to recite it all. 1 Nelſ. 616.

In action on the caſe upon aſſumpſit, the plaintiff is to declare upon the whole promiſe made, and not on a part of it; or on trial he will be nonſuited. 1 Danv. Abr. 266, &c. It is good to lay large and ſufficient damages in declarations: And damages ſhall not be given for that which is not contained in the declaration, and only for what is materially alledged. 10 Rep. 115. 1 Lill. Abr. 381. If one declare upon an obligation, with an hic in curia prolat', he muſt, on oyer pray'd of it, ſhew the obligation. And a plaintiff declaring as executor or adminiſtrator, ought to ſet forth the probate of the will, and letters of adminiſtration granted, with a profert in curia; or the declaration will be bad. 2 Lil. Abr. 412.

If a declaration is bad, and the defendant demurs, the plaintiff may, on application to a judge, or by motion in court, (but the moſt uſual method is by ſummons before a judge) obtain leave to amend on paying the coſts of the demurrer, &c. But if the defendant do not take advantage of it, but pleads in bar, and the plaintiff proceeds to iſſue thereon, if the right is found for the defendant, the plaintiff is eſtopped by the verdict from bringing a new action: And ſo it is if he had demurred to the plea in bar. 1 Mod. 20, 207. Where a declaration is defective, it is ſometimes aided by the ſtatutes of jeoſails, &c. but they help only matters of form, not matters of ſubſtance; for uncertainty in a declaration, which is matter of ſubſtance, is not aided by ſtatute after verdict, as in caſe of treſpaſs for taking fiſh, where their number or nature are not ſet forth. 5 Rep. 35.

The plaintiff hath two terms to file his declaration againſt the defendant, that term being reckoned one wherein the writ was returnable: And if no declaration comes in before the riſing of the court, the laſt day of the ſecond term, the defendant may ſign a non proſ. whereupon he ſhall have coſts. As to to B. R. the plaintiff hath now two terms: and more time in taking a rule.

The plaintiff's attorney is to file his warrant the term wherein he declares. Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. If one be in cuſtody of the marſhal of the court, any plaintiff may file a declaration againſt him, and he is obliged to plead thereto; it is the ſame when he is out upon bail, any other may declare againſt him: For when a man is in cuſtody of the law, he is bound to anſwer every one's ſuit; and on hab. corp. a ſtranger to the writ by which the priſoner is arreſted, may take notice of the priſoner when he is turned over to the marſhal, though at the ſuit of another, and declare againſt him, without taking out proceſs. 1 Lil. Abr. 413.

By ſtatute, when a defendant is taken or charged in cuſtody, upon any writ out of the courts at Weſtminſter, or impriſoned for want of ſureties for appearance, the plaintiff muſt declare againſt him before the end of the next term, and cauſe a copy to be delivered to the priſoner or gaoler; to which declaration the priſoner is to plead, or the plaintiff ſhall have judgment. 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 21. But if the declaration be not entered, or left in the office, before the end of the next term; and affidavit is made thereof, and filed, before the end of twenty days after, &c. the priſoner, on entering his appearance, ſhall be diſcharged by ſuperſedeas.

If a perſon is in cuſtody of the marſhal, &c. and the plaintiff would charge him either with an action or execution, (if in term-time) he muſt file a bill againſt him, and deliver a declaration to the turn-key, &c. and he ſhall lie in cuſtody two terms, &c. but if in vacation, the plaintiff is to go to the marſhal's book in the office, and make an entry quod defenden. remaneat in cuſtodia ad ſectam A. B. &c. 1 Salk. 213. And in declarations againſt priſoners by virtue of any proceſs out of B. R. it ſhall be alledged in cuſtody of what ſheriff, bailiff, &c. ſuch priſoner is at the time of the declaration delivered: which allegation ſhall be as effectual as if the priſoner was in cuſtoſty of the marſhal. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 21. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 21.

On filing declarations, copies thereof are ſerved on the defendants or their attornies, &c. And by an order of all the judges, anno 12 W. 3. the plaintiff's attorney is not obliged to deliver the defendant's attorney the original declaration; but inſtead of it, is to deliver a true copy of the declaration; upon delivery or tender whereof, the defendant's attorney ſhall pay for ſuch copy after the rate of 4*d. per* ſheet, &c. and if any perſon refuſe to pay for the copy tendered, the ſaid copy is to be left in the office, with the clerk that keeps the files of declarations, and thereupon the plaintiff's attorney giving rule to plead, may, for want of a plea, ſign judgment; and before any plea ſhall be received, the defendant's attorney is to pay for the copy of the declaration. 1 Lil. 417.

And by a late order, in every cauſe, where ſpecial or common bail is filed, and notice given to the plaintiff, a copy of the declaration ſhall be delivered to the attorney for the defendant, who ſhall pay for it according to the uſual rate; but if the defendant's attorney, or his clerk in his abſence, refuſes to pay for ſuch copy; or if it happens the habitation of the attorney for the defendant, be unknown to the attorney for the plaintiff; then it ſhall be lawful to leave the copy with the officer of the court appointed for filing declarations, which ſhall be good, giving notice, &c. Ord. Cur Trin. 2 Geo. 2.

On the firſt day of the following term after delivery of the declaration, the paper of rules is to be made up, writing on the top the attorney's name and the term, and under that the names of the plaintiff and defendant, as A. B. againſt C. D. &c. and the paper of rules muſt be carried to the ſecondary, who will give one peremptory rule to plead, &c. A plaintiff's attorney, may amend his declaration in B. R. in matter of form, after the general iſſue pleaded, before entry thereof, without paying coſts, or giving imparlance: But if he amend in ſubſtance, he is to pay coſts, or give imparlance: And if he amend in ſubſtance, after a ſpecial plea pleaded, though he would give imparlance, he muſt pay coſts. 1 Lil. Abr. 409.

A miſtake in a declaration, the plaintiff may amend in C. B. on notice before the eſſoin day, and the defendant ſhall have no advantage of it: Alſo before demurrer, or iſſue joined, the plaintiff may amend, paying 13*s.* 4*d.* coſts; and force the defendant to plead preſently, or give him a further imparlance without paying coſts: But after demurrer, or iſſue joined, and when the pleadings are entered on the roll, the plaintiff cannot amend his declaration, but is to enter a diſcontinuance and proceed de novo. Practiſ. Attorn. Edit. 1. p. 147. But the courts will often give leave to amend, on motion for that purpoſe, plaintiff paying ſuch coſts as ſhall be taxed by the proper officers.

On a latitat in B. R. you may declare againſt the defendant in as many actions as you think fit; but you muſt have one original, for every action in C. B. The declaration is grounded upon the writ in the Common Pleas, and bill of Middleſex in the King's Bench: And in C. B. it is uſual to declare in actions on Quare clauſum fregit, as is practiſed on a latitat in B. R. 1 Vent. 259. One may not regularly declare in B. R. againſt a perſon that is not in cuſtodia Mareſchalli, or hath not filed bail; unleſs he be a privileged perſon. 21 Car. B. R. if a declaration begins Queritur de Placito Tranſg. pro eo quod, &c. it may be a declaration in caſe, or, it will ſerve for either treſpaſs or caſe. Cro. Car. 325.

The plaintiff's attorney is not obliged to ſet his hand to his declaration; for the defendants attorney muſt receive it without, if he knows him to be the attorney in the cauſe.

By ſtatute, no man ſhall be prejudiced by the ancient forms; ſo that the matter of the action be fully ſhewn in the declaration, &c. which ſhall be good, though the terms are not perfectly proper. 35 Ed. 3. c. 15. Vide 27. El. c. 5. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8. & 4 Ann. c. 16.

Decree. The judgment of a court of equity on any bill preferred, is ſo called.

A decree in Chancery is of the like nature with a judgment at Common law. Chan. Rep. 234. 14 Car. 2. Nanny v. Martin.

By the laws of England a decree (notwithſtanding any contempts thereof) ſhall not bind the goods or moveables, but only charge the perſon. Chan, Rep. 193. 12 Car. 2. Howard v. Suffolk.

A defendant lay in the Fleet for breach of a decree, the plaintiff neverthеleſs prefers a bill to diſcover an eſtate; defendant demurred becauſe a double execution; yet overruled. Toth. 137, 138. cites Hill. 1630. Audley v. Harris.

A ſequeſtration may be granted in the Exchequer, as it has always been practiſed in Chancery where a decree is for a perſonal duty, otherwiſe the juriſdiction of the court of equity would be to little purpoſe, if it had not authority ſufficient to ſee its decrees executed; per three Barons; but the Lord Chief Baron doubted, becauſe the Lord Chief Baron Hale could never be prevailed upon to grant it, nor the Lord Montague, to whoſe learning, he ſaid, he muſt ſubſcribe; but by the opinion of the other three it was granted. 2 Freem Rep. 99. pl. 109. Trin. 1687. in the Exchequer, Gaaver v. Fountaine. See 7 Vin. Abr. 394, 402.

Where there is a remedy at law for one thing in a bill, which is complicated with other matters which are proper in equity, in ſuch caſe equity will determine the whole matter; per Lord Chancellor. 2 Freem. Rep. 58. pl. 64. Trin. 1680.

Where there is but one witneſs againſt the defendant's anſwer. the plaintiff can have no decree. Vern. R. 161. pl. 151. Paſch. 1683. Alam v. Jourdon.

Where no ordinary proceſs upon the firſt decree will ſerve for the execution thereof, there muſt be a new bill to pray execution of the firſt decree by a ſecond decree. 2 Chan. Rep. 127, 128. 29 Car. 2. Lawrence v. Berney.

Verbal agreement, though ſubſequent to the decree, yet ſhall not ſtay the execution of it, but the remedy muſt be by original bill. 2 Chan. Caſes 8. Mich. 31 Car. 2. Waklin v. Walthall.

Whenever a decree is entered by conſent, the merits after ſhall never after be enquired into, unleſs there be an objection, that the word conſent be ſtruck out of the order. MS. Tab. February 1701. Norcot v. Norcot.

On a new bill to carry a decree into execution, the court may vary and alter what is thought proper; but on a rehearing, no farther than the petition extends; but if the petition be againſt the decree in general, though particular reaſons are given, the whole is open; but otherwiſe it is, if the petition be only againſt one or two particulars. Sel. Caſes in Chan. in Lord King's time, 13, 14. Paſch. 11 Geo. 1. Colcheſter v. Colcheſter.

The rule of court is, that on appeal the whole cauſe is open; but on a rehearing, only ſo much as is petitioned againſt; if all do not petition, it is open only to the petitioners. Sel. Caſes in Chan. in Lord King's time, 24 Trin. 11 Geo. 1. Hayward v. Colley.

Decree may be altered upon proper application the ſame term it is pronounced, without a rehearing. MS. Tab. May 1725. Vaughan v. Blake. No original bill can be to vacate a decree ſigned and inrolled. G. Equ. R. 185. Hill. 12 Geo. Floyd v. Manſell. Matters, proper to be excepted to upon the maſter's report, ſhall never be objected to a decree after the report confirmed. MS. Tab. April 28, 1726. Parker v. Stanley. All appeals from the Rolls are to be made to the Lord Chancellor, and decrees made at the Rolls muſt be ſigned or approved of by the Chancellor to make them decrees of the court of Chancery. MS. Tab. March 13, 1727. Morſe v. Dubois.

A decree gained by fraud, may be ſet aſide by petition, as well as a judgment at law by motion; a fortiori may ſuch decree be ſet aſide by bill. 3 Wms's Rep. 111. Paſch. 1731. Seldon v. Forteſcue Aland. If a decree be obtained and inrolled, ſo that the cauſe cannot be reheard, then there is no remedy but by bill of review, which muſt be on error appearing on the face of the decree, or on matters ſubſequent thereto, as a releaſe, or a receipt diſcovered ſince. 3 Wms's Rep. 371. Trin. 1735. Taylor v. Sharp. See Black. Com. 3 V. 451.

Decretals, (Decretales) Are a volume or books of the Canon Law, ſo called, containing the decrees of ſundry Popes; or, a digeſt of the canons of all the councils that pertained to one matter under one head. See Canon Law.

Decuriare, Signifies to bring into order. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. p. 243.

Dedbana, Ded bane, Sax. An actual homicide, or manſlaughter. Leg. H. 1. c. 85.

Dedi, Is a warranty in law; as if it be ſaid in a deed or conveyance, That A. B. hath Given, &c. to C. D. it is a warranty to him and his heirs. Co. Lit. 304. Alſo dedi imports a power of giving any thing. Hob. 12.

Dedication-Day, (Feſtum Dedicationis) The feaſt of dedication of churches, or rather the feaſt-day of the ſaint and patron of a church; which was celebrated not only by the inhabitants of the place, but by thoſe of all the neighbouring villages, who uſually came thither; and ſuch aſſemblies were allowed as lawful: It was uſual for the people to feaſt and drink on thoſe days; and in many parts of England, they ſtill meet every year in villages for this purpoſe, which are days called Feaſts or Wakes.

Dedimus Poteſtatem, Is a writ or commiſſion given to one or more private perſons, for the ſpeeding ſome act appertaining to a judge, or ſome court: And it is granted moſt commonly upon ſuggeſtion, that the party who is to do ſomething before a judge, or in court, is ſo weak that he cannot travel; as where a perſon lives in the country, to take an anſwer in Chancery; to examine witneſſes in a cauſe depending in that court; to levy a fine in the Common Pleas, &c.

Dedimus Poteſtatem de Attornato faciendo. As the words of writs do command the defendant to appear, &c. anciently the judges would not ſuffer the parties to make attornies in any action or ſuit, without the King's writ of Dedimus Poteſtatem, to receive their attornies: But now by ſtatutes, the plaintiff or defendant may make attornies in ſuits without ſuch writs. New Nat. Br. 55, 56. See the Table to the 4to Edit. of the Stat. tit. Attornies.

Deed, (Factum) Is an inſtrument in parchment, or paper, but chiefly in parchment, comprehending a contract or bargain between party and party; or an agreement of the parties thereto, for the matters therein contained: And it conſiſts of three principal points, writing, ſealing, and delivery; writing, to expreſs the contents; ſealing, to teſtify the conſent of the parties; and delivery, to make it binding and perfect. Terms de Ley.

Some have enumerated ten things as neceſſarily incident to a deed. (1) Writing. (2) In parchment (vellum) or paper. (3) A perſon able to contract, (4) By a ſufficient name. (5) A perſon able to be contracted with, (6) By a ſufficient name. (7) A thing to be contracted for. (8) Apt words required by law. (9) Sealing. And (10) Delivery. Co. Lit. 35. b.

The word ſcriptum or writing doth not import a deed; for a contract may be in writing, and not by deed, and if ſo, it is but a parol agreement: But a deed may be effectual, although it does not mention, in the beginning, by or to whom it is made. 1 Ld. Raym. 28.

As to the writing of a deed: All the matter and form thereof muſt be written before the ſealing and delivery of it; for if a man ſeals and delivers an empty piece of parchment or paper, although he therewithal gives commandment that an obligation or other matter ſhall be written in it, which is done accordingly, yet this will not make it a good deed. Co. Lit. 171. Perk. S. 118, 119. See Moor 28. Hotley 136,7.

A deed may be written in any hand, as in text, court or Roman hand; or in any language, as in Latin or French, and is as good as a deed written in Engliſh and in a ſecretary hand. 2 Co. 3.

If there be any alteration, raſure, or interlining made in any part of the deed before the delivery of it, this will not hurt the deed.

But in ſuch caſes it is policy to make a memorandum of it upon the back of the deed, and to give the witneſſes notice of it, (this is now uſually done in the atteſtation of the deed thus: Sealed and delivered, the word———being firſt interlined, &c.) For otherwiſe, if it be in any place material, as in the name of the grantor, grantee, in the limiting of the eſtate, or the like, and it cannot be proved to be done before the ſealing and delivery of it, eſpecially if it be a deed poll, it is very ſuſpicious. Co. Lit. 37, 225. Perk. S. 125, 126, 127, 128, 155.

It may be written either in a piece of looſe paper or parchment, or in a paper or parchment ſewed in a book. Bro. Oblig. 67. Co. Lit. 137, 139. But the paper or parchment muſt in moſt caſes be ſtamped.

As to the parties contracting.

It is to be obſerved, That ſome perſons are diſabled by Common law, and ſome by ſtatute; ſome are abſolute, and ſome are ſecundum quid only; as in caſe of infants, feme coverts, ideots, perſons non compos mentis, aliens, tenants in tail, eccleſiaſtical perſons, and others, ſome of which may not make any deeds or eſtates by them at all; others but ſo and ſo limited and qualified. Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 28.

Diſabilities to make deeds, &c. are chiefly amongſt perſons of non-ſane memory, infants, aliens, women who have huſbands, men who have wives, &c. perſons born deaf and dumb, perſons attaint of treaſon or felony, or, in a præmunire, clerk convict, tenant in tail, eccleſiaſtical perſons, as biſhops, parſons, and the like, with reſpect to lands, &c. they hold as ſuch, joint-tenants, tenants in common, coparceners, diſſeiſors, diſſeiſſees, &c.

And this in ſome of them is in part, and temporal only, but in others of them, it is abſolute, univerſal, and perpetual.

He who has but an eſtate-tail in land, can only make a leaſe of it for his own life by deed, or ſuch a leaſe as is within the Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 28.

Eccleſiaſtical perſons cannot make a leaſe of their eccleſiaſtical lands for longer than their own lives, or ſuch a leaſe as is warrantable by the ſtatute of 13 Eliz. cap. 10. and 1 Jac. 1. cap. 3. and others.

And he who has only an eſtate for his own or another's life, or a leaſe for years of land, may give, grant, or charge it at his pleaſure for ſo long as his eſtate laſts; and it will be good to all purpoſes, and againſt all perſons for that time.

And a man who has an eſtate in land to him and his wife, and his heirs, may make what eſtate he will of it, and this will be good againſt all but his wife, and that for her life only. 7 Co. 12. Co. Lit. 42. Perk. ſ. 182.

As to the naming and deſcription of the parties and perſons in deeds:

The names of the parties to deeds ſerve only to diſtinguiſh perſons, and to make the perſon intended certain; and therefore it is ſafe to deſcribe the perſon intended by his true and proper names of baptiſm and ſurname; and if it be a corporation, by the true name whereby it was made; yet miſtakes in this, unleſs they be very groſs, will not hurt, nihil facit error nominis cum de corpore conſtat. Bulſt. 21, 22. 2 Bulſt. 302, 303. Co. Lit. 3. Perk. ſ. 36.

But if the name of baptiſm or ſurname be miſtaken, as John for Thomas, &c. this is dangerous. Moor 407, 897. And ſee 2 Bulſt. 70. Perk. ſ. 39.

It is alſo prudent to add the addition of each party, as to the place of reſidence, with his or her degree, profeſſion, or myſtery.

There are many deſcriptions of grantors and grantees; as (1) Proper names of baptiſm and ſurnames, and the names of corporations, or bodies politic or corporate. (2) Names of dignities, office, and the like. And theſe (of both ſorts) will admit a deſcription made good by reputation. And ſo land will paſs to one, by the name of a ſon, who is a baſtard; ſo to one by the name of a wife, who is not a wife, 27 Ed. 3. 85. Bulſt. 3. if they be reputed or known by that name. Hob. 32.

There muſt be ſuch a perſon in eſſe at the time of the deed made as is named, and he muſt be able to give, and capable to receive that which is given or granted by the deed. Plowd. 345. Co. Lit. 2, 3. Perk. 43, 52.

And therefore if an annuity be granted to the right heirs of J. S. he being then living, this is void; for there is none ſuch, nor can be whilſt he lives. Perk. ſ. 52.

So primogenit. proli of A. and B. and they have no iſſue yet born. Cro. Car. 22.

If a man gets another name by common eſteem than his right name, and he is known by his other name, his deed made by this other name may be good. 6 Co. 36. Co. Lit. 3. Perk. ſ. 41.

The miſtake is leſs dangerous where any other part of the deed, or ſome other addition, ſhall make the perſon intended certain. 6 Co. 36. Co. Lit. 3. Perk. ſ. 40.

With reſpect to the capacity of the perſon to be contracted with.

All perſons male or female, eccleſiaſtical or temporal, and all bodies natural or politic, are capable to take by grant, or to be contracted with, unleſs diſabled by their being non compos mentis, &c. as before, as to the diſabilities to grant, &c.

The King, for the greatneſs of his perſon, is diſabled to take by deed in pais; and therefore if a feoffment be made to him there, and livery of ſeiſin be made upon it, this will be void; but he is to take by matter of record, which is of a higher nature than a deed. Fitz. Fait and Feoffment 21.

Leaſes made to him by colleges, deans and chapters, or any other, having a ſpiritual or eccleſiaſtical living, againſt the ſtatute 13 Eliz. c. 10. are reſtrained by the ſame act, as well as leaſes made to common perſons. 5 Co. 14.

If a leaſe is made to huſband and wife for their lives, the remainder to the heirs of the ſurvivor; this is a good remainder notwithſtanding the uncertainty. Godb. Caſe, 167.

If a leaſe be made to the huſband, habendum to the wife, the habendum to her is void, for ſhe is a ſtranger to the premiſſes of the deed. 3 Leon. 32, 33, 34.

Concerning the name of the grantee:

It is to be remarked, That grantees, &c. muſt not only be perſons in being, and capable to take by grant, &c. by the name in the deed mentioned, but they muſt alſo be ſufficiently named and deſcribed one way or other, and he himſelf, and not a ſtranger, muſt take by the deed; and ſome that cannot grant or give, yet, may take or receive. And a grant made to two, three, or twenty ſuch perſons, is good. Co. Lit. 2, 3. Perk. ſ. 43.

If a grant be in all other reſpects well made, except the omiſſion of the name of the grantee, if he does not expreſs who ſhall take by it, it is void.

There are divers ſorts of names and nominations of perſons, or bodies politic or corporate, that may take, whereof there are divers ſorts; as firſt, the proper names or ſurnames, wherein notwithſtanding there may be ambiguity of a gift or grant to my ſon John, (having two of that name,) perhaps, it may be made good by an averment, which John is meant.

There are alſo other names or deſcriptions, as by ſome dignity, office, or the like; as the Earl of Hertford, Lord Treaſurer, and the like: And this will admit of a deſcription made good by reputation, though not by truth. 27 Ed. 3. 85. Bulſt. 3. And ſee Ante.

But the ſafe way in the caſes of common perſons is, to name the parties grantor or grantee, &c. by their names of baptiſm and ſurname, &c. Co. Lit. 3.

For where the grant intends to deſcribe the perſon of the grantee by his proper name, and omits or miſtakes his Chriſtian name or ſurname; commonly the deed is void, unleſs there be ſome ſpecial matter to help it.

And yet if the grant does not intend to deſcribe the grantee by his known name, but by ſome other matter, there it may be good, by a deſcription of the perſon, without either name of baptiſm or ſurname. Co. Lit. 3.

A biſhop by the name of biſhop of London, may take without any other name. Co. Lit. 3. Bulſt. 21.

As to the thing to be contracted for:

All corporeal and immoveable things, ſuch as are ſaid to lie in livery, as honours, iſles, villages, manors, meſſuages, cottages, lands, meadows, paſtures, woods, moors, marſhes, furzes, heaths, mines, quarries, and the like; and ſome incorporeal things that are incident and appendant to them, are grantable from any man to another man in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or years at firſt, and tranſmiſſible and aſſignable afterwards by the grantee thereof in infinitum at pleaſure. Co. Lit. 20.

A grant may be of a moiety, third, fourth, or fifth, or other certain part of a manor, or of land, by the name of a third, fourth, fifth, or other certain part, and good. Co. Lit. 190.

So of a third or fourth part of tithes, and the like. Dyer 84.

And all incorporeal things, ſuch as are ſaid to lie in grant, as rents and ſervices; and of theſe not only ſuch as are reſerved upon any eſtate made of land, but ſuch as are granted out of land, ſeigniories, commons, vicarages, advowſons in groſs, eſtovers, dignities, ways, waters, fiſhings, franchiſes, ferries, leets, waifs, eſtrays, and ſome offices. All theſe and the like things are grantable by one to another in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or for years at firſt, and de novo, but they are grantable and aſſignable over in infinitum. But theſe things may not be granted otherwiſe than by deed. Co. Lit. 144. Fitz. Grant, 145. Perk. ſ. 87, 91, 103. Bro. Grant, 3. 3 H. 6. 20. 9 H. 6. 12.

And if a man has a rent reſerved on a particular eſtate, he may grant over parcel of it.

And of whatſoever a fine may be levied, a grant by deed of the ſame thing may be made.

A grant of an acre of land covered with water, is good. Co. Lit. 4.

Rents and ſervices reſerved upon any eſtate, and rents granted out of land (it is ſaid) are grantable over in infinitum; but one may not grant rent out of a rent, nor may one grant over a rent which he has till he has ſeiſin of it, Perk. ſ. 88, 89. Bro. Grant, 171.

With regard to the words requiſite in a deed:

They depend upon the eſtate intended to be conveyed. If a man would purchaſe lands or tenements in fee-ſimple, it behoves him to have theſe words in his purchaſe, To have and to hold to him and to his heirs; for theſe words, his heirs, (only) make the eſtate of inheritance, in all feoffments and grants: But this is to be underſtood of natural bodies: For if lands be given to a ſole body politic or corporate, (as to a biſhop, parſon, vicar, maſter of an hoſpital, &c.) there, to give him an eſtate of inheritance in his politic or corporate capacity, he muſt uſe theſe words, To have and to hold to him and his ſucceſſors. Co. Lit. 8, &c.

If an eſtate-tail is intended to be created, the words muſt be, To have and to hold to him and to the heirs of his body. See title Fee.

The neceſſity of the word heirs or ſucceſſors, as the caſe requires, is therefore abſolutely neceſſary in conveyances of eſtates of inheritance; for if a man purchaſe lands by theſe words, To have and to hold to him for ever, he has but an eſtate for term of life. See Co. Lit. 8. b. &c.

As to ſealing and delivery:

A deed ſealed and delivered, it is ſaid, may be good without ſigning; for the ſeal is the eſſential part of the deed: But it is uſual to have deeds ſigned; and there muſt be witneſſes to the ſealing and delivery, who are to indorſe or under-write their names thereon. 1 Inſt. 7. 10 Rep. 93. The ſigning is of great uſe, for the ſubſcribing witneſſes to the deed may be dead, when proving their death, and the hand-writing of the party executing the deed, will be ſufficient to eſtabliſh the ſame. If a writing is not ſealed, it cannot be a deed. 3 Inſt. 169. 5 Rep. 23. See farther, 2 Rep. 3. 2 Rol. Abr. 28. 12 Rep 90. Hob. 96. If another perſon ſeal my deed, and I take it after ſealed, and deliver it as my deed; it is held to be good. Perk. ſect. 130. See Co. Lit. 171.

If two make a deed, and one of them ſeals it at one time, and the other at another time; this is as good as if they ſealed it together. Lane 32

If I have ſealed my deed, and after I deliver it to him to whom it is made, or to ſome other by his appointment, and ſay nothing, this is a good delivery.

So if I take the deed in my hand, and uſe theſe, or the like words, here take him; or, this will ſerve; or, I deliver this as my deed; or, I deliver him you; theſe are deliveries.

So if I make a deed of land to another, and being upon the land, I deliver the deed to him in the name of ſeiſin of the land; this is a good delivery.

So if the deed be ſealed, or lying in a window, or on a table, and I uſe theſe, or the like words, There he is, take it as my deed: This is a good delivery, and perfects the deed; for, as a deed may be delivered by words without acts, ſo may it alſo be delivered by acts without words. 9 Co. 137. Dyer 167, 192. Co. Lit. 36, 49. 35 Aſſ. pl. 6. Contra, if the party to whom made takes it without any act done purporting to be a delivery. But where parties have come for the purpoſe and done every thing but delivery, it has been adjudged a good delivery. Cro. Eliz. 7. 1 Leon. 140.

Regularly there may not be two deliveries of a deed, for where the firſt doth take effect, the ſecond is void: Unleſs it be where the deed is delivered to a ſtranger as an eſcrow; or, when a deed, good at firſt, becomes void afterwards; or, a feme covert ſeals a deed, and after being ſole delivers it again, &c. Perk. ſect. 154. Co. Lit. 48. 5 Rep 119.

The delivery of any deed may be alledged at any time after the date; but not before. Dyer 315. A deed may be good without all the orderly and formal parts; but without delivery by the party himſelf, or his attorney lawfully authoriſed, to the party to whom made, or ſome other to his uſe, it is no deed: And the delivery may be either abſolute or on condition. 1 Inſt. 35. 2 Rep. 5.

Of deeds there are two ſorts, deeds indented, and deeds poll; which names principally ariſe from the form of them, the one being cut in and out at top, dentwiſe, and the other plain: that is, ſhaved cloſe, from whence it takes the name of deed poll. See Black. Com. 2 V. 296.

A deed poll is ſaid to be a deed teſtifying that only one of the parties to the agreement hath put his ſeal to the ſame, where ſuch party is the principle or only perſon, whoſe conſent or act is neceſſary to the deed: And it is therefore a plain deed, without indenting, and is uſed when the vendor, for example, only ſeals, and there is no need of the vendee's ſealing a counterpart, becauſe the nature of the contract is ſuch, as it requires no covenant from the vendee, &c. Co. Lit. 55.

The ſeveral parts of deeds by indenture, are belonging to the feoffor, grantor, or leſſor, who have one; the feoffee, grantee, or leſſee, who have another; and ſome other perſons, as truſtees, a third, &c. and the deed-poll which is ſingle, and of but one part, is delivered to the feoffee, or grantee, &c.

All the parts of a deed indented, in judgment of law, make but one intire deed; but every part is of as great force as all the parts together, and they are eſteemed the mutual acts of either party, who may be bound by either part of the ſame, and the words of the indenture are the words of either party, &c. But a deed-poll is the ſole deed of him that makes it, and the words thereof ſhall be ſaid to be his words, and bind him only. Plowd. 134, 421. Lit. ſect. 370.

There are other diviſions of deeds; ſome are abſolute, and ſome conditional; ſome inrolled, and others not inrolled; ſome concerning the realty, ſome the perſonalty, &c. and ſome have in them matter of gift or grant; and others matter of diſcharge.

There are ſeveral kinds of deeds, by which lands paſs from one man to another; as of bargain and ſale, feoffment, leaſe and releaſe, indentures to lead the uſes of fines and recoveries, ſettlements, leaſes, aſſignments, exchanges, mortgages, &c. And deeds have ſeveral formal parts, viz. The premiſſes, habendum, reddendum, condition, covenants, warranty, date, ſealing, &c. The premiſſes ſet forth the proper names of the parties, with their additions of place and quality; and comprehend the certainty of the lands and tenements to be conveyed, with the conſideration of the deed, as money, natural love, &c. the premiſſes alſo contain the exceptions, if there be any, out of the land granted; as of timber, mines, &c. and in many deeds there may be an occaſion of a recital of former deeds in the premiſſes, particularly in aſſignments of leaſes, mortgages, &c.

The habendum names the certainty of the eſtate granted, for what time the grantee is to have it, and to what uſe: and it ſometimes qualifies the eſtate, ſo that the general implication of it, which by conſtruction of law paſſes in the premiſſes, by the habendum may be controlled; but not if the eſtate is expreſſed in the premiſſes. Likewiſe an habendum may explain the premiſſes, to prevent wrong; and ſometimes the premiſſes are thereby enlarged. A freehold cannot be granted by deed with habendum at a day to come: and a deed or leaſe, habendum from henceforth, includes the day on which it was dated: but habendum a die datus excludes it.

The reddendum is that clauſe in the deed which reſerveth ſome new thing to the grantor; as rent, ſuit, ſervice, &c. and is uſually made by the words yielding, paying, doing, &c. A leſſor cannot reſerve to any but himſelf, his heirs and executors, &c. nor can he reſerve to himſelf parcel of the annual profits, ſuch as the herbage of the land; for that would be repugnant to the grant, it being a part thereof.

Conditions and covenants in deeds are for the holding or not holding of the eſtate granted, on performance of ſome act: and a condition relating to a real eſtate, is a quality annexed by him that hath the eſtate, intereſt or right in the ſame, whereby the eſtate granted may be defeated, enlarged, or created, upon an uncertain event. Conditions are expreſſed by theſe words, viz. upon Condition, Provided, So that, &c. and Provided always, and it is covenanted, is a condition, by force of the proviſo, and a covenant, by virtue of the other words; though ſometimes a proviſo ſhall amount to a covenant, and ſometimes be taken for a limitation, exception, reſervation, explanation, &c.

The warranty in deeds is to ſecure the eſtate to the grantee and his heirs, &c. and is a covenant real, annexed to the land granted, by which the grantor and his heirs are bound to warrant the ſame to the grantee and his heirs, and that they ſhall quietly hold and enjoy it; or upon voucher, &c. the grantor ſhall yield other lands, to the value of what ſhall be evicted. Where a feoffor grants away all his eſtate in the land, and is not bound to warrant the title, but the feoffee is to defend it at his peril; the feoffee ſhall have all the deeds, as incidents to the land, although not granted in expreſs words: but where the feoffer warrants the land, it is otherwiſe: the feoffor ſhall have them to defend the title; and the feoffee muſt truſt to his warranty, and have only ſuch deeds as concern the poſſeſſion, &c.

In witneſs whereof, &c. aſcertains the date of the deed; and is as well part of it, as what is written before. 1 Inſt. 6, 47, 201, 365. Plowd. 152. Wood's Inſt. 224, 225, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 624, &c. Deeds of bargain and ſale are to be inrolled, by Stat. 27 Hen. 8. c. 16. A copy of a bargain and ſale inrolled ſhall be as ſufficient as the original deed, by Stat. 10 Ann. c. 18. ſect. 3. But eſtates in fee are now generally granted and conveyed by indentures of leaſe and releaſe. And all deeds are to be regiſtered in the counties of York and Middleſex. Stat. 2 & 3 Ann. c. 4. 5 Ann. c. 18. 6 Ann. c. 35. 7 Ann. c. 20. 8 Geo. 2. c. 6. 25 Geo. 2. c. 4. And it is much to be wiſhed that regiſters were univerſally eſtabliſhed throughout the kingdom.

In deeds, the conſideration is a principal thing to give them effect: and the foundation of deeds ought always to be honeſt. That a deed was executed upon a corrupt agreement, dehors the deed, may be averred in pleading. See the caſe of Collins and Blantern, a new and very peculiar caſe. Wilſ. Rep. par. 2. fo. 341, &c. The plea was ſettled both by Mr. Serjeant Hewit, (now Lord Lyfford, Chancellor of Ireland) and Mr. Serjeant Glyn.

Falſe Latin, or falſe Engliſh, will not make a deed void: but raſure or interlineation in a material part, will render the ſame void; unleſs ſome memorandum be made thereof on the back of the deed, teſtifying its being done before ſealing. 1 Rol. Rep. 40. If words are blotted out in a deed, by a grantee or leſſee himſelf, although it be not in a place material, it will make the deed void. Dyer 261. This muſt mean after execution.

It has been adjudged, where an eſtate cannot have its eſſence without a deed, there, if the deed is raſed in any material part, after the delivery, it makes the eſtate void: but if the eſtate may have eſſence without a deed, then, notwithſtanding it is created by deed, and that deed is raſed, it ſhall not deſtroy the eſtate, but the deed. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 625.

When a choſe in action is created by deed, the deſtruction of ſuch deed is the deſtruction of the duty itſelf; as in caſe of a bond, bill, &c. though it is not ſo, where an eſtate or intereſt is created by a deed. 3 Salk. 120.

If a deed be ſuppreſſed, on proof made that it came to the party's hands, and of its contents, the perſon injured, will have the ſame benefit to hold the eſtate, as if the deed could be produced. 2 Vern. Rep. 280. A perſon committed for burning a deed, ſee 2 Vern. 561. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 169. An indorſement on a deed, at the time of the ſealing and delivery, is a part of the ſame: but if an indorſement be after the delivery, it is a new deed. Mod. Caſ. 237.

Deeds, if fraudulently made; when got by corrupt agreement, as on uſurious contract; and when made by force or dureſs, &c. are void: ſo they are for uncertainty, and by reaſon of infancy, coverture, or other diſability in the makers, &c. 2 Rol. Abr. 28. 1 Inſt. 253. 11 Rep. 27.

A deed may be good in part, and void in part; or good againſt one perſon, and void as to another: if all the parts of a deed made by law ſtand together, no one part ſhall make the whole void. and if a deed by any conſtruction of law be conſtrued to have legal operation, the law will not make it utterly void, though it may not operate according to the purport of the deed: alſo the law will tranſpoſe and marſhal clauſes in deeds, to come at their true meaning; but not to confound them. Where the words of a deed may have a double intendment, one ſtanding with law, and the other contrary to it; the intendment that ſtandeth with law ſhall be taken. 1 Lil. Abr. 421. 1 Inſt. 42, 217. 1 Shep. Abr. 540.

There are four grounds for the expoſition of deeds. 1. That they may be beneficial to the taker. 2. That where the words may be employed to ſome intent, they ſhall never be void. 3. That the words be conſtrued according to the intention of the parties, and not otherwiſe; and the intent of the parties ſhall take effect, if it may poſſibly ſtand with law. 4. That they are to be conſonant to the rules of the law. And deeds ſhall have a reaſonable expoſition, without injury againſt the grantor, to the greateſt advantage of the grantee. They are to be expounded upon the whole, and if the ſecond part contradicts the firſt, ſuch ſecond part ſhall be void; but if the latter part expounds or explains the former, which it may do, both of them ſhall ſtand. Plowd. 160. Raym. 142. 6 Rep. 36. 1 Inſt. 313. 1 Rol. Rep. 375.

The firſt deed of a perſon, and laſt will, ſtand in force. In deeds indented, all parties are eſtopped, or concluded, to ſay any thing againſt what is contained in the deed. 1 Inſt. 45. And where a deed is by indenture between parties, none can have an action upon that deed, but he who is a party to it; but where it is a deed-poll, one may covenant with another who is not a party to it, to do certain acts, for the non-performance whereof he may bring an action. 2 Lev. 74.

Where a man juſtifies title under a deed, he is to produce the deed: if a deed is alledged in pleading, it muſt be ſhewed to the court, that the court may judge of the validity of it, and whether there are ſufficient words to make a good contract; and when it is ſhewn to the court, the deed ſhall remain in court all the term, in the hands of the cuſtos brevium; but at the end of the term, it ſhall be delivered to the party. If the deed is denied, it muſt remain in court till the plea is determined. 10 Rep. 88. Wood 235. A deed ſet forth with a profert hic in curia, remains in court in judgment of law all that term; and any perſon may, during that term, have benefit by it, though he hath it not ready to ſhew: the adverſe party may take any advantage by the deed that it will afford him. 5 Rep. 74. 1 Nelſ. 625.

But now the deed is not actually brought into court, but generally remains in the hands of the party's attorney, who gives oyer and copy of it to the attorney of the other party, if demanded.

Deeds ſealed and delivered cannot be pleaded, &c. if not ſtamped according to law. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 21. The indenting is now conſidered as only matter of form, and many deeds are called indentures, beginning with the words, This indenture, though not actually indented. Beſides, there are articles of various kinds which do not begin with theſe words, and yet are called deeds or articles of agreement, &c. and that is good in law. A deed-poll commonly begins thus: To all people to whom theſe preſents ſhall come, &c. Or, Know all Men by theſe preſents, &c. See Accompliſhed Conveyancer. Vol. I. Edit. 2.

Deeds, ſtealing of. At Common law, bonds, bills, and notes, which concern mere choſes in action, were held not to be ſuch goods whereof larceny might be committed: but by Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 25. they are put upon the ſame footing, with reſpect to larcenies, as the money they were meant to ſecure. *Blak. Deemſters, (from the Sax. dema, a judge or umpire) Are a kind of judges in the Iſle of man, who, without proceſs, or any charge to the parties decide all controverſies in that iſland; and they are choſen from among themſelves. Cam. Brit.

Deer-feld, A park or deer-fold; Sax. deer, fera, and fald, ſtabulum. Cowel.

Deer-hayes, Are engines, or great nets made of cords to catch deer; and no perſon not having a park, &c. ſhall keep any of theſe nets, under the penalty of 40 s. a month. Stat. 19 H. 7. cap. 11.

Deer-ſtealers. There are ſeveral laws, for the puniſhment of deer-ſtealers; as by 3 Jac. 1. c. 13. None ſhall kill or chaſe any deer, in any park or incloſed ground, on pain of ſuffering three months impriſonment, and to pay treble damages; and perſons not having 40 l. per ann. in lands, or worth 200 l. in goods, &c. are not to uſe any gun, bow, dog, &c. to kill deer; and their guns, &c. may be taken from them. By the 13 Car. 2 cap. 10. It is ordained, That whoever ſhall courſe, kill, hunt, or take away any red, or fallow deer, from any parks, &c, ſhall be liable to a penalty of 20 l.

The Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 10. inflicts a penalty of 20 l. for unlawful hunting and courſing of any deer; and 30 l. for taking, wounding, or killing; to be levied by diſtres; which is to be divided into three parts; one whereof to go to the informer, another to the poor, and the other to the owner of the deer; and if no diſtreſs can be had, the offenders ſhall be impriſoned a year, and ſet on the pillory, &c.

Pulling down pales or walls of parks, &c. where deer are incloſed, by this act is puniſhed with three months impriſonment: and the offences are determinable by juſtices of peace of the county where committed. Alſo by 5 Geo. 1. c. 15. & 28. Perſons guilty of deer-ſtealing may be indicted before a judge of goal delivery, and in that caſe be tranſported to the plantations for ſeven years: and perſons otherwiſe convicted before they are diſcharged, are to enter into a bond of 50 l. Penalty, to the perſon injured for future good behaviour; keepers of parks, killing deer without conſent of the owners, incur a forfeiture of 50 l. and others pulling down walls and fences of parks, are liable to the penalties inflicted by 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 10. for killing of deer.

Thus ſtood our laws till the great inſolence of the Waltham Blacks made a further proviſion neceſſary, when by Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 22. it was enacted, That if any perſons armed with ſwords, fire-arms, or other weapons, and having their faces blacked, or being otherwiſe diſguiſed, ſhall appear in any foreſt, park, &c. and unlawfully hunt or kill any deer; rob any warren, &c. or ſhall ſet fire to any houſe, or ſhoot at any perſon in a dwelling-houſe, or other place; or ſend any letter without a name ſubſcribed, or with a fictitious name, demanding money of any perſon, &c. they ſhall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy: and 50 l. reward is given for the apprehenſion of the offenders. This ſtatute is continued for five years, by 12 Geo. 1. cap. 30. and made perpetual by 31 Geo. 2. c. 42.

Perſons convicted a ſecond time of hunting, or taking away deer in unincloſed foreſts, &c. or coming armed with an intent to hunt or take them, who ſhall beat or wound any keeper, &c. ſhall be tranſported for ſeven years. 10 Geo. 2. c. 32. Before the charta de foreſta, 9 H. 3. to hunt the King's deer, in any foreſt or park was felony; but that charter ordained, that none ſhould loſe either life or member for killing the King's deer. 2 Rol. Rep. 120. The hunting in any foreſt, &c. with viſors or painted faces in the day-time, or in the night with or without ſuch viſors, if the party conceal the ſame, it is felony by Stat. 1 H. 7. c. 7. So that we may obſerve there is ſome agreement between our antient laws and modern ſtatutes. A perſon was convicted on the ſtatute of deer-ſtealing, and it appearing by the conviction, that the deer were not in a park incloſed, &c. upon motion in B. R. the conviction was quaſhed. Mich. 9 W. 3. Mod. Juſt. 161. A conviction of deer-ſtealing may be removed by certiorari into B. R but the party doing it is to give bond in the penalty of 60 l. to the juſtice of peace before whom convicted, to proſecute ſuch certiorari, and pay the forfeiture due by the conviction, or render his perſon in a month after the conviction confirmed, &c. 5 Geo. 1. c. 15. c. 28. See Game.

De eſſendo quietum de Telonio, Is a writ that lies for thoſe who are by privilege free from the payment of toll; on their being moleſted therein. F. N. B. 226.

De expenſis militum, A writ commanding the ſheriff to levy the expences of a knight of the ſhire for attendance in parliament, being 4 s. per diem by ſtatute: and there is a like writ de expenſis civium & burgenſium, to levy 2 s. per diem, for the expences of every citizen and burgeſs of parliament. Stat. 23 Hen. 6. cap. 11. 4 Inſt. 46.

De facto, Signifies a thing actually done; that is done indeed. A King de facto is one that is in actual poſſeſſion of a crown, and hath no lawful right to the ſame; in which ſenſe it is oppoſed to a King de jure, who hath right to a crown, but is out of poſſeſſion. 3 Inſt. 7.

Defamation, (defamatio) Is when a perſon ſpeaks ſcandalous words of another, or of a magiſtrate, &c.

whereby they are injured in their reputation; for which the party offending ſhall be puniſhed according to the nature and quality of his offence; ſometimes by action on the caſe at Common law, ſometimes by ſtatute, and ſometimes by the eccleſiaſtical laws.

Defamation is alſo puniſhable by the ſpiritual courts; in which courts it ought to have three incidents, viz. Firſt, It is to concern matters ſpiritual, and determinable in the eccleſiaſtical courts; as for calling a man heretick, ſchiſmatick, adulterer, fornicator, &c. Secondly, That it be a matter ſpiritual only; for if the defamation concern any thing determinable at the Common law, the eccleſiaſtical judges ſhall not have conuſance thereof. And Thirdly, Although ſuch defamation be merely ſpiritual, yet he that is defamed cannot ſue for damages in the eccleſiaſtical courts; but the ſuit ought to be only for puniſhment of the fault, by way of penance. Terms de Ley. See Action on the Caſe for words, alſo Prohibition.

Default, (Fr. defaut) Is commonly taken for non-appearance in court, at a day aſſigned; though it extends to any omiſſion of that which we ought to do. Bract. lib. 5. tract. 3. Co. Lit. 259. If a plaintiff makes default in appearance in a trial at law, he will be nonſuited; and where a defendant makes default, judgment ſhall be had againſt him by default. In action of debt upon bond, if the defendant pleads a releaſe, and iſſue is thereupon joined, if at the trial the defendant makes default, the plaintiff may pray judgment by default; becauſe by the plea the duty is confeſſed, and therefore no inqueſt need be taken by default: In fact the jury find for the plaintiff on the iſſue joined. If the defendant plead Non eſt factum, by that plea the duty is denied, and therefore the plaintiff muſt prove the bond, whereupon he will be intitled to a verdict for the penalty, with coſts of ſuit. In treſpaſs, if the defendant plead a releaſe, and then make default, the plaintiff cannot pray judgment by default; but an inqueſt is to be taken becauſe damages are uncertain. 1 Salk. 216. The plaintiff proves his caſe the ſame as if Not guilty had been pleaded, and the jury then give ſuch damages as they think proper.

Tenant in tail, tenant in dower, by the curteſy, or for life, loſing their lands by default, in a præcipe quod reddat brought againſt them; they are to have remedy by the writ quod ei deforciat, &c. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 4. And in a quod ei deforciat, where the tenant joined iſſue upon the mere right, and the jury appearing, the defendant made default; it was adjudged, that in ſuch caſe final judgment ſhall be given: but if the tenant had made default, it would be otherwiſe, for then a petit cape muſt iſſue againſt him, becauſe it may ſo happen that he may ſave his default. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 627. By default of a defendant, he is ſaid to be generally out of court to all purpoſes, but only that judgment may be given againſt him: and no judgment can be afterwards given for the defendant. Ibid. 628.

When two are to recover a perſonal thing, the default of one is the default of the other: contra, where they are to diſcharge themſelves of a perſonalty; where the default of the one is not the default of the other. 6 Rep. 25. 1 Lill. Abr. 425. In an action againſt two, if the proceſs be determined againſt one, and the other appears; he ſhall be put to anſwer, notwithſtanding the default of his companion. 2 Danv. Abr. 480. Where the baron is to have a corporal puniſhment for a default, there the default of the wife ſhall not be the default of the huſband: but otherwiſe it is where the huſband is not to have any corporal puniſhment by the default. Ibid. 472, 473.

If a defendant imparl to another day in the ſame term, and make default at the day, this is a departure in deſpite of the court: and when the defendant after appearance, and being preſent in court, upon demand makes departure, it is in deſpite of the court, and the entry is, Et præd. tenens, licet ſolemniter exactus, non revenit, ſed in contemptum curiæ receſſit, & defaltam fecit, &c. Co. Lit. 139.

Suffering judgment to go by default, is an admiſſion of the contract declared on. Stra. 612. After the inqueſt is taken by default, the defendant can make no ſuggeſtion on the roll. Str. 46. Default, and ſaver of default, made a large title in the old books of law. See 52 H. 3. c. 9, 13, 18, & 24. 3 Ed. 1. c. 1. & 42. & 12 Ed. 1.

Default in Criminal Caſes. An offender indicted appears at the capias, and pleads to iſſue, and is let to bail to attend his trial, and then makes default; here the inqueſt in caſe of felony ſhall never be taken by default, but a capias ad audiendam juratam ſhall iſſue, and if the party is not taken, an exigent; and if he appear on that writ, and then make default, an exigi facias de novo may be granted: but where upon the capias or exigent the ſheriff returns cepi corpus, and at the day hath not his body, the ſheriff ſhall be puniſhed, but no new exigent awarded, becauſe in cuſtody of record. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 202.

Default of Jurors. If jurors make default in their appearance for trying of cauſes, they ſhall loſe and forfeit iſſues, unleſs they have any reaſonable excuſe proved by witneſſes, in which caſe the juſtices may diſcharge the iſſue for default. Stat 35 H. 8. c. 6.

Defeaſance, (from the Fr. defaire, to defeat) Signifies a condition relating to a deed, which being performed, the deed is defeated, and rendered void, as if it never had been made. The difference between a common condition and a defeaſance is, that the condition is annexed to, or inſerted in, the deed; and a defeaſance is a deed by itſelf, concluded and agreed on between the parties, and having relation to another deed. The defeaſance may generally (as in the caſe of a bond, &c.) be indorſed on the back of the deed.

To make a good defeaſance it muſt be, 1. By deed, (unleſs indorſed) for there cannot be a defeaſance of a deed without deed; and a writing under hand doth not imply it to be a deed. 2. It muſt recite the deed it relates to, or at leaſt the moſt material part thereof, (unleſs it be on the back, as mentioned before.) 3. It is to be made between the ſame perſons that were parties to the firſt deed. 4. It muſt be made at the time, or after the firſt deed, and not before. 5. It ought to be made of a thing defeaſible. 1 Inſt. 236. 3 Lev. 234.

Inheritances executed by livery, ſuch as eſtates in fee, or for life, cannot be ſubject to defeaſance afterwards, but at the time of making the feoffment, &c. only: but executory inheritances, ſuch as leaſes for years, rents, annuities, conditions, covenants, &c. may be defeated by defeaſance made after the things granted. And it is the ſame of obligations, recogniſances, ſtatutes, judgments, &c. which are moſt commonly the ſubject of defeaſance, and uſually made after the deed whereto they have relation. Plowd. 137. 1 Rep. 113.

If a man acknowledge a ſtatute to another, and enters into a defeaſance, that if his lands in ſuch a county ſhould be extended, the ſtatute ſhould be void; the defeaſance will be good and not repugnant, becauſe it is by another deed: but the condition of a bond not to ſue the obligation is void for repugnancy, being in the ſame deed. Moor 1035. Although the condition of an obligation, where it is repugnant to it, be void; it is otherwiſe in caſe of a defeaſance, made after the bond, for this ſhall be good notwithſtanding: as where the obligee afterwards grants by deed to the obligor, that he will not ſue thereon at all; or not till ſuch a time, or that it ſhall be diſcharged, &c. 20 H. 7. 24. Fitz. Bar. 71.

Where a proviſo goes by way of defeaſance of a covenant, it muſt be pleaded on the other ſide, otherwiſe, where by way of explanation, or reſtriction of the covenant; per Holt Ch. J. 2 Salk. 574. pl. 2. Hill. 10 Will. 3. B. R. Clayton v. Kinaſton.

If A. be bound in bond to B. in 20*l.* and he makes a defeaſance to C. that if he pay him the like ſum, the obligation made by A. ſhall be void; this is no good defeaſance, becauſe it is not made between the ſame parties: though if a ſtatute be entered into, to huſband and wife, and the huſband alone make a defeaſance, it may be good. 14 H. 8. 101. 2 Shep. Abr. 488.

A ſtatute, &c. may be defeaſanced on condition of performing a will, and paying legacies to other perſons. 1 Cro. 837. If a defeaſance of a ſtatute be made, and after another defeaſance is made by the ſame parties, the firſt defeaſance becomes void thereby; and the ſecond only is in force, as in a will. 2 Danv. Abr. 481. Where a ſtatute is acknowledged to two perſons, and one of them makes a defeaſance, it is ſaid to be a good diſcharge. Ibid. 480. If execution be ſued out before the time in a defeaſance is paſt, it ſhall be ſet aſide. 1 Lil. 426.

In a defeaſance of a deed of lands, the perſon to whom made covenants that on payment of a certain ſum, on ſuch a day, he will transfer and reconvey the eſtate back again: and that the maker ſhall enjoy till default, &c. If the defeaſance be of a judgment, he covenants that on payment of the money, he will enter ſatisfaction on the record: if of a ſtatute or bond, than on payment it ſhall be void, &c. Law of Securities 145, 146, 148, &c. Vide Mortgage.

Defence, In a legal ſignification, is applicable to a plea, and is that which the defendant ought to make immediately, after the count or declaration, viz. That he defends all the wrong, force, and damages, where and when he ought, &c. And by defending the force and wrong, he excuſes himſelf of the wrong ſurmiſed againſt him, and makes himſelf party to the plea; and by defending the damage, he affirms the plaintiff able to be anſwered unto; ſo that if he will ſhew any diſability in the plaintiff, then he ought to omit the defence of the damage, and demand judgment if the party ſhall be anſwered unto: for by the reſidue of the defence, the defendant admits the power of the court to hear and determine their pleas. Terms de Ley.

A defence is ſometime a full defence, and that is where the plea begins with theſe words, Venit et defendit vim et injuriam quando, &c. and this is uſual in perſonal actions: but there is another defence in real actions, where the plea begins Venit et dicit, &c.

After the defendant has made a full defence in treſpaſs, by adding the words quando, &c. to the venit et defendit vim et injuriam, he cannot plead in diſability, that the plaintiff is an alien born, &c. but he ought to omit the quando, becauſe by that word the defendant hath admitted that the plaintiff hath capacity to ſue. Carth 230. Paſch. 4 W. & M. in B. R. Jentreer v. Jenkins. See 7 Vin. Abr. tit. Defence. It ſignifies when, where, and in what manner the court ſhall direct.

In every præcipe, where land is demanded, the defence muſt be venit et defendit jus ſuum, etc. As in a writ of intruſion, writ of formedon, etc. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 629. A defendant cannot plead any plea, before he hath made a defence; though this muſt not be intended abſolutely, for in a ſcire facias, a defence is never made. 3 Lev. 182. We give the following from Blackſtone, 3 V. 296.

When the plaintiff hath ſtated his caſe in the declaration, it is incumbent on the defendant within a reaſonable time to make his defence and to put in a plea, or elſe the plaintiff will at once recover judgment by default, or nihil dicit of the defendant.

Defence, in its true legal ſenſe, ſignifies not a juſtification, protection, or guard, which is now its popular ſignification; but merely on oppoſing or denial (from the French verb defender) of the truth or validity of the complaint. It is the conteſtatio litis of the civilians; a general aſſertion that the plaintiff hath no ground of action, which aſſertion is afterwards extended and maintained in his plea. For it would be ridiculous to ſuppoſe that the defendant comes and defends (or in the vulgar acceptation, juſtifies) the force and injury, in one line, and pleads that he is not guilty of the treſpaſs complained of, in the next. And therefore in actions of dower, where the demandant does not count of any injury done, but merely demands her endowment, [Raſtal. entr. 234.] and in aſſiſes of land, where alſo there is no injury alledged, but merely a queſtion of right ſtated for the determination of the recognitors or jury, the tenant makes no ſuch defence. [Booth of real actions, 118.] In writs of entry, [Black Com. 2 V. Append. No. 5. ſect. 2.] where no injury is ſtated in the count, but merely the right of the demandant and the defective title of the tenant, the tenant comes and and defends or denies his right, jus ſuum, that is (as I underſtand it, though with a ſmall grammatical inaccuracy) the right of the demandant, the only one expreſsly mentioned in the pleadings; or elſe denies his own right to be ſuch, as is ſuggeſted by the count of the demandant. And in writs of right [Black. Com. 3 V. No. 1. ſect. 5] the tenant always comes and defends the right of the demandant and his ſeiſin, jus prædicti S. et ſeiſinam ipſius, [Co. Entr. 182.] or elſe the ſeiſin of his anceſtor, upon which he counts, as the caſe may be) and the demandant may reply, that the tenant unjuſtly defends his, the demandants right, and the ſeiſin on which he counts. [Nov. Narr. 230. edit. 1534.] All which is extremely clear, if we underſtand by defence on oppoſition or denial, but it is otherwiſe inexplicably difficult. [The true reaſon of this, ſays Booth (on real actions, 94, 112.) I could never yet find.]

The courts were formerly very nice and curious with reſpect to the nature of the defence, ſo that if no defence was made though a ſufficient plea was pleaded, the plaintiff ſhould recover judgment; [Co. Lit. 127.] and therefore the book entitled Novæ Narrationes or the Newtalys, [edit. 1534.] at the end of almoſt every count, narratio, or tale, ſubjoins ſuch defence as is proper for the defendant to make. For a general defence or denial was not prudent in every ſituation, ſince thereby the propriety of the writ, the competency of the plaintiff, and the cognizance of the court, were allowed. By defending the force and injury the defendant waved all pleas of miſnomer; [Theol. Dig. l. 14. c. 1. pag. 357.] by defending the damages, all exceptions to the perſon of the plaintiff; and by defending either one or the other when and where it ſhould behove him, he acknowledged the juriſdiction of the court. [En la defence ſont iij choſes on tendantz: per tant quil defende tort et force, home doyt entendre quil ſe excuſe detort a luy ſurmys per conte, et fait ſe partie al ple; et per tant quil defende les damages, il affirme le partie able deſtre reſpondu; et per tant quil defende ou et quant il devera, il accepte la poiar decourte de conuſtre on trier courple. (Mod. te Nend. cur. 408: Edit. 1534) See alſo Co. Lit. 127.] But of late years theſe niceties have been very deſervedly diſcountenanced; [Salk. 217. Lord Raym. 282.] though they ſtill ſeem to be law, if inſiſted on. [Carth. 230. Lord Raym. 117.]

Defend, (defendere) In our ancient laws and ſtatutes ſignifies to forbid: and there is a ſtatute intitled, Statutum de defenſione portandi arma, &c. 7 Ed. 1. In divers parts of England we commonly ſay, God defend, inſtead of God forbid. Blount.

Defendant, (defendens) Is the party that ſued in a perſonal action; as tenant is he that is ſued in action real.

Defendemus, Is an ordinary word uſed in grants and donations; and hath this force, that it binds the donor and his heirs to defend the donee, if any one go about to lay any incumbrance on the thing given, other than what is contained in the deed of donation. Bract. lib. 2. c. 16. See Warranty.

Defender of the Faith, (fidei defenſor) Is a peculiar title belonging to the King of England, as Catholicus, to the King of Spain; and Chriſtianiſſimus, to the King of France, &c. Theſe titles were given by the Popes of Rome; and that of Defenſor Fidei was firſt conferred by Pope Leo the Tenth, on King Henry the Eighth, for writing againſt Martin Luther, and the bull for it bears date quinto Idus Octob. 1521. Lord Herbert's Hiſt. Hen. 8. 105. But the Pope, on King Henry's ſuppreſſing the houſes of religion, at the time of the reformation, fooliſhly ſentenced him to be deprived of his title, and depoſed from his crown; though in the 35th year of his reign his title, &c. was confirmed by parliament; which hath continued to be uſed by all ſucceeding Kings to this day. Lex Conſtitutionis, 47, 48.

Defendere ſe per Corpus ſuum, To offer duel or combat as a legal trial and appeal. Bract. lib. 3. cap. 26.

Defendere unica manu. Words ſignifying to wage law, and a denial of the accuſation upon oath. See Manus.

Defenſa, A park or place fenced in for deer, and defended as a property for that uſe and ſervice.——Idem dux facit inſtaurare prædictum parcum de feris defenſæ Leiceſtrenſis. H. Knighton, ſub ann. 1352.

Defenſiva, The Lords or Earls of the Marches, who were the wardens or defenders of their country, had the title of Defenſiva. Cowel.

Defenſo, That part of any open field or place that was allotted for corn and hay, and upon which there was no common or feeding, was antienly ſaid to be in defenſo: ſo of any meadow ground, that was laid in for hay only.

It was likewiſe the ſame of a wood, where part was incloſed and fenced up, to ſecure the growth of the underwood from the injury of cattle. Mon Angl. Tom. 3. p. 306.

Defenſum, An incloſure of land, or any fenced ground. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. p. 114.

Deficiencies. Act for making good the deficiencies, and preſerving the publick credit, &c. Stat. 1 Ann. c. 13.

Deforcement, (deforciamentum) Is where any one is caſt out of his lands or poſſeſſions by force: or it is a with-holding lands or tenements by force from the right owner. Co. Lit. 331. A deforceor is one that overcomes and caſts forth by force and violence, and differs from diſſeiſor; firſt, becauſe a man may diſſeiſe another with force; and next, for that a perſon may deforce another, who never was in poſſeſſion; as if ſeveral have right to lands, as common heirs, and one entering keeps out the reſt, the law ſaith he deforceth, not diſſeiſeth them.

And (according to Littleton) he who is enfeoffed by tenant in tail, and put in poſſeſſion, by keeping out the heir of him in reverſion who hath right to the land, the tenant in tail being dead doth deforce the heir, though not diſſeiſe him, becauſe he entered during the life of the tenant in tail, when the heir had no preſent right.

Alſo a deforceor differs from an intruder, by reaſon a man is made an intruder by a wrongful entry only into land void of a poſſeſſor: and a deforceor is he that holds out againſt the right heir. Bract. lib. 4. c. 1. Britt. c. 33. Litt. 138. F. N. B. 118.

As force and violence are oppoſite to the peace and juſtice of the kingdom; and it is a diſgrace to the law, that any perſon ſhould preſume to enter forcibly into the poſſeſſion of another, before the law hath decided his title therein; therefore divers ſtatutes have been made for reformation of theſe abuſes, as among others the Stat. 5 R. 2. cap. 7. See Forcible Entry. And ſee that title, in the Index to the Statutes.

Deforceor, deforciator, (ſrom the French forceur, expugnator) Signifies one that overcometh, and caſteth out by force. Britton, cap. 53. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 118. Littleton, in his chapter of Diſcontinuance, fol. 117. Bract. lib. 4. cap. 1 See more of this in Pulton de Pace Regis, fol. 34, 35. And ſee Deforcement.

Deforciant, Mentioned in the Stat. 23 El, c. 3. is the ſame with a deforceor. See Black. Com. 2 V. 350. 3 V. 174.

Deforciatio, Is uſed for a diſtreſs, or holding of goods for ſatisfaction of a debt. Paroch. Antiq. 293.

Degradation, (degradatio) Is an eccleſiaſtical cenſure, whereby a clergyman is diveſted of his holy orders, and there are two ſorts of degrading, by the Canon law; one ſummary, by word only; the other ſolemn, by ſtripping the party degraded of thoſe ornaments and rights which are the enſigns of his order or degree. Selden's Titles of Hon. 787.

Degradation is otherwiſe called depoſition; and in former times the degrading of a clerk was no more than a diſplacing or ſuſpenſion from his office: but the Canoniſts have ſince diſtinguiſhed between a depoſition and a degradation; the one being now uſed as a greater puniſhment than the other, becauſe the biſhop takes from the criminal all the badges of his order, and afterwards delivers him to the ſecular judge, where he cannot purge himſelf of the offence whereof he is convicted, &c.

There is likewiſe a degradation of a Lord, or a Knight, &c. at Common law; when they are attainted of treaſon; as Hill, 18 Ed. 2. Andrew Harcla, Earl of Carliſle, who was alſo a Knight, was degraded, and when judgment of treaſon was pronounced againſt him, his ſword was broken over his head, and his ſpurs hewn off his heels, &c. And there is a degrading by act of parliament; for by Stat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 16.

William Lord Monſon, Sir Henry Mildmay, and others, were degraded from all titles of honour, dignities, and preheminences, and none of them to bear or uſe the title of Lord, Knight, Eſquire, or Gentleman, or any coat of arms for ever after. See as to Peers, Black. Com. 1 V. 403.

Dehors, (Fr.) A word uſed in ancient pleading, when a thing is without the land, &c. or out of the point in queſtion. Vide Hors de ſon fee.

De injuria ſua propria, abſque tali cauſa, Are words uſed in replications, in actions of treſpaſs, 1 Lil. Abr. 427. When one juſtifies by command or authority derived from another; or if a defendant juſtifies by authority at Common law, as a conſtable by arreſt for breach of the peace; or if he juſtifies by act of parliament, etc. De injuria ſua propria, etc. is a good replication. Cro. Eliz. 539. 2 Salk. 628. See De ſon Tort Demeſne.

Dei Judicium. The old Saxon trial by ordeal was ſo called; becauſe they thought it an appeal to God, for the juſtice of a cauſe, and verily believed that the deciſion was according the will and pleaſure of Divine Providence. Domeſd.

Deis, The high table of a monaſtery. See Dagus.

Delatura, A Saxon word, ſignifying an accuſation: and ſometimes it hath been taken for the reward of an informer. Leges H. 1. c. 46. Leges Inæ 20, apud Brompton.

Delegates, Are commiſſioners of appeal appointed by the King under the Great Seal; in caſes of appeals from the eccleſiaſtical court, etc. by Stat. 25 Hen. 8. c. 19. See Court of Delegates.

Delf. (from the Sax. delfan, to dig, or delve) Is a quarry or mine, where ſtone or coal, etc. are dug. Stat. 31 Eliz. cap. 7. We ſtill retain the word delve for dig, in ſome parts of this kingdom.

Deliverance. When a criminal is brought to trial, and the clerk in court aſks him whether he is Guilty, or Not guilty, to which he replies Not guilty, and puts himſelf on God and his country, the clerk wiſhes him a good deliverance.

Delivery of Deeds, On executing them, to give them perfection, etc. See Deed.

Demand. (Fr. demande, Lat. poſtulatum) Signifies a calling upon a man for any thing due. And there are two manner of demands, the one in deed, the other in law: in deed, as in a precipe quod reddat, there is an expreſs demand: in law, every entry on land, diſtreſs for rent, taking of goods, etc. which may be done without words, is a demand in law. 8 Rep. 153.

Mr. Nelſon, in his Abridgement of the Law, vol. 1. pag. 630. ſays, there are three ſorts of demands; one in writing, without ſpeaking, and that is in every præcipe; one without writing, being a verbal demand of the perſon, who is to do or perform the thing; and another made without either word or writing, which is a demand in law, in caſes of entries on lands, etc. And an entry on land, and taking a diſtreſs, are a demand in law of rhe land and rent; ſo the bringing an action of debt for money due on an obligation is a demand in law of the debt. 1 Lill. 432. Debts, claims, etc. are to be demanded and made in time, by the ſtatute of limitations, 21 Jac, 1. c. 16. and other ſtatutes; or they will be loſt by law.

Where there is a duty, which the law makes payable on demand, no demand need be made; but if there is no duty till demand, in ſuch caſe there muſt be a demand, to make the duty. Trin. 3 Ann. 1 Lil. 432. Cro. Eliz. 548. And upon a penalty the party need not make a demand, as he muſt in the caſe of a nomine pænæ; for if a man be bound to pay 20*l.* on ſuch a day, and in default thereof to pay 40*l.* the 40*l.* muſt be paid without demand. 1 Mod. 89. If a man leaſes land by indenture for years, reſerving a rent payable at certain days, and the leſſee covenants to pay the ſaid rent at the days limited; the leſſor is intitled to his rent, without demand, for the leſſee is obliged to pay it at the days, by force of his covenant. 2 Danv. Abr. 101.

But if a leſſor makes a leaſe rendering rent, and the leſſee covenant to pay the rent, being lawfully demanded, the leſſee is not bound to pay the rent, without a demand. Ibid. 102.

A perſon makes a leaſe for life, or years, reſerving a rent upon condition, that if the leſſee doth not pay the rent at the day, that then without any demand it ſhall be lawful for the leſſor to re-enter; by this ſpecial agreement of the parties, the leſſor may enter on non-payment of the rent, without any demand. Ibid. 100. A leaſe for years, with condition to be void, on non-payment of the rent, is not void unleſs the rent be demanded, and an intereſt ſhall not be determined, without an actual demand. Hob. 67, 331. 2 Mod. 264. But now by the ſtatutes relative to rents, an ejectment may be maintained without an actual entry. See 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 2. & 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſect. 16.

A demand is to be legal, and made in ſuch manner as the law requires: if it be for rent of a meſſuage and lands, it ought to be made at the meſſuage, at the fore door of the houſe, the moſt notorious place: where lands and woods are let together, the rent is to be demanded on the land, as the moſt worthy thing, and on the moſt public part thereof: if wood only be leaſed, the demand muſt be made at the gate of the wood, &c. 1 Inſt. 201. Poph. 58. Vide Dyer 51. 1 Leon. 425. Cro. Eliz. 209.

He that would enter for a condition broken, which tends to the deſtruction of an eſtate, muſt, 1. Demand the rent. 2. Upon the land, if there is no houſe. 3. If there is a houſe. at the fore door; though it is not material whether any perſon be in the houſe or no. 4. If the appointment is at any other place off the land, the demand muſt be at that place. 5. The time of the demand is to be certain, that the tenant may be there, if he will, to pay the rent: and the laſt time of demand of the rent, muſt be ſuch a convenient time before the ſunſetting of the laſt day of payment, as the money may be numbered.

Alſo the leſſor or his ſufficient attorney is to remain upon the land, the laſt day on which the rent due ought to be paid, until it be ſo dark that he cannot ſee to tell the money: and if the money thus demanded is not paid, this is a denial in law, though there are no words of denial; upon which a re-entry may be made, &c. 1 Inſt. 201, 202. 4 Rep. 73. A demand ought to be in the preſence of witneſſes: and demands are releaſed by a releaſe of all demands; which diſcharges all freeholds, rights of entry, actions, &c. But ſee 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 2. before referred to. N. B. Leaſes are now generally ſo made, as to render any demand unneceſſary, i. e. with a proviſo that if the rent ſhall be in arrear for ſuch a certain ſpace of time, it ſhall be lawful for the leſſor to re-enter, &c.

As a releaſe of ſuits is more large than of quarrels or actions; ſo a releaſe of demands is more large and beneficial than either of them. By a releaſe of all demands all executions, and all freeholds, and inheritances, executory, are releaſed: by a releaſe of demands to the diſſeiſor, the right of entry in the land, and all that is contained therein, is releaſed. And he that releaſeth all demands, excludes himſelf from all actions, entries, and ſeizures; but a releaſe of all demands, is no bar in a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry. Coke, lib. 8. fol. 153, 154.

Demandant, (petens) All civil actions are proſecuted either by demands or plaints, and the purſuer is called demandant, in actions real; and plaintiff, in perſonal actions: in a real action, lands, &c. are demanded. Co. Lit. 127.

Demeine, Demain, Demeſne, (dominicum, domanium) Is a French word otherwiſe written domaine, and ſignifieth patrimonium domini. Demains, according to common ſpeech, are the lord's chief manor-place, with the lands thereto belonging; which he and his anceſtors have from time to time kept in their own manual occupation, for the maintenance of themſelves and their families: and all the parts of a manor, except what is in the hands of freeholders, are ſaid to be demains. Copyhold lands have been accounted demains, becauſe they that are the tenants hereof are judged in law to have no other eſtate but at the will of the lord; ſo that it is ſtill reputed to be in a manner in the lord's hands: but this word is oftentimes uſed for a diſtinction between thoſe lands that the lord of the manor hath in his own hands, or in the hands of his leſſee demiſed at a rack rent, and ſuch other land appertaining to the manor, which belongeth to free or copyholders. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 3. c. 9. Fleta, lib. 5. cap. 5. As demains are lands in the lord's hands manually occupied, ſome have thought this word derived from de manu; but it is from the Fr. demaine, which is uſed for an inheritance, and that comes from dominium, becauſe a man has a more abſolute dominion over that which he keeps in his hands, than of that which he lets to his tenants. Blount.

Domanium properly ſignifies the King's lands in France, appertaining to him in property: and in like manner do we in ſome ſort uſe it here in England; for all lands, it is ſaid, are either mediately or immediately from the crown; and when a man in pleading would ſignify his land to be his own, he ſaith, that he is ſeiſed thereof in his demain, (or rather demeſne) as of fee; whereby is meant, that although his land be to him and his heirs, it depends upon a ſuperior lord, and his held by rent or ſervice, &c. Lit. lib. 1. cap. 1. From this it hath been obſerved, that lands in the hands of a common perſon cannot be true demeans: and certain it is, that lands in the poſſeſſion of a ſubject, are called demains in a different ſenſe from the demain lands of the crown. For demains, or domains, in the hands of a ſubject, have their derivation a domo, becauſe they are lands in his poſſeſſion for the maintaining of his houſe: but the domains of the crown are held of the King, who is abſolute lord, having proper dominion; and not by any feudal tenure of a ſuperior lord, as of fee. Woods Inſt. 139.

Demain is ſometimes taken in a ſpecial ſignification, as oppoſite to frank-fee: for example, Thoſe lands which were in the poſſeſſion of King Edward the Confeſſor are called ancient demains, and all others frank-fee; and the tenants which hold any of thoſe lands are called tenants in ancient demain, and the others tenants in frank-fee, &c. Kitch. 98. See Ancient Demeſne. See further Black. Com. 2 V. 90, 286.

Demiſe, (dimiſſio) Is applied to an eſtate either in fee, for term of life, or years, but commonly the latter: it is uſed in writs for any eſtate. 2 Inſt. 483. The word demiſi, in a leaſe for years, implies a warranty to the leſſee and his aſſignee; and upon this word action of covenant lies againſt the heir of the leſſor, if he ouſt the leſſee: it binds the executors of the leſſor, who has fee-ſimple, or fee-tail; where any leſſee is evicted, and the executor hath aſſets; but not the leſſor for life's executors, without expreſs words, that the leſſee ſhall hold his whole term. Dyer 257. Jenk. Cent. 35.

The King's death is in law termed the demiſe of the King, to his royal ſucceſſor, of his crown and dignity, &c.

Demiſe and Redemiſe, The conveyance by demiſe and redemiſe is where there are mutual leaſes made from one to another on each ſide, of the ſame land, or ſomething out of it; and is proper upon the grant of a rent-charge, &c.

Demurrer, (in Latin demorare, from the Fr. demeurer) Is a kind of pauſe or ſtop, put to any action upon point of difficulty, which muſt be determined by the court, before any farther proceedings can be had therein: for in every action the controverſy conſiſts either in fact or in law; if in fact, that is tried by the jury; but if in law, the judge, with his aſſociates, proceed to judgment; and, whatever they conclude ſtands firm without any appeal. Smith de Repub. Angl. lib. 2. c. 13. But error lies.

This demurrer is in our records expreſſed in Latin by moratur in lege: and when any action is brought, and the defendant ſaith that the plaintiff's declaration is not ſufficient for him to anſwer unto: or when the defendant pleads, and the plaintiff ſays, that it is not a ſufficient plea in law, and the defendant ſays, that it is a good plea; and thereupon both parties ſubmit to the judgment of the court, this is a moratur in lege. 1 Lil. Abr. 435.

So that a demurrer is an iſſue joined upon matter of law, to be determined by the judges; and is an abiding in point of law, and a referring to the judgment of the court, whether the declaration or plea of the adverſe party is ſufficient in law to be maintained. Finch, lib. 4. cap. 40. 1 Inſt. 71.

A demurrer may be to the writ, (i. e. the original, where the proceedings are by original) to the count, or declaration, or to any part of the pleadings.

A demurrer is admitting the matter of fact, ſince it refers the law ariſing on the fact, to the judgment of the court; and therefore the fact is taken to be true on ſuch demurrer, or otherwiſe the court has no foundation on which to make any judgment. Gilb Hiſt. of C. P. 55. But a ſpecial demurrer admits only facts well pleaded.

As a demurrer at Common law did confeſs all matters formally pleaded; ſo now by the ſtatute a general demurrer does confeſs all matters pleaded though informally, according to the forms meant by the Stat. 27 Eliz. 5. for ſuch forms are now not material, not being expreſſed in demurrer. Hob. 233. at the end of pl. 295. Mich. 12 Jac. in the caſe of Hoard v. Backerville.

Demurrers are general, without ſhewing any particular cauſes; or ſpecial, where the cauſes of demurrer are particularly ſet down: and the judgment of the court is not to be prayed upon an inſufficient declaration or plea, otherwiſe than by a demurrer; when the matter comes judicially before the court. If in pleadings, &c. a matter is inſufficiently alledged, that the court cannot give certain judgment upon it, a general demurrer will ſuffice; and for want of ſubſtance, a general demurrer is good: but for want of form, there muſt be a ſpecial demurrer, and the cauſes ſpecially aſſigned. The practice is now, on a ſpecial demurrer, to take advantage of any real error, though not expreſſed, in the cauſes aſſigned. Demurrers likewiſe, are either actions at law, or in ſuits in equity.

It is allowed a good cauſe of demurrer in Chancery, that a bill is brought for part of a matter only, which is proper for one intire account, becauſe the plaintiff ſhall not ſplit cauſes, and make a multiplicity of ſuits. Vern. 29. pl. 24. Hill. 1681. in caſe of Purefoy v. Purefoy.

If an original bill be brought for matters part of which are in a former bill and decree, and part new, or by way of ſupplemental bill; the court will, on a demurrer to ſo much as was contained in the former decree, ſend it to a maſter to ſee what was, and what was not in the firſt bill, and allow the demurrer accordingly. G. Eq. R. 184. Hil. 12. Geo. 1. in Canc'.

By ſtatute, judges are to proceed to give judgment in actions, according to the right of the cauſe, after demurrer joined, without regard to defects of proceedings, except ſuch as are expreſſed with the demurrer; but this not to extend to indictments, &c. in criminal proſecutions, &c. Stat. 27 Eliz. cap. 5. See ante as to the modern practice and uſage. By 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. The cauſes of demurrer are to be ſpecially ſet down, or the judges ſhall give judgment without regarding any imperfections in writs, declarations, pleadings, &c. if ſufficient matter appear, upon which to give judgment. 1 Salk. 220. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 634. And ſee Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Amendment.

After the plaintiff and defendant have joined iſſue which goes to the whole, neither of them can demur, without conſent of the other. But there may be a demurrer to evidence. Though now it is uſual to take exceptions to evidence at the bar at Niſi prius, ore tenus, which is tantamount to a demurrer. If doubts ariſe, caſes are made, or points reſerved, and a verdict taken, ſubject to the opinion of the court. See tit. Demurrer to Evidence.

If a defendant pleads to part, and demurs to part; the demurrer ſhould firſt be determined, and the iſſue laſt; becauſe upon the trial of the iſſue, the jury may aſſeſs damages as to both. Palm. 517. Where there is a demurrer in part, and iſſue is joined upon the other part, and the plaintiff hath judgment on the demurrer; here he may enter a Non proſ. as to to the iſſue, and proceed to a writ of enquiry upon the demurrer: But otherwiſe he cannot have ſuch writ of inquiry. 1 Salk. 219.

A demurrer is to be ſigned, and argued on both ſides by counſel. After a demurrer is joined, the plaintiff having entered it on the roll, delivers the roll to the ſecondary, and makes a motion for a Conſilium or day to argue it, which the court grants of courſe, on the ſecondary's reading the record; then the demurrer muſt be entered by the plaintiff in the court-book with the ſecondary, who, on his rule ſets down the day appointed for argument, at leaſt four days before the demurrer is argued: And paper-books are made and delivered to the judges.

The demurrant argues firſt, and the court will hear but two counſel on a day, viz. one of a ſide, and if deſired on either ſide, (unleſs the caſe be very plain), the court will hear further arguments the next term. if the major part of the judges of the court cannot determine the matter on the demurrer, it is to be ſent into the Exchequer-chamber to be determined by all the judges of England. 1 Inſt. 71. Demurrers are now frequently put in for delay. In ſuch caſes, the party wiſhing to avoid the delay, makes up four demurrer books, and delivers to the judges, two days before the day when judgment is moved for, and given of courſe without argûment.

When the court gives judgment on demurrer in debt for the plaintiff in the action, the judgment is for the plaintiff to recover his debt, coſts and damages; but if it be in action of the caſe, a writ of inquiry of damages muſt be awarded, before the plaintiff can have final judgment. If judgment on the demurrer is for the defendant in the action, the judgment is, that the plaintiff Nihil capiat per breve, or per billam, and that the defendant eat ſine die. Wood's Inſt. 603.

General demurrer being entered, it cannot be afterwards waived, without leave of the court, but a ſpecial demurrer generally may, unleſs the plaintiff hath loſt a term, or the aſſizes by the defendant's demurring. In C. P. if defendant demurs to the plaintiff's replication, merely for delay, the plaintiff may ſign judgment by default. But that practice does not yet prevail in B. R. But if defendant is under terms to rejoin gratis, &c. and judgment is ſigned, unleſs there are merits, and an affidavit of the ſame, the court will not ſet the judgment aſide. Where time is wanting, which will ſometimes, perhaps, ſave a man and his family from ruin, the moſt eligible ſtep an attorney can take, is to conſult a pleader, and have a proper plea drawn, and not to accept time, by judges order, on terms.

The general formal words of a demurrer are, Quod breve vel nar. vel placitum, &c. Materiaque in eodem content. minus ſufficiens in lege exiſt', &c. 1 Lil. 435.

Demurrer to Evidence, Is where a queſtion of law doth ariſe thereupon: As if the plaintiff produces in evidence, any records, deeds, writings, &c. upon which a queſtion of law ariſes, and the defendant offers to demur upon it; and then the plaintiff muſt join in demurrer, or waive his evidence. So if the plaintiff brings witneſſes to prove a fact, and a matter of law ariſeth upon it; if the defendant admits their teſtimony to be true, there alſo the defendant may demur in law: And ſo may the plaintiff demur upon the defendant's evidence. And in theſe caſes, the counſel for the plaintiff and defendant agree the matter of fact in diſpute; and the jury are diſcharged; and the matter of law is referred to the judges to determine. But where evidence is given for the King, in an information or other ſuit, and the defendant offers to demur upon it, the King's counſel are not obliged to join therein; but the court ought to direct the jury to find the ſpecial matter. And, in deed, becauſe juries of late uſually find a doubtful matter ſpecially, demurrers upon evidence are now ſeldom uſed. 5 Rep. 104. 1 Inſt. 72. 2 Inſt. 426. If the court doth not agree to a demurrer, to the inſufficiency of evidence in a civil cauſe; they ought to ſeal a bill of exceptions, &c. 9 Rep. 13. See ante on this ſubject.

Demurrer to Indictments. If a criminal joins iſſue upon a point of law in an indictment or appeal, allowing the fact to be true, as laid therein, this is a demurrer in law: And if the indictment or appeal proves good in law, in the opinion of the judges, they proceed to judgment and execution, as if the party had been convicted by confeſſion or verdict. And though by the criminal's demurrer, he refuſeth to put himſelf upon trial by jury, yet he ſhall not, as in other caſes, be put under the pain fort & dure; for a demurrer is allowed to be tried by the judges, and not by the inqueſt. And he that is condemned on demurrer is ſaid to be convict; for whoever is adjudged, is convicted by law. 2 Inſt. 178. H. P. C. 243. S. P. C. 150. 1 Hawk. P. C. 14. But ſee 2 Hawkins 334.

Demy Sangue, Is the half blood: Where a man marries a woman, and hath iſſue by her ſon, and the wife dying he marries another woman, by whom he hath alſo a ſon; now theſe two ſons, though they are called brothers, are but brothers of the half blood, becauſe they had not both one father and mother: And therefore by law they cannot be heirs to one another; for he that claims as heir to another by deſcent, muſt be of the whole blood to him from whom he claimeth. Terms de Ley.

The half blood are intitled under the ſtatutes of diſtribution to any equal ſhare of the perſonal eſtate with the whole blood.

Denbera, (From the Sax. Den, a vale, and berg, a barrow or hog) A place for the running and feeding of hogs, wherein they are penned; by ſome called a Swinecomb. Cowel.

Denizen, (Fr. Donaiſon) Is an alien enfranchiſed, and made a ſubject by the King's letters patent; and is called donaiſon, becauſe his legitimation proceeds ex donatione Regis, from the King's gift. Such a one is enabled in many reſpects, to do as the King's native ſubjects do, to purchaſe and poſſeſs lands, enjoy any office or dignity; and when he is thus enfranchiſed, he is ſaid to be under the King's protection, or eſſe ad fidem Regis Angliæ; before which time he can poſſeſs nothing in England. But, notwithſtanding this, it is ſhort of naturalization; for a ſtranger naturalized may inherit lands by deſcent, which a denizen cannot: and in the charter, whereby a perſon is made a denizen, there is commonly contained ſome clauſe that expreſly abridges him of that full benefit which natural ſubjects enjoy. Bract. lib. 5. tract. 5. cap. 25. 2 Inſt. 741.

When the King makes a denizen by letters patent, he may purchaſe lands, and his iſſue born afterwards may inherit them; but thoſe he had before ſhall not: and, though a denizen is enabled to purchaſe, he cannot inherit the lands of his anceſtors but as a purchaſer he may enjoy them; and he may take lands by deviſe. 1 Inſt. 8. 5 Rep. 52. 11 Rep. 67. Aliens made denizens are incapable of offices in the government, to be members of parliament, &c. by Stat. 12 W. 3. cap. 2. 1 Geo. 1. c. 4. It is ſo high a prerogative to make aliens ſubjects and denizens, that the King cannot grant this power over to any other, Wood's Inſt. 22. See *Co. Denſhiring of Land, Is the caſting parings of earth, turf, and ſtubble into heaps, which when dried are burnt into aſhes, for a compoſt on poor barren land. This method of improvement is uſed on taking in and incloſing common and waſte ground; and in many parts of England is called burn-beating, but in Staffordſhire and other counties, they term it denſhiring of land.

De non Decimando, To be diſcharged of tithes. See Modus Decimandi

De non Reſidentia Clerici Regis, Is an ancient writ where a parſon is employed in the King's ſervice, &c. to excuſe and diſcharge him of non-reſidence. 2 Inſt. 624.

Dentrix, A fiſh with many teeth. Chart. Hen. 6. Monaſt. Ramſey.

Deodand, (Deo dandum) Is a thing given as it were to God, to appeaſe his wrath, where a perſon comes to a violent death by miſchance, not by any reaſonable creature; and is forfeited to the King, or grantee of the crown; and if to the King, his almoner diſpoſes of it by ſale, and the money ariſing thereby, he diſtributes to the poor: Alſo if forfeited to the lord of a liberty, it ought to be thus diſtributed. 3 Inſt. 57. 5 Rep. 110. 1 Nelſ. 636. The original of deodands is ſaid to come from the notion of purgatory; for when a perſon came to a ſudden and untimely death, without having time to be ſhrieved by a prieſt, and to have the extream unction adminiſtred to him, the thing which had been the occaſion of his death, became deodand; that is, was given to the church, to be diſtributed in charity, and to pray for the ſoul of ſuch deceaſed perſon out of purgatory. 1 Lil. 443.

There are ſeveral examples of forfeitures in caſes of deodands; as if a man in driving a cart, falls ſo as the cart-wheel runs over him, and preſſeth him to death; the cart-wheel, cart, and horſes are forfeited to the lord of the liberty: for omnia quæ movent ad mortem ſunt deodanda. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap 5. But it hath been obſerved, that at this day, if a man be killed by the wheel of a cart drawn with horſes, the jury find that, only, deodand which was the immediate cauſe of his death, viz. the wheel; which is then ſeized by the lord of the manor, and converted to his own uſe. 1 Nelſ. 639. For in the preſent enlightened age, juries are not much pleaſed with this obſolete law.

If a man riding over a river, is thrown off his horſe by the violence of the water, and drowned, his horſe is not deodand; for this death was cauſed per curſum aquæ. 2 Co. 483. Where one under fourteen years of age, falls from a cart, horſe, &c. they are not deodand; but if a horſe ſtrikes and kills ſuch a perſon, it is deodand. 3 Inſt. 57. And if a perſon wounded by any accident, as of a cart, horſe, &c. die within a year and a day after, what did it, is deodand: So that if a horſe ſtrikes a man and afterwards the owner ſells the horſe, and then the party that was ſtriken dies of the ſtroke, the horſe, notwithſtanding the ſale, ſhall be forfeited as deodand. Plowd. 260. 5 Rep. 110

If one falls out of a veſſel in ſalt water, the veſſel is not deodand, as accidents at ſea are frequently happening; but if one falls out of a veſſel in freſh water, it is ſaid to be otherwiſe. Wood's Inſt. 212. Things fixed to the freehold; as a bell hanging in a ſteeple, a wheel of a mill, &c. unleſs ſevered from the freehold, cannot be deodands. 2 Inſt. 281. And there is no forfeiture of a deodand, till the matter is found of record, by the jury that finds the death; who ought alſo to find and appraiſe the deodand. 5 Rep. 110. 1 Inſt. 144. After the coroner's inquiſition, the ſheriff is anſwerable for the value, where the deodand belongs to the King; and he may levy the ſame on the town, &c. Wherefore the inqueſt ought to find the value of it. 1 Hawk. 67.

De operando pro rata Portionis, Is a writ that lies where a perſon is diſtrained for rent, that ought to be paid by others proportionably with him. F. N. B. 234. If a man hold twenty acres of land, by fealty and twenty ſhillings rent; and he aliens one acre to one perſon, and another acre to another, &c. the lord ſhall not diſtrain one alienee for the whole rent, but for the rate and value of the land he hath purchaſed, &c. And if he be diſtrained for more, he ſhall have this writ. New Nat. Br. 586.

Departure, Is a word in our law properly applied to a defendant, who firſt pleading one thing in bar of an action, and being replied unto, in his rejoinder, he quits that and ſhews another matter, contrary to, or not purſuing his firſt plea, which is called a departure from his plea: Alſo where a plaintiff in his declaration ſets forth one thing, and after the defendant hath pleaded, the plaintiff in his replication ſhews new matter different from his declaration, this is a departure; as in Coke's Inſtitutes, The defendant demurred, becauſe it was a departure from the declaration. Plowd 7, 8. 2 Inſt. 147. But if a plaintiff in his replication depart from his count, and the defendant takes iſſue upon it; if it be found for the plaintiff, the defendant ſhall take no advantage of that departure: Though it would have been otherwiſe, if he had demurred upon it. Raym. 86. 1 Lil. Abr. 444.

If a man plead a general agreement in bar, and in his rejoinder alledge a ſpecial one, this is a departure in pleading: And if an action is brought at Common law, and the plaintiff by his replication would maintain it by virtue of a cuſtom, &c. it hath been held a departure. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 638. Where a matter is omitted at firſt, it is a departure to plead it afterwards. Ibid. If in covenant, the defendant pleads performance; and after rejoins that the plaintiff ouſted him, it is a departure from his plea. Raym. 22. In debt upon bond for performance of covenants in a leaſe, the defendant pleaded performance; and afterwards in his rejoinder ſet forth that ſo much was paid in money, and ſo much in taxes, &c. upon demurrer it was adjudged a departure from the plea; becauſe he had pleaded performance, and afterwards ſet forth other matter of excuſe, &c. 1 Salk. 221.

Debt upon bond for performance of an award, made for payment of money; if the defendant plead performance, and the plaintiff having replied and aſſigned a breach of non-payment, &c. the defendant rejoins that he is ready to pay the money at the day, &c. this is a departure from his plea; for performance is payment of the money, and payment, and ready to pay, are different iſſues. Sid. 10. 4 Leon. 79. In debt upon bond for non-performance of an award; the defendant pleads that the award was, that he ſhould releaſe all ſuits to the plaintiff, which he had done; the plaintiff replies that ſuch an award was made, but that the award was further, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff ſuch a ſum, &c. the defendant rejoins that true it is, that by the award he was to pay the plaintiff the ſaid ſum, but that the award was alſo, that the plaintiff ſhould releaſe to the defendant all actions, &c. which he had not done; on demurrer this was held a departure from the plea, being all new matter. 2 Bulſt. 39. Godb. 155. 1 Nelſ. 637.

After nullum fecerunt arbitrium, the defendant cannot plead that the award is void, without being a departure from the former plea: And if where nul tiel award is pleaded; then the award is ſet forth, and a joinder that it was not tendered, it is a departure. 1 Lev. 133. Lut. 385. A departure muſt be always from ſomething that is material; or it will not be allowed: if in treſpaſs for taking goods, the plaintiff reply, that after the taking, the defendant converted them to his own uſe, this being an abuſe makes a treſpaſs; and the converſion is either trover or treſpaſs at the plaintiff's election, ſo that by his replication he may make it treſpaſs, and be no departure. 1 Salk. 221, 222. In circumſtances of time, &c. laid as to promiſes, the plaintiff is not tied to a preciſe day; for if the defendant by his plea, force the plaintiff to vary, it is no departure from his declaration. 1 Nelſ. 640, 641. And if another place be mentioned in the replication, in action of debt; as this is a perſonal thing, it is no departure, becauſe he who is indebted to another in one place, is ſo in every place. Sid. 228.

If new matter which explains or fortifies the bar be rejoined by the defendant, it is not a departure. Wilſ. Rep. Par. 2. fo. 8 Long v. Jackſon. See farther as to departure, Id. Par. 2. fo. 97, 98, &c. Palmer v. Stone and another. And Co. Lit. 304. a. A departure being a denial of what is before admitted, is a ſaying and unſaying, and for that an iſſue cannot be joined upon it, it is bad for the incertainty. 1 Lil. 444. Depopulatio Agrorum, Deſtroying and ravaging a country, an offence where the benefit of clergy was denied at Common law. 2 Hal. pl. 333. Black Com. 4 V. 366.

Depopulation, (Depopulatio) Is a waſting or deſtruction; a deſolation or unpeopling of any place, by fire, ſword, peſtilence, &c. 12 Rep. 30.

Depopulatores Agrorum, Theſe were great offenders, by the ancient Common law; ſo called, becauſe by proſtrating and ruining of houſes of habitation of the King's people, they, as it were, depopulated towns and villages, leaving them without inhabitants. Stat. 4 Hen. 4. cap. 2. 3 Inſt. 204.

Depoſition, (Depoſitio) Is the teſtimony of a witneſs, otherwiſe called a deponent, put down in writing by way of anſwer to interrogatories exhibited for that purpoſe, in Chancery, &c. Proof in the High Court of Chancery is by depoſitions of witneſſes; and the copies of ſuch regularly taken and publiſhed, are read as evidence at the hearing: And depoſitions taken in one cauſe, may be uſed at the hearing of another cauſe, when they are between the ſame parties, &c. without motion; but in a cauſe between other parties, though touching the ſame matters, this will not be allowed, without ſpecial order of court; neither will depoſitions in other courts be permitted to be read, without ſuch order. Practiſ. Attorn. Edit. 1. p. 233. 234.

After a witneſs is fully examined, the examinations are read over to him, and the witneſs is at liberty to alter, or amend any thing; after which he ſigns them, and then, and not before, the examinations are complete, and good evidence. Wms. Rep. 415. Paſch. 1718. by the reporter. The ſame practice prevails in the Commons, in Eccleſiaſtical cauſes.

Where a witneſs was examined in a cauſe in Chancery, and, before ſigning his examination died, the Maſter of the Rolls upon adviſing with a Maſter in Chancery then in court, denied the making uſe of the depoſitions, as being not perfect. Wms. Rep. 414. Paſch. 1718. Copland v. Stanton.

But where, after an order for publication, defendant examined a witneſs, and then perceiving the irregularity (it being after publication) the defendant on the uſual affidavit by himſelf, his clerk in court, and ſolicitor, that they had not, nor would ſee any of the depoſitions, got an order to re-examine this witneſs; but before re-examination the witneſs died; upon affidavit of this, Ld. Ch. Parker ordered that the defendant might make uſe of the depoſitions, the re-examination of him being prevented by the act of God. Wms. Rep. 415. cites Mich. 1720. Debrox v. ———.

Depoſitions in the Chancery after a cauſe is determined; may be given in evidence in a trial at bar in B. R. in a ſuit for the ſame matter, between the ſame parties, if the party that depoſed be dead; but not otherwiſe, for if he be living, he muſt appear in perſon in court to be examined, &c. 1 Lil. Abr. 445. And where witneſſes in a cauſe are going to ſea, or long journies, the court of B. R. will give leave to examine them on interrogatories, at a judge's chamber, in the preſence of the attornies on both ſides; which depoſitions in ſuch caſe ſhall be admitted to be good evidence. Ibid. And we apprehend the court of Common Pleas will do the ſame.

Depoſitions of informers, &c. taken upon oath before a coroner, upon an inquiſition of death; or before juſtices of peace on a commitment or bailment of felony, may be given in evidence at a trial for the ſame felony, if it be proved on oath that the informer is dead, or unable to travel, or kept away by the procurement of the priſoner; and oath muſt be made that the depoſitions are the ſame that were ſworn before the coroner or juſtice, without any alteration. 2 Hawk. P. C. 429.

In the caſe of Sir John Fenwick, againſt whom a bill of attainder was paſſed, in the 8th of William the Third, the Commons reſolved that what one Goodman (a witneſs who was gone away, and as ſuppoſed by Sir John's procurement) had ſworn on a former trial, ſhould be read againſt him.——Tho' it was ſtrenuouſly oppoſed in the houſe, by 110 againſt 181. See Chandler's Debates, 3 V. 45 & ante & poſt. In the Houſe of Lords there was a proteſt againſt this proceeding (the bill paſſing in the Lords Houſe, 68 againſt 61.) Debates in the houſe of Lords, 1 V. 463,4.

Depoſitions taken before a coroner, cannot be given in evidence upon an appeal for the ſame death; becauſe it is a different proſecution from that wherein they were taken: And it has been adjudged, That the evidence given by a witneſs at one trial, could not in the ordinary courſe of juſtice be made uſe of againſt a criminal, on the death of ſuch witneſs, at another trial. 2 H. P. C. 430.

It was adjudged in the Earl of Strafford's trial, that where witneſſes could not be produced, by reaſon of ſickneſs, &c. their depoſitions might be read, for or againſt the priſoner on a trial of High Treaſon; but not where they could be produced in perſon: And that depoſitions by a witneſs before a juſtice of peace, might, at the priſoner's deſire, be read at the trial; in order to take off the credit of the witneſſes, by ſhewing a variance between ſuch depoſitions and the evidence given in court. Ibid.

But let us caution the ſtudent how he takes for law, ſome peculiar determinations, as to evidence in the caſes of Lord Strafford, and Sir John Fenwick.

Depoſition is uſed in the law in another ſenſe, viz. To ſignify the depriving of a perſon of ſome dignity: And depoſition is alſo taken for death; and dies depoſitionis, the day of one's death. Littleton's Dict.

Deprivation, (Deprivatio) Is a depriving or taking away; as when a biſhop, parſon, vicar, &c. is depoſed from his preferment. Of deprivations there are two ſorts, deprivatio a beneficio, and ab officio; the deprivation a beneficio is when for ſome great crime, &c. a miniſter is wholly deprived of his living: And deprivation ab officio is where a miniſter is for ever deprived of his orders, which is alſo called depoſition or degradation; and is commonly for ſome heinous offence meriting death, and performed by the biſhop in a ſolemn manner. Blount.

Deprivatio a beneficio is an act of the ſpiritual court, grounded upon ſome crime or defect in the perſon deprived, by which he is diſcharged from his ſpiritual promotion or benefice, upon ſufficient cauſe proved againſt him. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 641.

Deprivation may alſo be by a particular clauſe in ſome act of parliament: the deprivation of biſhops, &c. is declared lawful by ſtatute 39 Eliz. c. 8. And by the King's commiſſion, as he hath the ſupremacy lodged in him, a biſhop may be deprived: for ſince a biſhop is veſted with that dignity by commiſſion from the King, it is reaſonable he ſhould be deprived, where there is juſt cauſe, by the ſame authority: but the canons direct, that a biſhop ſhall be deprived in a ſynod of the province; or, if that cannot be aſſembled, by the archbiſhop; and twelve biſhops at leaſt, not as his aſſiſtants, but as judges. Young Clergyman's Lawyer 105.

It has been adjudged, that an archbiſhop may deprive a biſhop for ſimony, &c. for he hath power over his ſuffragans, who may be puniſhed in the archbiſhop's court for any offence againſt their duty. 1 Salk. Rep. 134. The cauſes of deprivation are many: if a clerk obtain a preferment in the church, by ſimoniacal contract; if he be an excommunicate, a drunkard, fornicator, adulterer, infidel, ſchiſmatick or heretick; or guilty of murder, manſlaughter, perjury, forgery, &c. If a clerk be illiterate and not able to perform the duty of his church; if he is a ſcandalous perſon in his life and converſation; or baſtardy is objected againſt him: if one be a mere layman, and not in holy orders; or under age, viz. the age of twenty-three years, be diſobedient and incorrigible to his ordinary; or a nonconformiſt to the canons; if a parſon refuſe to uſe the common prayer, or preach in derogation of it; do not adminiſter the ſacraments, or read the articles of religion, &c.

If any parſon, vicar, &c. have one benefice with cure of ſouls, and take plurality, without a faculty or diſpenſation: or if he commit waſte in the houſes and lands of the church, called dilapidations; all theſe have been held good cauſes for deprivation of prieſts. Degg's Parſon's Counſellor, 98, 99, &c. 3 Inſt. 204. And refuſing to uſe the common prayers of the church, plurality of livings, &c. are cauſes of deprivation ipſo facto, in which caſe the church ſhall be void, without any ſentence declaratory; and avoidances by act of parliament need no declaratory ſentence: But in other caſes there muſt be a declaratory ſentence. Dyer 275.

Where a benefice is only voidable, but not void before ſentence of deprivation, the party muſt be cited to appear; there is to be a libel againſt him, and a time aſſigned to anſwer it, and alſo liberty for advocates to plead, and after all a ſolemn ſentence pronounced; Though none of theſe formalties are required, where the living is made ipſo facto void. Can. 122. If a deprivation be for a thing merely of eccleſiaſtical cognizance, no appeal lies; but the party has his remedy by a commiſſion of review, which is granted by the King of mere grace. 26 H. 8. Moor 781.

Deputy, (Deputatus) Is he that exerciſes an office, &c. in another man's right; whoſe forfeiture or miſdemeanor, ſhall cauſe him, whoſe deputy he is, to loſe his office. The Common law takes notice of deputies in many caſes, but it never takes notice of under-deputies; for a deputy is generally but a perſon authoriſed, who cannot authoriſe another. 1 Lill. Abr. 446. A man cannot make his deputy in all caſes; except the grant of the office juſtify him in it, and where it is to one, to execute by deputy, &c.

And there is great difference between a deputy and aſſignee of an office; for an aſſignee hath an intereſt in the office itſelf, and doth all things in his own name; for whom his grantor ſhall not anſwer, unleſs in ſpecial caſes. But a deputy hath not any intereſt in the office, but is only the ſhadow of the officer, in whoſe name he doth all things. And where an officer hath power to make aſſigns, he may implicitly make deputies, for cui licet quod majus eſt, non debet quod minus eſt non licere. And a ſheriff may make a deputy, or under-ſheriff, although he have not ſuch expreſs words in his patent. Cowel.

A deputy cannot make a deputy; becauſe it implies an aſſignment of his whole power, which he cannot aſſign over; but he may impower another to do a particular act. 1 Salk. 96. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. B. R. per Holt Ch. J. in delivering the opinion of the court in the caſe of Parker v. Kett. Lit. 379.

Judges cannot act by deputy, but are to hold their courts in perſon; for they may not transfer their power over to others. 2 Hawk. P. C. 3. But it has been adjudged, that recorders may hold their courts by deputy. 1 Lev. 76. 1 Nelſ. 643. The office of Cuſtos Brevium and Chirographer in C. B. cannot be executed by deputy. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 644. A ſteward of a court may make a deputy; and acts of an under-ſteward's deputy have been held good in ſome caſes. Cro. Eliz. 534.

A ſheriff may make a deputy; it is incident to his office, though no expreſs power is given by his patent; and he hath equal power with the High Sheriff. 9 Rep. 49. A coroner ought not to execute his office by deputy, it being a judicial office of truſt; and judicial offices are annexed to the perſon. 1 Lil. 446. If the office of parkerſhip be granted to one, he may grant this to another; becauſe it is an office of truſt and confidence. Terms de Ley.

A bailiff of a liberty, may make a deputy. Cro. Jac. 240. And a conſtable may make a deputy, who may execute the warrant directed to the conſtable, &c. 2 Danv. 482.

When an office deſcends to an infant, ideot, &c. ſuch may make a deputy of courſe. 9 Rep. 47. Where an office is granted to a man and his heirs, he may make an aſſignee of that office; and by conſequence a deputy. A deputy of an office, hath no intereſt therein, but doth all things in his maſter's name, and his maſter ſhall be anſwerable; but an aſſignee hath an intereſt in the office, and doth all things in his own name, for whom his grantor ſhall not anſwer, unleſs in ſpecial caſes. Terms de Ley.

A ſuperior officer muſt anſwer for his deputy in civil actions, if he is not ſufficient: but in criminal caſes it is otherwiſe, where deputies are to anſwer for themſelves. 2 Inſt. 191, 466. Doct. & Stud. c. 42.

De quibus ſur Diſſeſin, Is a writ of entry, mentioned in our books treating of writs. F. N. B. 191.

Der, (From the Sax. Deor, Fera) The names of places beginning with this word, ſignify that formerly wild beaſts herded there together.

Deraign or Dereyn, (Diſtrationare) Seems to be derived literally from the Fr. Deſtrayer, i. e. To confound and diſorder, or to turn out of courſe or diſplace; as deraignment or departure out of religion. Stat. 31 H. 8. cap. 6. And deraignment and diſcharge of their profeſſion. 33 H. 8. c. 29. Which is ſpoken of thoſe religious men that forſook their orders or profeſſion; and ſo doth Kitchen uſe it, where he ſays the leſſee entered into religion, and afterwards was derained, p. 152.

In our Common Law this word is uſed diverſly; but generally to prove any thing, viz. to deraign that right, deraign the warranty, &c. Glanv. lib. 2 cap. 6. F. N. B. 146. If a man hath an eſtate fee with warranty, and enfeoffs a ſtranger with warranty, and dies; and the feoffee vouches the heir, the heir ſhall derain the firſt warranty, &c. Plowd. 7. And jointenants and tenants in common ſhall have aid, to the intent to deraign the warranty paramount. 31 H. 8. cap. 1. See Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 28. Britton applieth this word to a ſummons that they be challenged as defective, or not lawfully made, cap. 21. And Skene confounds it with our waging and making of law. See Lex Deraiſnia.

Derelict, (Derelictus) Is any thing forſaken or left; or wilfully caſt away. Derelict lands left by the ſea belong to the King. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 903.

If the ſea ſhrink back ſo ſlowly that the gain be by little and little, i. e. by ſmall and imperceptible degrees, it is ſaid it ſhall go to the owner of the lands adjoining. *Black. Deſcent of lands, tenements, &c. See Diſcent.

Deſcription, (deſcriptio) In deeds and grants there muſt be a certain deſcription of the lands granted, the places where the lands lie, and of the perſons to whom granted, &c. to make them good. But wills are more favoured than grants as to thoſe deſcriptions; and a wrong deſcription of the perſon will not make a deviſe void, if there be otherwiſe a ſufficient certainty what perſon was intended by the teſtator. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 647. If there are ſeveral deſcriptions of one perſon in a will, they muſt all agree at the time of the will executed, in name, circumſtances, &c. or the deviſe to ſuch is void. ibid. And where a firſt deſcription of land, &c. is falſe, though the ſecond is true, a deed will be void: contra, if the firſt be true, and ſecond falſe. See 3 Rep. 2, 3, 8, 10, 28, 33, 34, &c.

Deſertion. If any one deſerts from the King's armies in time of war, whether by land or ſea, in England or in parts beyond the ſeas, is by the ſtanding laws of the land (excluſive of the annual acts of parliament to puniſh mutiny and deſertion) and particularly by Stat 18 Hen. 6. c. 19. & 5 Eliz. c. 5. guilty of felony, but not without benefit of clergy. But by Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 2. Clergy is taken away from ſuch deſerters, and the offence is made triable by the juſtices of every ſhire. Black. Com. 4 V. 101.

De ſon tort Demeſne, Are certain words of form uſed in actions of treſpaſs, &c. by way of replication to the defendant's plea: i. e. that he did it de ſon tort demeſne, etc. modo et formam, viz. That he did it of his own wrong, without any ſuch cauſe, etc. in manner and form, etc. When the defendant in jure proprio, or as a ſervant to another, claims any intereſt in a common, or to a way, etc. De ſon tort generally is not good: but if the defendant juſtifies as ſervant, there it may be good, with a traverſe of the commandment, it being material; for the general replication de ſon tort is properly when the defendant's plea conſiſts merely of matter of excuſe, and no matter of intereſt. 8 Rep. 67. 1 Lil. Abr. 428. There ought to be a concluſion to the country, in a replication of de ſon tort; becauſe the replication ſhould make an iſſue of it. 3 Lev. 65. But there cannot be variety of matter put in iſſue; as matter of record, and matter of fact, &c. 3 Lev. 65. 2 Leon. 108.

Detinet, A word uſed in writs, which is neceſſary in the writ of detinue, &c. See Debet & Detinet.

Detinue, (detinendo) In the Common law is like actio depoſiti in the Civil law, and is a writ which lies againſt him, who having goods or chattels delivered to keep, refuſeth to re-deliver them. In this action the thing detained is generally to be recovered, and not damages; but if one cannot recover the thing itſelf, he ſhall recover damages for the thing, and alſo for the detainer. Wood's Inſt. 542. Detinue lies for any thing certain and valuable, wherein one may have a property or right; as for horſe, cow, ſheep, hens, dogs, jewels, plate, cloth, bags of money, ſacks of corn, &c. It muſt be laid ſo certain, that the thing detained may be known and recovered; and therefore for money out of a bag, or corn out of a ſack, &c. it lies not; for the money or corn cannot in this caſe be known from other money or corn; ſo that the party muſt have an action on the caſe, &c. 1 Inſt. 226. F. N. B. 138. Yet detinue may be brought for a piece of gold, of the price of 22*s.* tho' not for 22*s.* in money; for here is a demand of a certain particular piece. 2 Danv. Abr. 510.

If a man receiving money from a banker, put part thereof into his bag, and while he is telling the reſt the bag is ſtolen; no action of detinue, &c. lies; becauſe by putting up the money, he had appropriated it to his own uſe. Comb. 475. A man lends a ſum of money to another, detinue lies not for it, but debt: but if A. bargains and ſells goods to B. upon condition to be void, if A. pays B. a certain ſum of money at a day; now if A. pays the money, he may have detinue againſt B. for the goods, though they came not to the hands of B. by bailment, but by bargain and ſale. Cro. Eliz. 867. 2 Danv 510.

If a man delivers goods to A. to deliver to B. B. may have detinue, for the property is in him: and where he delivers them to B. and after grants them to D. he ſhall not have detinue after the grant, but the grantee ſhall have it. Yelv. 241. 1 Bulſt. 69. When goods are delivered to one, and he delivers them over to another, action of detinue may be had againſt the ſecond perſon, and if he delivers them to one that has a right thereto, yet it is ſaid he is chargeable: alſo if a perſon to whom a thing is delivered dieth, detinue lieth againſt his executors, &c. or againſt any perſon to whom a thing comes. 2 Danv. Abr. 511.

A man may have a general detinue againſt another that finds his goods: though if I deliver any thing to A. to re-deliver, and he loſes it, if B. finds it and delivers it to C. who has a right to the ſame, he is not chargeable to me in detinue, becauſe he is not privy to my delivery. 7 H. 6. 22. 9 H. 6. 58. Though trover is the common action for goods found, or wrongfully detained, where there was at firſt a legal poſſeſſion.

In actions of detinue, the thing muſt be once in the poſſeſſion of the defendant; which poſſeſſion is not to be altered by act of law, as ſeiſure, &c. And the nature of the thing muſt continue, without alteration, to intitle this action. F. N. B. 138. If I find goods, and before the owner brings his action, I ſell them; or they are recovered out of my hands upon an execution, or outlawry againſt the owner, &c. he cannot have detinue againſt me. 12 E. 4. 8. 27 H. 8. 13. or trover. But action of detinue will lie againſt him that finds goods, if they are waſted by wilful negligence. Dr. & Stud. 129.

A man buys cloth or other things of another, on a good and perfect contract; if the ſeller keeps the things bought, detinue lieth. Dyer 30, 203. Where one takes my goods into his cuſtody to keep them for me, and refuſes to reſtore them; although he have nothing for the keeping of them, this action will lie. 4 Rep. 84. 29 Aſſ. pl. 28. If I deliver to one a trunk that is locked with things in it, and keep the key myſelf, and ſomething be taken out of it, writ of detinue lieth not for this: but if the trunk and all that is in it be taken away, there it lies. 11 Rep. 89. 4 E. 3.

This action will not lie, where a man delivers goods to me, and I bid him take them again, if he refuſes to do it: or where one takes my goods or cattle by wrong as a treſpaſſer; or by way of diſtreſs for rent or as damage feaſant, &c. Nor for a horſe ſick, when it is taken or lent; if he dies of that ſickneſs. Bro. Detin. 242. 43 E. 3. 21. 21 E. 4. And if it be a ring that is delivered to another, and he breaks it, it is doubted whether action of detinue may lie; becauſe the thing is altered, and cannot be returned as it was: but action on the caſe lieth. And although, where goods are found, and ſold, &c. detinue lies not: yet action upon the caſe of trover and converſion may be brought. 12 E. 4. 8. 18 E. 4. 22.

To bring detinue, the plaintiff is to ſet forth the time and thing delivered, to what uſe the ſame was delivered, and the time appointed for the re-delivery thereof, with its value, &c. If for a thing bought, he muſt ſhew when he bought it, and what he paid, and the time for delivery: alſo in trover, the nature and value of the things are to be ſhewn, the time and place when and where the plaintiff was poſſeſſed of them, and how they came to the defendant's hands, with the converſion, &c. Practiſ. Solic. Actions of detinue are not ſo frequently brought as formerly; for actions of trover and converſion are had in their ſtead, where the converſion changes the detinue to action on the caſe; and thereby the tedious proceedings as to garniſhment, &c. are now out of uſe. 10 Rep. 57. 1 Inſt. 286. See Trover.

Detinue of Charters. A man may have detinue for deeds and charters concerning land; but if they concern the freehold, it muſt be in C. B. and no other court. Action of detinue lies for charters which make the title of lands; and the heir may have a detinue of charters, although he hath not the land: if my father be diſſeiſed, and dieth, I ſhall have detinue for the charters, notwithſtanding I have not the land; but the executors ſhall not have the action for them. New Nat. Br. 308. If a man keep my charters from me, concerning the inheritance of my land, and I know the certainty of them, and the land; or if they be in a cheſt locked, &c. and I know not their certainty, I may recover them by this writ: ſo where lands are given to me and J. S. and my heirs, and he dies, if another gets the deeds; and if tenant in tail give away the deed of entail, and then die, his iſſue may bring a writ of detinue of charters. Co Lit 286. 1 Rep. 2. F. N. B. 138. But if the tenant in fee-ſimple do give away his deeds of the land, his heir may not have this action: and in caſe a woman great with child by her deceaſed huſband keeps the charters from his daughter and heir that concern the land, during the time ſhe is with child; this writ will not lie againſt her. 41 E. 3. 11.

Detinue was brought for a deed, and the plaintiff had a verdict, that the defendant detained the deed, and the jury gave 20 l. damages, but did not find the value of the deed; and then there iſſued out a diſtringas to deliver the deed, or the value, and afterwards a writ of inquiry was awarded for the value: whereupon the jury found a different value from what the firſt verdict found; and it was adjudged good. Raym. 124. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 649. In detinue of charters, if the iſſue be upon the detinue, and it is found that the defendant hath burnt the charters, the judgment ſhall not be to recover the charters, which it appears cannot be had; but it is ſaid it ſhall be for the plaintiff to recover the land in damages. 2 Rol. Abr. 101. 2 Danv. Abr. 511. For detaining of deeds and charters concerning the inheritance of lands, or an indenture of leaſe, the defendant ſhall not wage law; but in a common action of detinue he may do it. 1 Inſt. 295.

Detinue of Goods in Frank-marriage, Is on a divorce between a man and his wife; after which, the wife ſhall have this writ of detinue for the goods given with her in marriage. Mich. 35 E. 1. New Nat. Br. 308.

Devadiatus, Is where an offender is without ſureties or pledges. Si homo in villa delinquit & devadiatus fuerit, nil inde habeat præpoſitus regis. Domeſday.

Devaſtavit, or Devaſtaverunt bona Teſtatoꝛis, Is a writ that lies againſt executors or adminiſtrators, for paying debts upon ſimple contract, before debts on bonds and ſpecialties, &c. for in this caſe they are liable to action as if they had ſquandered away the goods of the deceaſed, or converted them to their own uſe; and are compellable to pay ſuch debts by ſpecialty out of their own goods, to the value of what they ſo paid illegally. Dyer 232. But if an executor pays debts upon ſimple contract, before he hath any notice of bonds, it is no deveſtavit; and regularly this notice is by an action commenced againſt him, for the law doth not oblige him to take notice of it himſelf, nor of a judgment againſt his teſtator, becauſe he is not privy to acts done either by or againſt him. 1 Mod. 175. 1 Lev. 215. Sed qu. as to a judgment docketed, if the law doth not preſume that ſufficient notice?

Where an executor, etc. payeth legacies before debts, and hath not ſufficient to pay both, it is a devaſtavit. Alſo where an executor ſells the teſtator's goods at an undervalue, it is a devaſtavit; but this is underſtood where the ſale is fraudulent; for if more money could not be had, it is otherwiſe. Keilw. 59. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 649. Executors keeping the goods of the deceaſed in their hands, and not paying the teſtator's debts; or ſelling them, and not paying off debts, &c. or not obſerving the law which directs them in the management thereof; or doing any thing by negligence or fraud, whereby the eſtate of the deceaſed is miſemployed, are a devaſtavit, or waſte; and they ſhall be charged for ſo much de bonis propriis, as if for their own debt. 8 Rep. 133. But the fraud or negligence of one executor is not chargeable on the reſt, where there are ſeveral executors. 1 Rol. Abr. 929.

There are ſome caſes in the old books, in which it hath been held, if an executor waſtes the goods of the teſtator, and afterwards makes his executor, and dies, leaving aſſets, that an action of debt will not lie againſt the executor of the waſting executor, upon a ſuggeſtion of a devaſtavit or waſte by the firſt executor; becauſe it is a perſonal wrong which died with him. 3 Leon. 241. But in this caſe there is a difference between a lawful executor and an executor de ſon tort; for as an executor de ſon tort poſſeſſes himſelf of the goods wrongfully, if he afterwards waſtes them, and dies, leaving aſſets, his executor ſhall be charged upon the ſuggeſtion of a devaſtavit in his teſtator, becauſe he came wrongfully by the goods, and therefore the wrong ſhall not die with his perſon. 2 Lev. 133. And before the ſtatute 30 Car. 2. c. 7. it has been decreed in equity againſt the executor of a lawful executor, who had waſted the goods, and died, that ſuch executor ſhould be liable to make good to the creditors of the teſtator, ſo much as the firſt executor had waſted, and ſo far as he had aſſets of the ſaid firſt executor. 1 Chanc. Rep. 257.

By that ſtatute it is enacted, That if an executor de ſon tort waſtes the goods, and dies, his executors ſhall be liable in the ſame manner as their teſtator, would have been if he had been living. And it has been ſince adjudged, that a rightful executor, who waſtes the goods of the teſiator, is in effect an executor de ſon tort for abuſing his truſt; and therefore his executor or adminiſtrator may be liable to a devaſtavit. 3 Mod. 113.

Debt lies againſt an executor in the debet and detinet, where there is a judgment againſt his teſtator, upon a ſuggeſtion only, that he had waſted the goods; and this is a more expeditious way than the old method of ſci. fac. inquiry, which was iſſued to ſhew cauſe why the plaintiff ſhould not have execution againſt the executor de bonis propriis, and thereupon the ſheriff returned a devaſtavit, &c. 1 Lev. 147. 1 Nelſ. 653.

A huſband is to be charged for waſte done by his wife dum ſola: but the huſband is not chargeable after the death of a wife executrix, on ſuggeſtion of a devaſtavit in a declaration againſt him. Cro. Car. 603. Lutw. 672. And it has been adjudged, that a feme covert executrix cannot do any waſte during the coverture; though for waſte done by the huſband ſhe ſhall be charged, if ſhe ſurvive him; but then it muſt be on a judgment obtained againſt him, and not on a bare ſuggeſtion of a devaſtavit, &c. 2 Lev. 145. If an executor or adminiſtrator confeſſes judgment, or ſuffers it to go by default, he thereby admits aſſets, and is eſtopped to ſay the contrary in an action on ſuch judgment ſuggeſting a devaſtavit. Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. fol. 258. Skelton v. Hawling, Executor. See Debet & Detinet, and Executor.

Devenerunt, A writ heretofore directed to the eſcheator on the death of the heir of the King's tenant under age and in cuſtody, commanding the eſcheator that by the oaths of good and lawful men he inquire what lands and tenements by the death of the tenant came to the King. Dyer 360. This writ is now diſuſed; but ſee Stat. 14 Car. 2. c. 11. for preventing frauds and abuſes in his Majeſty's Cuſtoms.

Deveſt, (deveſtere) Is oppoſite to inveſt. As inveſt ſignifies to deliver the poſſeſſion of any thing to another; ſo deveſt ſignifieth the taking it away. Feud. lib. 1. cap. 7.

Deviſe, (from the Fr. deviſer, to divide or ſort into parcels) Is properly where a man gives away any lands or tenements by will in writing. And he who gives away his lands in this manner, is called the deviſor; and he to whom the lands are given, the deviſee. A deviſe in writing is, in law conſtruction, no deed; but an inſtrument by which lands are conveyed. And antiently where lands were deviſeable, it was by cuſtom only; for at Common law, in favour of heirs, no lands or tenements in fee-ſimple were deviſeable by will; nor could they be tranferred from one to another but by ſolemn livery and ſeiſin; matter of record, or ſufficient deed or writing. 1 Inſt. 111. 2 Inſt. 386, &c. But now it is otherwiſe by Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 1. And ſee 34, 35 H. 8. c. 5. It is ſaid, that words of recommendation and deſire in a will are always held to be a deviſe; as where the teſtator gives a legacy to one, willing him to do ſuch a thing, &c. Preced. Canc. 201, 202.

Deviſe to the firſt and eldeſt ſon not heir at law to his father, is a good deviſe to the ſecond ſon. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 96. Marwood ex dim. Fennel & al' v. Darrel.

Diet, (conventus) An aſſembly; as the diet of the Empire, of Ratiſbon, &c.

The diets of the empire of Germany were the ſame with the aſſemblies of March and of May, held by the Kings of France. They met at leaſt once a year. Every freeman had a right to be preſent. They were aſſemblies in which a monarch deliberated with his ſubjects, concerning their common intereſt. But when the princes, dignified eccleſiaſticks, and barons, acquired territorial and independent juriſdiction, the diet became an aſſembly of the ſeparate ſtates, which formed the confederacy of which the Emperor was the head. While the conſtitution of the empire retained its primitive form, attendance on the diet was a duty; and a neglect to attend, puniſhable with loſs of vote, and heavy penalty: but when the members became independent ſtates, the right of ſuffrage was annexed to the territory or dignity, not to the perſon. Robert. Hiſt. Emp. Charles V. 1 V. 383, &c. which ſee.

Among the Anglo Saxons here, in England, there was from time to time an aſſembly of the whole nation (i. e. of all freemen) called wittena gemot, ſimilar to the diets of the empire. In this aſſembly was lodged the whole legiſlative power of the community; here was the ſupreme authority, over all perſons, and in all cauſes, eccleſiaſtical as well as civil. Squire's Anglo Sax. Government, 165, &c.

Dieu ſon Act, Are words often uſed in our old law: and it is a maxim in law, That the act of God ſhall prejudice no man. Therefore, if a houſe be blown down by tempeſt, thunder or lightening, the leſſee or tenant for life or years, ſhall be excuſed in waſte: likewiſe he hath by the law a ſpecial intereſt to take timber, to build the houſe again for his habitation. 4 Rep. 63. 11 Rep. 82. So when the condition of a bond conſiſts of two parts in the disjunctive, and both are poſſible at the time of the obligation made, and afterwards one of them becomes impoſſible by the act of God, the obligor is not bound to perform the other part. 5 Rep. 22. Digeſt, The book of Pandects of the Civil law; which hath its name from its containing Legalia præcepta excellenter Digeſta. Du Cange.

Dignity, (dignitas) Signifies honour and authority; reputation, &c. And dignity may be divided into ſuperior and inferior: as the titles of Duke, Earl, Baron, &c. are the higheſt names of dignity; and thoſe of Baronet, Knight, Serjeant at Law, &c. the loweſt. Nobility only can give ſo high a name of dignity, as to ſupply the want of a ſurname in legal proceedings: and as the omiſſion of a name of dignity may be pleaded in abatement of a writ, &c. ſo it may be where a peer, who has more than one name of dignity, is not named by the Moſt Noble. 2 Hawk. P. C. 185, 239. No temporal dignity of any foreign nation can give a man a higher title here than that of Eſquire. 2 Inſt. 667. See Addition and Diſcent.

Dignity Eccleſiaſtical, (dignitas eccleſiaſticalis) Is defined by the Canoniſts to be adminiſtratione cum juriſdictione & poteſtate aliqua conjuncta; of which there are ſeveral examples in Duarenus, de Sacris Eccleſ. &c. lib. 2. c. 6. Dignities eccleſiſtaca: are mentioned in the Stat. 26 H. 8. c. 31 & 32. And of church dignities, Cambden in his Britannia, p. 161. reckons in England 544.

Dignitaries, (dignatarii) Are thoſe who are advanced to any dignity eccleſiaſtical; as a biſhop, Dean, Archdeacon, Prebendary, &c. But there are ſimple Prebendaries, without cure or juriſdiction, which are not dignitaries. 3 Inſt. 155.

Dilapidation, (dilapidatio) Is where an incumbent on a church living ſuffers the parſonage houſe or outhouſes to fall down, or be in decay for want of neceſſary reparation: or it is the pulling down or deſtroying any of the houſes or buildings, belonging to a ſpiritual living, or deſtroying of the woods, trees, &c. appertaining to the ſame; for it is ſaid to extend to the committing or ſuffering any wilful waſte, in or upon the inheritance of the church. Degg's Pariſ. Counſ. 89. It is the intereſt of the church in general to preſerve what belongs to it for the benefit of the ſucceſſors; and the old canons, and our own provincial conſtitutions require the clergy ſufficiently to repair the houſes belonging to their benefices; which, if they neglect or refuſe to do, the biſhop may ſequeſter the profits of the benefice for that purpoſe, &c. Rights Clerg. 143. And by the Canon law, dilapidations are made a debt, which is to be ſatisfied out of the profits of the church; but the Common law prefers debt on contracts, &c. before debt for dilapidations. Hern. 136.

The proſecution in theſe caſes may be brought either againſt the incumbent himſelf, or againſt his executors or adminiſtrators; and the executor or adminiſtrator of him in whoſe time it was done or ſuffered, muſt make amends to the ſucceſſor: and if you proceed againſt the incumbent, then it is proper in the ſpiritual court: likewiſe you may proceed in that court againſt an executor, or the ſucceſſor may have an action of the caſe or debt at the Common law, in which action he ſhall recover damages in proportion to the dilapidations. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 656. Parſ. Counſ. 97, 98.

By ſtatute, if any Parſon, &c. ſhall make a gift of his goods and perſonal eſtate to defraud his ſucceſſor, as to dilapidations, ſuch ſucceſſor may have the ſame remedy in the ſpiritual court againſt the perſon to whom ſuch gift is made, as he might have againſt the executors of the deceaſed parſon. 13 Eliz. cap. 16. And money recovered for dilapidations, is to be employed in the reparations of the ſame houſes ſuffered to be in decay, or the party recovering ſhall forfeit double the value of what he receives, to the king, by Stat. 14 Eliz. cap. 11.

If a parſon ſuffers dilapidations, and afterwards takes another benefice, whereby his former benefice becomes void, his ſucceſſor may have an action againſt him, and declare that by the cuſtom of the kingdom he ought to pay him tantas denariorum ſummas quantæ ſufficient ad reparandum, &c. 3 Lev. 268. In caſe a Parſon comes to a living, the buildings whereof are in decay by dilapidations, and his predeceſſor did not leave a ſufficient perſonal eſtate to repair them, ſo that he is without remedy; he is to have the defects ſurveyed by workmen, and atteſted under their hands in the preſence of witneſſes, which may be a means to ſecure him from the incumbrance brought upon him by the fault of his predeceſſor. Country Parſon's Companion, 60.

Dilatory Pleas, Are ſuch as are put in merely for delay; and there may be a demurrer to a dilatory plea, or iſſue may be taken on the fact, if falſe. If the plea is true in fact, and good in law, and is in abatement, the plaintiff muſt enter up judgment of capetur, before he commences a new ſuit. If the plea is adjudged ill, on demurrer, there muſt be a reſpondeas ouſter, and defendant muſt plead another plea. If iſſue in fact, is taken, and found by the jury, for plaintiff, in caſe, &c. they aſſeſs the damages. In debt, the judgment for plaintiff is final, &c. The truth of dilatory pleas is to be made out by affidavit of the fact, &c. by Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 11. See Plea.

Diminiſhing the coin, A ſpecies of treaſon. See 18 Eliz. c. 1. and Coin.

Diminution, (diminutio) Is where the plaintiff or defendant in a writ of error alledges to the court that part of the record is omitted and remains in the inferior court not certified; whereupon he prays that it may be certified by certiorari. Co. Ent. 232, 242. Of courſe diminution is to be certified on a writ of error; though if iſſue be joined upon the errors aſſigned, and the matter is entered upon record, which is made a conſilium, in this caſe there muſt be a rule of court granted for a certiorari to certify diminution. 1 Lil. Abr. 245. Diminution cannot be alledged of a thing which is fully certified; but in ſomething that is wanting, as want of an original, or a warrant of attorney, &c. 2 Lev. 206. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 658. And if on diminution alledged, and the plaintiff in error certify one original, &c. which is wrong; and the defendant in error certifies another that is true; the true one ſhall ſtand. Cro. Jac. 597. Cro. Car. 91.

After a writ of error brought, and the defendant hath pleaded in nullo eſt erratum, he cannot afterwards alledge diminution; becauſe by that plea he affirmeth or alloweth the record to be ſuch as is certified upon the writ of error. Godb. 266. But in ſome caſes, diminution hath been alledged, after in nullo eſt erratum pleaded, ex gratia curiæ; though not ex rigore juris. Palm. 85. And there is an inſtance, that the court in ſuch a caſe hath awarded a certiorari, to inform their conſcience of the truth of the record in C. B. where the defendant in error had not joined in nullo eſt erratum. 1 Nelſ. 658.

Dimiſſory Letters, (literæ dimiſſoriæ) Are ſuch as are uſed where a candidate for holy orders has a title in one dioceſe, and is to be ordained in another: the proper dioceſan ſends his letters dimiſſory directed to ſome other ordaining biſhop, giving leave that the bearer may be ordained, and have ſuch a cure within his diſtrict. Cowel.

Dioceſe, (diœceſis) Signifies the circuit of every biſhop's juriſdiction. For this realm hath two ſorts of diviſions; one into ſhires or counties, in reſpect to the temporal ſtate; and another into dioceſes, in regard to the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, of which we reckon twenty-one in England, and four in Wales. Co. Lit. 94. Alſo the kingdom is ſaid to be divided in its eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction into two provinces of Canterbury and York; each of which provinces is divided into dioceſes, and every dioceſe into archdeaconries, and archdeaconries into pariſhes, &c. Wood's Inſt. 2.

The bounds of dioceſes are to be determined by witneſſes and records, but more particularly by the adminiſtration of divine offices. To which purpoſe, there are two rules in the Canon law: in one caſe, upon a diſpute between two biſhops upon this head, the direction is, that they proceed in the buſineſs, by ancient books or writings, and alſo by witneſſes, reputation, and other ſufficient proof: in the other caſe, where the queſtion was, by whom a church built upon the confines of two dioceſes ſhould be conſecrated, the rule laid down is, that it ſhould be conſecrated by the biſhop of that city, who, before it was founded, baptized the inhabitants, and adminiſtred to them other divine offices. Gibſ. 133.

The juriſdiction of the city is not included in the name of dioceſs, ſo ſaith the Canon law: and accordingly, in citations in general viſitations, directed to the clergy, it is ordered to cite the clergy of the city and dioceſe. Gibſ. 133.

A biſhop may perform divine offices, and uſe his epiſcopal habit, in the dioceſe of another, without leave; but may not perform therein any act of juriſdiction, without permiſſion of the other biſhop. Gibſ. 133.

A clergyman dwelling in one dioceſe, and beneficed in another, and being guilty of a crime, may, in different reſpects, be puniſhed in both; that is, the biſhop in whoſe dioceſe he dwells, may proſecute him; but the ſentence, ſo far as it affects his benefice, muſt be carried into execution by the other biſhop. Gibſ. 134.

Diſability, (diſabilitas) Is when a man is diſabled, or made incapable to inherit any lands, or take that benefit which otherwiſe he might have done: which may happen four ways; by the act of an anceſtor, or of the party himſelf, by the act of God, or of the law.

1. Diſability, by the act of the anceſtor, is where the anceſtor is attainted of treaſon, &c. which corrupts the blood of his children, ſo that they may not inherit his eſtate.

2. Diſability, by the act of the party, is where a man binds himſelf by obligation, that upon ſurrender of a leaſe, he will grant a new eſtate to the leſſee; and afterwards he grants over the reverſion to another, which puts it out of his power to perform it.

3. Diſability, by the act of God, is where a perſon is non ſanæ memoriæ, whereby he is incapable to make any grant, &c. So that if he paſſeth an eſtate out of him, it may after his death be made void; but it is a maxim in law, That a man of full age ſhall never be received to diſable his own perſon.

4. Diſability, by the act of the law, is where a man by the ſole act of the law, without any thing done by him, is rendered incapable of the benefit of the law; as an alien born, &c. Terms de Ley. 4 Rep. 123, 124. 5 Rep. 21. 8 Rep. 43.

There are alſo other diſabilities, by the Common law, of ideocy, infancy, and coverture, as to grants, &c. And by ſtatute in many caſes: as papiſts are diſabled to make any preſentation to a church, &c. Officers not taking the oaths, are incapable to hold offices: Foreigners, though naturalized to bear offices in the government, &c. 11 Rep. 77. Stat. 12 & 13 W. 3. c. 2. 1 Geo. 2. ſtat. 2. c. 4. A perſon ſhall not be admitted to diſable himſelf to avoid an office of charge, &c. no more than a man ſhall be allowed to ſay that he was an ideot, &c. to avoid an act done by himſelf. Carthew's Rep. 307. And the ſtatutes do not exempt and diſable diſſenters from bearing offices; but they muſt ſubmit to a fine, if they do not qualify themſelves. Hil. 6 Wil. 3. Skinner 576, 577. But it hath lately been ſolemnly determined in the Houſe of Lords, in the caſe of the Chamberlain of London, and Evans, that a diſſenter was not finable for refuſing the office of ſheriff. See Capacity.

Diſadvocare, To deny, or not acknowledge a thing: It is mentioned in Hengham Magna, cap. 4.

Diſagreement, Will make a nullity of a thing, that had eſſence before: And diſagreement may be to certain acts, to make them void, &c. Co. Lit. 380. See Agreement.

Diſalt, According to Littleton, is to diſable a perſon. Lit. tit. Diſcontinuance.

Diſboſcatio, A turning wood ground into arable or paſture.

Diſcarcare, (From Dis and Cargo) Is to unlade a ſhip or veſſel by taking out the cargo or goods.—— Et prædictus, &c. Carcare & diſcarcare fecit ibidem merchandiſas & denariatas quaſcunque. Placit. Parl. 18 Ed. 1.

Diſceit, A writ or action for fraud and deceit. See Deceit.

Diſcent, (Lat. Deſcenſus, Fr. Diſcent) Is an order or means whereby lands or tenements are derived unto any man from his anceſtors; And is either by common law, cuſtom or ſtatute.

By common law, as where one hath land of inheritance in fee-ſimple, and dieth without diſpoſing thereof in his life-time, and the land goes to the eldeſt ſon and heir of courſe, being caſt upon him by law. Co. Lit. 13, 237.

Diſcent of fee-ſimple by cuſtom, is ſometimes to all the ſons, or to all the brothers, where one brother dieth without iſſue; as in gavelkind: Sometimes to the youngeſt ſon, as in Borough Engliſh; and ſometimes to the eldeſt daughter, or the youngeſt, &c. according to the cuſtoms of particular places. Co. Lit. 110, 140, 175. Lit. 210. 211.

And dicent by ſtatute of fee-tail, is, as directed by the manner of the ſettlement or limitation, purſuant to the Stat. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 1.

Diſcent at Common law is lineal, or collateral: Lineal is a diſcent downward in a right line, from the grandfather to the father, the father to the ſon, ſon to the grandſon, &c. and the lineal heir ſhall firſt inherit. Collateral, is a diſcent which ſpringeth out of the ſide of the whole blood, as another branch thereof; ſuch as the grandfather's brother, father's brother, and ſo downward. Co. Lit. 10, 11. Therefore, if a man purchaſeth lands in fee-ſimple, and dies without iſſue, for default of the right line, he which is next of kin in the collateral line of the whole blood, though never ſo remote, comes in by diſcent as heir to him; for there is a next of kin by right of repreſentation, and by right of propinquity or nearneſs of blood. Lit. 2. 1 Vent. 415. 3 Rep. 40.

To have land in fee-ſimple by diſcent, a perſon muſt be heir of the whole blood; he is to be the next, and moſt worthy of blood, to the anceſtor; and he ought to be heir to him that was laſt actually ſeiſed. Where lands deſcend to the ſon from the father, and he enters on the lands, and dies ſeiſed thereof, without having any iſſue, this land will deſcend to the heirs of the part of the father, who are of the whole blood; and if there are none ſuch, the land ſhall eſcheat: ſo where lands deſcend on the part of the mother. Lit. ſect. 4. Co. Lit. 13. And there is a maxim in law, that where lands deſcend on the part of the father, the heirs of the mother ſhall never inherit; and when lands deſcend on the part of the mother, the heirs of the father ſhall never inherit. Co. Lit. 14. But it has been reſolved, that a fine and render of lands, claimed by a party, as heir at law ex parte materna, will alter the quality of the eſtate; ſo that it ſhall deſcend to the heir ex parte paterna. 6 Rep. 63. Carthew 141.

Alſo if a man ſeiſed of land, as heir of the part of his mother, make a feoffment, and take back an eſtate to him and his heirs; this, as a purchaſe, alters the diſcent, and if he die without iſſue, the heir of the part of the father ſhall inherit it. Co. Lit. 12. There is a difference between diſcents from father and mother to their children, and diſcents between brothers and ſiſters; for a ſon or a daughter need be only of the blood of either the father or mother, which hath the inheritance, to inherit them: Though the brothers and ſiſters muſt be of the ſame father and mother, to inherit one another. Noy 68.

If a man hath iſſue two ſons by divers venters, the younger brother of the half blood ſhall not have land purchaſed by the elder brother, on his dying without iſſue; but the elder brother's uncle or next couſin ſhall have it. Co. Lit. 14. The elder brother of the whole blood ſhall have land by diſcent, purchaſed by a middle or younger brother, if ſuch die without iſſue; (for as to diſcents between brethren, the eldeſt is the moſt worthy of blood to inherit to them as well as to the father). And if there be no brother or ſiſter, the uncle ſhall have it as heir, and not the father: And yet it may afterwards come to the father, as heir to the uncle; likewiſe if the father hath iſſue another ſon or daughter, after the diſcent to the uncle, that iſſue may enter upon the uncle, and hold the eſtate. Lit. 3. 3 Rep. 40.

The next and moſt worthy of blood are the male, and all deſcendants from him, before the females; and the female on the part of the father, before the male or female of the part of the mother: And the eldeſt brother, and his poſterity, ſhall have lands in fee-ſimple before any younger brother.

Alſo a ſiſter of the whole blood ſhall be preferred, and taken before the younger brother, which is of the half blood; but ſuch a younger brother, though he may not be heir to a brother, for want of the whole blood, yet he may be heir to his father, or his uncle. Co. Lit. 14. 3 Rep. 41.

All the deſcendants from a perſon, who by our laws might have been heir to another, hold the ſame right as that common root from whom they are derived: ſo that the ſon, or grandchild, whether ſon or daughter of the eldeſt ſon, takes before the youngeſt ſon; and a ſon or grandchild of the eldeſt brother before the youngeſt brother: And ſo it is through all degrees of diſcents; by repreſentation, the proximity is transferred from the root to the branches, and gives them the ſame preference, as next and worthieſt of blood. Hale's Hiſt. L. 237.

The great grandchild of the elder brother, whether it be a ſon or a daughter, ſhall here be preferred as the heir before the younger brother; for though a female be leſs worthy than the male, yet ſhe ſtands in right of repreſentation of the eldeſt brother, who was more worthy than the younger. Hale's Hiſt. L. 237.

As to being heir to him that was laſt ſeiſed: If tenant in fee-ſimple hath a ſon and a daughter by one woman or venter, and a ſon by another venter, and dies ſeiſed, and the eldeſt ſon dies without iſſue, before actual ſeiſin, the younger brother as heir to the father ſhall have the eſtate; but if the elder brother had entered on the lands, the ſiſter would have it as heir to him. Co. Lit. 11, 15. Lit. 8.

None can inherit any lands as heir, but only the blood of the firſt purchaſer; as if the father make a purchaſe, the blood of the mother ſhall not have the eſtate: But if a ſon purchaſes, and there is no heir on the ſide of the father, the land ſhall go to the heirs on the ſide of the mother; for they are of the blood of the ſon of the firſt purchaſer, and he had the blood of both father and mother. Lit. 4. Co. Lit. 12.

So that there is a difference where the ſon purchaſeth lands in fee-ſimple, and where he cometh to them by diſcent. Land thus purchaſed may go to the heirs of the father and mother of the purchaſer; unleſs it be once attached in the heir of the part of the father, for then the heirs of the mother cannot have it, becauſe they are not of the blood of him who was laſt ſeiſed. 49 E. 3. 12. Finch. 119. Where, for want of heirs of a purchaſer, of the part of his father, or when ſuch heir had not entered, the lands deſcend to the line of the mother; there the heirs of the mother of her father's ſide, ſhall take in ſucceſſion, before her heirs of the part of her mother. Hale's Hiſt. L. 247. Plowd. 444. The deſcent of lands is particularly and very judiciouſly treated of by Mr. Juſtice Blackſtone, in his Commentaries. 2 V. 201, &c.

The law takes no notice of the diſability of the father in caſe of diſcent, but only of the immediate relation of brothers and ſiſters, as to their eſtates; ſo that the inability of the father doth not hinder the diſcent between them: for example, A man had iſſue a ſon and a daughter, and was attainted of treaſon, and died; the ſon purchaſed lands and died without iſſue; and it was adjudged that, notwithſtanding the attainder of the father, the daughter ſhall take by diſcent from her brother, becauſe the diſcent between them was immediate, and the law doth not regard the diſability of the father. 4 Leon. 5. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 645.

If there be father and ſon, and the ſon is attainted of treaſon or felony in the father's life-time, and yet outlive his father, the land by diſcent ſhall not come to ſuch ſon, nor any of his iſſue; but if he die before the father it will deſcend to his other children. 4 Rep. 31, 124. And where a perſon ſeiſed of lands, hath iſſue two daughters, if one of them commits felony, after the father's death, both daughters being alive, a moiety ſhall deſcend to one daughter, and the other ſhall eſcheat. Co. Lit. 163.

Inheritances may deſcend but not aſcend: And in the right line, children inherit their anceſtors without limitation; but the anceſtors may not take from their children, for the father can never come to the lands which his ſon hath purchaſed, by lineal aſcent; though he may by collateral aſcent, where the ſon's lands come to the uncle, and then to the father. In the collateral line, the uncle inherits the nephew, and the nephew the uncle. Lit. 3. 3 Rep. 40. Vaugh. 244.

Lands and tenements in fee-ſimple deſcend, firſt, to the eldeſt ſon as heir, and to his iſſue; the ſons firſt, in order of birth; and for want of ſons, to the daughters equally, who inherit as one heir; if the eldeſt ſon hath no iſſue, then to his next eldeſt brother of the whole blood, and his heirs, and for want of a brother, to his ſiſter or ſiſters of the whole blood, and their iſſue; if there be no brother or ſiſter, to the uncle and his iſſue; and for want of an uncle, to an aunt or aunts, and their iſſue; and if there be none ſuch, then to couſins in the neareſt degree of conſanguinity. Bacon's Elem. And Black. Com. 2 V. 201, &c.

And in caſe of lands purchaſed by brethren; after uncles and aunts, the lands ſhall deſcend to the father, and the half blood, and their iſſue, (who comes in after the father, being of the whole blood to him, though not to one another) and for want of uncle, father, and half blood, to the next of kin in the collateral line. Wood's Inſt. 218.

In diſcent of eſtates-tail, half blood is no hindrance; becauſe the iſſue are in per formam doni, and always of the whole blood to the donee. 3 Rep. 41. A man hath iſſue an elder ſon, born out of the King's allegiance, and after hath another ſon within the realm; the younger ſon ſhall have lands by diſcent from his father in this caſe, and not the elder who had never any inheritable blood in him. Co. Lit. 8. which vide.

If one die ſeiſed of land, in which another hath right to enter, and it deſcends to his heir; ſuch diſcent ſhall take away the other's right of entry, and put him to his action for recovery thereof. Stat. 32 H. 8. cap. 33. Co. Lit. 237. But a diſcent of ſuch things as lie in grant, as advowſons, rents, commons in groſs, &c. puts not him who hath right to his action. Co. Lit. 237. 2 Danv.

Abr. 561. And a diſcent ſhall not take away the entry of an infant; nor of a feme covert, where the wrong was done to her during the coverture. 2 Danv, 563.

For farther information concerning the rules of diſcent, ſee an excellent treatiſe on this ſubject by Dr. Blackſtone, entitled, The Law of Deſcents. And ſee his Commentaries, 1 V. 193, 4. 2 V. 201, &c. And 4 V. 406, 414. And a perfect Table of Deſcents, by which the courſe of deſcent appears at one view. 2 V. 240. See Kindred and Heir.

Diſcent being created by law, and the moſt ancient title, an heir is in by that, before a grant, or deviſe, &c. It is a rule in law, that a man cannot raiſe a fee-ſimple to his own right heirs, by the name of heirs, as a purchaſe, either by conveyance or deviſe; for if he deviſe lands to one who is heir at law, the deviſe is void, and he ſhall take by diſcent. Dyer 54, 126. And it is the ſame where the lands will come to the heir, either in a direct or collateral line; or where the heir comes to an eſtate by way of limitation, when the word heirs is not a word of purchaſe. Ibid. A father hath two ſons by ſeveral venters, and deviſes his land to his wife for life, and after her deceaſe to his eldeſt ſon; though the ſon doth not take the eſtate preſently on the death of his father, he ſhall be in by diſcent, and not by purchaſe, and the deviſe ſhall be void as to him. Style 148. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 645. But it is ſaid he may make his election, and take by deviſe, if he pleaſes.

A man being ſeiſed of lands which he had by the mother's ſide, deviſed them to his heirs on the part of his mother; and it was adjudged, that the deviſee ſhall take by diſcent. 3 Lev. 127. And when the heir takes that which his anceſtor would have taken if living, he ſhall take it by diſcent, and not by purchaſe. 2 Danv. 557. But generally, where an eſtate is deviſed to the heir at law, attended with a charge, as to pay money debts, &c. in ſuch caſe he takes by purchaſe, and not by diſcent. Though conditions to pay money have been conſtrued only a charge in equity; and that they do not alter the diſcent at Common law. 1 Lut. 593. 1 Salk. 241. A man can have lands no other way than by diſcent or purchaſe. And diſcent is the worthieſt means whereby land can be acquired.

Diſcent of Crown Lands. All the lands whereof the King is ſeiſed in jure coronæ, ſhall ſecundum jus coronæ attend upon and follow the crown; ſo that to whomſoever the crown deſcends, thoſe lands and poſſeſſions deſcend alſo. And if the heir to the crown be attainted of treaſon; yet ſhall the crown deſcend to him, and without any reverſal the attainder is avoided. Plowd. 247. Co. Lit. 15. Sed. qu. though a doctrine laid down, when Henry the Seventh came to the crown? However it is a nice point; but the doctrine will hold good, if the Prince can ſupport himſelf on the throne. He may take the French King's motto. Ultima ratio regum, as proof demonſtrative, and poſitive.

The dignity of the crown of England, for want of heirs male, is diſcendable immediately to the eldeſt daughter, and her poſterity; and ſo it has been declared by act of parliament: And by Stat. 25 H. 8. cap. 22. Regnum non eſt deviſibile. The eldeſt ſiſter of a King, as well as the eldeſt daughter, ſhall inherit all his fee-ſimple lands by diſcent: And half blood is no impediment to the diſcent of lands of the crown. Co. Lit. 15, 165. But a daughter of the whole blood ſhall not inherit where there is a ſon of the half blood; as where the King hath iſſue a ſon and a daughter by one venture, and a ſon by another venter, and purchaſes lands, and dies; afterwards the eldeſt ſon enters and dies alſo without iſſue, the daughter ſhall not have theſe lands, or any other fee-ſimple lands of the crown, but they ſhall deſcend to the younger brother. Plowd. 245. 34 H. 6. A perſon coming to be King by diſcent of the part of his mother, makes a purchaſe of land to him and his heirs, and dies without iſſue, this land ſhall deſcend to the heir on the part of the mother; contrary to the caſe of a ſubject, where the heir on the father's ſide ſhall enjoy it. Ibid. Co. Lit. 16. As the whole kingdom hath an intereſt in the diſcent of the crown, The King cannot ſurrender or alien it, &c. See Crown.

Diſcent of Dignities. A dignity alſo differs from common inheritances, and goes not according to the rules of the Common law; for it deſcends to the half blood, and there is no coparcenerſhip in it, but the eldeſt takes the whole. Co. Lit. 27. The dignity of peerage is perſonal, annexed to the blood, and ſo inſeparable that it cannot be transferred to any perſon, or ſurrendered even to the crown; it can move neither forward nor backward, but only downward to poſterity; and nothing but corruption of blood, as if the anceſtor be attainted of treaſon or felony, can hinder the diſcent to the right heir. Lex Conſtitutionis, p. 85.

Diſcharge, On writs and proceſs, &c. is where a man confined by ſome legal writ or authority, doth that which by law he is required to do; whereupon he is releaſed or diſcharged from the matter for which he was confined. And if one be arreſted by a latitat out of B. R. and the plaintiff do not file a declaration againſt the defendant in priſon in two terms, he ſhall be diſcharged on common bail. 1 Lil. Abr. 470. Alſo where a defendant on arreſt is admitted to bail, if the bail bring in the principal before the return of the ſecond ſcire facias iſſued out againſt them, they ſhall be diſcharged. Mich. 24 Car. B. R. If an obligee diſcharges one joint obligor, where ſeveral are jointly bound; it diſcharges the others. March. 129. And a man may diſcharge a promiſe made to himſelf, &c. Cro. Jac. 483. See Acquittal, and vide Habeas Corpus.

Diſclaimer, (diſclamium, from the Fr. clamer, with the privative dis) Is a plea containing an expreſs denial, or renouncing of a thing; as if a tenant ſue a replevin, upon the diſtreſs of the lord, and the lord avows the taking, ſaying the tenant holds of him as of his lord, and that he diſtrained for the rent not paid, or ſervice not performed: now, if the tenant ſay he doth not hold of him, this is called a diſclaimer, and the lord proving the tenant to hold of him, on a writ of right brought, the tenant ſhall loſe his land. Terms de Ley. And if a writ of præcipe be brought againſt two perſons for land, and one of them, the tenant, ſaith that he is not tenant, nor claims any thing in the lands; this is a diſclaimer as to him, and the other ſhall have the whole land. Ibid. And when a tenant hath diſclaimed, upon action brought againſt him, he ſhall not have reſtitution on writ of error, &c. againſt his own act; but is barred of his right to the land diſclaimed. 8 Rep. 62. But a verbal diſclaimer ſhall not take place againſt a deed of lands: nor ſhall the diſclaimer of a wife during the coverture bar her entry on her lands. 3 Rep. 26.

Baron and feme may diſclaim for the wife; though if the huſband hath nothing but in right of his wife, he cannot diſclaim. 2 Danv. Abr. 569. Such perſon as cannot loſe the thing perpetually in which he diſclaims, ſhall not be permitted to diſclaim: a biſhop, &c. may not diſclaim, for he cannot diveſt the right out of the church: Though in a quo warranto, at the ſuit of the King, againſt a biſhop or others for franchiſes and liberties, if the biſhop, &c. diſclaims them, this ſhall bind the ſucceſſors. Co. Lit. 102, 103. If a man be vouched becauſe of a reverſion on a leaſe made by himſelf, he cannot diſclaim: but an heir may diſclaim, being vouched upon a leaſe made by his anceſtor. 2 Danv. 569.

A perſon may diſclaim in the principal, and not in the incident; as he that is vouched becauſe of a reverſion, cannot diſclaim in the reverſion, ſaving the ſeigniory. 40 Ed. 3. 27. If the lord diſclaims his ſeigniory, in a court of record, it is extinct, and the tenant ſhall hold of the lord next paramount to the lord diſclaiming. Lit. ſect. 146.

It is ſaid not to be neceſſary, that the writ of right ſur diſclaimer ſhould be brought againſt the perſon that diſclaims; for if it be only againſt him that is found tenant of the land, though he be a ſtranger, it is not material. 2 Danv. 570. By plea of non-tenure, nothing is diſowned but the freehold, which may be good where the tenant hath the reverſion in fee, and not the freehold; but when ſuch tenant diſclaims, or pleads non-tenure and diſclaims, the demandant ſhall have the whole, as the whole is diſclaimed. Ibid.

Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 16. ſ. 5. In all actions of treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, wherein the defendant ſhall diſclaim any title to the land, and the treſpaſs be by negligence or involuntary, the defendant ſhall be admitted to plead a diſclaimer, and that the treſpaſs was by negligence or involuntary, and a tender of ſufficient amends before the action brought; and if the iſſue be found for the defendant, or the plaintiff be nonſuited, the plaintiff ſhall be barred from the ſaid action, and all ſuits concerning the ſame.

Beſides theſe diſclaimers by tenants of lands, there are diſclaimers in divers other caſes: for there is a diſclaimer of blood, where a perſon denies himſelf to be of the blood or kindred of another in his plea. F. N. B. 102. And a diſclaimer of goods, as well as lands; as if a man diſclaimeth goods, on arraignment of felony, when he ſhall loſe them, though he be cleared. Standf. P. C. 186. In the Chancery, if a defendant by his anſwer renounces the having any intereſt in the thing in queſtion, this is likewiſe a diſclaimer. And there is a deed of diſclaimer of executorſhip of a will, &c. where an executor refuſes, and throws up the ſame. See farther Black. Com. 2 V. 275.

Diſcontinuance, (diſcontinuatio, derived from the Fr. diſcontinuer, i. e. ceſſare) Signifies an interruption or breaking off; and is twofold, diſcontinuance of poſſeſſion, and diſcontinuance of proceſs: the effect of diſcontinuance of poſſeſſion is, that a man may not enter upon his own lands or tenements alienated, whatever his right be to it, of his own authority, but muſt bring his writ, and ſeek to recover poſſeſſion by law. Co. Lit. 325. F. N. B. 191. Where a tenant in tail, or a man ſeiſed in right of his wife, &c. by feoffment, gift in tail, or leaſe for life, by fine or livery, not warranted by the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 28. aliens the eſtate; ſuch alienations are called diſcontinuances: whereby the wife after her huſband's death, and the iſſue in tail after the death of tenant in tail, and thoſe in remainder and reverſion are driven to their action, and cannot enter. Co. Lit. 325.

But a diſcontinuance taketh away an entry only: and to every diſcontinuance it is neceſſary there ſhould be a deveſting or diſplacing of the eſtate, and turning the ſame to a right; for if it be not turned to a right, they that have the eſtate cannot be driven to an action. Co. Lit. 327. And an eſtate-tail cannot be diſcontinued, but where he that makes the diſcontinuance, was once ſeiſed by force of the intail, where the eſtate-tail is executed; unleſs by reaſon of a warranty. Lit. Sect. 637, 641. Alſo if tenant in tail levies a fine, &c. this is no diſcontinuance, till the fine is executed; becauſe if he dies before execution, the iſſue may enter. Co. Lit. 33. 2 Danv. Abr. 572.

A diſcontinuance may be five ways, viz. by feoffment, fine, recovery, releaſe and confirmation with warranty. 1 Rep. 44. A grant without livery, or a grant in fee without warranty, are no diſcontinuances: an exchange will not make a diſcontinuance; as if tenant in tail exchanges land with another, that is not any diſcontinuance, by reaſon no livery is requiſite thereon. 2 Danv. 57. It is the ſame of a bargain and ſale, &c. And an alteration of ſuch things as lie in grant, and not in livery, works no diſcontinuance; for ſuch grant does no wrong either to the iſſue in tail, or him in reverſion or remainder, becauſe nothing paſſeth but during the life of tenant in tail, which is lawful; and every diſcontinuance worketh a wrong. Co. Lit. 332.

If tenant in tail of a copyhold eſtate, ſurrenders to another in fee, this makes not any diſcontinuance, (except there be a cuſtom for it) but the heir in tail may enter; tho' this hath been a great queſtion. 1 Leon. 95. 2 Danv. 571. If there be tenant for life, remainder in tail, and remainder in tail, &c. And tenant for life, and he in the firſt remainder in tail levy a fine, this is no diſcontinuance of either of the remainders. 1 Rep. 76. But if there be tenant in tail, remainder in tail, &c. and tenant in tail enfeoffs him in reverſion in fee: or where there is tenant for life, remainder in tail, reverſion in fee, and tenant for life enfeoffs the reverſioner; theſe are diſcontinuances, becauſe there is a mean or immediate eſtate. 1 Rep. 140. Co. Lit. 335. 3 Danv. 575.

If there be tenant in tail, remainder to his right heirs, and he makes feoffment in fee, this is a diſcontinuance; though ſuch tenant that made the feoffment, hath the fee in him. 2 Danv. 572. A man is tenant for life, the remainder in tail, remainder in fee, and the tenant for life makes a feoffment to him in remainder in fee; this is ſuch a diſcontinuance of the eſtate-tail, as produceth a forfeiture. 3 Rep. 59. If a tenant in tail be diſſeiſed, and after releaſe with warranty to the diſſeiſor, it will be a diſcontinuance: ſo if he releaſe or confirm to tenant for life. Lit. Sect. 135. 1 Rep. 44. And if, where there is a tenant for life, and remainder in tail, the tenant for life levirs a fine to his own uſe; and after tenant for life and he in remainder join in a feoffment by letter of attorney, this is a diſcontinuance of the eſtate-tail and the fee. Dyer 327.

If tenant in tail makes a feoffment in fee upon condition, and the condition is broken, the iſſue may enter notwithſtanding this diſcontinuance. Lit. 632. Tenant in tail grants all his eſtate to another, though with livery and ſeiſin; and if that other perſon make a feoffment in fee, it will not be a diſcontinuance to take away the entry of him in reverſion or remainder. Lit. 145. 1 Rep. 46. 10 Rep. 97. A leaſe is made for life- remainder in tail; and he in remainder in tail diſſeiſes the tenant for life, and makes a feoffment in fee, and dies without iſſue, and then tenant for life dieth; this is no diſcontinuance to him in reverſion. Lit. 146. 1 Brown. 36. And if tenant in tail of a rent, common, advowſon, or the like, grant it in fee, it is not a diſcontinuance: nor where ſuch tenant granteth any thing out of land, &c. Lit. 138. Finch's Law 193.

Where a tenant in tail of a manor makes a leaſe for life, not warranted by Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 28. of part of the demeſnes, this is a diſcontinuance of this parcel; and it is ſaid makes it no parcel of the manor. 2 Rol. Abr. 58. By ſtatute, a huſband is reſtrained from alienation, and diſcontinuing of the wife's land. 32 H. 8. cap. 28. And a wife, tenant in tail with the huſband; or having an eſtate in dower, &c. from making any diſcontinuance of the lands of the huſband, after his death. 11 H. 7. cap. 20. Likewiſe eccleſiaſtical perſons, as biſhops, deans, &c. from alienating or diſcontinuing their eſtates, 13 Eliz. cap. 10. 1 Jac. 1. cap. 3.

There can be no diſcontinuance by tenant in tail of the gift of the crown, 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 20. Nor by tenant in tail of fee-farm rents, to bar the remainder veſted by the ſtatute, 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 24. ſ. 6. And ſome diſcontinuances at Common law are now made bars as to the iſſue in tail; though ſtill diſcontinuances in ſome caſes, to him in remainder, &c. ſuch as fines, with proclamations by ſtatute 4 H. 7. cap. 24. 32 H. 8. cap. 36. If the huſband levy a fine with proclamations, and dieth, the wife muſt enter, or avoid the eſtate of the conuſee within five years, or ſhe is barred for ever, by the Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 24. For the Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 28. doth help the diſcontinuance, but not the bar. Co. Lit. 326. Huſband and wife tenant in ſpecial tail, the huſband alone levied a fine to his own uſe, and afterwards he deviſed the land to his wife for life, the remainder over, rendering rent &c. The huſband dies, the wife enters and pays the rent, and dies: in this caſe it was adjudged, that the fine had barred the iſſue in tail, but not the wife. Dyer 351. The entry of the wife in this caſe was a diſagreement to the eſtate of inheritance, and an agreement to the eſtate for life: but if the wife had not waived the inheritance, the eſtate tail as to the wife had remained. 9 Rep. 135.

If lands be given to the huſband and wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies, and the huſband maketh a feoffment in fee, and dieth; the wife is helped by the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 28. and ſo is the iſſue of both their bodies 1 Inſt. 326. The huſband is tenant in tail, the remainder to the wife in tail, the huſband makes a feoffment in fee; by this, the huſband, by the Common law, did not only diſcontinue his own eſtate tail, but his wife's remainder: but by ſtatute 32 Hen. 8. c. 28. after the death of the huſband without iſſue, the wife may enter by the ſaid act. Though if the huſband hath iſſue, and maketh a feoffment ment in fee of his wife's land, and his wife dieth; the heir of the wife ſhall not enter during the huſband's life, neither by the Common law nor by the ſtatute. Ibid.

A diſcontinuance may be defeated, where the eſtate that worked it is defeated; as if a huſband make a feoffment of the wife's land upon condition; and after his death, his heir enters on the feoffee for the condition broken; now the diſcontinuance is defeated, and a feme may enter upon the heir. Co. Lit. 336. The titles of diſcontinuance of eſtates and remitter, were formerly large titles in our books; but they are abridged by the ſtatute law.

Diſcontinuance of Plea, Is where divers things ſhould be pleaded to, and ſome are omitted; this is a diſcontinuance. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 660, 661. If a defendant's plea begin with an anſwer to part, and anſwers no more, it is a diſcontinuance: and the plaintiff may take judgment by nil dicit, for what is not anſwered: but if the plaintiff plead over, the whole action is diſcontinued. 1 Salk. 139. Debt upon bond of 500 l. the defendant as to 225 l. part of it, pleads payment, &c. And upon demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged that there being no anſwer to the reſidue, it is a diſcontinuance as to that, for which the plaintiff ought to take judgment by nil dicit. 1 Salk. 180. Where no anſwer is given to one part, if the plaintiff pleads thereto, he cannot have judgment according to his declaration; for which reaſon it may be a diſcontinuance of the whole. 1 Nelſ. 660. But this is helped after verdict by 32 H. 8. c. 30.

Diſcontinuance of Proceſs, Is when the opportunity of proſecution is loſt for that time; or the plaintiff is diſmiſſed the court, &c. And every ſuit, whether civil or criminal, and every proceſs therein, ought to be properly continued from day to day, &c. from its commencement to its concluſion; and the ſuffering any default or gap herein, is called a diſcontinuance: the continuance of the ſuit by improper proceſs, or by giving the party an illegal day, is properly a miſcontinuance. 2 Hawk. 298.

Where an action is long depending, and continued from one term to another, the continuances muſt be all entered, otherwiſe there will be a diſcontinuance; whereupon a writ of error may be brought, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 660. If the plaintiff in a ſuit doth nothing, it is a diſcontinuance, and he muſt begin his ſuit again: and where it is too late to amend a declaration, &c. or the plaintiff is adviſed to proſecute in another court, he is to diſcontinue his ſuit, and proceed de novo. Com. Law Com. Plac. 171. But a diſcontinuance of an action is not perfect till it is entered on the roll, when it is of record. Cro. Car. 236.

The plaintiff cannot diſcontinue his action after a demurrer joined, and entered; or after a verdict, or a writ of inquiry, without leave of the court. Cro. Jac. 35. 1 Lill. Abr. 473. In actions of debt or covenant, after a demurrer joined, the court will give leave to diſcontinue, if there be an apparent cauſe, as if the plaintiff through his own negligence is in danger of loſing his debt: but if the demurrer be argued, then he ſhall not have leave to diſcontinue; nor where he brings another action for the ſame cauſe, and this is pleaded in abatement of the firſt action. Sid. 84.

But where a man hath a juſt cauſe of action, for a matter of any conſequence, and unadviſedly demurs to a plain bar, &c. and defendant joins in demurrer, and it is argued, and the court are of opinion the plea is good in law, tho' it may be falſe in fact, the court will, even after giving their opinions, but before judgment given, on motion, permit the plaintiff to withdraw his demurrer, on payment of coſts, and take iſſue.

Is has been ruled, upon a motion to diſcontinue, that the court may give leave after a ſpecial verdict; which is not compleat and final; but never after a general verdict. 1 Salk. 178. 1 Nelſ. 663.

An appeal may as well be diſcontinued by the defect of the proceſs or proceeding in it, as it may be by the inſufficiency of the original writ, &c. For by ſuch defect, the matter depending is as it were out of court. 1 Lill. 473. A diſcontinuance or miſcontinuance, at Common law reverſes a judgment given by default; and diſcontinuance upon a demurrer is error; but a miſcontinuance after appearance is not ſo. 8 Rep. 150. 46 E. 3. 30.

Diſcontinuance of proceſs is helped at Common law by appearance: and by Stat. 32 H. 8. cap. 30. All diſcontinuances, miſcontinuances and negligences therein, of plaintiff or defendant, are cured after verdict. 2 Danv. 352. The death of the King is not a diſcontinuance of any ſuit; and no ſuit before juſtices of aſſiſe, or juſtices of peace, &c. will be diſcontinued by a new commiſſion. Stat. 1 Ed. 6. cap. 3. See 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. 1 Ann. Stat. 1. c. 8. On the diſcontinuance of ſuits, it is uſual to give the defendant coſts. See Continuance.

The plaintiff hath been allowed to diſcontinue after a ſpecial verdict, and argument thereon, and after the court have delivered their opinion; but it is diſcretionary in the court, and in hard actions they will not allow it. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per. Annaly, 200, 201. Boucher and Lawſon.

Diſcovert, Is uſed in the law for a woman unmarried or widow, one not within the bonds of matrimony. Law Fr. Dict.

Diſcovery, Is the act of revealing or diſcloſing any matter by defendant in his anſwer to a bill filed againſt him in a court of equity.

A man is not bound to diſcover what may ſubject him to the penalty of an act of parliament. Vern. 109. pl. 98. Mich. 1682. Bird v. Hardwick.

But, where ſeveral are partners in an unlawful or clandeſtine trade, and one of them brings a bill of diſcovery againſt the other, it is no good plea that their anſwer may ſubject them to the penalty of an act of parliament; for by their going on in ſuch trade, they ſeemed to have intirely waived that unlawfulneſs as between themſelves; ſo the plea was diſallowed, and they were ordered to anſwer. G. Equ. R. 186. Hill. 12 Geo. 1. Gaſcyone v. Sidwell.

Defendant ſhall not diſcover any thing againſt himſelf to charge himſelf with the penalty of a bond of arbitration. Chan. Rep. 142. 15 Car. 1. Biſhop v. Biſhop.

The huſband deviſed to his wife an eſtate and intereſt in ſeveral goods and things, to be held and enjoyed by her during her widowhood. On a bill brought againſt her to diſcover, whether married or not, in order to prove a forfeiture of her eſtate, ſhe demurred, and the bill was diſmiſſed. 2 Chanc. Rep. 68. 24 Car. 2. Monnings v. Monnings.

The difference is between cauſes criminal and civil; if an offender be once legally convicted of an offence, whereby he ought to forfeit his eſtate, then it is lawful and proper to prefer a bill to diſcover what eſtate in lands and goods he then had; as in caſe of an outlawry or attainder, &c. for that the effect of ſuch a bill is only to diſcover what is forfeited already, and not to diſcover a cauſe of forfeiture. Arg. Hard. 145.

Diſcretion, (Diſcretio) When any thing is left to any perſon to be done according to his diſcretion, the law intends it muſt be done with ſound diſcretion, and according to law: And the court of B. R. hath a power to redreſs things that are otherwiſe done, notwithſtanding they are left to the diſcretion of thoſe that do them. 1 Lil. Abr. 477.

Diſcretion is to diſcern between right and wrong; and therefore whoever hath power to act at diſcretion, is bound by the rule of reaſon and law. 2 Inſt. 56, 298. And though there be a latitude of diſcretion given to one, yet he is circumſcribed, that what he does be neceſſary and convenient; without which no liberty can defend it. Hob. 158. The aſſeſſment of fines on offenders committing affrays, &c. And the binding of perſons to the good behaviour, are at the diſcretion of our judges and juſtices of peace. 1 Hawk. P. C. 132, 138. And in many caſes, for crimes not capital, the judges have a diſcretionary power to inflict corporal puniſhment on the offenders. 2 Hawk. 445. Infants, &c. under the age of diſcretion, are not puniſhable for crimes; and want of diſcretion is a good exception againſt a witneſs. Ibid. 434. See Age.

Disfranchiſe, Is to take away one's freedom or privilege: It is the contrary to enfranchiſe. And corporations have power to disfranchiſe members, for doing any thing againſt their oaths; but not for contempts, &c. 11 Rep. 98. See Corporation.

Diſheriſon, Is an old word which ſignifies as much as diſinheriting: mentioned in the ſtat. 20 Ed. 1. and 8 R. 2.

Diſheritor, One that diſinheriteth, or puts another out of his inheritance. Stat. 3 Ed. 1. cap: 39.

Diſmes, (Decimæ) Are tithes, or the tenth part of all the fruits of the earth, and of beaſts, or labour, due to the clergy. It ſignifieth alſo the tenths of all ſpiritual livings given to the prince, which is called a perpetual diſm. Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 3. cap. 35. And formerly this word ſignified a tax or tribute levied of the temporalty. Hollingſh. in H. 2. f. 111. The laws of the diſmes or tithes; See Tithes.

Diſparagement, In a legal ſenſe was uſed for matching an heir in marriage under his degree, or againſt decency. Co. Lit. 107. Magn. Chart. c. 6.

Diſpauper. When a perſon by reaſon of his poverty, is admitted to ſue in forma pauperis; if afterwards, before the ſuit is ended, the ſame party have any lands or perſonal eſtate fallen to him, or be guilty of any thing whereby he is liable to have this privilege taken from him, then he is put out of the capacity of ſuing in forma pauperis, and is ſaid to be diſpaupered. See Forma Pauperis.

Diſpenſation. By the 25 Hen. 8. *cap.*21. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury has power of diſpenſing in any caſe, wherein diſpenſations (not contrary to the law of God) were formerly granted by the ſee of Rome; and may grant Diſpenſations to the King, as well as to his ſubjects: But ſuch diſpenſations ſhall not be granted out of the realm, &c. And during the vacancy of the ſee of Canterbury, the guardian of the ſpiritualties may grant diſpenſations. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury grants diſpenſations, not only in his own province, but in the province of York; and the Archbiſhop of York, and other biſhops, diſpenſe as they were wont to do, by the common law and cuſtom of the realm. Wood's Inſt. 26. Every biſhop of common right has the power of inſtitution into benefices, and of diſpenſing in common caſes, &c. Ibid. 505. Diſpenſations to hold pluralities; ſee Chaplains.

Diſpenſations of the King. If a diſpenſation by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, is to be in extraordinary matters, or in a caſe that is new, the King and his Council are to be conſulted: and it ought to be confirmed under the broad ſeal. The King's authority to grant diſpenſations remains as it did at common law; notwithſtanding the 25 H. 8. c. 21. Cro. Eliz. 542, 601. The diſpenſation of the King, &c. makes a thing prohibited, lawful to be done by him who hath it: But malum in ſe will not admit of a diſpenſation. March Rep. 213. Where the ſubject hath an immediate intereſt in an act of parliament, the King cannot diſpenſe with it; but where the King is intruſted with the management thereof, and the ſubject intereſted by way of conſequence only, he may. March 214, 216. This muſt be where the King is, by the act itſelf, impowered to diſpenſe with it. When an offence wrongs none but the King; or if the ſuit is only the King's for the breach of a penal law, that is not to the damage of a third perſon, the King may diſpenſe: But in caſe the ſuit is the King's, for the benefit of another, he cannot. Vaugh. 334, 339, 344. &c.

The diſpenſing power of the King is fully conſidered by Dr. Blackſtone. See Com. 1 V. 142, 185, 342. 4 V. 429, 433.

Diſpenſation by non obſtante. Formerly if any ſtatute tended to reſtrain ſome prerogative incident to the perſon of the King, as the right of pardoning, or of commanding the ſervice of the ſubject for the public weal, &c. which were inſeparable from the King; by a clauſe of non obſtante, he might diſpenſe with it. 2 Hawk. 390. But as in the reign of King James II. the diſpenſing power was carried ſo high as to render the execution of our neceſſary laws in a manner dependent on the pleaſure of the Prince; by Stat. 1 W. & M. ſeſſ. 2. cap. 2. It is enacted, That no diſpenſation by non obſtante, of, or to any ſtatute, or any part thereof, ſhall be allowed; but that the ſame ſhall be held void, and of none effect, except a diſpenſation be allowed in ſuch ſtatute. The diſpenſation by non obſtante was brought into this kingdom by the Pope; and firſt uſed by Hen. 3. Pryp's Animadver. on 4 Inſt. fol. 129.

Diſperſonare, Is to ſcandaliſe or diſparage. Blount.

Diſſignare, To break open a ſeal——Sepulto patre teſtamentum diſſignatum eſt. Neubrigenſis, lib. 2. c. 7.

Diſſeiſin, (From the Fr. Diſſeiſin) Signifies an unlawful diſpoſſeſſing a man of his right. As where a perſon enters into lands or tenements, and his entry is not lawful, and keeps him that hath the eſtate from the poſſeſſion thereof. Bract. lib. 4. c. 3. And diſſeiſin is of two ſorts; either ſingle diſeiſin, committed without force of arms; or diſſeiſin by force, but this latter is more properly deforcement. Brit. cap. 42, 43.

By Magna Charta, 9 Hen. 3. c. 29. No man is to be diſeiſed or put out of his freehold, but by lawful judgment of his peers, or the law: And by ſtatute, the dying ſeiſed of any diſſeiſor of or in any lands, &c. having no right therein, ſhall not be a diſcent in law, to take away an entry of a perſon having lawful title of entry; except the diſſeiſor hath had peaceable poſſeſſion five years, without entry or claim by the perſon having lawful title. 32 H. 8. c. 33. But if a diſſeiſor having expelled the right owner, hath ſuch peaceable poſſeſſion of the lands five years without claim, and continues in poſſeſſion ſo as to die ſeiſed, and the land deſcends to his heirs, they have a right to the poſſeſſion thereof till the perſon that is owner recovers at law; and the owner ſhall loſe his eſtate for ever, if he do not proſecute his ſuit within the time limited by the ſtatute of limitations. Bac. Elem. And if a diſſeiſee levy a fine of the land whereof he is diſſeiſed, unto a ſtranger, the diſſeiſor ſhall keep the land for ever; for the diſſeiſee againſt his own fine cannot claim, and the conuſee cannot enter, and the right which the diſſeiſee had, being extinct by the fine, the diſſeiſor ſhall take advantage of it. 2 Rep. 56. But this is to be underſtood, where no uſe is declared of the fine by the diſſeiſee; when it ſhall enure to the uſe of the diſſeiſor, &c. by Bridgman, C. J. 1 Lev. 128.

If a feme ſole be ſeiſed of lands in fee, and is diſſeiſed, and then taketh huſband; in this caſe, the huſband and wife, as in right of the wife, have right to enter, and yet the dying ſeiſed of the diſſeiſor, ſhall take away the entry of the wife, after the death of the huſband. Co. Lit. 246. If a perſon diſſeiſes me, and, during the diſſeiſin, he or his ſervant cut down the timber growing upon the land, and afterwards I re-enter into the land, I ſhall have action of treſpaſs againſt him; for the law, as to the diſſeiſor and his ſervants, ſuppoſes the freehold to have been always in me: But if the diſſeiſor be diſſeiſed by another, or if he makes a feoffment, gift in tail, leaſe for life or years, I ſhall not have an action againſt the ſecond diſſeiſor, or againſt thoſe who come in by title: For all the meſne profits ſhall be recovered againſt the diſſeiſor himſelf. 11 Rep. 52. Keilw. 1.

A diſſeiſor in aſſiſe, where damages are recovered againſt him, ſhall recover as much as he hath paid in rents chargeable on the lands before the diſſeiſin. Jenk. Cent. 189. But if the diſſeiſor or his feoffee ſows corn on the land, the diſſeiſee may take it whether before or after ſeverance. Dyer 31, 173. 11 Rep. 46. Where a man hath a houſe in fee, &c. and locks it, and then departs; if another perſon comes to his houſe, and takes the key of the door, and ſays that he claims the houſe to himſelf in fee, without any entry into the houſe, this is a diſſeiſin of the houſe. 2 Danv. Abr. 624. If the feoffor enters on the land of the feoffee, and makes a leaſe for years, &c. it is a diſſeiſin, though the intent of the parties to the feoffment, was, that the feoffee ſhould make a leaſe to the feoffor for life. 2 Rep. 59. If leſſee for years is ouſted by his leſſor; this is ſaid to be no diſſeiſin. Cro. Jac. 678.

A man who enters on another's land, claiming a leaſe for years, who hath not ſuch leaſe, is a diſſeiſor: though if a man enters into the houſe of another by his ſufferance, without claiming any thing, it will not be a diſſeiſin. 9 H. 6. 21, 31. 2 Danv. 625. If a perſon enters on lands by virtue of a grant or leaſe, that is void in law; he is a diſſeiſor. 2 Danv. 630. A leſſee at will, makes a leaſe for years, it is a diſſeiſin, at the election of the leſſor at will: But it is the diſſeiſin of the leſſee at will, not of the leſſee for years. Hill. 7 Car. B. R. If a man enters into the land of an infant, though by his aſſent; this is a diſſeiſin to the infant, at his election. 11 Ed. 3. Aſſ. 87. And if a perſon commands another to enter upon lands, and make a diſſeiſin, the commander is a diſſeiſor, as well as ſuch other; unleſs the command be conditional, when it may be otherwiſe. 22 Aſſ. 99. 2 Danv. 631.

If a man forces another to ſwear to ſurrender his eſtate to him, and he doth ſo, it will be a diſſeiſin of the eſtate: So forcibly hindring a perſon from tilling his land, is a diſſeiſin of the land. Co. Lit. 161. But if one enter wrongfully into the lands of another, and he accepts rent from ſuch perſon, he ſhall not afterwards be taken for a diſſeiſor. Dyer 173. Where any perſon is diſturbed from entering on land, it is a diſſeiſin: A denial of a rent, when lawfully demanded, is a diſſeiſin of the rent. Co. Lit. 153. Alſo hindring a diſtreſs for rent, by force; or making reſcous of a diſtreſs, are a diſſeiſin of the rent. 2 Danv. 624, 625. An infant, or feme covert, may be a diſſeiſor, but it muſt be by actual entry on lands, &c.

A feme covert ſhall not be a diſſeiſoreſs, by the act of the baron: If he diſſeiſes another to her uſe, ſhe is not a diſſeiſoreſs; nor if the wife agrees to it during the coverture: Yet if after his death, ſhe agrees to it, ſhe is a diſſeiſoreſs. Ibid. 626, 627. Aſſiſes that lie againſt Diſſeiſors are called writs of diſſeiſin; and there are ſeveral writs of entry ſur diſſeiſin, of which ſome are in the per, and others in le poſt, &c.

But writs of aſſiſe on diſſeiſins, are now diſuſed; and the feigned action of ejectment is introduced in their place. It is not amiſs to be acquainted with this learning, but treſpaſs and ejectment ſupply the place of almoſt every kind of aſſiſe. See Aſſiſe of Novel Diſſeiſin, and Entry.

Diſſeiſor, Is in general he that diſſeiſeth or puts another out of his land, without order of law: And a diſſeiſee is he that is ſo put out. 4 H. 4. As the King in judgment of law can do no wrong, he cannot be a diſſeiſor. 1 E. 5. 8. A diſſeiſor is to be fined and impriſoned; and the diſſeiſee reſtored to the land, &c. by Stat. 20 H. 3. c. 3. Where a diſſeiſor is diſſeiſed, it is called diſſeiſin upon diſſeiſin.

Diſſenters, Are ſeparatiſts from the church, and the ſervice and worſhip thereof. At the Revolution a law was enacted, That the ſtatutes of Q. Eliz. and K. James I. concerning the diſcipline of the church, ſhould not extend to Proteſtant diſſenters: But the perſons diſſenting, are to ſubſcribe the declaration of 30 Car. 2. c. 1. and take the oaths, or the declaration of fidelity, &c. And they muſt not hold their meetings, till their place of worſhip is certified to the biſhop, &c. or to the juſtices at their quarter-ſeſſions, and regiſtered there; alſo they are not to keep the doors of their meeting-houſes locked, &c. If any perſon diſturbs them in their worſhip, on conviction at the ſeſſions, he ſhall forfeit 20 l. Stat. 1 W. & M. c. 18. ſ. 18. And there are a great many ſtatutes relating to diſſenters beſides the toleration act: As the 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 1. 23 Eliz. c. 1. 3 Jac. 1. c. 4. 13 Car. 2. c. 1. 17 Car. 2. c. 2. and 22 Car. 2. c. 1. 1 W. & M. c. 18. 10 Ann. c. 2. 1 Geo. 1. c. 6, &c. See Church, &c.

Diſtillers, Of ſtrong waters and ſpirits, ſetting up any tun, caſk, &c. or uſing any private warehouſe or cellar, without notice given to the officer of exciſe, ſhall forfeit 20 l. and 10 l. for working ſtills, but at ſuch appointed hours, to be levied by warrant of two juſtices of peace. Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 15. 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 4, 21. If any diſtiller ſhall uſe a private pipe for conveyance of diſtilled liquor, he forfeits 100 l. And private ſtills to be ſeized, for which a ſearch may be made by officers of exciſe by virtue of a juſtice's warrant. 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 4. Diſtillers, &c. are to make an entry of all warehouſes for keeping brandy, on pain of 20 l. and forfeiture of the liquors; and brandy ſhall not be ſold but in warehouſes and places entered, under the penalty of 40 s. per gallon, by Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 20. All mixed or compound waters or ſpirits, commonly called Geneva, &c. in the poſſeſſion of diſtillers, are liable to a duty of 5 s. per gallon; and entries to be made of ſtills, etc. under penalty of 20 l. And none of the ſaid mixed liquors ſhall be expoſed to ſale, but in ſome place that is entered, on pain of forfeiting 40 s. a gallon; and if any diſtiller diſtills, or ſells any ſpirits, not of full proof, he ſhall pay the like forfeiture: Alſo ſellers or retailers of any compound liquors, in leſs quantities than a gallon, are to take out a licence at the exciſe-office for the ſame, and pay down 20 l. and ſelling without ſuch licence, to forfeit 50 l. Selling brandy about the ſtreets, in any wheelbarrow or on a ſhed, or other place, incurs a penalty of 10 l. leviable by juſtices of peace: But this act ſhall not extend to arrack, rum, citron water, Iriſh uſquebaugh, etc. Stat. 6 Geo. 2. c. 17.

The duty on compound waters or ſpirits, and French brandy, etc. taken off, and duties granted of 1 s. and 2 s. per gallon, to be raiſed in the ſame manner as exciſe upon beer, and ale, etc. And diſtillers or other perſons may export ſpirits, drawn from corn of Great Britain, on oath, and that duties are paid, and ſhall be allowed a drawback of 4 l. 18 s. per ton, etc. Cyder uſed in diſtillation, is exempted from duty; but diſtillers uſing it otherwiſe, ſhall forfeit 5 l. Stat. 6 Geo. 2. cap. 17. No diſtillers, or others, ſhall retail any brandy, rum, arrack, Geneva, etc. by any name, in any leſs quantities than two gallons, without taking out a licence, and paying 50 l. to the next office of exciſe, etc. on pain of forfeiting 100 l. and ſhall pay 20 s. per gallon: And the retailers to make a true entry of all their warehouſes, ſhops, cellars, and the liquors therein, under the penalty of 20 l. and 40 s. for every gallon concealed, or making any clandeſtine increaſe, etc.

Officers for the duties may enter warehouſes, etc. and take an account of liquor, and perſons refuſing them entrance ſhall forfeit 50 l. None may contract with any workman or ſervant, to pay him his wages, ſo much in money, and the reſt in brandy, etc. And hawkers and ſellers of brandy about the ſtreets, etc. to forfeit 10 l. or be committed for two months. But phyſicians and apothecaries may uſe ſpirituous liquors in medicines for ſick perſons; and diſtillers may exerciſe any other trade. 9 Geo. 2. c. 23. Where any perſons are not able to pay the fines, commiſſioners of exciſe to advance the rewards for information out of money in their hands; and the offenders to be committed to the houſe of correction, and there ſtript naked from the middle and whipped, etc. Stat. 10. Geo. 2. c. 17. Occupiers of any houſe or place, where any ſpirituous liquors ſhall be ſold leſs than two gallons, if privy thereto, are to be deemed retailers thereof, and forfeit 100 l. And if any perſon to the number of five or more, in a riotous manner aſſemble to reſcue offenders, or to aſſault, beat or wound informers they ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony, and be tranſported. 11 Geo. 2. c. 26.

By the 16 Geo. 2. c. 8. Great duties laid on ſpirituous liquors by former ſtatutes, and on licences for retailing the ſame, are repealed, and other duties granted; and no perſons ſhall retail any diſtilled ſpirituous liquors, or ſtrong waters, in public or private, without taking out a licence from the commiſſioners of the exciſe, etc. and paying 20 s. yearly, on pain of forfeiting 10 l. or to be committed to the houſe of correction, and there kept to hard labour two months. Theſe licences are not granted to any perſons, but thoſe only that keep taverns, inns, ale-houſes or coffee-houſes; and they muſt be firſt licenſed to ſell ale or ſpirituous liquors by two or more juſtices of peace, to be enabled to retail ſuch liquors: But none ſhall be deemed a retailer, who does not ſell it to be drank in any place belonging to him, or ſend it abroad, in leſs quantities than a pint. Stat. 16 Geo. 2. cap. 8. By the Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 17. All penalties by the Stat. 16 Geo. 2. c. 8. and by this act impoſed, may be ſued for, recovered, levied and mitigated by ſuch ways and means as any penalty may be ſued for by any law of exciſe: But the juſtice may, if he think proper, inſtead of levying the penalty, commit the offender to the houſe of correction, to be kept to hard labour for two months, and be whipt before diſcharged.

Licences granted as aforeſaid to any perſon, who ſhall afterwards, during the continuance of his licence, exerciſe the trade of a diſtiller, grocer, or chandler, or keep a brandy ſhop for ſale of ſpirituous liquors, ſhall be void, and the offender forfeit 10 l. Every perſon, who ſhall retail ſpirituous liquors to be drank in his houſe, &c. or retail or ſend the ſame abroad in leſs quanties than two gallons, without a licence, ſhall be deemed a retailer, and forfeit 10 l. for every offence. Where offenders are not able to pay the penalties, but in lieu thereof are ſent to the houſe of correction, the commiſſioners of exciſe, may order a reward to the informer, not exceeding 5 l. by the Stat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 39.

Diſtillers within the bills of mortality may have licences on payment of 5 l. yearly. Diſtillers in partnerſhip to have but one licence. And no diſtiller ſhall have a licence, unleſs, inhabiting in the city of London, he pay to church and poor rates, for the value of 20 l. and in any other parts for the value of 10 l. in the pariſh he exerciſes his ſaid trade: And he ſhall not, by virtue of ſuch licence, retail ſpirituous liquors but in his own ſhop, under the penalty of 10 l. And if he ſells any ſpirituous liquors to be drank, or ſuffer it to be drank in his ſhop, he ſhall forfeit 10 l. All ſuch penalties to be ſued for, &c. as above is mentioned. And every perſon found tipling in a diſtiller's ſhop, ſhall forfeit 20 s. And by the Stat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 12. an additional duty is laid on ſpirituous liquors.

By Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 40. No diſtiller ſhall have a licence to ſell ſpirituous liquors. And no perſon ſhall be licenſed but ſuch as pay to church and poor. By Stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 13. Commiſſioners, &c. within the limits of the head office of exciſe in London, may grant licences for retailing ſpirituous liquors to perſons renting houſes of 12 l. per annum, though not rated to the poor's rate. By the Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 40. Diſtillers ſelling ſpirituous liquors to be unlawfully retailed, or to unlicenſed retailers, ſhall forfeit treble the value of the liquors. And for the laying an additional duty upon ſpirituous liquors, and reſtraining the retailing of ſpirituous liquors; ſee further in the ſaid Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 40. and 26 Geo. 2. c. 13. See alſo Stat. 33 Geo. 2. c. 9. who are to be deemed common diſtillers, and for the penalty on malt diſtillers making gin.

The making of low wines or ſpirits, from wheat, wheat-flour, or any materials, mixed with wheat, &c. prohibited for a limited time. 11 Geo. 3. c. 1. ſect. 15. 12 Geo. 3. c. 1. 13 Geo. 3. c. 3. ſect. 16. Theſe ſtatutes are cited as uſeful laws, which may probably be often renewed, to the great benefit of the poor.

There is a penalty on malt diſtillers making gin, by 13 Geo. 3. c. 3. ſect. 24.

N. B. On the Stat. 16 Geo. 2. c. 8. there were many debates in the Houſe of Lords, and the Biſhops ſtrongly oppoſed the bill, it being to lay a ſmall duty per gallon, on the liquor at the ſtill head, and a licence to coſt but 20 s. to be granted only to ſuch as had licence to ſell ale, whereby greater opportunities were given to the poor, to come at pernicious ſpirituous liquors, contrary to the end propoſed by thoſe who favoured the bill. See Debates in the Houſe of Lords, 8 Vol. from fo. 349, to 415, incluſive.

Diſtreſs, (Diſtrictio) Signifies moſt commonly any thing which is taken and diſtrained for rent behind, or other duty: And by the Common law, diſtreſſes for rent were not to be ſold, but only detained for inforcing payment of the rent; but this is altered by ſtatute. A man may take a diſtreſs for homage, fealty, or any ſervices; for fines and amercements; and for damage-feaſant, &c. And the effect of it is to compel the party either to replevy the diſtreſs, and conteſt the taking in an action againſt the diſtrainer; or, which is more uſual, to compound or pay the debt or duty, for which he was diſtrained.

There are likewiſe diſtreſſes in actions compulſory to cauſe a man to appear in court: And of theſe there is a diſtreſs perſonal, of a man's moveable goods, and profits of lands, &c. for contempt in not appearing after ſummoned; and diſtreſſes real, upon immoveable goods. And none ſhall be diſtrained to anſwer for any thing touching their freeholds, but by the King's writ. 52 Hen. 3. c. 1.

Diſtreſs is alſo divided into finite and infinite: Finite, is that which is limited by law, how often it ſhall be made to bring the party to trial of action, as once, twice, &c. And infinite, is without limitation, until the party appears; which is likewiſe applicable to jurors not appearing: Then it hath had a further diviſion into a grand diſtreſs, and ordinary diſtreſs; the former whereof extends to all the goods and chattels which the party hath within the county. F. N. B. 904. Old Nat. Br. 43, 113. Brit. c. 26. f. 52.

Herein is to be conſidered:

I. Who may diſtrain, and for what.
II. At what time and in what manner the diſtreſs ſhould be made.

I. Who may diſtrain and for what.

Of common right a perſon may diſtrain for rents, and all manner of ſervices; and for rent reſerved upon a gift in tail, leaſe for life, years, &c. though there be no clauſe of diſtreſs in the deed, ſo as the reverſion be in himſelf: But on a feoffment in fee, a diſtreſs may not be taken, unleſs expreſly reſerved in the deed. Co. Lit. 57, 205. Doctor and Student, cap. 9. See Co. Lit. 204.

A man grants a rent out of the manor of D. and further, that if the rent be behind, the grantee ſhall diſtrain for it in the manor of S. this is a rent in the manor of D. and only a penalty on the other manor. 1 Shep. Abr. 567. If a perſon ſeiſed of land in fee, demiſe it to one upon condition to pay his wife 5 l. a year rent, and if it be behind and in arrear, that ſhe ſhall diſtrain for it; the wife may take a diſtreſs for the rent. Dyer 3, 48. There is a lord and tenant by 3 l. rent and fealty, the lord dies, and his wife is endowed of the thirds of the ſeigniority; here ſhe may diſtrain for one pound, and the heir for two pounds: So if a rent be divided amongſt parceners, each of them may have a diſtreſs for her part; but this may not be till the partition is made. Bro. 45.

If one jointenant make a gift in tail, of the land, reſerving a certain rent, and the rent be in arrear; he may not diſtrain the beaſts of the other jointenant. 33 H. 6. 35. But if A. and B. are tenants in common, and A. leaſes his moiety to C. for years, rendring rent, and C. leaſe it to B. if the rent is behind, A. may take a diſtreſs of the cattle of B. his fellow tenant in common. 7 Rep. 23. Moor 558.

To juſtify taking a diſtreſs, the party muſt ſee he hath good cauſe to diſtrain; that he have power to take the diſtreſs, and from the perſon from whom he takes it; that the thing, for the quality of it, be diſtrainable, and he diſtrain it in due time and place, &c. He who takes a diſtreſs for another, ought to have good warrant for doing it; and muſt do it in his name: And a bailiff or ſervant, may diſtrain for his maſter. 1 Cro. 748. 2 Cro. 436. Godb. 110. A diſtreſs ought to be made of ſuch things whereof the ſheriff may make replevin, and deliver again in as good plight and condition as they were at the time of the taking. Co. Lit. 47.

Diſtreſſes are to be of a thing valuable, whereof ſome body hath a property; things feræ naturæ, as dogs, conies, &c. may not be diſtrained. 1 Rol. Abr. 664, 666. It is the ſame of cattle of the plough, beaſts of huſbandry, ſheep, or horſes joined to a cart, with a rider upon it. 1 Vent. 36. This means a diſtreſs for rent, &c. contra of diſtreſs damage feaſant.

But it has been adjudged, that horſes may be taken from a cart loaded, though it has been a diſputed caſe, whether they could be ſeparated. Sid. 422. Raym. 18. A horſe with a rider upon his back; or a horſe in an inn, or put into a common; an ax in a man's hand, cutting down wood; or any thing a perſon carries about him; utenſils and inſtruments of a man's trade or profeſſion, or the books of a ſcholar; corn in a mill, or goods in a market to be ſold for the uſe of the public; materials in a weaver's ſhop, for making of cloth; another perſon's garment in the houſe of a taylor, &c. are not diſtrainable; nor is any thing that is fixed to the freehold of a houſe, as a furnace, doors, windows, boards, &c. 1 Sid. 422, 440. Co. Lit. 47. 2 Danv. Abr. 461.

But goods, cattle, not of the plough, &c. ſheaves of corn; corn in the ſtraw, or threſhed; and carts with corn, (but not victuals) hay in a barn, or ricks of hay; money in a bag ſealed, though not out of a bag, &c. may be diſtrained for rent: And ſo may cattle or goods driving to market, if put into a paſture by the way; and beaſts of a ſtranger, in the landlord's ground, being levant and couchant, and having well reſted themſelves there. Co. Lit. 47. 1 Lutw. 214. Mod. 385. If a driver of cattle aſks leave of the leſſor to put his cattle into ground for a night, and he gives leave, as well as the leſſee; yet it is ſaid he is not concluded for diſtraining them for rent. 2 Vent. 59. 2 Danv. 642.

Relief given in equity in theſe caſes. See Chancery. 2 Vern. 129. But the goods of a carrier are privileged, and cannot be diſtrained for rent, though the waggon wherein loaded, is put into the barn of a houſe, &c. on the road. 1 Salk. 249. If the fences of another man's ground be out of repair, and the neighbour's cattle eſcape there, and are levant and couchant, without any freſh purſuit after them, they may be diſtrained for rent; for the land is debtor for the rent, and the landlord muſt reſort thither, and is not to inquire whoſe cattle they are which he finds therein. 1 Rol. Rep. 124. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 667. But if the owner freſhly purſues the cattle, they are not diſtrainable; becauſe they are ſuppoſed to be always in his view and poſſeſſion.

If the owner of the cattle is to maintain the fences, in ſuch caſe, if they eſcape into another's ground, they may be diſtrained before levant and couchant, and notwithſtanding freſh purſuit. 1 Nelſ. Ibid. And diſtreſſes for rent are to be reaſonable, and not exceſſive; and not to be taken in the King's highway, or the common ſtreet; or in the ancient fees of the church. 51 H. 3. ſtat. 4. 52 H. 3. c. 15. 9 Ed. 2. ſtat. 1. c. 9. Except in caſe of an amercement in the leet. Vide poſt.

And where a diſtreſs is taken it may be replevied in five days; if the tenant and owner of the goods do not in that time after taken, and notice given, and of the cauſe, left at the dwelling houſe, &c. replevy the ſame according to law; then the perſon diſtraining, may, with the under ſheriff of the county, or conſtable of the place, &c. (who are required to be aſſiſting) cauſe the goods to be appraiſed by two ſworn appraiſers, and ſold to ſatisfy the rent, &c. leaving the overplus in the conſtable's hands for the uſe of the owner. Stat. 2 W. & M. c. 5.

All diſtreſſes for rent muſt be made on the premiſſes, by the Common law: But by ſtatute, if any tenant fraudulently removes goods from off the premiſſes, the landlord may in five days ſeize ſuch goods wheresoever found, as a diſtreſs for the rent in arrear; unleſs the goods are ſold for a valuable conſideration before the ſeizure. 8 Ann. c. 17. By 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. thirty days allowed. And, whereas before that ſtatute, for rent due the laſt day of the term, the leſſor could not diſtrain; becauſe the term ended before the rent was due; (and the leſſee had the whole day to pay it; and it was the ſame, where the leſſee held over his term, for rent incurred during the term. Co. Lit. 47. Now by the ſtat. 8 Ann. c. 17. where leaſes are expired, a diſtreſs may be taken, provided it be done within ſix months, and during the landlord's title and tenant's poſſeſſion.

Diſtreſſes for ſervices are to be on the land: But for an amercement in a leet, the diſtreſs may be taken any where within the hundred, as well out of the land, as on it, wherever the cattle are of him that is amerced; for the amercement charges only the perſon, and not the land; and for this a diſtreſs may be taken in the high ſtreet. 2 Danv. Abr. 644, 645. The lord cannot diſtrain for amercements in a court-baron, without a preſcription; though he may in the leet: And the goods and cattle of another, may not be taken in diſtreſs on my ground, for an amercement, &c. ſet upon me in a court-leet or court-baron. 11 Rep. 44. 12 H. 7. 13. For ſervices a diſtreſs cannot be taken but where the ſervices are certain; or may be reduced to a certainty. Co. Lit. 96.

II. At what time, and in what manner, the diſtreſs ſhould be made.

A diſtreſs for rent cannot be made in the night: Nor may gates, &c be broke open to make a diſtreſs; or the landlord enter into the tenant's houſe for that purpoſe, unleſs the doors are open. Co. Lit. 142, 161. One may break an inner door of a houſe, &c. to take the diſtreſs; if the outer doors be open. Comb. 17. Rep. Temp. Hard. per Annaly, p. 168. Browning v. Dann and others. Where a landlord comes to diſtrain cattle, which he ſees on the tenant's ground, if the tenant, or any other, to prevent the diſtreſs, drives the cattle off the land, the landlord may make freſh purſuit, and diſtrain them: Though if before the diſtreſs, the owner of the cattle tenders his rent, and a diſtreſs is taken afterwards, it is wrongful. 2 Inſt. 107, 160.

Two diſtreſſes cannot be taken for one rent, if there were ſufficient goods when the firſt diſtreſs was made; but if there were not then a ſufficient diſtreſs, they may. Cro. Eliz. 13. Lutw. 1536. But by Stat. 17 Car. 2. cap. 1. When the value of cattle diſtrained ſhall be found not to be of the value of the arrears of rent, for which the diſtreſs was taken, the perſon diſtraining, his executors, &c. may take further diſtreſſes, for ſuch arrears.

A aiſtreſs of cattle muſt be brought to the common pound, or be kept in an open place; and if they are put into a common pound, the owner is to take notice of it at his peril; but if in any other open place, notice is to be given to the owner, that he may feed them; and then if the cattle die for want of food, the tenant ſhall bear the loſs; and the landlord may diſtrain again for his rent. 5 Rep. 90. Co. Lit. 47, 96. See infra. Where one impounds cattle diſtrained, he cannot juſtify the tying them in the pound: If he ties a beaſt, and it is ſtrangled, he muſt anſwer it in damages. 1 Salk. 248. If the perſon diſtraining damage feaſant put the diſtreſs in a broken pound, and the diſtreſs eſcapes, he can have no action for the ſame: it is otherwiſe if from a good pound, without his default, when he may have action for the treſpaſs. Salk. Ibid. By ſtatute, none ſhall drive a diſtreſs out of the county, on pain to be fined and amerced: and no diſtreſs of cattle ſhall be driven out of the hundred where taken to any pound, except to a pound overt in the ſame county, and not above three miles diſtant; nor ſhall any diſtreſs be impounded in ſeveral places under the penalty of 5 l. and treble damages. 52 H. 3. c. 4. 1 P. & M. cap. 12.

After a diſtreſs is in the pound, it is ſaid to be in cuſtodia legis, ſo that the owner of it hath no abſolute property therein; and therefore he cannot ſell or forfeit it, nor may the ſame be taken in execution, &c. but it muſt be as a pledge or means to help the party diſtraining to his debt or duty. Co. Lit. 190. Finch's Ley 135. Cattle diſtrained may not be uſed, becauſe by law they are only as a pledge; unleſs it be for the owner's benefit, by milking, &c. Cro. Jac. 148.

When a diſtreſs is taken of houſhold goods, or other dead things, they are to be impounded in a houſe, or other pound covert, &c. And if the diſtreſs is damaged, the diſtrainer muſt anſwer it. Wood's Inſt. 191. And they are to be removed immediately; except corn or hay, by Stat. 2 W. & M. ſeſſ. 1. cap. 5. But if a landlord doth not remove goods immediately, but quits them till another day, during which time they are taken away, it is not a reſcous, for want of poſſeſſion. Mod. Ca. 215, 1 Nelſ. 672. See Infra, Diſtreſs for Rent.

Where goods are unlawfully diſtrained, the owner may reſcue them, before they are impounded; but not afterwards. Co. Lit. 47. But the ſafeſt way is to replevy, as there are few caſes, in law, where a man is allowed to be his own judge, if any. If lands lie in ſeveral counties, a diſtreſs may be made in one county for the whole rent. Co. Lit. 154. And if a landlord comes into a houſe, and ſeizes upon ſome goods as a diſtreſs, in the name of all the goods in the houſe; this is a good ſeizure of all. 6 Mod. 215. If any diſtreſs and ſale be made where there is no rent due, the owner of the goods diſtrained ſhall recover double the value of the goods, and full coſts, by 2 W. & M. ſeſſ. 1. c. 5. Alſo by the Common law, if a lord or other perſon ſhall diſtrain ſeveral times for his ſervice or rent, when none is in arrear, the tenant may have an aſſiſe de ſovent diſtreſs, &c. F. N. B. 176. See Recaption, Replevin and Reſcous.

By the Stat. 27 Geo. 2. c. 20. Juſtices in their warrants of diſtreſs, are to limit a time for the ſale of their goods; the conſtable making ſuch diſtreſs may deduct the reaſonable charges of detaining, keeping, and ſelling ſuch diſtreſs, out of the money ariſing by the ſale; and the overplus, if any, after ſuch charges, and alſo the penalty or ſum of money, ſhall be fully paid, ſhall be returned to the owner of the goods diſtrained; and the conſtable, if required, ſhall ſhew the warrant to the party whoſe goods are diſtrained, and ſuffer a copy thereof to be taken.——This act not to alter or repeal the ſtatutes, 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 34. and 1 Geo. 1. c. 6. relating to Diſtreſſes on Quakers for Tithes and Church Rates. See the ſtatutes 2 W. & M. Seſſ. 1. c. 5. 6 Ann. c. 14. 8 Ann. c. 14. And 11 Geo. 2. c. 19.

Diſtreſs for rent by 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. which has much altered our law in this caſe: if any tenant of lands or tenements ſhall fraudulently carry away his goods, to prevent diſtreſs, the landlord may, within thirty days after, diſtrain them wherever they ſhall be found, as if they had been on the premiſſes; but no ſuch goods ſhall be diſtrained, if ſold bona fide for valuable conſideration before ſeizure, to any perſon not privy to the fraud. Tenants committing ſuch fraud, or others aſſiſting, ſhall forfeit double the value of the goods carried off, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. And where they ſhall not exceed 50*l.* value, the landlord may exhibit a complaint before two juſtices of peace, who are to examine the fact, and enquire into the value of the goods, and thereupon order the offender to pay double value, leviable by diſtreſs and ſale; and, for want thereof, commit the offender to the houſe of correction for ſix months. Landlords, or their agents, may, with the aſſiſtance of a conſtable, ſeize any goods fraudulently concealed in any houſe, outhouſe, &c.

And in caſe of a dwelling-houſe, on oath firſt made to ſome juſtice, of reaſon to ſuſpect that ſuch goods are therein, may break open the ſame, and diſtrain them: they may alſo diſtrain for rent and cattle, or ſtock of their tenants, feeding in any common; or corn, graſs, hops, fruits, &c. growing on the land, which they ſhall cut, gather, cure and lay up when ripe, in any proper place, giving notice to the tenant within a week where lodged, and diſpoſe thereof towards the ſatisfaction of the rent and charges; the appraiſement to be taken when cut or cured: but, if after a diſtreſs ſo taken, before the product be ripe and gathered, the tenant ſhall pay the rent, and charges of the diſtreſs, the ſaid diſtreſs ſhall ceaſe.

Perſons may ſecure diſtreſſes lawfully taken, and ſell them upon the premiſſes in like manner as may be done off the ſame, by 2 W. & M. ſeſſ. 1. c. 5. And any perſons may go to and from the premiſſes, to view, appraiſe, buy, or take away the goods of the purchaſer; and if a reſcous be made for the diſtreſs, the perſons aggrieved ſhall have the remedy given by the ſaid ſtatute.

Diſtreſſes made for rent juſtly due, ſhall not be unlawful, nor diſtrainers, treſpaſſers ab initio, for any irregularity in the diſpoſition thereof; but the parties grieved to have ſatisfaction for ſpecial damage, in an action on the caſe, &c. But no tenant ſhall recover by ſuch action, if tender of amends hath been made before the action brought. And in all actions of treſpaſs, or on the caſe relating to the entry, diſtreſs, or ſale, made by landlords for rents, the defendants may plead the general iſſue, and if the plaintiffs become non-ſuit, &c. ſhall recover double coſts of ſuit. Stat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. See Leaſe. Vide the Statute.

Diſtreſs of the King. By the Common law no ſubject can diſtrain out of his fee or ſeignory; unleſs cattle are driven to a place out of the fee, to hinder the lord's diſtreſs, &c. But the King may diſtrain for rent-ſervice, or fee-farm, in all the lands of the tenant whereſoever they be; not only on lands held of himſelf, but of others: where his tenant is in actual poſſeſſion, and the land manured with his own beaſts, &c. 2 Inſt. 132. 2 Danv. Abr. 643.

Diſtreſs of a Town. If a town be aſſeſſed to a certain ſum, a diſtreſs may be taken in any part, ſubject to the whole duty. 2 Danv. 643.

Diſtribution of inteſtates eſtates, according to the 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. may be ſued for as well in the Chancery, as in the Eccleſiaſtical Court: and if the perſons appointed to have it, die before a diſtribution made, their ſhares go to their executors, &c. 2 Chan. Rep. 374. Where the remainder or ſurplus of an eſtate, not diſpoſed of by will, ſhall go and remain to the next of kin, by the ſtatute of diſtributions. Vide 2 Vern. 361, 676. See Adminiſtrator, alſo Executor and Inteſtates, and 29 Car. 2. c. 3. 1 Jac. 2. c. 17. And 14 Geo. 2. c. 20.

Diſtrictione Scaccarii, A ſtatute ſo called. 51 H. 3. ſtat. 4.

Diſtrict, (diſtrictus) A territory, or place of juriſdiction; the circuit wherein a man may be compelled to appear; alſo the place in which one hath the power of diſtraining: and where we ſay hors de ſon fee, out of the fee, it has been uſed for extra diſtrictum ſuum. Brit. c. 120.

Diſtringas, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff, or other officer commanding him to diſtrain a man for a debt to the King, &c. or for his appearance at a day affixed. There is a great diverſity of this writ; which was ſometimes of old called conſtringas. F. N. B. 138. There is alſo a diſtringas againſt perſons intitled to privilege of parliament. Vide 10 Geo. 3, c. 50. The iſſues levied may be ſold to pay the plaintiff's coſts. This is an act of great utility, a very valuable acquiſition to the people; and it is ſaid we are principally indebted for it to Lord Mansfield, who has frequently recommended to the gentlemen at the bar, who are members of the Houſe of Commons, the procuring of ſtatute laws beneficial to the public.

Diſtringas Juratores, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff, to diſtrain upon a jury to appear; and return iſſues on their lands, &c. for non-appearance. Where an iſſue in fact is joined to be tried by a jury, which is returned by the ſheriff in a panel upon a venire facias for that purpoſe; thereupon there goes forth a writ of diſtringas jurator', to the ſheriff, commanding him to have their bodies in court, &c. at the return of the writ. 1 Lil. Abr. 483. And the writ of diſtringas jur' ought to be delivered to the ſheriff ſo timely, that he may warn the jury to appear four days before the writ is returnable, if the jurors live within forty miles of the place of trial; and eight days if they live farther off. Ibid. 484. There may be an alias, or pluries diſtringas jur' where the jury doth not appear.

Dividends of Bankrupts Effects, Aſſignees, within twelve months after commiſſion iſſued, to give twenty-one days notice of a meeting for a dividend, then produce their accounts, and verify them on oath, if required, when the commiſſioners are to direct a dividend. Within eighteen months after the commiſſion, a final dividend is to be made. See Black. Com. 2 V. 487, 488. and the ſtatutes concerning Bankrupts.

Dividend in the Exchequer, Is taken for one part of an indenture. 10 Ed. 1. c. 11.

Dividend in the Univerſity, Is that part or ſhare which every one of the fellows do juſtly and equally divide among themſelves of their annual ſtipend.

Dividend in Law Proceedings, A dividing of ſees and perquiſites between officers ariſing from writs, &c. Practiſ. Solic'.

Dividend of Merchants, Is where a juſt ſhare of profits in trade, is aſſigned to any one.

Dividend in Stocks, A dividable proportionate ſhare of the intereſt of ſtocks, erected on public funds; as the South-Sea, India, Bank, and African ſtocks, &c. payable to the adventurers half yearly.

Diviſa, Hath various ſignifications: ſometimes it is uſed for a device, award or decree: ſometimes for deviſe of a portion or parcel of lands, &c. by will: and ſometimes it is taken for the bounds or limits of diviſion of a pariſh or farm, &c. As diviſas perambulare, to walk the bounds of a pariſh; in which ſenſe it has been extended to the diviſion between countries, and given name to towns, as to the Deviſes, a town in Wiltſhire, ſituate on the confines of the Weſt Saxon and Mercian kingdoms. Leg. H. 2. cap. 9. Leg. Inæ, c. 44. Leg. H. 1. c. 57. Cowel.

Divil on the Neck. A tormenting engine made of iron, ſtraitening and winching the neck of a man with his legs together, in a horrible manner, ſo that the more he ſtirreth in it the ſtraiter it preſſeth him; formerly in uſe among the perſecuting papiſts. Foxe's Acts ſub. R. H. 8.

Divorce, (divortium a divertendo) Is a ſeparation of two, de facto married together, made by law: it is a judgment ſpiritual; and therefore, if there be occaſion, it ought to be reverſed in the ſpiritual court. Co. Lit. 335. And, beſides ſentence of divorce, in the old law, the woman divorced was to have of her huſband a writing called a bill of divorce, which was to this effect, viz. I promiſe that hereafter I will lay no claim to thee, &c.

There are many divorces, mentioned in our books; as cauſa præcontractus; cauſa frigiditatis; cauſa conſanguinitatis; cauſa affinitatis; cauſa profeſſionis, &c. But the uſual divorces are only of two kinds, i. e. a menſa & thoro, from bed and board; and a vinculo matrimonii, from the very bond of marriage. A divorce a menſa & thoro diſſolveth not the marriage; for the cauſe of it is ſubſequent to the marriage, and ſuppoſes the marriage to be lawful: this divorce may be by reaſon of adultery in either of the parties, for cruelty of the huſband, &c. And as it doth not diſſolve the marriage, ſo it doth not debar the woman of her dower; or baſtardize the iſſue, or make void any eſtate for the life of huſband and wife, &c. Co. Lit. 235. 3 Inſt. 89. 7 Rep. 43. The woman under ſeparation by this divorce, muſt ſue by her next friend; and ſhe may ſue her huſband in her own name for alimony. Wood's Inſt. 62.

A divorce a vinculo matrimonii, abſolutely diſſolves the marriage, and makes it void from the beginning, the cauſes of it being precedent to the marriage; as præcontract with ſome other perſon, conſanguinity or affinity, within the Levitical degrees, impotency, impuberty, &c. On this divorce dower is gone; and if by reaſon of præcontract, conſanguinity, or affinity; the children begotten between them are baſtards. Co. Lit. 335. 2 Inſt 93, 687. But in theſe divorces, the wife, it is ſaid, ſhall receive all again that ſhe brought with her, becauſe the nullity of the marriage ariſes through ſome impediment; and the goods of the wife were given for her advancement in marriage, which now ceaſeth: but this is where the goods are not ſpent; and if the huſband give them away during the coverture without any colluſion, it ſhall bind her: if ſhe knows her goods unſpent, ſhe may bring action of detinue for them; and as for money, &c. which cannot be known, ſhe muſt ſue in the ſpiritual court. Dyer. 62. Nelſ. Abr. 675. This divorce enables the parties to marry again. But in the other caſes, if either party wants to marry any other perſon, a power for ſo doing muſt be obtained by act of parliament.

Where lands were formerly given to huſband and wife, and the heirs of their bodies in frank marriage; if they had been afterwards divorced, the wife was to have her whole lands; and by divorce an eſtate tale of baron and feme, it is ſaid, may be extinct. Godb. 18. After a ſentence of divorce is given in the ſpiritual court cauſa præcontractus, the iſſue of that marriage ſhall be baſtards, ſo long as the ſentence ſtands unrepealed: and no proof ſhall be admitted at Common law to the conrrary. Co. Lit. 235. 1 Nelſ. 674. And iſſue of a ſecond marriage in ſuch caſe, may inherit until the ſentence is repealed. 2 Leon. 207. Though it is not ſo where the divorce is a menſa & thoro, for adultery, &c. in which caſe the marriage ſtill continues. Cro. Car. 462. And if after a divorce a menſa & thoro, either of the parties marry again, the other being living, ſuch marriage is a mere nullity; and by ſentence to confirm the firſt contract, ſhe and her firſt huſband become huſband and wife to all intents, without any formal divorce from the ſecond. 1 Leon. 173. Alſo on this divorce, as the marriage continues, marrying again while either party is living, hath been held within the ſtatute, 1 Jac. 1. c. 11. Felony, for having married a ſecond huſband, or wife, the former being alive; where a woman was divorced, and inhibited by the ſtatute not to marry during her huſband's life. Cro. Car. 333. 1 Nelſ. 674.

A divorce for adultery was anciently a vinculo matrimonii; and therefore in the beginning of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the opinion of the church of England was, that after a divorce for adultery, the parties might marry again; but in Foliambe's caſe, H. 44 El. in the ſtar-chamber, that opinion was changed; and archbiſhop Bancroft, by the advice of divines, held, that adultery was only a cauſe of divorce a menſa & thoro. 3 Salk. 138.

On a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, by reaſon of præcontract, &c. the parties may marry again: and in divorces for adultery, ſeveral acts of parliament have allowed the innocent party to marry again. Sentence of divorce muſt be given in the life of the parties, and not afterwards: but it may be repealed in the ſpiritual court, after the death of the parties. Co. Lit. 33, 244. 7 Rep. 44. 5 Rep. 98. Upon the divorce of a man and his wife, equity will not aſſiſt the wife in recovering dower, at the huſband's death, but ſhall leave her to the law; neither ought the ſpiritual court to grant her adminiſtration, ſhe not being ſuch a wife as is intitled to it; nor will the Chancery decree her a diſtributive ſhare. Preced. Canc. 111, 112. A divorce ſhall be tried by the biſhop's certificate; and not by a jury.

Diurnalis, Signifies as much land as can be ploughed in a day, with an ox; in ſome authors, it is written diuturna. Blount.

Docket, or Dogget, Is a brief in writing on a ſmall piece of paper or parchment, containing the effect of a greater writing. 2 & 3 P. & M. cap. 6. Weſt Symbol. par. 2. ſect. 106. Dogs. The law takes notice of a greyhound, maſtiff dog, ſpaniel and tumbler; for trover will lie for them. Cro. Eliz. 125. Cro. Jac. 44. A man hath a property in a maſtiff: and where a maſtiff falls on another dog, the owner of that dog cannot juſtify the killing the maſtiff; unleſs there was no other way to ſave his dog, as that he could not take off the maſtiff, &c. 1 Saund. 84. 3 Salk. 139. The owner of a dog is bound to muzzle him if miſchievous, but not otherwiſe: and if a man doth keep a dog, that uſeth to bite cattle, &c. if after notice given to him of it, his dog ſhall do any hurt, the maſter ſhall anſwer for it. Ibid. By Stat. 10 Geo. 3. c. 18. Very ſevere penalties are inflicted on dog ſtealers.

Doctrines, illegal, aſſerting, or publiſhing. Doitkin, or doit, Was a baſe coin of ſmall value, prohibited by the Stat. 3 H. 5. c. 1. We ſtill retain the phraſe, in common ſaying, when we would undervalue a man, that he is not worth a doit.

Do Law, (facere legem) Is the ſame with to make law. Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 14.

Dole, (dola) A Saxon word ſignifying as much as pars or portio in the Latin; and anciently where a meadow was divided into ſeveral ſhares, it was called a dole meadow. 4 Jac. 1. cap. 11. See Dalus.

Dolefiſh, Seems to be the ſhare of fiſh, which the fiſhermen, yearly employed in the North ſeas, do cuſtomarily receive for their allowance. Stat. 35 H. 8. c. 7.

Dolg-bote, (Sax.) A recompence or amends, for a ſcar or wound. Sax. Dict. LL. Aluredi Reg. cap. 23.

Dollar, A piece of foreign coin, going for about 4*s.* 6*d. Lex. Mercat.*

Dom-boc, (Sax.) Signifies liber judicialis, as appears by the laws of K. Ed. 1. This, it is conjectured, was a book of ſtatutes of the Engliſh Saxons, wherein the laws of the ancient Saxon Kings were contained. Leg. Inæ. c. 29. See Dome-book.

Dome, or Doom, (from the Sax. dom) A judgment, ſentence, or decree. And ſeveral words end in dom; as kingdom, earldom, &c. from whence they may be applied to a juriſdiction of a lord, or a king. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. fol. 284. Alſo there is a dome of a church; ſuch as St. Paul's, &c.

Dome-book, or liber judicialis, A book compoſed under the direction of Alfred, for the general uſe of the whole kingdom, containing the local cuſtoms of the ſeveral provinces of the kingdom. This book is now loſt. Black. Com. 1 V. 64, 65. See id. 4 V. 404. and ſee alſo Dom-boc.

Domesday, (liber judiciarius, vel cenſualis Angliæ) Is a moſt ancient record, made in the time of William I. called the Conqueror, and now remaining in the Exchequer fair and legible, conſiſting of two volumes, a greater and a leſs; the greater containing a ſurvey of all the lands in England, except the counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, Weſtmorland, Durham, and part of Lancaſhire, which it is ſaid were never ſurveyed, and excepting Eſſex, Suffolk, and Norfolk; which three laſt are comprehended in the leſſer volume. There is alſo a third book, which differs from the others in form more than matter, made by the command of the ſame King. And there is a fourth book kept in the Exchequer which is called Domeſday; and, though a very large volume, is only an abridgment of the others. Likewiſe a fifth book is kept in the Remembrancer's office in the Exchequer, which has the name of Domeſday, and is the very ſame with the fourth before mentioned. Our anceſtors had many dome-books. King Alfred had a roll which he called Domeſday; and the Domeſday book made by Will. I. referred to the time of Edward the Confeſſor, as that of King Alfred did to the time of Ethelred, Vide ante. The fourth book of Domeſday having many pictures, and gilt letters in the beginning, relating to the time of King Edward the Confeſſor, this led him who made notes on Fitzherbert's Regiſter into a miſtake in p. 14. where he tells us, that liber Domeſday factus fuit tempore regis Edwardi.

The book of Domeſday was begun by five juſtices, aſſigned for that purpoſe in each county, in the year 1081, and finiſhed anno 1086. And it is generally known, that the queſtion whether lands are antient demeſne, or not, is to be decided by the Domeſday of Will. I. from whence there is no appeal: and it is a book of that authority, that even the Conqueror himſelf ſubmitted ſome caſes, wherein he was concerned, to be determined by it. The addition of day to this Dome book was not meant with any alluſion to the final day of judgment, as moſt perſons have conceived; but was to ſtrengthen and confirm it, and ſignifieth the judicial deciſive record or book of dooming judgment and juſtice. Hammond's Annot'. Camden calls this book Gulielmi Librum Cenſualem, the Tax Book of King William; and it was further called Magna Rolla Winton. The dean and chapter of York have a regiſter ſtiled Domeſday; ſo hath the biſhop of Worceſter; and there is an ancient roll in Cheſter caſtle, called Domeſday Roll. Blount. The editor (J. M.) hath been informed, that two learned gentlemen are tranſcribing Domeſday for publication, which will be a very valuable acquiſition to the public.

Domes-men, Judges, or men appointed to doom, and determine ſuits and controverſies: hence ægdeme, I deem, or judge. Vide days-man.

Domicellus, Is an old obſolete Latin word, anciently given as an appellation or addition to the King's natural ſons in France, and ſometimes to the eldeſt ſons of noblemen there; from whence we borrowed theſe additions: as ſeveral natural children of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaſter, are ſtiled domicelli by the charter of legitimation. 20 R. 2. But according to Thorn, the domicelli were only the better ſort of ſervants in monaſteries.——Domicellus Abbatis & Domicelli & Servientes Monaſterii, p. 1748, 1990.

Dominica in Ramis Palmarum, Palm-Sunday. Anno 23 Ed. 1.

Dominium, Signifies right or regal power. Paroch. Antiq. 498.

Dominus. This word prefixed to a man's name, in ancient times uſually denoted him a knight, or a clergyman; and ſometimes a gentleman, not a knight, eſpecially a lord of a manor.

Domo Reparanda, Is a writ that lies for one againſt his neighbour by the fall of whoſe houſe he fears a damage and injury to his own. Reg. Orig. 153.

Domus Converſorum, Was an ancient houſe built or appointed by King Hen. 3. for ſuch Jews as were converted to the Chriſtian faith: but King Ed. 3. who expelled the Jews from this kingdom, deputed the place for the cuſtody of the rolls and records of the Chancery. See Rolls.

Domus Dei, The hoſpital of St. Julian in Southampton, ſo called. Mon. Ang. tom. 2. 440.

Donatio Mortis Cauſa, A death-bed diſpoſition of property ſo called, viz. when a perſon in his laſt ſickneſs, apprehending his diſſolution near, delivers or cauſes to be delivered to another the poſſeſſion of any perſonal goods, (under which have been included bonds, and bills drawn by the deceaſed upon his banker) to keep in caſe of his deceaſe. This gift, if the donor dies, needs not the aſſent of his executor; yet it ſhall not prevail againſt creditors: and is accompanied with this implied truſt, that, if the donor lives, the property thereof ſhall revert to himſelf, being only given in contemplation of death, or mortis cauſa. Prec. Chan. 269. 1 P. Wms. 406, 411. 3 P. Wms. 357. Black. Com. 2 V. 514.

Donative, (donativum) Is a benefice merely given and collated by the patron to a man, without either preſentation to, or inſtitution by the ordinary, or induction by his order. F. N. B. 35. And donatives are ſo termed, becauſe they began only by the foundation and erection of the donor. Clergym. Law. 120. The King might of ancient time found a church or chapel, and exempt it from the juriſdiction of the ordinary: ſo he may by his letters patent give licence to a common perſon to found ſuch a church or chapel, and make it donative, not preſentable; and that the incumbent or chaplain ſhall be deprived by the founder and his heirs, and not by the biſhop; which ſeems to be the original of donatives in England. Gwin's Readings.

When the King ſounds a church, &c. donative, it is of courſe exempted from the ordinary's juriſdiction, though no particular exemption is mentioned; and the Lord Chancellor ſhall viſit the ſame: and where the King grants a licence to any common perſon to found a church or chapel, it may be donative, and exempted from the juriſdiction of the biſhop, ſo as to be viſited by the founder, &c. Co. Lit. 134. 2 Rol. Abr. 230. The reſignation of a donative muſt be to the donor or patron, and not to the ordinary; and donatives are not only free from all ordinary juriſdiction, but the patron and incumbent may charge the glebe to bind the ſucceſſor: and if the clerk is diſturbed, the patron may bring quare impedit, &c. Alſo the patron of a donative may take the profits thereof when it is vacant. Co. Lit. 344. Cro. Jac. 63.

If the patron of a donative will not nominate a clerk, there can be no lapſe: but the biſhop may compel ſuch patron to nominate a clerk by eccleſiaſtical cenſures; for though the church is exempt from the power of the ordinary, the patron is not exempted: and the clerk muſt be qualified like unto other clerks of Churches; no perſon being capable of a donative, unleſs he be a prieſt lawfully ordained, &c. Yelv. 61. Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 4. 1 Lill. 488.

There may be a donative of the King's gift with cure of ſouls, as the church of the Tower of London is: and if ſuch donative be procured for money, it will be within the ſtatute of ſimony. Mich 9 Car. B. R. A parochial church may be donative, and exempt from the ordinary's juriſdiction. Godolph. 262. The church of St. Mary le Bone in Middleſex is donative, and the incumbent being cited into the ſpiritual court, to take a licence from the biſhop to preach, pretending that it was a chapel, and that the parſon was a ſtipendiary; it was ruled in the King's Bench that it was a donative; and if the biſhop viſit, the court of B. R. will grant a prohibition. 1 Mod. 90. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 676.

If a patron of a donative doth once preſent his clerk to the ordinary, and the clerk is admitted, inſtituted, and inducted, then the donative ceaſeth; and it becomes a church preſentative. Co. Lit. 344. But when a donative is created by letters patent, by which lands are ſettled upon the parſon and his ſucceſſors, and he is to come in by the donation of the King, and his ſucceſſors; in this caſe, though there may be a preſentation to the donative, and the incumbent come in by inſtitution and induction, yet that will not deſtroy the donative. 2 Salk. 541. All biſhopricks being of the foundation of the King, they were in ancient time donative. 3 Rep. 75.

Donis, Statute de, The ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. viz. 13 Ed. 1. c. 1. called the ſtatute de donis conditionalibus. This ſtatute revives, in ſome ſort, the ancient feodal reſtraints which were originally laid on alienations, by enacting, that from thenceforth the will of the donor be obſerved; and that the tenements ſo given, (to a man and the heirs of his body) ſhould at all events go to the iſſue, if there were any; or if none, ſhould revert to the donor. See very judicious obſervations, &c. on this ſtatute, Black. Com. 2 V. 112. Tenant in fee tail is by virtue of this ſtatute. Lit. ſect. 3. And he may bar the intail by fine or recovery, conſequently evade the ſtatute.

Donor and Donee. Donor is he who gives lands or tenements to another in tail, &c. And the perſon to whom given is the donee.

Dorture, (dormitorium) Is the common room or chamber, where all the fryers, or religious of one convent, ſlept and lay all night. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 11.

Doſſale, A word uſed for hangings or tapeſtry.—— Doſſale ſive Tapeſium. Mat. Par.

Dote Aſſignanda, Is a writ that lay for a widow, where it was found by office, that the King's tenant was ſeiſed of lands in fee, or fee-tail at the day of his death, and that he held of the King in chief, &c. In which caſe, the widow came into the Chancery, and there made oath, that ſhe would not marry without the King's leave; whereupon ſhe had this writ to the eſcheator, to aſſign her dower, &c. But it was uſual to make the aſſignment of the dower in the Chancery, and to award a writ to the eſcheator, to deliver the lands aſſigned unto her. Stat. 15 Ed. 4. cap. 4. Reg. Orig. 297. F. N. B. 263. See Dower.

Dote unde nihil habet, Is a writ of dower, that lies for the widow againſt the tenant who bought land of her huſband in his life-time, whereof he was ſolely ſeiſed in fee-ſimple or fee-tail, and of which ſhe is dowable, F. N. B. 147. quæ. If it does not lie againſt the heir, or any other perſon ſeiſed of the land? See the law and the form of the writ in Booth's real actions 166. &c. See Dower.

Dotis Admenſuratione, Admeaſurement of dower, where the widow holds more than her ſhare, &c. See Admeaſurement. See Dower.

Double Plea, (duplex placitum) Is where a defendant alledgeth for himſelf two ſeveral matters, in bar of the plaintiff's action, when one of them is ſufficient; which ſhall not be admitted: as if a man plead ſeveral things, the one not depending upon the other, the plea is accounted double, and will not be allowed; but if they mutually depend on each other, and the party may not have the laſt plea without the firſt, then it ſhall be received. Kitch. 223. And where a double plea that is wrong, is pleaded; if the plaintiff reply thereto, and take iſſue of one matter; if that be found againſt him, he cannot afterwards move in arreſt of judgment; for by the replication it is allowed to be good. 18 Ed. 4. 17.

If a man pleads two or more matters, when he is compelled to ſhew them, it makes not the plea double; ſo it is where two diſtinct things are pleaded, which require but one anſwer: and in caſe a man pleads two ſeveral matters or things, and only one is material, the other being ſurpluſage, or but matter of inducement, and needing no anſwer, the plea is not double. Hob. 197. Where there are ſeveral inducements to a plea, they ſhall not make the plea double: and double pleas are allowable in aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, &c. but not in other actions. Jenk. Cent. 75.

By Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 4. It ſhall be lawful for any defendant or tenant in any action or ſuit, or for any plaintiff in replevin, in any court of record, with the leave of the ſame court, to plead as many ſeveral matters thereto, as he ſhall think neceſſary for his defence. That is, in ſo many ſeparate and diſtinct pleas, and where there are more pleas than one. By virtue of this ſtatute defendant is ſaid to plead double, by leave of the court.

An heir ſhall not have leave to plead riens per deſcent with another plea, except he make affidavit that he has riens per deſcent; nor ſhall an adminiſtrator have leave to plead plene adminiſtravit, and no aſſets, without an affidavit that he has no aſſets. 10 Mod. 334. Trin. 2 Geo. B. R. Carrington v. Warren. Sed qu. If this practice of making an affidavit, in theſe caſes, is now in uſe? Yet ſee Notes in C. B. 228, 234.

A motion was made for liberty to rejoin double, as being within the equity of the act, which allows pleading double. But the court ſaid, that they thought that this would be intirely inconvenient, and out of the reaſon of the act, and therefore refuſed it. 2 Barnard. Rep. 6 Trin. 5. Geo. 2. Anon.

After a judge's order for time to plead, pleading an iſſuable plea, defendant moved to plead double matter, and the queſtion was, whether a rule for that purpoſe ought to be granted or not? The court took time to conſider, and after conferring with the judges of other courts, gave defendant leave to plead double, pleading iſſuable pleas, and taking ſhort notice of trial. Notes in C. B. 244. Mich. 10 Geo. 2. Leighton v. Leighton.

Defendant had pleaded non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos, and moved to add to that plea, non aſſumpſit generally, which was denied. After defendant had pleaded a ſingle plea, he cannot have leave to plead double. Notes in C. B. 245. Hill. 10 Geo. 2. Nevil v. Fiſher.

The court gave defendant leave to plead double, viz. a diſtreſs for damage feaſant and for rent in arrear. This is not ſtronger than Not guilty and liberum tenementum, ſolvit ad diem, and a mutual debt, which have been granted. Notes in C. B. 247. Trin. 11 & 12 Geo. 2. Baynes v. Lutwidge.

All pleas ought to be ſingle, that the jury may not be troubled and perplexed with two many things at once. Smith's Rep. Angl. lib. 2. c. 13.

Double Quarrel, (duplex querela) Is a complaint made by any clerk, or other, to the archbiſhop of the province, againſt an inferior ordinary, for delaying or refuſing to do juſtice in ſome cauſe eccleſiaſtical; as to give ſentence, inſtitute a clerk, &c. and ſeems to be termed a double quarrel, becauſe it is moſt commonly made againſt both the judge, and him at whoſe ſuit juſtice is denied or delayed: the effect whereof is, that the archbiſhop taking notice of the delay, directs his letters under his authentical ſeal to all clerks of his province, commanding them to admoniſh the ordinary within a certain number of days to do the juſtice required, or otherwiſe to appear before him or his official, and there alledge the cauſe of his delay: and to ſignify to the ordinary, that if he neither perform the thing enjoined, nor appear and ſhew cauſe againſt it, he himſelf, in his court of audience, will forthwith proceed to do the juſtice that is due. Cowel.

Doubles, (Fr.) Signify as much as letters patent. Stat. 14 H. 6. c. 6.

The conſtable of Dover caſtle ſhall not hold plea of any foreign county within the caſtle gates, except it concern the keeping of the caſtle; nor ſhall he diſtrain the inhabitants of the ports, to plead elſewhere or otherwiſe than as they ought, according to the charters, &c. Stat. 28 Ed. 1. c. 7.

Dow, To give or endow, from the Latin word do.

Dowager, (dotata dotiſſa) A widow endowed; applied to the widows of Princes, Dukes, Earls, and other great perſonages.

Dowager, (Queen) Is the widow of the King, and as ſuch enjoys moſt of the privileges belonging to her as Queen conſort. But it is not high treaſon to conſpire her death, or violate her chaſtity; becauſe the ſucceſſion to the crown is not thereby endangered. But no man can marry her, without ſpecial licence from the King, on pain of forfeiting his lands and goods. 2 Inſt. 18. See Riley's Plac. Parl. 672. and Black. Com. 1 V. 224.

Dower, (dotarium) Is a portion which a widow hath of the lands of her huſband after his deceaſe, for the ſuſtenance of herſelf, and education of her children. 1 Inſt. 30.

IV. What ſhall be deemed a bar of dower.
V. Of the proceedings in dower.

I. Of the ſeveral kinds of dower.

There were formerly five kinds of dower in this kingdom. 1. Dower by the Common law, which is a third part of ſuch lands or tenements whereof the huſband was ſole ſeiſed in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, during the coverture; and this the widow is to enjoy during her life.

2. Dower by cuſtom, which is that part of the huſband's eſtate to which the widow is intitled after the death of her huſband, by the cuſtom of any manor or place, ſo long as ſhe lives ſole and chaſte, and this is more than one third part, for in ſome places ſhe ſhall have half the land, as by the cuſtom of gavelkind; and in divers manors the widow ſhall have the whole during her life, which is called her free-bench: but as cuſtom may inlarge; ſo it may abridge dower to a 4th part. Co. Lit. 33.

3. Dower ad oſtium eccleſiæ, made by the huſband himſelf immediately after the marriage, who named ſuch particular lands of which his wife ſhould be endowed; and in ancient time it was taken, that a man could not by this dower, endow his wife of more than a third part, though of leſs he might: and as the certainty of the land was openly declared by the huſband, the wife after his death might enter into the land of which ſhe was endowed without any other aſſignment. Co. Lit. 34. Lit. ſect. 39.

4. Dower ex aſſenſu patris, which likewiſe was of certain lands named by a ſon who was the huſband, with the conſent of his father, and always put in writing as ſoon as the ſon was married: and if a woman thus endowed, or ad oſtium eccleſiæ, after the death of her huſband, entered into the land allotted her in dower, and agreed thereto, ſhe was concluded to claim any dower by the Common law. Lit. ſect. 41.

5. Dower de la pluis belle, which was where the wife was endowed with the faireſt part of her huſband's eſtate; but of all theſe writs of dower, the two firſt are now only in uſe. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 679.

II. What woman ſhall be endowed, and of what eſtate.

Dower is much favoured in law, being for the benefit of widows: wherefore the wife of one non compos mentis, of an ideot, outlaw, or one attainted of felony, may be endowed: but not of a perſon attainted of treaſon; nor the wife of of an alien, Jew, &c. 1 Inſt. 33, 37. Stat. 1 Ed. 6. cap. 12. 5 Ed. 6. c. 11.

The wife of a man who is baniſhed ſhall have dower in his life-time; it is held otherwiſe, if he is profeſſed in religion: and a jointreſs of a baniſhed huſband, ſhall enjoy her jointure, in his life. Co. Lit. 133. Perk. 5, 307.

If a woman be of the age of nine years, at the death of her huſband, ſhe ſhall be endowed of whatſoever age he is; becauſe after the death of the huſband, the marriage is adjudged lawful. Co. Lit. 33.

Where the huſband's eſtate is ſuch, that by no poſſibility iſſue begotten on his wife might inherit as heir to him; there the wife may not be endowed: as if lands are given to a man and the heirs he ſhall beget on his preſent wife, and ſhe dies; and then he takes another wife, ſhe ſhall not have dower: but in caſe land be given to the huſband and wife in tail, the remainder in tail to the huſband, and the firſt wife dying without iſſue, he marries another wife; this ſecond wife will be intitled to dower, after his death. Lit. Sect. 53. 40 E. 3. 4. 2 Shep. Abr. 63. For here he hath an eſtate in tail. The wife of a tenant in common, but not a jointenant, ſhall have dower; and ſhe ſhall hold her part in common with the tenants in common. Kitch. 160.

The wife of a felo de ſe ſhall have dower. Plow. 261. a. 262. a. So if the huſband be outlawed in treſpaſs, or any civil action, for this works no corruption of blood, or forfeiture of lands. Bro. 82. Perk. 388. Co. Lit. 31. a.

If a woman being a lunatick kill her huſband, or any other, yet ſhe ſhall be endowed, becauſe this cannot be felony in her who was deprived of her underſtanding by the act of God; ſo though ſhe be of ſound mind, and refuſed to bring an appeal of his death, when he is killed by another, yet ſhe ſhall be endowed; for this is only a waver of that privilege the law has given her to be avenged of her huſband's murderer; ſo it ſeems if ſhe refuſes to viſit and aſſiſt her huſband in his ſickneſs, yet ſhe ſhall be endowed, for this is only undutifulneſs, which the law does not puniſh with the loſs of her entire ſubſiſtence. Perk. 364, 365.

With reſpect to the eſtate whereof a woman is dowable.

By our law, all the goods and chattels of the wife, are the huſband's; and if ſhe be an inheritrix, the huſband holds her land during her life; alſo if he hath iſſue by her, he ſhall hold it for his own life, by the curteſy of England: And if he have any land in fee, whereof he is poſſeſſed during the marriage, ſhe is to have a third part thereof for her life, as her dower; though ſhe bring nothing to the huſband, and whether ſhe hath iſſue by him or not. Lit. 36.

There are three things to intitle dower, viz. Marriage, ſeiſin, and death of the huſband: the marriage, muſt be good and lawful; and continue to the huſband's death; and a wife ſhall be endowed of a ſeiſin in law, as well as of a ſeiſin in deed; as where lands and tenements deſcend to the huſband, before entry, he hath but a ſeiſin in law, and yet the wife ſhall be endowed although it be not reduced to an actual poſſeſſion. Co. Lit. 31, 32, &c. And it is not neceſſary that ſeiſin ſhould continue during the coverture; for if the husband aliens the lands, &c. the wife ſhall be nevertheleſs endowed. Ibid. 32, 35. If lands are exchanged by the husband for other lands, the wife may be endowed of which lands ſhe will, as the husband was ſeiſed of both; though ſhe may not be endowed of the lands given and taken in exchange. Co. Lit. 31.

Where the eſtate, which the husband hath during the marriage, is ended, there the wife ſhall loſe her dower. New Nat. Br. 333. But of an eſtate-tail in lands determined, a woman ſhall be endowed; in like manner as a man may be tenant by the curteſy of her lands. Co. Lit. 31. And if a wife be endowed of her third part, and afterwards evicted by an elder title; ſhe ſhall have a new writ of dower, and be endowed of the other lands. 2 Danv. Abr. 670. Though this is, where it is the immediate eſtate deſcended to the heir; and not when it is the eſtate of an alienee. 9 Rep. 17. The wife is dowable where lands are recovered againſt the husband by default or covin: and a woman deforced of her dower ſhall recover damages, viz. the value of her dower from her husband's death. 13 E. 1. 20 H. 3. If the husband doth not die ſeiſed, after demand and refuſal to aſſign dower to her, ſhe ſhall have damages from the time of the refuſal. Jenk. Cent. 45. She ſhall be endowed of a reverſion, expectant on a term of years; and of a rent reſerved thereon. Lutw. 729. If the husband hath only an eſtate for life, remainder to another in tail, though the remainder over is to his heirs, the wife ſhall not be endowed. 2 Danv. 656. A woman ſhall not be endowed of the goods of her husband; nor of a caſtle, or capital meſſuage: But of all other lands and tenements ſhe may. Co. Lit. 35.

A grantee of a rent in fee or tail, dies without heir, his wife ſhall be endowed: But not where the rent ariſes upon a reſervation to the donor and his heirs, on a gift in tail, and the donee dies without iſſue; for this is a collateral limitation. Plowd. 156. F. N. B. 149. If during the coverture, the huſband doth extinguiſh rents by releaſe, &c. yet ſhe ſhall be endowed of them; for as to her dower, in the eye of the law, they have continuance. Co. Lit. 32. And where a rent is deſcended to the huſband, but he dies before any day of payment; notwithſtanding the wife ſhall be endowed of it. 1 H. 7. 17. If lands are given to the huſband and wife in tail, and after the death of the husband, the wife diſagrees, ſhe may recover her dower; for by her waiving her eſtate, her huſband in judgment of law was ſole ſeiſed ab initio. 3 Rep. 27. If lands are improved, the wife is to have one third according to the improved value. Co. Lit. 32. And if the ground delivered her be ſowed, ſhe ſhall have the corn. 2 Inſt. 81.

Dower is an inſeparable incident to an eſtate in tail or fee that cannot be taken away by condition: If one ſeiſed in fee of lands make a gift in tail, on condition that the wife ſhall not have dower, the condition is void. 6 Rep. 41. If tenant in tail die without iſſue, ſo that the land reverts to the donor; or in caſe he covenants to ſtand ſeiſed to uſes, and dies, his wife will be endowed: And a deviſe of land by the husband to his wife by will, is no bar of her dower, but a benevolence. 8 Rep. 34. Yelv. 51. Bro. Dower. 69.

It is held, that land deviſed to a man's wife, who is intitled to dower of his lands (it not being mentioned in ſatisfaction of her dower) ſhall be taken as a voluntry gift, and not any recompence or bar of dower: And in this caſe the widow brought a writ and recovered, againſt which the heir could have no relief. Preced. Canc. 133. A perſon grants and conveys land to D. and his heirs, on condition, to redemiſe the ſame back, &c. which afterwards he does, and dies; here D.'s widow may nevertheleſs be endowed. Abr. Caſ. 217. A. is tenant in tail of lands, the remainder to B. in tail, remainder to A. in fee; if A. bargains and ſells the land to C. and his heirs, the wife of the bargainee ſhall have dower, determinable upon the death of the tenant in tail. 10 Rep. 96. And if a feoffment be made upon condition to reinfeoff, and the feoffee take a wife, ſhe may have her dower till reinfeoffment, or an entry made for not doing it: And ſo it is of other defeaſible eſtates. 2 Rep. 59. Perk. ſect. 420. If one be diſſeiſed, and after doth marry, if he die before entry, his wife ſhall not have dower: And where a perſon recovers land in a real action, and before his entry or execution made he dieth, the wife ſhall not be endowed of this land. 2 Rep. 56. Perk. 377. In theſe caſes the husband was not actually ſeiſed, ſed qu.? for, as before obſerved, where there is a ſeiſin in law, ſhe ſhall be endowed. Co. Lit. 31, 32, &c. So that theſe caſes depend on the conſtruction of what is, and what is not a ſeiſin in law. And ſee Div. IV. towards the end, and Perk. 379, 380.

Of copyhold lands a woman ſhall not be endowed, unleſs there be a ſpecial cuſtom for it; but if there be a cuſtom to be endowed thereof, then ſhe ſhall have the aſſiſtance of ſuch laws as are made for the more ſpeedy recovery of dower in general, being within the ſame miſchief, and therefore ſhall recover damages within the ſtatute of Merton. 4 Co. 22. Hob. 216. 5 Co. 116.

Of tithes women were not dowable till 32 H. 8. c. 7. for before that ſtatute tithes were not a lay fee, but now they are dowable of them. Style's P. R. 122. 11 Co. 25. Co. Lit. 32. a. 159. a. 1 Rol. Abr. 682.

Of an advowſon, be it appendant or in groſs, a woman ſhall be endowed, for this may be divided as to the fruit and profit of it, viz. to have the third preſentation. See Perk. 343, 344. F. N. B. 148, 150. Co. Lit. 32. Cro. Jac. 621. Cro. Eliz. 360. 1 Rol. Abr. 683. Co. Lit. 379. 3 Leon. 155. Cro. Jac. 691.

The eſtate, of which the husband muſt be ſeiſed, muſt be an eſtate in fee-ſimple, fee-tail general, or where the husband is ſeiſed as heir of the ſpecial tail, which neceſſarily excludes deſcendible freeholds. 1 Rol. Abr. 676. Plow. 256. 10 Co. 98. See 2 Danv. 656.

III. Of aſſignment and admeaſurement of dower.

At common law, dower is aſſigned by the ſheriff, by the King's writs, or by the heir, &c. by agreement among themſelves; And the wife cannot enter otherwiſe into her dower. 1 Bulſt. 35. By the ancient law of England, till Magna Charta, a woman was to continue a whole year in her husband's houſe, for the aſſignment of her dower. 2 Inſt. 17. By that ſtatute, a widow ſhall immediately after her husband's death have her marriage inheritance; and remain in his chief houſe forty days, within which time dower is to be aſſigned her of the third part of all his lands, &c. 9 H. 3. c. 7. The aſſignment of the lands is to be for her life; and if lands are aſſigned to a woman for years, in recompenſe of dower; this is no bar of dower; for it is not ſuch an eſtate therein as ſhe ſhould have. 2 Danv. Abr. 668. Alſo where other land is aſſigned to the woman, that is no part of the lands wherein ſhe claims dower; that aſſignment will not be good or binding: And there muſt be certainty in what is aſſigned; otherwiſe, though it be by agreement, it may be void. 4 Rep. 2. 1 Inſt. 34. If a wife accept and enter upon leſs land than the third of the whole, on the ſheriff's aſſignment ſhe is barred to demand more. Moor 679. But if where a wife is intitled to dower of the lands of her firſt husband; her ſecond husband accepts of this dower leſs than her third part, after his death ſhe may refuſe the ſame, and have her full third part. Fitz. Dower, 121.

If a wife having right of dower in the land, accept of a leaſe for years thereof after the death of her husband, it ſuſpends the dower; though not ſuch acceptance of a leaſe before the husband's death, &c. for then the wife has only a title to have dower, and not an immediate right of dower. Bro. ca. 372. Jenk. Cent. 15. A widow accepting of dower of the heir, againſt common right, ſhall hold it ſubject to the charges of her husband; but otherwiſe it is if ſhe be endowed againſt common right by the ſheriff. 2 Danv. 672. By proviſion of law, the wife may take a third part of the husband's lands, and hold them diſcharged. Ibid. If dower be aſſign'd a woman on condition, or with an exception; the condition and exception are void. Cro. Eliz. 541. Detaining of charters concerning the ſame land of which the widow demands her dower, is a good plea by the heir in delay of her dower: But if ſhe delivers up the evidences, ſhe ſhall have judgment; though if ſhe denies the detainer, and it is found againſt her, ſhe loſes her dower. Hob. 199. 9 Rep. 19.

Where there are three manors, one of them may be aſſigned to the wife in dower in lieu of dower in all three; though it is ſaid that a third part of every manor ought to be aſſigned. Moor 12, 47. The ſheriff may aſſign a rent out of the land in lieu of dower; and her acceptance of the rent will bar dower out of the ſame land, but not of other lands. 2 And. 31. Dyer 91. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 680. When no diviſion can be made of what the wife is dowable, dower is to be aſſigned in a ſpecial manner; as of the third preſentation to a church, the third toll-diſh of a mill; common certain, a third year; the third part of the profits of an office, fair, market, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 678.

A woman intitled to dower cannot enter till it be aſſigned to her, and ſet out either by the heir, tertenant or ſheriff in certainty. 1 Rol. Abr, 681. Dyer 343. Plowd. 529. Bro. 16. Co. Lit. 34. b. 37. a. b.

None can aſſign dower but thoſe who have a freehold, or againſt whom a writ of dower lies; therefore a tenant by ſtatute merchant, ſtatute ſtaple, or elegit, or leſſee for years cannot aſſign dower, for none of theſe have an eſtate large enough to anſwer the plaintiff's demand. Perk. 403, 404. Co. Lit. 35. Bro. 63, 94. 1 Rol. Abr. 681. 6 Co. 57.

If a woman be dowable of land, meadow, paſture, wood, &c. and any of theſe be aſſigned in lieu of dower of all the reſt, it is good, though it be againſt common right, which gives her but the third part of each, for the heir's enjoyment of the reſidue ſufficiently accounts for her title to what ſhe has. 1 Rol. Abr. 683. Moor, pl. 47, 66.

If lands whereof a woman hath no right to be endowed, or a rent out of ſuch lands be aſſigned in lieu of her dower, this does not bar her demand of dower, for ſhe having no manner of title to thoſe lands, cannot without livery and ſeiſin be any more than tenant at will, which is no ſufficient recompence for an eſtate for life, which her dower was to be. Perk. 407. Co. Lit. 34. 4 Co. 1. Co. Lit. 169. Bro. 3.

As to admeaſurement of dower.

If the heir within age aſſign to the wife more land in dower than ſhe ought to have, he himſelf ſhall have a writ of admeaſurement of dower at full age by the Common law; ſo if too much be aſſigned in dower by the heir within age, or his guardian in chivalry; and the heir dies, his heir ſhall have ſuch writ, to rectify the aſſignment; but the heir, in whoſe time the aſſignment of too much was by the guardian, cannot have ſuch writ till his full age, becauſe till then the intereſt of the guardian continues; and if any wrong be done, it is to the guardian himſelf, and not to the heir; if a diſſeiſor aſſigns too much, the heir of the diſſeiſee ſhall have admeaſurement by the Common law. F. N. B. 148. Co. Lit. 39. a. 2 Inſt. 367.

If the heir within age, before the guardian enters, aſſigns too much in dower, the guardian ſhall have a writ of admeaſurement of dower, by the ſtatute of W. 2. c. 7. before which ſtatute the guardian had no remedy, becauſe the writ of admeaſurement being a real action, lay not for the guardian, who had but a chattel; alſo by the ſame ſtatute it is provided, that if the guardian purſue ſuch writ feintly, or by colluſion with the wife, the heir at full age ſhall have a writ of admeaſurement, and may alledge the feint pleading or colluſion generally. 2 Inſt. 367.

If the wife after aſſignment of dower improves the lands, ſo as thereby they become of greater value than the other two parts, no writ of admeaſurement lies; ſo if they be of greater value, by reaſon of mines open at the time of the aſſignment, no writ of admeaſurement lies, becauſe the land in quantity was no more than ſhe ought to have; and then it is lawful to work the mines, which were open at the time of ſuch aſſignment. F. N. B. 149. 2 Inſt. 368. 5 Co. 12.

IV. What ſhall be deemed a bar of dower.

If a wife levies a fine with her huſband, ſhe bars herſelf of her dower: And if a common recovery be had againſt the huſband and wife, of the huſband's lands, it ſhall bar the wife of her dower. 2 Rep. 74. Plowd. 514. Where a woman releaſes her right to him in reverſion, her dower may be extinguiſhed. 8 Rep. 151. If a wife commits treaſon or felony; or if ſhe elope from her huſband, and live with the adulterer willingly, without being reconciled to the huſband, ſhe ſhall loſe and forfeit her dower; but if the huſband be reconciled to her, and ſhe lives with him again, ſhe ſhall be endowed. 2 Inſt. 453. Dyer 106. And if after elopement of the wife, her huſband and ſhe bemean themſelves as huſband and wife, it is evidence of reconciliation. Dyer 196. If a man grants his wife with her goods to another, and the wife by virtue of the grant lives with the grantee during the life of the huſband, this ſhall forfeit her dower; for ſhe lived in adultery, notwithſtanding the grant. Co. Lit. 135. 2 Danv. 662. 2 Inſt. 435.

When a jointure is made of lands after marriage, the wife may waive it, and demand her dower: But it is otherwiſe when made before marriage, according to the ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. c. 10.

If a jointure be made to the wife during the coverture, and after the huſband and wife levy a fine thereof; yet this is no bar to her dower of any other lands of her huſband's, becauſe the jointure being made after the marriage, ſhe had election after the death of the huſband to refuſe it, and claim dower, and not before, and then the fine levied of the jointure before her time for election of dower was come, can be no bar for electing of dower when it is come. 1 Bulſt. 173. 1 Leon. 285. Dyer 358.

If a woman takes a leaſe for life of her huſband's lands after his death, ſhe ſhall have no dower, becauſe ſhe cannot demand it againſt herſelf; and if ſhe takes a leaſe for years only, yet ſhe ſhall not ſue to have dower during theſe years, becauſe it was her own act to ſuſpend the fruit and effect of her dower during that time. Perk. 350. F. N. B. 149. Mo. pl. 403.

If a recovery be had againſt the huſband by colluſion, this ſhall not bar the wife of dower; as if the recovery be by confeſſion, or reddition, which are always underſtood to be by colluſion, the huſband always acting and concurring in obtaining of them; but it ſeems to have been a very great doubt, whether a recovery by default ſhould not be a bar: and the better opinion being that ſuch recovery was a bar at Common law; therefore the ſtatute of W. 2. cap. 4. was made, which ordains that notwithſtanding ſuch recovery by default, &c. pleaded, the tenant ſhall moreover in bar of the dower ſhew his right to the tenements recovered; and if it be found that he had no right, then ſhall the demandant recover her dower, notwithſtanding ſuch recovery by default againſt her huſband. 2 Inſt. 349. Perk. 376.

By the ſtatute of W. 2. cap. 4. it appears, that if the recoverer had right, then the wife is barred; therefore if the heir of the diſſeiſor be in by deſcent, and the diſſeiſee enters upon him, and marries, and the heir of the diſſeiſor recovers by default, or reddition, in a writ of entry, in nature of an aſſiſe, and the huſband dies, his wife ſhall not have dower, becauſe he, who recovered, had right to the poſſeſſion by the deſcent; aliter, if this diſſeiſin, deſcent, &c. were after marriage, becauſe the huſband was ſeiſed before of a rightful eſtate during the coverture, whereof his wife had title of dower, which cannot be defeated by the diſſeiſin, deſcent and recovery, which all happened during the coverture. Perk. 379, 380.

If the huſband levy a fine with proclamation of his lands, and dies, his wife is bound to make her claim within five years after his death; otherwiſe ſhe ſhall be barred of her dower; for though her title of dower was not conſummate at the time of the fine levied; yet it being initiate by the marriage and ſeiſin of the huſband, the fine begins to work upon it preſently after the huſband's death; and if ſhe does not claim it within five years after, ſhe ſhall be barred. 2 Co. 93. 10 Co. 49, 99. 3 Inſt. 216. Hob. 265. Mo. pl. 154, 879. Dyer 224. 13 Co. 20.

V. Of the proceedings in dower.

The wife is, as ſoon as ſhe can after the deceaſe of her huſband, to demand her dower, leaſt ſhe loſe the value from the time of his death: And in action of dower, the firſt proceſs is ſummons to appear: And if the tenant or defendant do not appear, nor caſt an eſſoin, a grand cape lies to ſeize the lands, &c. But on the return of the writ of ſummons, the attorney for the tenant or defendant may enter with the filazer that the tenant appears, and prays view, &c. Then a writ of view goes out, whereby the ſheriff is to ſhew the tenant the land in queſtion; upon the return of which writ of view, the tenant's attorney takes a declaration, and puts in a plea; the moſt general one is, ne unques ſeizie, &c. viz. that the huſband was never ſeiſed of any eſtate, whereof the wife can be endowed; and when iſſue is joined, you muſt proceed to trial, as in other actions: Upon trial, the jury are to give damages for the meſne profits from the death of the huſband (if he die ſeiſed) for which, execution ſhall be made out; and then you have a writ to the ſheriff to give poſſeſſion of a third part of the lands. Pract. Solic. p. 335, 336. A widow may recover her dower with a ceſſat executio, in caſe there be any thing objected, precedent to the title of dower, &c. till that is determined. 1 Nelſ. 684, 687. 1 Salk. 291. Judgment in dower is to recover a third part of lands and tenements per Metas & Bundas. A wife may have her writ of dower againſt an heir, an alienee, a diſſeiſor, &c. or againſt any one that has power to aſſign dower; if the lord enters on the land for an eſcheat, ſhe may bring it againſt him, but to the King ſhe muſt ſue by petition. 9 Rep. 10. Plowd. 141. Dyer 263. Co. Lit. 59. This writ was brought againſt eight perſons feoffees of the husband after marriage, two confeſſed the action, and the other ſix pleaded to the iſſue; here the demandant had judgment to recover the third part of two parts of the land, in eight parts to be divided: And after the iſſue being found for the demandant againſt the ſix, ſhe recovered againſt them the third part of the ſix parts of the ſame land as her dower. Dyer 187. Co. Lit. 32.

At the Common law, before the ſtatute of W. 1. c. 39. if a woman had accepted any part of her dower, though never ſo ſmall, of any one tenant in any one county or town, ſhe had no other remedy for the reſidue, but by a writ of right of dower; for if ſhe brought a writ of dower unde nihil habeat, it was a good plea in abatement, that ſhe had accepted ſuch a part of ſuch a tenant, in ſuch a town or county; which being a great miſchief to the woman is remedied by that ſtatute, which provides that it ſhall be no plea in abatement, to ſay that ſhe hath received part of her dower of any other perſon before the writ purchaſed; and this extends as well to guardian in chivalry as to the tenant of the land, becauſe ſuch guardian is to render her dower. 2 Inſt. 261.

As to damages in dower they are given by the ſtatute of Merton, c. 1. but that ſtatute extends only to the poſſeſſory action of dower unde nihil habeat, and not to the writ of right of dower, becauſe they are intended to be given for the detention of the poſſeſſion; and on writs of right, where the right itſelf is queſtionable, no damages are given, becauſe no wrong done till the right be determined; alſo that ſtatute extends only to lands, whereof the husband died ſeiſed; and therefore judgment for the damages was reverſed, becauſe the jury did not find that the husband died ſeiſed; for otherwiſe ſhe ſhall have no damages; as if the husband aliens and takes back an eſtate for life, the wife ſhall recover dower, but no damages; becauſe this dying ſeiſed was only of an eſtate of freehold; but if he makes a leaſe for years only, rendring rent, ſhe ſhall recover a third part of the reverſion with a third part of the rent and damages, becauſe there he died ſeized as the ſtatute ſpeaks. Co Lit. 32. Dyer 284. pl. 33. Yelv. 112. Dr. & Stud. lib. 2. c. 13. ſ. 166. 2 Inſt. 80.

Damages muſt be after demand of dower, for the heir is not bound to aſſign this proviſion till demanded, becauſe the law caſts the freehold of the whole upon him, which he cannot divide without the concurrence of the wife; but a demand in pais before good teſtimony is ſufficient; and if the heir appear the firſt day on ſummons, and plead that he hath been always ready, and ſtill is, to render her dower; ſhe may plead ſuch requeſt; and iſſue may be taken upon it, but the feoffee of the heir cannot plead tout temps priſt, becauſe he had not the land all the time ſince the death of the anceſtor, and therefore ſhe ſhall recover the meſne profits, and damages againſt him, and if he hath not provided his indemnity and recompence againſt the heir, it is his own folly. Co. Lit. 32.

If the heir or feoffee aſſign dower, and the wife accepteth thereof, ſhe loſes her damages, becauſe having the dower, which is the principal, ſhe cannot ſue for the damages, which are but conſequential or acceſſory. Co. Lit. 33. a.

Damages are given in dower from the death of the huſband and to the return of the writ of enquiry, though the writ of ſeiſin iſſued a year before, but was not executed. Dobſon v. Dobſon and others. Rep. temp. Hardw. per Annaly 19, &c. Where there are two jointenants in dower, and one dies after judgment for damages, and his heir and the other jointenant bring error, the value from the time of the judgment to the affirmance, cannot be recovered againſt the ſurviving plaintiff in error only. Id. Kent & Kent, 50. See 2 Stra. 271. On a writ of dower, damages cannot be awarded by the 16 Car. 2. without ſpeeding a writ of enquiry. Same caſe, Annaly 51.

As in great eſtates jointures of lands are uſually made in lieu and ſatisfaction of dower, theſe actions of dower are not ſo frequently brought as they were formerly.

Dowl and Deal, A diviſion: From the Brit. Dal, diviſo, from the Sax. dælan, i. e. dividere, and from thence comes the word dealing. So the ſtones which are laid to the boundaries of lands, are called dowle ſtones, i. e. Such as divide the lands. Cowel.

Dowry, (Dos Mulieris) Was in ancient time applied to that which the wife brings her husband in marriage; otherwiſe called maritagium, or marriage goods: But theſe are termed more properly, goods given in marriage, and the marriage portion. Co. Lit. 31. This word is often confounded with dower; though it hath a different meaning from it.

Dowry Bill. Among the Jews, the bridegroom at the time of the marriage, gave his wife a dowry bill. Blount. Cowel cites Moſes and Aaron, 235.

Dowſeines, A ſort of kerſeys made in Devonſhire, in length twelve yards. Cowel.

Dozein, A territory or juriſdiction, mentioned in the ſtatute of View and Frank-pledge. 18 Ed. 2. See Deciners.

Draco Regis, The ſtandard enſign, or military colours, borne in war by our ancient Kings, having the figure of a dragon painted on them. —— Rex Angliæ fixiſſet ſignum ſuum in medio, & tradidiſſet draconem ſuum Petro de P. ad portandum, &c. Rog. Hoved. ſub ann. 1191.

Dragium, Drag; A coarſer ſort of bread corn: In Staffordſhire they uſe a kind of malt, made of oats mixed with barley which they call dreg, or drag malt; and in Eſſex, &c. they have a grain called dreg. Tuſſer's Huſband. p. 32.

Drags, Seem to be floating pieces of timber ſo joined together, that by ſwimming on the water they may bear a burden or load of other things down a river. 6 H. 6. c. 15.

Drana, A drain or water-courſe; ſometimes written drecca. Cartular. Abb. Rad. MS.

Drapery, (Pannaria) Is uſed as a head in our old ſtatute-books, extending to the making and manufacturing of all ſorts of woollen cloths. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 4. c. 1. 4 Ed. 4. c. 1. 1 R. 3. c. 9. 27 H. 8, &c. c. 13. See Clothiers.

Draw-gere Signifies any harneſs belonging to cart-horſes, for drawing a waggon, or other carriage. Paroch. Antiq. p. 549.

Draw-latches, Were thieves and robbers: Lambert in his Eiren. lib. 1. cap. 6. calls them thieves, waſters, and roberdſmen; the two laſt words are grown out of uſe. They are mentioned in 5 E. 3. c. 14. and 7 R. 2. c. 5.

Dredgermen, Are fiſhers for oyſters, &c. Stat. 2. Geo. 2. c. 19.

Dreit-Dreit, or Droit, Are words ſignifying formerly a double right, viz. of poſſeſſion, and of property or intereſt. Bract. lib. 4. cap. 27. Co. Lit. 266.

Drenched, An old word, uſed where a perſon was overcome, from the Germ.

Drenches, or Drenges, (Drengi) Are tenants in capite, ſays an ancient MS, Mon. Angl. Tom. 2. fol. 598. And according to Spelman, they are ſuch as at the coming of Wil. 1. called the Conqueror, being put out of their eſtates, were afterwards reſtored thereunto; on their making it appear that they were owners thereof, and neither in auxilio, or conſilio, againſt him. Spelm.

Drengage, (Drengagium) The tenure by which the drenches or drenges held their lands. Trin. 21 Ed. 3. Ebor. & Northumberland. Rot. 191.

Drift of the Foreſt, (Agitatio animalium in Foreſta) Is a view or examination of what cattle are in the foreſt, that it may be known whether it be ſurcharged or not; and whoſe the beaſts are, and whether they are commonable, &c. Theſe drifts are made at certain times in the year by the officers of the foreſt; when all the cattle of the foreſt are driven into ſome pound or place incloſed, for the purpoſes afore-mentioned; and to the end it may be diſcovered whether any cattle of ſtrangers be there, which ought not to common. Manw. par. 2. c. 15. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 13. 4 Inſt. 309.

Drinklean, (in ſome records Potura Drinklean) Was a contribution of tenants, in the time of the Saxons, towards a potation, or ale, provided to entertain the lord, or his ſteward.

Drofdene, Signified with our Saxon anceſtors, a grove, or woody place, where cattle were kept; and the keeper of them was called Drofman. Domeſday.

Droſland, or Dryſland, Another Saxon word, ſignifying a tribute or yearly payment made by ſome tenants to the King, or their landlords, for driving their cattle through a manor to fairs or markets. Cowel.

Droit, Right, Is the higheſt writ of all other real writs whatſoever, and hath the greateſt reſpect, and the moſt aſſured and final judgment; and therefore is called a writ of right, and in the old books droit. Co. Lit. 158. There are divers of theſe writs uſed in our law, ſuch as the following:

Droit de Advowſon. Droit de Dower. Droit de Garde. Droit Patent. Droit Rationabili parte. Droit ſur Diſclaimer.	All theſe ſeveral writs of right, and their various uſes, ſee Recto, and writs, and the ſeveral titles to which theſe writs belong.

Alſo conſult Booth on real actions. A very excellent treatiſe, and containing a great fund of uſeful learning.

Dromones, Dromos, Dromunda, Signified at firſt high ſhips of great burden, but afterwards thoſe which we now call men of war. Walſing. Anno 1292.——Tres majores naves ſubſequentur, quas vulgo dromones appellant. ——Mat. Pariſ. ſub ann. 1191.

Drovers, Are thoſe that buy cattle in one place to ſell in another: They are to be married men and houſeholders, and be licenſed by ſtatute 5 Eliz. c. 12. And if they drive their cattle on the Lord's Day, they ſhall forfeit 20*s.* by 1 Car. 1. c. 1.

That part of the ſtatute of Eliz. directing them to be married and houſholders, is now totally diſregarded.

Druggeria, A place of drugs, or drugſters ſhop: And druggiſts and their wares. Vide Coffee.

Drunkenneſs, Is an offence for which a man may be puniſhed in the Eccleſiaſtical court; as well as by juſtices of peace by ſtatute: And by 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. And 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. If any perſon ſhall be convicted of drunkenneſs by the view of a juſtice, oath of one witneſs, &c. he ſhall forfeit five ſhillings for the firſt offence, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of his goods; and for want of a diſtreſs ſhall ſit in the ſtocks ſix hours: And for the ſecond offence, he is to be bound with two ſureties in ten pounds each, to be of the good behaviour, or be committed. And he who is guilty of any crime, through his own voluntary drunkenneſs, ſhall be puniſhed for it as if he had been ſober. Co. Lit. 247. 1 Hawk. P. C. 2. It has been held, that drunkenneſs is a ſufficient cauſe to remove a magiſtrate: And the proſecution for this offence by the ſtatute of 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. was to be, and ſtill may be, before juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions, by way of indictment, &c.

Equity will not relieve againſt a bond, &c. given by a man when drunk, unleſs the drunkenneſs is occaſioned through the management or contrivance of him to whom it is given. Johnſon v. Medlicott, n. 3. P. Wil. 130. See 1 Inſt. 247. Plowd. 19. & Black. Com. 4 V. 25, 26.

Dry Exchange, (Cambium Siccum) Is a term invented in former times for the diſguiſing and covering of uſury; in which ſomething was pretended to paſs on both ſides, whereas in truth nothing paſſed but on one ſide, in which reſpect it was called dry. Stat. 3 H. 7. c. 5. See Cowel.

Dry Rent, A rent reſerved without clauſe of diſtreſs. See Rent ſeck.

Duces tecum, Is a writ commanding a perſon to appear at a certain day in the court of Chancery, and to bring with him ſome writings, evidences, or other things which the court would view. Reg. Orig. So ſubpœnas duces tecum, are often ſued out at Common law, to compel witneſſes, to produce, on trials, at Niſi prius, deeds, bonds, bills, notes, books, or memorandums, &c. which are in their cuſtody or power, and which relate to the iſſue in queſtion. But if they are in the poſſeſſion or power of the adverſe party or his attorney, it is cuſtomary to give notice to the attorney to produce them, and on proof made in open court, before the judge of Niſi prius, of ſuch notice, the court generally compels the attorney, or his client to produce the ſame, if material. If not produced parol evidence may be given of their contents.

Duces tecum licet Languidus, A writ directed to the ſheriff, upon a return that he cannot bring his priſoner without danger of death, he being adeo languidus; then the court grants a habeas corpus in the nature of a duces tecum licet languidus. Book. Entr. But this is now out of uſe; and certainly where the perſon's life would be endangered by removal, the law would never permit it to be done.

Ducking-Stool. See Caſtigatory.

Dues, eccleſiaſtical, non-payment of. Various dues to the clergy, are cognizable in the ſpiritual court; which makes decrees for their actual payment. Offerings, oblations, and obventions, not exceeding the value of 40*s.* may be recovered in a ſummary way, before two juſtices of peace. By 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 6. Black. Com. 3 V. 89, 90.

Duel, (Duellum) In our ancient law is a fight between perſons in a doubtful caſe for the trial of the truth. Fleta. But this kind of duel is diſuſed; and what we now call a duel is, a fighting between two, upon ſome quarrel precedent: Wherein, if a perſon is killed, both the principal and his ſeconds are guilty of murder, and whether the ſeconds fight or not. H. P. C. 47, 51. But this cannot mean as to the principals, where a quarrel ariſes, and they ſuddenly draw and fight, without deliberating. It is ſaid by ſome, that the ſeconds of the perſon killed are equally guilty, by reaſon of the encouragement which they give by joining with him: But this is contradicted by others. 1 Hawk. 82. Where two perſons in cool blood meet and fight upon a precedent quarrel, and one of them is killed, the other is guilty of murder; and cannot excuſe himſelf by alledging that he was firſt ſtruck by the deceaſed, or that he had declined to meet him, was prevailed on to do it by his importunity, or that it was not his intent to kill, but only to vindicate his reputation, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 81.

If two perſons quarrel over night, and appoint to fight the next day; or quarrel in the morning, and agree to fight in the afternoon; or ſuch a conſiderable time after, by which it may be preſumed the blood was cooled; and then they meet and fight a duel, and one kill the other, it is murder. 3 Inſt. 52. H. P. C. 48. Kel. 56. And whenever it appears, that he who kills another in a duel, or fighting on a ſudden quarrel, was maſter of his temper at the time, he is guilty of murder; as if after the quarrel he fall into another diſcourſe, and talk calmly thereon; or alledge that the place where the quarrel happens is not convenient for fighting; or that his ſhoes are too high, if he ſhould fight at preſent, &c. Kel. 56. 1 Lev. 180.

If one challenge another, who refuſes to meet him, but tells him that he ſhall go the next day to ſuch a place about buſineſs, and then the challenger meets him on the road, and aſſaults the other; if the other in this caſe kill him, it will be only manſlaughter; for here is no acceptance of the challenge, or agreement to fight: And if the perſon challenged refuſeth to meet the challenger, but tells him that he wears a ſword, and is always ready to defend himſelf; if then the challenger attack him, and is killed by the other, it is neither murder nor manſlaughter, if neceſſary in his own defence. Kel. 56.

It is a very high offence to challenge another, either by word or letter, to fight a duel; or to be the meſſenger of ſuch a challenge; or even barely to endeavour to provoke another to ſend a challenge, or to fight, or by diſperſing letters for that purpoſe, full of reflection, &c. 1 Sid. 186. 3 Inſt. 158. And perſons convicted of barely ſending a challenge, have been adjudged to pay a fine of 100*l.* to be impriſoned for a month, and make a public acknowledgment of their offence, and to be bound to their good behaviour. 1 Hawk. P. C. 135, 138. The court of King's Bench hath often granted informations againſt perſons ſending or giving challenges.

Duke, (Lat. Dux, Fr. Duc, a Ducendo) Signified among the ancient Romans, ductorem exercitus, ſuch as led their armies; ſince which, they were called duces, and were governors of provinces, &c. In ſome nations, the ſovereigns of the country are called by this name; as the Duke of Savoy, &c. In England, the title of Duke is the next dignity to the Prince of Wales: And the firſt Duke we had in England was Edward the Black Prince, ſo famed in our Engliſh hiſtories for heroick actions; who was created Duke of Cornwall in the 11th year of King Ed. 3. After which, there were more made in ſuch manner as that their titles deſcended to their poſterity; and during the late reigns their number hath been greatly increaſed. They are created with ſolemnity, per cincturam gladii, cappæ & circuli aurei in capite impoſitionem. Cambd. Brit. p. 166. See Black. Com. 1 V. 397, 468.

Dum fuit infra ætatem, Is where an infant maketh a feoffment of his lands; when he cometh of full age, he may have this writ to recover thoſe lands and tenements which were ſo aliened: And within age, he may, enter into the land and take it back again, and by his entry he ſhall be remitted to his anceſtor's right. New Nat. Br. 426. If the huſband and wife alien the wife's land, during the nonage of both of them, the wife at her full age after the death of the husband, ſhall have a writ of dum fuit infra ætatem. M. 14 E. 3. By this writ to the ſheriff, he ſhall command A. that he render to B. who is of full age, two meſſuages and lands, &c. which B. demiſed to him, while he was within age, as he ſaith; or into which the ſaid A. hath not entered, but by C. to whom the ſaid B. the ſame demiſed; and unleſs, &c. F. N. B. 477.

Dum non fuit Compos Mentis, Is a writ that lies where a man that is not of ſound memory aliens any lands or tenements, then he ſhall have this writ againſt the alienee. And he ſhall alledge that he was not of ſane memory, but being viſited with infirmity, loſt his diſcretion for a time, ſo as not to be capable of making a grant, &c. New Nat. Br. 449. But ſee Diſability. The law ſeldom allows a man to ſtultify himſelf. As to the writ, ſee F. N. B. 202.

Dun, Down, In which termination it hath varied into don, ſignifies a mountain or high open place; ſo that the names of thoſe towns which end in dun, or don, as Aſhdon, &c. were either built on hills, or near them in open places. Domeſday.

Duplex Querela, A proceſs eccleſiaſtical; double quarrel.

Duplicate, Is uſed for the ſecond letters patent, granted by the Lord Chancellor, in a caſe wherein he had before done the ſame; which were therefore thought void. Cromp. Juriſd. fol. 215. But it is more commonly a copy or tranſcript of any deed or writing, account, &c. or a ſecond letter, written and ſent to the ſame party and purpoſe as a former, for fear of a miſcarriage of the firſt, or for other reaſons: This word is mentioned in the ſtatute 14 Car. 2. c. 10.

It is alſo the name of a priſoner's diſcharge, given by the quarter ſeſſions, &c. to an inſolvent debtor, who takes the benefit of an act, for relief of inſolvent debtors, with reſpect to the impriſonment of their perſons.

Duplicity in pleading. This muſt be avoided as it begets confuſion. Every plea muſt be ſimple, intire, connected and confined to one ſingle point: It muſt never be entangled with a variety of diſtinct independent anſwers to the ſame matter; which muſt require as many different replies, and introduce a multitude of iſſues upon one and the ſame point. The ſtatute of 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. which gives leave to plead ſeveral pleas by permiſſion of the court, is, for this reaſon of great ſervice, becauſe, a man may plead a variety of matters in ſingle pleas, in bar to the action. See Black. Com. 311. See alſo Monteſquieu De L'Eſprit des Loix. Liv. vi. ch. 4.

Durante abſentia, Adminiſtration. An adminiſtration granted when the executor is out of the realm, to continue in force until his return.

Durante minore ætate, Adminiſtration. An infant cannot act as executor until ſeventeen, during which minority this adminiſtration is granted.

Durden, A thicket of wood in a valley. Cowel.

Dureſs, (Duritia) Is where one is wrongfully impriſoned or reſtrained of his liberty contrary to law, till he ſeals a bond or other deed to another; or threatened to be killed, wounded, or beaten if he doth not do it: And a bond or deed ſo obtained is void in law. Broke, in his Abridgment, joins dureſs and minas, together, i. e. hardſhip and threatenings: If one under a juſt fear of being impriſoned, killed, &c. enters into a bond to him that threatens him, it is dureſs per minas; and may be pleaded to avoid the bond: But it muſt be a threatening of life or member, or of impriſonment; and not of a battery only; or to take away goods, &c. Co. Lit. 162, 253. 2 Inſt. 483. But it has been adjudged, that if a man makes a deed by dureſs done to him by taking of his cattle, though there be no dureſs to his perſon, yet this ſhall avoid the deed. 2 Danv. Abr. 686. If a perſon threaten another to make a deed to a third perſon, it is by dureſs, and void; as if ſuch third perſon had made the threatening. 2 Inſt. 482. 3 Inſt. 92. 4 Inſt. 97. And where a man is impriſoned until he makes a bond at another place; if afterwards he doth it when at large, the bond is by dureſs, and void.

But if a perſon be arreſted upon an action at the ſuit of another, and the cauſe of action is not good, if he make a bond to a ſtranger, it is not dureſs; though if he make it to the plaintiff, it is, and being ſued upon the bond, he may plead it was made by dureſs, and ſo avoid it: Alſo the party ſhall have an action for the falſe impriſonment itſelf. 1 Rep. 119. Perk. Sect. 16, Cromp. Jur. 296. 1 Lil. Abr. 494. If the arreſt is under colour of legal proceſs, the action muſt be a ſpecial action on the caſe, not an action of treſpaſs vi et armis.

If one impriſoned make an obligation by dureſs, and after he is at large takes a defeaſance upon it; this will eſtop him to ſay it was made per dureſs. And where A. and B. by dureſs to B. ſeal a bond or deed, it may be good as to A. that was never threatened 3 H. 6. 16.

Bro. 17. Mich. 7 Jac. 1. See 43 E. 3. 10. 2 Danv. 686.

A man ſhall not avoid a deed by a dureſs to a ſtranger: For it hath been held that none ſhall avoid his own bond for the impriſonment or danger of any other than of himſelf only. Cro. Jac. 187. And yet a ſon ſhall avoid his deed by dureſs to the father: And the husband ſhall avoid a deed made by dureſs to the wife; though a ſervant ſhall not avoid a deed made by dureſs to his maſter, or the maſter the deed ſealed by dureſs of his ſervant. 2 Danv. 686. If a man is taken by virtue of a proceſs iſſuing out of a court that hath not power to grant it; or in cuſtody on a falſe charge of felony, &c. and for his enlargement and diſcharge gives bond, &c. this may be avoided, as taken by dureſs. Cro. El. 646. 4 Inſt. 97. Allen 92.

A ſtatute merchant may be avoided by audita querela, becauſe it was made by dureſs, or impriſonment. A will ſhall be avoided by dureſs or menace of impriſonment. A feoffment made by dureſs is voidable; but not void. But no averment ſhall be taken againſt a deed inrolled, that it was made by dureſs. 1 Roll. Abr. 862. 2 Danv. 685. A marriage had by dureſs is voidable: And by ſtatute, obligations, ſtatutes, &c. obtained of women by force, to marry the perſons to whom made, or otherwiſe, unleſs for a juſt debt, are declared void. 31 H. 6. c. 9. If a perſon executes a deed by dureſs, he cannot plead non eſt factum, becauſe it is his deed; though he may avoid it by ſpecial pleading, and judgment Si actio, &c. 5 Rep. 119. Records may not regularly be ſaid to be made by dureſs, and therefore ſhall not be avoided by this plea or pretence. 2 Shep. Abr. 319.

Durham. The biſhoprick of Durham was diſſolved, and the King to have all the lands, &c. by ſtat. 7 Ed. 6. But this act was afterwards repealed, and the biſhoprick new elected, with all juriſdiction eccleſiaſtical and temporal annexed to the county palatine. The juſtices of the county palatine of Durham may levy fines of lands in the county: And writs upon proclamation, &c. are to be directed to the biſhop. 5 Eliz. c. 27. 31 Eliz. c. 2. Alſo writs to elect members of parliament in the county palatine of Durham ſhall go to the biſhop or his chancellor, and be returned by the ſheriff, &c. Stat. 25 Car. 2. c. 9.

Durſley, Signifies blows without wounding or bloodſhed, vulgo dry blows. Blount.

Duſty Feets, Duſty Foots; pedlars or traders who have no ſettled habitation, and they have their name from their feet being covered with duſt, by their continual travelling. See Piepowder Court.

Dutchy Court of Lancaſter, Is a court of the Dutchy Chamber of Lancaſter held at Weſtminſter before the Chancellor, for matters concerning the lands and franchiſes of the dutchy. And the proceedings in this court are by Engliſh bill, as in Chancery. 4 Inſt. 204. The original of it was in Henry the Fourth's days, who obtaining the crown of England by depoſing Richard II. and having the dutchy of Lancaſter by diſcent in right of his mother, was ſeiſed thereof as King, and not as Duke. But at length by authority of parliament he paſſed a charter, whereby the poſſeſſions, liberties, &c. of the ſaid dutchy were ſevered from the crown, and ſo left to poſterity.

Of this court, Gwin (in his preface to his Readings) ſays thus: The court of the dutchy of Lancaſter grew out of the grant of King Edward III. who gave that dutchy to his ſon John of Gaunt, and endowed it with royal rights and privileges; and for as much as it was afterwards extinct in the perſon of King Henry IV. by reaſon of the union thereof with the crown, the ſame King (ſuſpecting himſelf to be more rightfully Duke of Lancaſter, than King of England) determined to ſave his right in the dutchy, whatever ſhould befall the kingdom; and therefore he ſeparated the dutchy from the crown, and ſetled it in the natural perſons of himſelf and his heirs, as if he had been no King: In which eſtate it continued during the reigns of Hen. 5. and Hen. 6. But when Edw. 4. recovered the crown, and recontinued the right of the Houſe of York, he appropriated that dutchy to the crown again, yet ſo that he ſuffered the court and officers to remain as he found them; and in this manner it came together with the crown to Hen. 7. who approving the policy of Hen. 4. and by whoſe right he obtained the kingdom, made a like ſeparation of the dutchy, and ſo left it. It is now only a ſuperior county palatine. Vide Lancaſter. Officers of this Court, ſee Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter.

The court of the dutchy chamber of Lancaſter, (according to Blackſtone) is a ſpecial juriſdiction, held before the Chancellor of the dutchy or his deputy, concerning all matters of equity relating to the lands holden of the King in right of the dutchy of Lancaſter, which is a thing very diſtinct from the county palatine, and comprizes much territory which lies at a vaſt diſtance from it; as particularly a very large diſtrict within the city of Weſtminiſter. It ſeems that the courts of Chancery and Exchequer, on the equity ſide have a concurrent juriſdiction with this court. 4 Inſt. 206. 1 Chanc. Rep. 55. Toth. 145. Hardr. 171. *Black. Earl, (Sax. Eorle, Lat. Comes) This it is ſaid was a great title among the Saxons, and is the moſt ancient of the Engliſh peerage, there being no title of honour uſed by our preſent nobility that was likewiſe in uſe by the Saxons, except this of Earl; which was uſually applied to the Firſt in the Royal Line. Verſtegan deriveth this word from the Dutch Ear, i. e. Honour, and Ethel, which ſignifies Noble: But whenceſoever it is derived, the title Earl was at length given to thoſe who were aſſociates to the King in his council and martial actions; and the method of inveſtiture into that dignity was per cincturam gladii, without any formal charter of creation. Dugdale's Warkwickſh. 302. William the Firſt, called the Conqueror, gave this dignity in fee to his nobles, annexing it to this or that county or province; and allotting them for the maintenance of it a certain portion of money ariſing from the prince's profits, for the pleadings and forfeitures of the provinces. Camd. And formerly one Earl had divers ſhires under his government, and had lieutenants under him in every ſhire, ſuch as are now ſheriffs; as appears by divers of our old ſtatutes. Cowel.

But about the reign of King John and ever ſince, our Kings have made Earls of counties, &c. by charter; giving them no authority over the county, nor any part of the profits ariſing out of it; only ſometimes they have had an annual fee out of the Exchequer, &c. An Earl, Comes, was heretofore correlative with comitatus; and anciently there was no Earl, but had a ſhire or county for his earldom; but of late times the number of Earls very much increaſing, ſeveral of them have choſen for their titles ſome eminent part of a county, conſiderable town, village, or their own ſeats, &c. Then, beſides thoſe local Earls; there are ſome perſonal and honorary; as Earl Marſhal of England; and others nominal, who derive their titles from the names of their families. Lex Conſtitutionis, p. 78. Their place is next to a Marquis, and before a Viſcount: And as in very ancient times, thoſe who were created Counts or Earls, were of the blood royal; our Britiſh monarchs to this day call them in all public writings, Our moſt dear Couſin: They alſo originally did, and ſtill may uſe the ſtyle of Nos. See Countee; and the references after the word Ealderman.

Earneſt. Money paid in part of a larger ſum, or part of the goods delivered, on any contract, &c. which being done, by way of earneſt, the property of the goods is abſolutely bound by it: And the buyer may recover the goods by action, as well as the vendor may the price of them. And by 29 Car. 2. c. 3. No contract for ſale of goods, to the value of 10*l.* or more, to be valid, unleſs ſuch earneſt is made or given. Black. Com. 2 V. 447, 448.

Eaſement, Aiſiamentum, from the Fr. Aiſe, (i. e. Commoditas) Is defined to be a ſervice or convenience, which one neighbour hath of another, by charter or preſcription, without profit; as a way through his land, a ſink, or ſuch like. Kitch. 105. A perſon may preſcribe to an eaſement in the freehold of another, as belonging to ſome ancient houſe, or to land, &c. And a way over the land of another; a gate-way, water-courſe, or waſhing place on another's ground, may be claimed by preſcription as eaſements. But a multitude of perſons cannot preſcribe; though for an eaſment they may plead cuſtom. Cro. Jac. 170. 3 Leon. 254. 3 Mod. 294. To alledge an eaſement by conſuevit only, is the beſt way: And things of neceſſity ſhall not be extinguiſhed by unity of poſſeſſion; but a way of eaſe may be thus extinguiſhed. Lil. Abr. 496. Ejectione firmæ, or Ejectment, Is an action that lies for the leſſee for years, who is ejected before the expiration of his term, either by the leſſor, or a ſtranger: Alſo ejectment may be brought by the leſſor againſt the leſſee, for rent in arrear, or holding over his term, &c. Reg. Orig. 227. In theſe caſes, ejectment is either an actual ejectment, as when the leſſee is actually put out of land let unto him; or it is an ejectment by implication of law, viz. where ſuch an act is done by one which doth amount to an ejectment, although he doth not really enter upon the land let, and ouſt the leſſee. 1 Lill. Abr. 496. Anciently writs of entry and aſſiſe were the uſual means of recovery of the poſſeſſion of lands, and lay only againſt freeholders; but anno 14 H. 7. it was reſolved that an habere facias poſſeſſionem would lie to recover the term in ejectment, and the land itſelf. Attorn. Compan. 170. The action of ejectione firmæ was never known to remove a poſſeſſion till the reign of King Hen. 8. before which time an action of treſpaſs, quare clauſum fregit, &c. was made uſe of: Though in action of treſpaſs, damages were only to be recovered: whereas in ejectione firmæ, the thing or term itſelf is recovered, as well as damages. 3 Leon. 49.

But ejectment is now become an action in the place of many real actions; as writs of right, formedons, &c. which are very difficult as well as tedious and chargeable: And this is the common action for trying of titles, and recovering of lands, &c. illegally kept from the right owner; though where entry is taken away by diſcents, fines and recoveries, diſſeiſins, &c. Ejectment cannot be ſupported: ſo that all titles cannot be tried by this action. Wood's Inſt. 547, 548. Herein is to be conſidered,

I. For what things an ejectment will lie.
II. Of the method of proceeding in ejectment.

I. For what things an ejectment will lie.

Ejectment ought to be brought for a thing that is certain; and if it be of a manor, manerium de A. cum pertinentiis; if of a rectory, rectorium de B. &c. And ſo many meſſuages, cottages, acres of arable land, meadow, &c. cum pertin. in paroch. &c. For land muſt be diſtinguiſhed, how much of one ſort, and how much of another, &c. Cro. Eliz. 339. 3 Leon. 13. Ejectment lies of a church, as de uno domo vocat. The pariſh church of, &c. And a church is a meſſuage, by which name it may be recovered; and the declaration is to be ſerved on the parſon who officiates divine ſervice. 11 Rep. 25. 1 Salk. 256. It lies not of tithes only; but may be of a rectory, chapel, &c. and the tithes thereto belonging. 2 Danv. Abr. 752.

It lies De uno meſſuagio ſive burgagio; but not De uno meſſuagio ſive tenemento, unleſs it have a vocat' A. &c. to make it good, becauſe of the uncertainty of the word tenement. 1 Sid. 295. It will lie for a moiety, or third part, of a manor or meſſuage, &c. And for a chamber or room of a houſe well ſet forth. 11 Rep. 55, 59. 3 Leon. 210. It lieth de domo, which hath convenient certainty for the ſheriff to deliver poſſeſſion, &c. Cro. Jac. 654 It lies of a cottage or curtilage; of a coal mine, &c. but not of a common, piſcary, &c. Cro. Jac. 150. For underwood it lies, though a præcipe doth not. 2 Roll. Rep. 482, 483. But for uno clauſo, or una pecia terræ, &c. without certainty of the acres, and their nature, it doth not lie. 11 Rep. 55. 4 Mod. 1. It lieth of a cloſe, containing three acres of paſture, &c. Alſo of ſo many acres of land covered with water; though not de aquæ curſu. Cro. Jac. 435. 1 Brownl. 242. Ejectment lies for a prebendal ſtall, after collation to it. Wilſ. Rep. Par. 1. fo. 14. The King and The Biſhop of London.

In this action the law requires, that the thing demanded be ſo particularly ſpecified, that the ſheriff may certainly know what to give the poſſeſſion of, if the plaintiff ſhould recover; for the judgment is in order to execution, and the judgment would be vain, if execution could not be had of the thing ſpecifically demanded; but in this action the judges did not confine themſelves to thoſe rules which govern the præcipe, but allowed ſome things to be recovered in this action, which could not be demanded in a præcipe; becauſe ſince the eſtabliſhment of that real action, many things have been added and improved by art, and acquired new appellations that are perfectly underſtood now by the law, which are not found in the ancient law-books; and as men began to contract by new names which were not known in the old law, ſo it was reaſonable to ſuffer the remedy to follow the nature of ſuch contracts. 2 New. Abr. 168.

II. As to the method of proceeding.

The method of proceeding in ejectment, is made more eaſy than formerly; when a leaſe was to be ſealed and delivered on the premiſſes to the leſſee, &c. In ancient times, the ejector in law was any perſon that came upon any part of the land, &c. mentioned in the leaſe of ejectment, though he were there without any intent to diſturb the leſſee of the poſſeſſion, after the ſealing of the ejectment leaſe; and ſuch ejector was a good ejector againſt whom an action of ejectione firmæ might be brought to try the title of the land in queſtion: but now the law is altered, for there is no occaſion for a leaſe to be made and ſealed upon the premiſſes to the leſſee, who hath a mind to try the title, &c.

As the plaintiff could not proceed to recover his lands againſt the caſual ejector, without delivering to the tenant in poſſeſſion a declaration, and making him a proper defendant, Lord Chief Juſtice Rolls invented the rule now in uſe; which is, that if the defendant comes in the room of ſuch ejector, he ſhould enter into a rule to confeſs leaſe, entry and actual ouſter, and inſiſt on the title only. See Attorn. Compan. 170, 173.

The uſual courſe at this time is to draw a declaration, and therein feign a leaſe for three, five, or ſeven years, to a nominal plaintiff, and alſo feign a caſual ejector or defendant in the declaration, and then ſerve the ſame, by delivering a copy thereof to the tenant in poſſeſſion, or his wife, (for a delivery to a ſon or ſervant, &c. is not good) and give notice in writing at the bottom for him to appear and defend his title; which muſt be read to the tenant, and the perſon ſerving it is to tell him, that if he do not procure ſome attorney to appear for him and defend his title, in default thereof, that he (the defendant) will ſuffer a judgment to be had againſt him, whereby he (the tenant) will be turned out of poſſeſſion: the declaration being thus ſerved, the tenant is to appear the beginning of the next term by his attorney, and conſent to a rule to be made defendant inſtead of the caſual ejector, and take upon him the defence; wherein he may confeſs a leaſe, entry, and ouſter, and at the trial ſtand upon the title only: but if the tenant in poſſeſſion doth not appear and enter into the aforementioned rule in time, after the declaration ſerved; then on affidavit made of the ſervice of the declaration, with notice to appear as aforeſaid, the court will order that judgment be entered (at the expiration of a time limited, if the tenant does not in the mean time appear,) againſt the caſual ejector by default; and the tenant in poſſeſſion will by an habere facias poſſeſſionem upon ſuch judgment be turned out of poſſeſſion.

If at the trial the defendant will not appear and confeſs leaſe, entry and ouſter, it is uſual to call him or his attorney, and then call the plaintiff and nonſuit him: and upon return of the poſtea, judgment will be given againſt the caſual ejector. 1 Salk. 250. But in this caſe, though the plaintiff be nonſuit, he ſhall not pay any coſts; for the rule for confeſſing leaſe, entry, and ouſter is to be carried to the ſecondary, who taxes coſts upon it to be paid by the defendant; and if the ſame are not paid, the court on affidavit and motion will grant an attachment againſt the defendant; but this is where the defendant appears, and not where it goes wholly againſt him by default.

If the tenant doth appear, having by his attorney filed common bail, and entered into the rule abovementioned, he is made defendant in the declaration, and put into the ſame in the place of the caſual ejector; and then the defendant's attorney muſt plead Not guilty: and the plaintiff's attorney draws up the iſſue, a copy whereof and of the declaration is to be delivered to the attorney for the defendant; whereupon notice is given of trial: and trial had as in other caſes. But as to the mode of proceeding, ſee, for further inſtructions, the books of practice, now in uſe, as Richardſon, Harriſon, &c. Practiſ. Solic. 328, 329.

The plaintiff is not allowed to amend his declaration in ejectment after delivery; he muſt ſtand by it, or deliver a new declaration. But if the tenant appears, as a new declaration is not delivered before plea, but the iſſue made up, plaintiff may perhaps ſafely make his iſſue right. As many demiſes may be laid in a declaration, as ſhall be thought fit; and if the plaintiff recovers upon one, it is ſufficient. 3 Lev. 117, 334. No arreſt is to be made in this action, as now uſually proſecuted. But if there is not any tenant in poſſeſſion; as where a houſe or land is empty, and the perſon that was laſt in poſſeſſion is run away, ſo that you cannot find any perſon to deliver the declaration to, then the proceſs muſt be in the old way, by ſealing a leaſe upon the ground; and an original is to be ſued out againſt the perſon who ejected the leſſee, &c. And herein rules are to be given to plead; though there cannot be judgment againſt the caſual ejector, without a motion for that purpoſe, after the rules for pleading are out. 1 Lill. 498. See 1 Salk. 235. But note, by Stat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſ. 16. If premiſes are held at a rack-rent, and one year's rent being in arrear, the tenant deſerts the premiſſes, and there is not any ſufficient diſtreſs, two juſtices of peace may put the landlord in poſſeſſion. Vide 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. the ſubſtance of which as to the point in queſtion, See Poſt.

In C. B. the common rule is, that the defendant ſhall forthwith appear, and receive a declaration, and therefore this ſuperſedes the neceſſity of an original writ; and no advantage can be taken for want thereof, unleſs it be in a writ of error; but when error is brought, an original muſt be filed. In the King's Bench there needs not be a latitat; but the party is to file a bill of ejectment, beſide the plea-roll, if a writ of error be brought before the errors are aſſigned; and he muſt file bail before he can proceed, &c.

In ejectment, where there are divers defendants, and the freeholds are ſeveral, no defendant may defend for more than is in his own poſſeſſion; and the plaintiff may take judgment againſt his ejector for what remains. 1 Vent. 355. 2 Keb. 524, 531.

It is held if there two defendants in ejectment, and one of them appears and confeſſes leaſe, entry, and ouſter, but the other doth not appear, in that caſe the plaintiff may enter a non proſ, or retraxit againſt him, and go to trial, and have judgment againſt the other defendant. 1 Lord Raym. 717, 718. Alſo if an ejectment be brought againſt two perſons, and after iſſue joined, one dies, and a venire is awarded as to the two defendants, and a verdict againſt two; here, upon ſuggeſtion of the death of one of them upon the roll, judgment ſhall be given for the plaintiff againſt the other for the whole: for it is ſaid this action is grounded upon torts, which are ſeveral in their nature, and one may be found guilty and the other acquitted. Ibid.

Where one brings ejectment of land in two pariſhes, and the whole lies in one, he ſhall recover: alſo if a perſon brings ejectment of one acre in B. and part of it lies in A. he ſhall recover for ſuch part as lies in B. And if one having title to a part only of lands, bringeth an ejectment for the whole, he ſhall recover his part of the lands. Plowd. 429. Cro. Car. 13.

A plaintiff ſhall recover only according to the right which he hath at the time of bringing his action: and one who hath title to the land in queſtion, may on motion be made a defendant in the action with the tenant in poſſeſſion, to defend his title. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 694. 1 Lill. 497, &c. As the poſſeſſion of the land is primarily in queſtion, and to be recovered, that concerns the tenant; and the title of the land, which is tried collaterally, that is concerning ſome other, who may be admitted to be a defendant with the tenant: but none other is to be admitted a defendant, but he that hath been in poſſeſſion, or receives the rents, &c.

When there is a recovery in ejectment, againſt the tenant in poſſeſſion, action of treſpaſs may be brought to recover the meſne profits of the lands, from the time of the defendant's entry laid in the declaration and the coſts of the ejectment: and this action may be brought either by the plaintiff in ejectment, or by the leſſor of the plaintiff. In which caſe the plaintiff need not prove a title, but it is ſufficient to produce the judgment in ejectment and the writ of poſſeſſion executed, and to prove the value of the profits, and thereupon he ſhall recover from the time of the demiſe laid in the declaration. Aſtlin and Parker, Mic. 32 Geo. 2. per omnes Juſtic. on a caſe reſerved. Vide Burrow, part 4. 668. Black. Com. 3 V. 205. Ni. Pri. 83. If judgment in ejectment was againſt the tenant in poſſeſſion, i. e. per verdict, it does not ſeem neceſſary to prove the writ of poſſeſſion executed: contra, if againſt the caſual ejector. Thorp and Fry. Stra. 5. Ni. Pri. 83.

If the plaintiff can prove his title accrued before the time of the demiſe, and that the defendant hath been longer in poſſeſſion, he ſhall recover antecedent profits; but in ſuch caſe defendant will be at liberty to controvert his title. Decoſta and Atkins, per Eyre Ch. J. Hil. 4 Geo. 2. Bath. Ni. Pri. 83.

The plaintiff in ejectment is a mere nominal perſon, and a truſtee for the leſſor; and if he releaſe the action, the court may ſet aſidethe releaſe, and he ſhall be committed for a contempt; ſo likewiſe if he releaſe an action brought in his name for the meſne profits. 1 Salk. 260. Skinn. 247. But a nominal leſſee is now in general plaintiff, and the leſſor is conſidered as the real party. If a man is made plaintiff in ejectment without his knowledge, and the defendant appearing, the plaintiff thereupon becomes nonſuit, after which execution is ſued out againſt him; if it appears by his oath that he was made plaintiff without his knowledge or order, he ſhall be diſcharged. 34 Car. B. R. 5 An. 1 Lil. 500.

If it appears that the leſſor of the plaintiff had not any title at the time of the demiſe, upon which the plaintiff declared, this will be fatal: and the court will not give leave to alter the declaration as to the time of the demiſe, which would make it a new demiſe. Carth. 179. See Cro. Jac. 311.

As to lands in the leaſe and declaration, &c. being different, and not exactly the ſame, or the term different from that in the declaration, &c. See Yelv. 166. 2 Lutw. 963. The declaration muſt aſſign a place where the leaſe was made. See Moor, ca. 673, 710. 1 And. 283. 9 Rep. 78. If there be a verdict and judgment againſt the plaintiff, he may bring another action of treſpaſs and ejectment for the land, it being only to recover the poſſeſſion, &c. wherein judgment is not final; and it is not like a writ of right, &c. where the title alone is tried. Wood's Inſt. 547. Trin. 23 Car. B. R.

By a late ſtatute, in all caſes between landlord and tenant, when half a year's rent ſhall be in arrear, the landlord having lawful right to re-enter for non-payment, may ſerve a declaration in ejectment on the tenant, without a formal demand or re-entry; or he may affix ſuch declaration on the door of the demiſed meſſuage, or notorious place of the lands, which ſhall be deemed a legal ſervice: and upon proof that half a year's rent was due before the declaration was ſerved, and no ſufficient diſtreſs on the premiſſes, the leſſor ſhall have judgment and execution; which if the leſſee ſuffer, without paying the arrears and coſts, and without filing a bill in equity to be relieved within ſix months, he ſhall be barred from all relief, other than by writ of error; and the leſſor ſhall hold the premiſſes diſcharged from the leaſe: but if the tenant or leſſee tender to the leſſor, or bring into court, the rent in arrear, together with coſts, all further proceedings ſhall ceaſe; and if the leſſee be relieved in equity, he ſhall enjoy the demiſed premiſſes, according to his leaſe, without obtaining a new one. See Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. & 11 Geo. 2. c. 19.

Tenants, to whom declarations in ejectment are generally delivered for any lands, &c. ſhall give their landlords, or their bailiffs notice thereof, under the penalty of three years-rack rent, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. And the court where ſuch ejectment ſhall be brought, ſhall ſuffer the landlord to make himſelf defendant, by joining with the tenant, unto whom the declaration is delivered, if he appears; but if not, judgment ſhall be ſigned againſt the caſual ejector, for want of ſuch appearance: but if the landlord ſhall deſire to appear by himſelf, and conſent to enter into the like rule, that the tenant, if he had appeared, ought to have done; the court may permit him ſo to do, and order a ſtay of execution, till they make a further order therein. 11 Geo. 2. c. 19.

If by any intendment a judgment in ejectment after a verdict can be made good, the court will do it. Morris v. Barry, Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. fo. 1. Election, (electio) Is when a man is left to his own free will to take or do one thing or another, which he pleaſes. And if it be given of ſeveral things, he who is the firſt agent, and ought to do the firſt act, ſhall have the election: as if a perſon make a leaſe, rendering rent, or a garment, &c. the leſſee ſhall have the election, as being the firſt agent, by the payment of the one, or delivery of the other. Co. Lit. 144. And if A. covenant to pay B. a pound of pepper or ſugar, before Eaſter; it is at the election of A. at all times before Eaſter, which of them he will pay: but if he pays it not before the ſaid feaſt, then afterwards it is at the election of B. to demand and have which he pleaſeth. Dyer 18. 5 Rep. 59. 11 Rep. 51.

If I give to you one of my horſes in my ſtable, there you ſhall have the election; for you ſhall be the firſt agent, by taking or ſeizure of one of them. Co. Lit. 145. If things granted are annual, and to have continuance, the election (where the law gives it him) remains to the grantor, as well after the day as before: but it is otherwiſe when to be performed at once. Ibid. When nothing paſſes to the feoffee or grantee before election to have the one thing or the other, the election ought to be made in the life of the parties; and the heir or executor cannot make the election: but where an eſtate or intereſt paſſes immediately to the feoffee, donee, &c. there election may be made by them, or their heirs or executors. 2 Rep. 36, 37. And when one and the ſame thing paſſeth to the donee or grantee, and ſuch donee or grantee hath election in what manner he will take it, there the intereſt paſſeth immediately, and the party, his heirs, &c. may make election when they will. Co. Lit. 145. 2 Danv. Abr. 761.

Where the election creates the intereſt, nothing paſſes till election; and if no election can be made, no intereſt will ariſe. Hob. 174. If the election is given to ſeveral perſons, there the firſt election made by any of the perſons ſhall ſtand: as if a man leaſes two acres to A. for life, remainder of one acre to B. and of the other acre to C. Now B. or C. may elect which of the acres he will have, and the firſt election by one binds the other. Co. Lit. 145. 2 Rep. 36. If a man leaſes two acres for life, the remainder of one in fee to the ſame perſon; and after licences the leſſee to cut trees in one acre, this is an election that he ſhall have the fee in the other acre. 2 Danv. 762. A real election concerning lands is deſcendible; and election of a tenant in tail may prejudice his iſſue. He in remainder may make an election, after the death of tenant for life; but if the tenant for life do make election, the remainder-man is concluded. Moor, ca. 247, 832.

A perſon grants a manor, except one cloſe called N. and there are two cloſes called by that name, one containing nine acres, and the other but three acres; the grantee ſhall not in this caſe chooſe which of the ſaid cloſes he will have, but the grantor ſhall have election which cloſe ſhall paſs. 1 Leon. 268. But if one grants an acre of land out of a waſte or common, and doth not ſay in what part, or how to be bounded, the grantee may make his election where he will. 1 Leon. 30. If a man hath three daughters, and he covenants with another, that he ſhall have one of them to diſpoſe of in marriage;

Though in debt upon bond to pay 10*l.* on ſuch a day, or four cows, at the then election of the obligee, it was adjudged, that it was not enough for the defendant to plead that he was always ready, &c. if the obligee had made his election; for he ought to tender both at the day, by reaſon the word then relates to the day of payment. Moor 246. 1 Nelſ. 694, 695.

If a man hath an election to do one of two things, and he cannot by any default of a ſtranger, or of himſelf, or the obligee, or by the act of God, do the one; he muſt at his peril do the other. 1 Lil. Abr. 506.

Where the law allows a man two actions to recover his right, it is at his election to bring which he pleaſeth: and when a man's act may work two ways, both ariſing out of his intereſt, he hath election given him to uſe it either way. Dyer 20. 2 *Rol. A man was indicted of felony for entring an houſe and taking away money, and found guilty, and burnt in the hand; after which the perſon who loſt the money brought an action of treſpaſs againſt the other for breaking his houſe, and taking away his money; and it was held that the action would lie; for though it was at his election at firſt, either to prefer an indictment or bring an action, yet by the indictment he had made no election, becauſe that was not the proſecution of the party, but of the crown. Style 347.

Elegit, (from the words in it, elegit ſibi liberari) Is a writ of execution that lies for him who hath recovered debt or damages, or, upon a recognizance in any court againſt one not able in his goods to ſatisfy the ſame; directed to the ſheriff, commanding him to make delivery of a moiety of the party's land, and all his goods, beaſts of the plough excepted. And the creditor ſhall hold the ſaid moiety of the land ſo delivered unto him, until his whole debt and damages are paid and ſatisfied; and during that term he is tenant by elegit. Reg. Orig. 299. Co. Lit. 289.

Upon an elegit, the ſheriff is to deliver one half of all houſes, lands, meadows and, paſtures, rents, reverſions, and hereditaments wherein the defendant had any ſole eſtate in fee, or for life, into whoſe hands ſoever the ſame do afterwards come; but not of a right only to land, an annuity, copyhold lands, &c. Dyer 206. 7 Rep. 49. Plowd. 224. This writ is given by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 18. And by it, the plaintiff, &c. elects omnia bona & catalla of the defendant, præter bovis & afros de caruca ſua; and alſo a moiety of all the lands which the defendant had at the time of the judgment recovered: but it ought to be ſued within a year and a day after the judgment. F. N. B. 267.

But though by this ſtatute, the lands of the debtor are made liable, as well as his perſonal eſtate; yet if the creditor takes out an elegit, and it appears to the ſheriff, that there are goods and chattels ſufficient of the debtor's, to ſatisfy the debt, he ought not to extend the lands. 2 Inſt. 395. But an elegit executed upon goods only, is not a fieri facias, for a fieri facias is executed by ſale by the ſheriff; but the elegit by the appraiſement of the goods by a jury, and delivery to the party. 1 Sid. 184. 1 Lev. 92. 1 Keb. 105, 261, 465, 556, 692.

Upon this writ the ſheriff is to impanel a jury, who are to make inquiry of all the goods and chattels of the debtor, and to appraiſe the ſame, and alſo to inquire as to his lands and tenements; and upon ſuch inquiſition the ſheriff is to deliver all the goods and chattels (except the beaſts of the plough) and a moiety of the lands to the party, and muſt return his writ, in order to record ſuch inquiſition in that court, out of which the elegit iſſued: and when the jury have found the ſeiſin and value of the land, the ſheriff, and not the jury, is to ſet out and deliver a moiety thereof to the plaintiff, by metes and bounds. Cro. Car. 319.

All writs of execution may be good, though not returned, except in elegit; but that muſt be returned, becauſe an inquiſition is to be taken upon it, and that the court may judge of the ſufficiency thereof. 4 Rep. 65, 74. It has been ruled, that if more than a moiety of the lands is delivered on an elegit by the ſheriff, the ſame is void for the whole. Sid. 91. 2 Salk. 563. And the ſheriff cannot ſell any thing, but what is found in the inquiſition; and thereſore if he ſell a term for years, &c. miſ-recited in the inquiſition, as to the commencement thereof, the ſale is void. 4 Rep. 74.

In debt upon bond, the defendant before the trial conveyed his lands to another, &c. but he himſelf took the profits; notwithſtanding this conveyance, a moiety of his lands was extended on an elegit. Dyer 294. 3 Rep. 78. If two perſons have each of them a judgment againſt one debtor, and he who hath the firſt judgment brings an elegit, and hath the moiety of the lands delivered to him in execution; and then the other judgment creditor, ſues out another elegit, he ſhall have only a moiety of that moiety, which was not extended by the firſt judgment. Cro. Eliz. 483.

When lands are once taken in execution on an elegit, and the writ is returned and filed, the plaintiff ſhall have no other execution. 1 Lev. 92. And if the defendant hath lands in more counties than one, and the plaintiff awards an elegit to one county, and extends the lands upon the elegit, and afterwards files the writ, he cannot, after that, ſue out an elegit into the other counties: but he may immediately after entry of the judgment upon the judgment-roll, award as many elegits, into as many counties as he thinks fit, and execute all, or any of them, at his pleaſure. 1 Lil. Abr. 509. Cro. Jac. 246.

A man had lands in execution, upon an elegit, and afterwards moved for a new elegit, upon proof that the defendant had other lands, not known to the creditor, at the time when the execution was ſued out; and it was adjudged, that if he had accepted of the firſt by the delivery of the ſheriff, he could not afterwards have a new elegit; but when the ſheriff returns the writ, he may waive it, and then have a new extent. Cro. Eliz. 310. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 699. Sed qu.

If the defendant dies in priſon, ſo that there is no execution with ſatisfaction, the plaintiff ſhall have an elegit afterwards. 5 Rep. 86. And if all the lands extended on an elegit be evicted by a better title, the plaintiff may take out a new execution. 4 Rep. 66. Where one having land by elegit, is wholly evicted out of it, he may have a further execution, either againſt the defendant's lands or goods, as he might have had at firſt; ſave only, he muſt bring a ſcire facias againſt the defendant, or him that comes in under him; but if the eviction be of part of the land, or for a time only, ſo that the plaintiff may take his full execution by holding it over; there he cannot have any new execution, by the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 5. 2 Shep. Abr. 115.

Where an elegit is ſued upon a judgment, the levying of goods thereon for part only, is no impediment, but the plaintiff may bring another elegit pro reſiduo, and take the lands. 1 Lev. 92. On a nihil returned upon an elegit, there may be brought a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, or fieri facias. 1 Leon. 176. And an elegit may be ſued after a fieri facias returned nulla bona, or where part is levied by it; and after a capias ad ſatisfaciendum returned non eſt inventus. Hob. 57.

A perſon in execution was ſuffered to eſcape, and then he died; the land which he had at the time of the judgment may be extended, by elegit, upon a ſcire facias brought againſt his heir, as tertenant. Dyer 271.

A man may have an aſſiſe of the land which he hath in execution by elegit, if he be deforced thereof. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 18. And if tenant by elegit alien the land in fee, &c. he who hath right ſhall have againſt him and the alienee, an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin. Ibid. At a trial at bar in C. B. the court delivered for law, that where lands are actually extended, and delivered upon an elegit, a fine levied on thoſe lands, and non-claim, will bar the intereſt of the tenant by elegit. 1 Mod. 217.

If tenant by elegit, be put out of poſſeſſion before he hath received ſatisfaction for his debt, by the heir at law, &c. he may bring action of treſpaſs, or re-enter and hold over till ſatisfied: but after ſatisfaction received, the defendant may enter on the tenant by elegit. 4 Rep. 28, 67. Tenants by elegit, ſtatutes-merchant, &c. are not puniſhable for waſte by action of waſte; but the party, againſt whom execution is ſued, is to have a writ of venire facias ad computandum, &c. and there the waſte ſhall be recovered in the debt: though it is ſaid there is an old writ of waſte in the Regiſter, for him in reverſion againſt tenant by elegit, committing waſte on lands which he hath in execution 6 Rep. 37. New Nat. Br. 130. On tenant by elegit's accounting, if the money recovered by the plaintiff is levied out of the lands, the defendant ſhall recover his land; and if more be received by waſte, &c. he ſhall have damages. Terms de Ley. See Extent, Execution. See *Black. Eloine, (from the Fr. eſloiſner) Signifies to remove or ſend a great way off: in this ſenſe it is uſed by ſtatute; if ſuch as are within age be eloined, ſo that they cannot come to ſue perſonally, their next friends ſhall be admitted to ſue for them. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 15.

Elongata, Is a return of the ſheriff that cattle are not to be found, or removed, ſo that he cannot make deliverance, &c. in replevin. 2 Lil. Abr. 454, 458.

Elopement, (derived from the Belg. E, viz. matrimonium & loopen, currere) Is where a married woman of her own accord, goes away and departs from her huſband, and lives with an adulterer. A woman thus leaving her huſband is ſaid to elope; and in this caſe, her huſband is not obliged to allow her any alimony out of his eſtate; nor ſhall he be chargeable for neceſſaries for her, as wearing apparel, diet, lodging, &c. And where the ſame is notorious, whoever gives her credit, doth it at his peril: but on elopement, the putting a wife in the Gazette, or other news-papers, is no legal notice to perſons in general not to truſt her; though perſonal notice to particular perſons given by the huſband, will be good not to be chargeable to them. 1 Rol. 350. 1 Vent. 42. I ſhould think publication ſeveral times, in the Gazette, Daily Advertiſer, and other daily papers for ſome time would be a very good caſe, with reſpect to notice, to all perſons, to leave to a jury. By Stat. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 34. If the wife goes away from the huſband, and tarrieth with the adulterer, without returning and being reconciled to her huſband, this continual elopement forfeits her dower; according to theſe old verſes:

> Sponte virum mulier fugiens, & adultera facta,
> Dote ſua careat, niſi ſponſo ſponte retracta.

Action lies againſt the adulterer for carrying away another perſon's wife, and detaining her; and large damages are uſually given in theſe caſes to the injured huſband.

Emblements, from the Fr. emblavence de bled, viz. corn ſprung or put up above ground) Signify properly the profits of ſown land: but the word is ſometimes uſed more largely, for any products that ariſe naturally from the ground, as graſs, fruit, &c. In ſome caſes he who ſowed the corn ſhall have the emblements; and in others not: a leſſee at will ſows the land, he ſhall have the emblements; though if the leſſee determines the will himſelf, he ſhall not have them, but the leſſor. 5 Rep. 116. If leſſee at will ſows the land with grain, or other thing yielding annual profit, and the leſſor enters before ſeverance; yet the leſſee ſhall have it: but where the leſſee plants young fruit-trees, or other trees, or ſows the land with acorns, &c. he ſhall not have theſe: and if ſuch tenant by good huſbandry make the graſs to grow in greater abundance; or ſow the land with hay-ſeed, by which means it is increaſed, if the leſſor enters on the leſſee, the leſſee ſhall not have it, becauſe graſs is the natural profit of the ſoil. Co. Lit. 55, 56.

Where tenant for life ſows the land, and dies, his executors ſhall have the emblements, and not the leſſor or him in reverſion; by reaſon of the uncertainty of the eſtate. Cro. Eliz. 463. And if a tenant for life plants hops, and dies before ſeverance, he in reverſion ſhall not have them, but the executors of tenant for life. Cro. Car. 515. If tenant for years, (if he ſo long live) ſow the ground, and die before ſeverance; the executor of the leſſee ſhall have the corn: and where leſſee for life leaſes for years, if the leſſee for years ſow the land, and after leſſee for life dies before ſeverance, the executor of leſſee for years ſhall have the emblements. 2 Danv. Abr. 765.

If tenant for years ſows ground, and before his corn is ſevered, the term which is certain expires; the leſſor or he in reverſion ſhall have the emblements; but he muſt firſt enter on the lands. 1 Lil. Abr. 511. A leſſee for life or years ſows the land, and after ſurrenders, &c. before ſeverance, the leſſor ſhall have the corn. 2 Danv. 764. If there be leſſee for years upon condition that if he commit waſte, &c. his eſtate ſhall ceaſe; if he ſows the ground with corn, and after doth waſte, the leſſor ſhall have the corn. Co. Lit. 55. And where a lord enters on his tenant for a forfeiture, he ſhall have the corn on the ground. 4 Rep. 21.

A feme copyholder for her widowhood ſows the land, and before ſeverance takes huſband, ſo that her eſtate is determined, the lord ſhall have the emblements. 1 Lil. 511. Though if ſuch a feme copyholder durante viduitate, leaſes for one year according to cuſtom, and the leſſee ſows the land, and afterwards the copyholder takes huſband, the leſſee ſhall have the corn. 2 Danv. 764. If a huſband holds lands for life, in right of his wife, and ſow the land, and after ſhe dies before ſeverance, he ſhall have the emblements. Dyer 316. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 701. And where the wife hath an eſtate for years, life, or in fee, and the huſband ſows the land, and dieth, his executors ſhall have the corn. 1 Nelſ. 702. But if the huſband and wife are jointenants, though the huſband ſow the land with corn, and dies before ripe, the wife and not his executors ſhall have the corn, ſhe being the ſurviving join-jointenant. Co. Lit. 199.

When a widow is endowed with lands ſown, ſhe ſhall have the emblements, and not the heir. 2 Inſt. 81. And a tenant in dower may diſpoſe of corn ſown on the ground; or it may go to her executors, if ſhe die before ſeverance. 2 Inſt. 80, 81. And if a parſon ſows his glebe, and dies, his executors ſhall have the corn: likewiſe ſuch parſon may by will diſpoſe thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 655. Stat. 28 H. 8. cap. 11.

If tenant by ſtatute-merchant ſows the land, and before ſeverance a caſual profit happens, by which he is ſatisfied, yet he ſhall have the corn. Co. Lit. 55. Lands ſown are delivered in execution upon an extent, the perſon to whom delivered ſhall have the corn on the ground. 2 Leon. 54. And judgment was given againſt a perſon, and then he ſowed the land, and brought a writ of error to reverſe the judgment; but it was affirmed; and adjudged that the recoveror ſhall have the corn. 2 Bulſt. 213.

If a diſſeiſor ſows the land, and afterwards cuts the corn, but before it is carried away, the diſſeiſee enters; the diſſeiſee ſhall have the corn. Dyer 31. 11 Rep. 52. A perſon ſeiſed in fee of land dies, having a daughter, and his wife privement enſient with a ſon; the daughter enters and ſows the land, and before ſeverance of the corn, the ſon is born; in this caſe the daughter ſhall have the corn, her eſtate being lawful, and defeated by the act of God; and it is for the public good that the land ſhould be ſown. Co. Lit. 55.

A man ſeiſed in fee-ſimple ſows land, and then deviſes the land by will, and dies before ſeverance; the deviſee ſhall have the corn; and not the deviſor's executors. Winch 52. Cro. Eliz. 61. If a perſon deviſes his lands ſown, and ſays nothing of the corn, the corn ſhall go with the land to the deviſee: and when a man ſeiſed of land, in fee or in tail, ſows it, and dies without will, it goes to executor, and not the heir. 10 Ed. 4. 1. b. 21 H. 6. 30. a. 37 H. 6. 35. b. A deviſee for life dies, he in remainder ſhall have the emblements with the land. Hob. 132.

Tenant in fee ſows the land, and deviſes it to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, and dies; A. dies before ſeverance, B. in remainder ſhall have the corn, and not the executor of the firſt tenant for life. Cro. Eliz. 61, 464. Where there is a right to emblements, ingreſs, egreſs and regreſs are allowed by law, to enter, cut and carry them away, when the eſtate is determined, &c. 1 Inſt. 56.

Embraceor, (Fr. embraſour) Is he that when a matter is in trial between party and party comes to the bar with one of the parties, having received ſome reward ſo to do, and ſpeaks in the caſe; or privately labours the jury, or ſtands in the court to ſurvey and overlook them, whereby they are awed or influenced, or put in fear or doubt of the matter. Stat. 19 H. 7. cap. 13. But lawyers, attornies, &c. may ſpeak in the caſe for their clients, and not to be embraceors: alſo the plaintiff may labour the jurors to appear in his own cauſe; but a ſtranger muſt not do it: for the bare writing a letter to a perſon, or parol requeſt for a juror to appear, not by the party himſelf, hath been held within the ſtatutes againſt embracery and maintenance. Co. Lit. 369. Hob. 294. 1 Saund. 391. If the party himſelf inſtruct a juror, or promiſe any reward for his appearance, then the party is likewiſe an embraceor. And a juror may be guilty of embracery, where he by indirect practices gets himſelf ſworn on the tales, to ſerve on one ſide. 1 Lil. 513. There are divers ſtatutes relating to this offence and maintenance, as 5 Ed. 3. c. 10. 34 Ed. 3. c. 8. 32 H. 8. c. 9, &c. An action will lie for maintenance, &c. at Common law. 2 Inſt. 208. So an action lies by qui tam, &c. upon the Stat. 32 H. 8. 9. for a penalty of ten pounds againſt him who maintains a ſuit. Vide Com. Dig. 4 V. 168, &c.

Embracery, Is the act or offence of embracers: and to attempt to influence a jury, or any way incline them to be more favourable to the one ſide than the other, by promiſes, threatenings, money, treats, &c. whether the jurors upon whom any ſuch attempt is made, give any verdict or not, or whether the verdict paſs on his ſide or not; this is embracery. Embring Days, (from embers, cineres) So called either becauſe our anceſtors, when they faſted, ſat in aſhes, or ſtrewed them on their heads, are thoſe which the ancient fathers called Quatuor Tempora jejunii, and of great antiquity in the church: they are obſerved on Wedneſday, Friday and Saturday next after Quadrageſima Sunday, (or the firſt Sunday in Lent) after Whitſunday, Holyrood day in September, and St. Lucy's day about the middle of December. Theſe days are mentioned by Britton, cap. 53. and other writers; and particularly in the Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 19. and are kept with great zeal by the Roman Catholicks; our almanacks call them the Ember Weeks.

Embroidery. By the Stat. 22 G. 2. c. 36. No foreign embroidery, or gold or ſilver brocade, ſhall be imported, upon pain of being forfeited and burnt, and penalty of 100*l.* for each piece. No perſon ſhall ſell or expoſe to ſale any foreign embroidery, gold or ſilver thread, lace, fringe, brocade, or make up the ſame into any garment, upon pain of having it forfeited and burnt, and penalty of 100*l.* All ſuch embroidery, &c. found, may be ſeized and burnt, and the mercer, &c. in whoſe cuſtody it was found, ſhall forfeit 100*l.*

Emendals, (emenda) Is an old word ſtill made uſe of in the accounts of the ſociety of the Inner Temple; where ſo much in emendals at the foot of an account, on the balance thereof, ſignifies ſo much money in the bank or ſtock of the houſes, for reparation of loſſes or other emergent occaſions: quod in reſtaurationem damni tribuitur. Spelm.

Emendare, Emendam ſolvere, To make amends for any crime or treſpaſs committed. Leg. Edw. Confeſſ. c. 35. Hence a capital crime, not to be attoned by fine, was ſaid to be inemendabile. Leg Canut. p. 2.

Emendatio, Hath been uſed for the power of amending and correcting abuſes, according to ſtated rules and meaſures; as emendatio panni, the power of looking to the aſſize of cloth, that it be of juſt meaſure; emendatio panis & cerviſiæ, the aſſizing of bread and beer, &c. privilege granted to lords of manors, and executed by their officers appointed in the court-leet, &c. Ad nos ſpectat emendatio panni & panis & cerviſiæ, & quicquid regis eſt, excepto murdredo & latrocinio, &c.——Paroch. Emperor, (imperator). The higheſt ruler of large kingdoms and territories, a title anciently given to renowned and victorious generals of armies, who acquired great power and dominion. And this title is not only given to the Emperor of Germany, as Emperor of the Romans; but was formerly belonging to the Kings of England, as appears by a charter of King Edgar, viz. Ego Edgarus Anglorum Baſileus, omniumque Regum Inſularum Oceani quæ Britanniam circumjacent, &c. Imperator & Dominus.

Encheſon, A French word uſed in our law books and ſtatutes, ſignifying as much as occaſion, or the cauſe or reaſon wherefore any thing is done. Stat. 5 Ed. 3. c. 3.

Endeavour. Where one who has the uſe of his reaſon endeavours to commit felony, &c. he ſhall be puniſhed by our laws, but not to that degree as if he had actually committed it: as if a man aſſault another on the highway, in order to a robbery, but takes nothing from him, this is not puniſhed as felony, becauſe the felony was not accompliſhed; though as a miſdemeanor, it is liable to fine and impriſonment. 3 Inſt. 68, 69, 161. 11 Rep. 98. And in this caſe, the offender ſhall be tranſported, by a late ſtatute, 7 Geo. 2. cap. 21. Vide Intendment.

Endowment, Signifies the beſtowing or aſſuring of dower on a woman; but it is ſometimes uſed metaphorically for the ſettling a proviſion upon a perſon, or building of a church or chapel; and the ſevering a ſufficient portion of tithes, &c. for a vicar, towards his perpetual maintenance, when the benefice is appropriated. Stat. 15 R. 2. c. 6. 4 H. 4. cap. 12.

Enemy, (inimicus) Is properly an alien or foreigner, who in a public capacity, and in an hoſtile manner, invades any kingdom or country; and whether ſuch perſons come hither by themſelves, or in company with Engliſh traitors, they cannot be puniſhed as traitors, but ſhall be dealt with by martial law. H. P. C. 10, 15. 1 Hawk. 35. But the ſubjects of a foreign prince coming into England, and living under the protection of the King, if they take up arms, &c. againſt the government, they may be puniſhed as traitors, not as alien enemies. 1 Hawk. ibid. If a priſoner be reſcued by enemies, the gaoler is not guilty of an eſcape; as he would have been if ſubjects had made the reſcue, when he might have a legal remedy againſt them. 2 Hawk. 130. Adhering to and ſuccouring the King's enemies. See Treaſon.

Enfranchiſe, (Fr. enfranchir) To make free, or incorporate a man in any ſociety, &c. It is alſo uſed where one is made a free denizen, which is a kind of incorporation in the commonwealth.

Enfranchiſement, (Fr. from franchiſe, i. e. libertas) Is when a perſon is incorporated into any ſociety or body politick, and ſignifies the act of incorporating. He that by charter is made a denizen, or freeman of England, is ſaid to be enfranchiſed, and let into the general liberties of the ſubjects of the kingdom: and he who is made a citizen of London, or other city, or free burgeſs of any town corporate, as he is made partaker of thoſe liberties that appertain to the corporation, is in the common ſenſe of the word a perſon enfranchiſed. And when a man is enfranchiſed into the freedom of any city or borough, he hath a freehold in his freedom during life; and may not, for endeavouring any thing only againſt the corporation, loſe and forfeit the ſame. 11 Rep. 91. So Villein was enfranchiſed, when he was made free by his lord, and rendered capable of the benefits belonging to freemen.

Englecery, or Engleſchire, (Engleceria) Is an old word ſignifying the being an Engliſhman. When Canutus the Dane came to be King of England, he at the requeſt of the nobility ſent back his army into Denmark, but kept ſome Danes behind to be a guard to his perſon; and he made a law for the preſervation of his Danes (who were often privately made away with by the Engliſh) that if an Engliſhman killed a Dane, he ſhould be tried for the murder; or if he eſcaped, the town or hundred where the fact was done, was to be amerced ſixty-ſix marks to the King; ſo that after this law, whenever a murder was committed, it was neceſſary to prove the party ſlain to be an Engliſhman, that the town might be exempted from the amercement; which proof was called Englecery, or Engleſchire. And whereas if a perſon were privately ſlain, he was in ancient time accounted Francigena, which word comprehended every alien, eſpecially the Danes: it was therefore ordained, that where any perſon was murdered, he ſhould be adjudged Francigena, unleſs Englecery were proved, and that it was made manifeſt he was an Engliſhman. The manner of proving the perſon killed to be an Engliſhman, was by two witneſſes who knew the father and mother, before the coroner, &c. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 15. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 30. 7 Rep. 16. This Englecery, by reaſon of the great abuſes and trouble that afterwards were perceived to grow by it, was utterly taken away by Stat. 14 Ed. 3. ſt. 1. c. 4.

Engliſhmen, The names of, to be certified into the Chancery who are abroad in Holland and Flanders, &c. and ſhall pay ſuch impoſitions as aliens do. Stat. 14 & 15 H. 8. c. 4.

Engravers, That ſhall invent, deſign and engrave prints, to have the ſole right of printing them for fourteen years, which ſhall be engraved with the names of the proprietors; and others copying, and ſelling ſuch prints, though by varying, &c. without their conſent, ſhall forfeit 5 l. for every print, and alſo the plates and ſheet, &c. Stat. 8 Geo. 2. c. 13.

Enhance, To raiſe the price of goods or merchandize. See Foreſtaller.

Enplect, Was anciently uſed for implead.——They may enplect and be enplected in all courts. Mon. Ang. tom. 2. fo. 412.

Enſient, or Enſeint, Is the being with child. Law Fr. Dict.

Enſienture, Of any woman condemned for a crime, is no ground to ſtay judgment; but it may be afterwards alledged againſt execution. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 413.

Entail, (Fr. entaille, i. e. inciſus) Is fee entailed, viz. abridged, limited, and tied to certain conditions, at the will of the donor; where lands are given to, or ſettled on others. See Fee and Tail.

Enterpleader, (Fr. enterplaider, Lat. interplacitare) Signifies to diſcuſs or try a point incidentally happening as it were between, before the principal cauſe can be determined. And enterpleader is allowed, that the defendant may not be charged to two ſeverally, where no default is in him: as if one brings detinue againſt the defendant upon a bailment of goods, and another againſt him upon a trover, there ſhall be enterpleader, to aſcertain who hath right to his action. 2 Danv. Abr. 779. If two bring ſeveral detinues againſt A. B. for the ſame thing, and the defendant acknowledges the action of one of them, without a prayer of enterpleader, they ſhall not interplead on the requeſt of the other; for the interpleader is given for the ſecurity of the defendant, that he may not be twice charged, and he hath waived that benefit. 18 Ed. 3. 22.

If one brings detinue againſt B. and counts upon a delivery of goods, &c. to re-deliver to him, and another brings detinue againſt him alſo, and counts ſo likewiſe; if there be not any privity of bailment between them, yet they ſhall interplead, to avoid the double charge of the defendant; and alſo becauſe the court cannot know to whom to deliver the thing detained, if both ſhould recover. Br. Enterplead. 3. And upon ſuch ſeveral detinues, if the defendant ſays that he found it, and traverſes the bailment, they ſhall enterplead; for then he is chargeable as well to the one as the other: ſo if he ſays that they delivered jointly, abſque hoc, that they delivered it as they have counted: but it is otherwiſe if the defendant doth not traverſe the bailment, becauſe if there was a bailment, he is chargeable only to the bailor, and may plead in bar againſt the others. 2 Danv. 782.

Where two bring ſeveral detinues for one thing, and the defendant prays that he may enterplead, and delivers the thing to the court, and before the award of the enterpleader, one diſcontinues the ſuit, the other ſhall not have judgment; but if he diſcontinues his ſuit after the enterpleader, the other may have judgment. 11 H. 6. 19.

If a recovery be had upon an enterpleader, judgment ſhall be given to recover the thing demanded againſt the defendant; and not againſt the garniſhee, in caſe of garniſhment, &c. 2 Danv. 783. When two have enterpleaded in detinue, he that recovers ſhall recover damage againſt the other. Br. Damage 68.

There was formerly enterpleader relating to delivery of lands by the King to the right heir, where two perſons out of wardſhip were found heirs, &c. 7 Rep. 45. Staund. Prer. cap. 17. Bro. tit. Enterplead. And anciently the head enterpleader made a great title in the law. There is alſo a bill of interpleader in Chancery.

Entiertie, (from the French entierete, entireneſs) Is a contradiſtinction in our books to moiety, denoting the whole: and a bond, damages, &c. are ſaid to be entire, when they cannot be divided or apportioned.

Entire Tenancy, Contrary to ſeveral tenancy, and ſignifying a ſole poſſeſſion in one man; whereas the other is a joint or common poſſeſſion in more. Brook.

Entry, (ingreſſus, Fr. entree, i. e. introitus) Signifies the taking poſſeſſion of lands or tenements, where a man hath title of entry: and it is alſo uſed for a writ of poſſeſſion. This entry into lands, is where any man enters into or takes poſſeſſion of any lands, &c. in his proper perſon; and is an actual entry when made by a man's ſelf, or by attorney by warrant from him that hath the right; or it is an entry in law, for a continual claim is an entry implied by law, and has the ſame force with it. Lit. ſect. 419. There is a right of entry, when the party claiming may for his remedy either enter into the land, or have an action to recover it: and a title of entry, where one hath lawful entry given him in the lands, which another hath, but has no action to recover till he hath entered. Plowd. 558. 10 Rep. 48. Finch's Law 105.

The writs of entry concern the right of property, and are of divers kinds, diſtinguiſhed into four degrees, according to which the writs are varied. The firſt degree is a writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin, that lieth for the diſſeiſee againſt a diſſeiſor, upon a diſſeiſin done by himſelf; and this is called a writ of entry in the nature of an aſſiſe.

Second, a writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin in le per, for the heir by diſcent, who is ſaid to be in the per, as he comes in by his anceſtor; and ſo it is if a diſſeiſor make a feoffment in fee, gift in tail, &c. the feoffee and donee are in the per by the diſſeiſor.

Third, A writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin in le per & cui, where the feoffee of a diſſeiſor maketh a feoffment over to another, when the diſſeiſee ſhall have this writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin, &c. of the lands in which ſuch other had no right of entry, but by the feoffee of the diſſeiſor, to whom the diſſeiſor demiſed the ſame, who unjuſtly and without judgment diſſeiſed the demandant.

Fourth, A writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin in le poſt, which lieth when after a diſſeiſin the land is removed from hand to hand beyond the degrees, in caſe of a more remote ſeiſin, whereunto the other three degrees do not extend. Co. Lit. 238.

In theſe four degrees, are comprehended generally all manner of writs of entry. And the writ of entry in le poſt is ſo called, becauſe the words of the writ are, Poſt diſſeiſinam quam B. injuſte & ſine judicio fecit, &c. Britton obſerves, that the words, In le per, In le per & cui, and In le poſt, ſignify nothing but divers forms of this writ, applied to the caſe whereupon it is brought; and each form taking its name from the words contained in the writ. F. N. B. 193. But if any writ of entry be conceived out of the right cauſe, ſo that one form is brought for another, it is abatable.

A writ of entry in the per and cui, ſhall be maintained againſt none, but where the tenant is in by purchaſe or diſcent; for if the alienation or diſcent be put out of the degree upon which no writ may be made in the per and cui, then it ſhall be made in the poſt. Terms de Ley.

There are five things which put the writ of entry out of the degrees, viz. intruſion; diſſeiſin upon diſſeiſin; ſucceſſion where the diſſeiſor was a perſon of religion, and his ſucceſſor enters; judgment, when a perſon hath had judgment to recover againſt the diſſeiſor; and eſcheat, on the diſſeiſor's dying without heir, or committing felony, &c. on which the lord enters, &c. In all theſe caſes, the diſſeiſee or his heir, ſhall not have a writ of entry within the degrees of the per, but in the poſt; becauſe they are not in by diſcent, or purchaſe. Terms de Ley.

Having explained the nature of an entry, it remains to conſider in what caſes an entry is lawful, and by what means it is taken away.

Degrees as to entries are of two ſorts, either by act in law, as in caſe of a diſcent; or by act of the party by lawful conveyance; and by the Common law, if the lands were conveyed out of the degrees, the demandant was driven to his writ of right, in reſpect of ſuch long poſſeſſion, and ſo many alterations in different hands; wherefore by the ſtatute of Marlbridge, 52 Hen. 3. cap. 29. the writ of entry in le poſt is given.

But no eſtate gained by wrong doth make a degree; ſo that abatement, intruſion, &c. work not a degree; nor doth every change by lawful title, or an eſtate of tenant by the curteſy, by judgment, &c. or of any others that come in the poſt; though a tenancy in dower by aſſignment of the heir doth work a degree, becauſe ſhe is in by her huſband: but an aſſignment of dower by a diſſeiſor, doth not, by reaſon ſhe is in the poſt. Co, Lit. 239.

Entry on lands is taken away by diſcent on diſſeiſins, or diſcontinuance, &c. But a diſcent ſhall not take away the entry of leſſee for ſeven years, nor of tenant by elegit, &c. who have but a chattel, and no freehold; otherwiſe it is of any eſtate for life, or any higher eſtate. Co. Lit. 249. Where a diſſeiſor dieth ſeiſed, and the law caſteth the lands upon his heir; this is a diſcent which tolls (or takes away) an entry at Common law: by ſtatute, it is only where the diſſeiſor had peaceable poſſeſſion five years; for if he had not poſſeſſion peaceably during that time, the diſcent to his heir ſhall not take away an entry. 32 H. 8. c. 33.

If a diſſeiſor leaſes for years, and dies ſeiſed of the reverſion, the entry of the diſſeiſee is taken away, becauſe he died ſeiſed of the fee and freehold: but if he had leaſed for life, &c. the entry of the diſſeiſee would not be taken away. Co. Lit. 239. Where the diſſeiſor of an infant dies ſeiſed, and after the infant comes of age, and the heir of the diſſeiſor dies before entry; though he died not ſeiſed of an actual ſeiſin, but a ſeiſin in law; yet his dying ſeiſed takes away the entry of the diſſeiſee. Ibid. If a diſſeiſor makes a feoffment upon condition, and the feoffee dies ſeiſed, and the feoffor enters upon the heir for the breach of the condition, the diſſeiſee may enter upon him; for by the entry of the diſſeiſor, the diſcent is utterly defeated. Lit. ſect. 409.

The title of entry in a feoffor, &c. that hath but a condition, cannot be taken away by any diſcent, becauſe he has no remedy by action to recover the land; ſo that if a diſcent ſhould take away his entry, it would bar him of his right for ever: and the condition remains, and cannot be deveſted and put out of poſſeſſion, as the lands, &c. Co. Lit. 240. If a man recovers lands, and after a ſtranger to the recovery dies ſeiſed, this ſhall not take away the entry of the recoveror; as it was but a title. 2 Danv. Abr. 561. But where a perſon recovers againſt another, and enters and ſues execution, and after the recoveree diſſeiſes him, and dies ſeiſed; this diſcent ſhall take away the entry of the recoveror, for the recovery was executed. Ibid.

If after recovery againſt tenant for life, he dies, and he in remainder enters before execution, and dies ſeiſed, the entry of the recoveror is not taken away. Co. Lit. 238. The entry of the tenant for life, ſhall be good for him in remainder: and if tenant for life make a feoffment in fee, and a ſtranger enters for the forfeiture in the name of the reverſioner; this will be good to veſt the reverſion in him. Lit. 128. 9 Rep. 106. If an infant under age, makes a deed of feoffment, and after his full age the feoffee dies ſeiſed; or a leſſee for life aliens the land, and the alienee dies ſeiſed thereof; or a deviſe be of lands upon condition, and the heir of the diſſeiſor enters and dies ſeiſed: in theſe caſes the entry is gone, and the parties ſhall be put to their action. Lit. 96. 9 H. 6. 25.

If there be tenant for life, remainder to the right heir of J. S. and the tenant for life is diſſeiſed; a diſcent is caſt; and after J. S. dies, and tenant for life alſo dies: by this the entry of the heir of J. S. is not taken away, for his remainder was in cuſtodia legis. 1 Rep. 134. Where an infant has cauſe of entry, and the diſcent happens while he is within age, it will not bar him of his entry: he that hath the right of entry, muſt be of age, within the four ſeas, of ſound memory; and if it be a woman, ſhe muſt be ſole; and if the party be under age, beyond the ſeas, non compos mentis, in priſon, or a feme covert, at the time of the diſcent, it ſhall not bar. Lit. 147, 402. 21 H. 6. 17.

The whole time from a diſſeiſin is conſiderable; as where feme covert is diſſeiſed, and her huſband dieth, and ſhe takes another huſband, and then a diſcent is caſt; or if one ultra mare be diſeiſed, and he return into England, and then go beyond ſea again, and there is a diſcent; here the diſcent will bar the entry, becauſe of the interim. 9 H. 7. 24. Dyer 143. 32 H. 8. c. 33.

A woman tenant in tail took huſband, who made a feoffment in fee, and died, and the wife without entry made a leaſe for years; and it was held, that the freehold was not reduced by the leaſe, without an entry made. 1 Leon. ca. [illegible]. The entry of a diſſeiſee, when he duly makes it, ſhall avoid all the meſne charges by the diſſeiſor upon the land: but right of entry may be loſt divers ways; as by acceptance of rent, by him who hath it, and the like. 1 Anderſon 133. Noy Rep. 7. If a man is diſſeiſed of land whereunto a common is appendant, the diſſeiſee cannot uſe the common till he enters on the land to which the common is appendant; for if the diſſeiſee might uſe it, ſo might the diſſeiſor, which would be a double charge on the common: yet if a perſon be diſſeiſed of a manor, to which an advowſon is appendant, he may preſent to the advowſon before entry on the manor. Co. Lit. 122.

A diſſeiſee enters into the land, and continues therein with the diſſeiſor, and manures it with him, claiming nothing of his firſt eſtate; or if the diſſeiſee enters, and takes the profit, as leſſee, &c. of the diſſeiſor, it is ſaid theſe will be an entry that will reduce the firſt eſtate. 2 Danv. 790. If the diſſeiſee commands a ſtranger to put in the cattle of ſuch ſtranger in the land to feed there; this is an entry in law on the land. Co. Lit. 245

Where entry may be made into land, or any thing, it ſhall not be in the party before entry: if entry cannot be made, but only claim, then it ſhall be in him by claim; and when neither entry nor claim can be made, it ſhall be in him by act of law. 1 Plowd. 133. In caſe the poſſeſſion of land is in no man, but the freehold in law is in the heir that enters, his general entry into one part reduces all into his actual poſſeſſion: but if an entry is to deveſt an eſtate, a general entry into parcel, is good only for that part. Co. Lit. 15. Where an entry is in any parts, it muſt be in the name of all: if I enfeoff a perſon of an acre of ground upon condition, and of another acre on condition, and both conditions are broken; here entry into one in name of both acres is not good to reduce both: but if a man make a feoffment of divers parcels upon condition that is broken, there entry into part in name of all the reſt is ſufficient. Co. Lit. 252. 9 H. 7. 25.

A man hath right to enter into lands in divers villages in one county, if he enter upon part of it in one village in the name of all in that county; by this he ſhall have poſſeſſion of the whole. Co. Lit. 252. Dyer 227, 337. If a man diſſeiſe me of one acre at one time, and another acre at another time in the ſame county; my entry into one of them in the name of both is good: though it will not be good, if the diſſeiſin be by two ſeveral perſons, or if the acres lie in ſeveral counties, when there ought to be ſeveral entries and actions. Co. Lit. 252.

If he who hath right of entry into a freehold, enters into part of it, it ſhall be adjudged an entry into all poſſeſſed by one tenant; but if there be ſeveral tenants poſſeſſed of the freehold, there muſt be ſeveral entries on the ſeveral tenants. 1 Lil. Abr. 515, 516. Special entry into a houſe with which lands are occupied, claiming the whole, is a good entry as to the whole houſe and lands. Ibid. If a huſband enters to the uſe of his wife; or a man enters to the uſe of an infant, or any other, where the entry is lawful; this ſettles the poſſeſſion before agreement of the parties: though it is otherwiſe where a perſon enters to the uſe of one whoſe entry is not lawful; for this veſts nothing in him till agreement, and then he ſhall be a diſſeiſor. 2 Danv. 787. If two jointenants are diſſeiſed, and the diſſeiſor aliens, and one jointenant enters upon the alienee to the uſe of both; this ſettles the freehold in both of them. Ibid. 788. But if one coparcener, &c. enters eſpecially claiming the whole land, ſhe gains the part of her companion by abatement; and it ſhall not ſettle any poſſeſſion in the other. Co. Lit. 243.

The heir is to enter into lands deſcended to him, to entitle him to the profits. Co. Lit. 214. If a younger ſon enters on lands in fee, where the eldeſt ſon dies leaving iſſue; though many diſcents are caſt in his line, yet the heirs of the eldeſt ſon may make an entry on the lands; but if the youngeſt ſon convey away the lands in fee, and the feoffee dies ſeiſed, they may not enter; nor may they enter where the younger ſon diſſeiſes the eldeſt, and dies ſeiſed. Co. Lit. 237, 244. Lit. Sect. 397.

A tenant in tail hath iſſue two ſons, and the eldeſt dies, leaving his wife priviment enſient of a ſon, and the younger brother enters, and then the wife of the eldeſt is delivered of a ſon, he may enter upon the younger brother. 2 Danv. 557. An eſtate of freehold will not ceaſe without entry or claim: alſo a remainder of an eſtate of freehold cannot ceaſe without entry, &c. no more than eſtate of freehold in poſſeſſion. Cro. Eliz. 360. A right of entry preſerves a contingent remainder. 2 Lev. 35. And a grantee of a reverſion, may enter for a condition broken. Plowd. 176.

A leſſee muſt enter into lands demiſed to him; and tho' the leſſor dies before the leſſee enters, yet he may enter: and if the leſſee dies before entry, his executors or adminiſtrators may enter. The leſſee may aſſign over his term before entry, having intereſſe termini; but he may not take a releaſe to enlarge his eſtate; or bring treſpaſs, &c. till actual entry. Though if there be words bargain and ſell in a leaſe, &c. for conſideration of money, the leſſee or bargainee is in poſſeſſion on executing the deed, to make a releaſe, &c. Lit. 59, 454. Co. Lit. 46, 57, 270.

Where a leſſor enters on his leſſee for years, the rent is ſuſpended. 1 Leon. 110. But without entry and expulſion, the leſſee is not diſcharged of his rent to the leſſor; unleſs it be where the leſſor is attainted of treaſon, &c. that the rent is to be paid to the King, who is in poſſeſſion without entry. Sid. 399. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 706.

There is no need of entry to avoid an eſtate in caſe of a limitation, becauſe thereby the eſtate is determined without entry or claim; and the law caſts it upon the party to whom it is limited. If A. deviſes lands to B. and his heirs, and dies, it is in the deviſee immediately; but till entry he cannot bring a poſſeſſory action: and where a poſſeſſion veſts without entry, a reverſion will veſt without claim. 2 Mod. Rep. 7, 8. A bare entry on another, without an expulſion, makes only a ſeiſin; ſo that the law will adjudge him in poſſeſſion who hath the right. 3 Salk. 135.

If a perſon who hath title of entry, finds an houſe open with nobody in it, and enters into it, and keeps in poſſeſſion; this is no forcible entry; contra, if any body is in it. Common Law Com. Plac'd 186. Where a perſon is in a houſe with goods, &c. the houſe may be entered when the doors are open, to make execution. Cro. Eliz. 759. But it muſt be averred that the goods were in the houſe. Lutw. 1428, 1434. And a man cannot enter into a houſe, the doors being open, to demand a debt, unleſs he aver that the debtor is within the houſe at the ſame time. Cro. El. 6, 8.

Entry may be made on a tenant where rent is in arrear, to take a diſtreſs, &c. in order to regain poſſeſſion of lands by entry, &c. The manner of entry is thus: If it be a houſe, and the door is open, you go into it, and ſay theſe words.—I do here enter, and take poſſeſſion of this houſe. But if the door be ſhut, then ſet your foot on the groundſel, or againſt the door, and ſay the before words: and if it be land, then go upon the land, and ſay, I here enter and take poſſeſſion of this land, &c. If another do it for you, he muſt ſay, I do here enter, &c. to the uſe of A. B. And it is neceſſary to make it before witneſſes, and that a memorandum be made of it. Lit. 385. Co. Lit. 237, 238. In actions for recovery of lands, &c. entry is to be made within twenty years after the title accrued. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 16. But where a fine of lands is paſſed, the entry is to be in five years. 1 R. 3. c. 7. 4 H. 7. c. 24. Demand how made of rent, &c. to entitle entry, ſee Demand. By 32 H. 8. c. 33. No diſcent to the heir of the diſſeiſor ſhall take away the entry of him that hath title to the land, unleſs the diſſeiſor had peaceable poſſeſſion five years next after the diſſeiſin. The editor hath retained the doctrine, relative to entry, as it may be of uſe, in caſes where more than twenty years having elapſed, ejectment cannot be maintained, and a writ of right muſt be ſued.

But, where an ejectment will lie, the confeſſion of leaſe, entry, and ouſter is ſufficient in all caſes, except in the caſe of a fine with proclamations, in which caſe it is neceſſary to prove an actual entry; and the leſſor of the plaintiff directing one to deliver a declaration to the tenant in poſſeſſion will not amount to ſuch an entry. By the Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 16. No claim or entry ſhall be of force to avoid a fine levied with proclamations, or ſhall be ſufficient within the 21 Jac. 1. of limitations, unleſs the action be commenced, within one year after making ſuch entry or claim.——Note, the plaintiff muſt not lay his demiſe antecedent to his *entry. Entry ad Communem Legem, Is the writ of entry which lies where tenant for term of life, or for term of another's life, or by the curteſy, &c. aliens and dies, when he in the reverſion ſhall have this writ againſt whomſoever is in poſſeſſion of the land. New Nat. Br. 461.

Entry ad terminum qui preteriit, A writ of entry brought againſt a tenant for years, who holdeth over his term, and thereby keeps out the leſſor; and if the huſband and wife leaſe the wife's land for years, and the huſband dieth, and the termor holds over his term, the wife may have a writ of entry ad terminum qui præteriit, &c. but ſhe muſt count that ſhe and her huſband leaſed the land, &c. Alſo the grantee in reverſion may have this writ againſt the leſſee, or his aſſignee, &c. New Nat. Br. 447, 448. An ejectment is now the common mode of proceeding; and by 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. Tenants for term of years, &c. holding over after demand made, are ſubject to double rent.

Entry in caſu conſimili, Is a writ that lies where tenant for life, or tenant by the curteſy, aliens in fee, &c. he in reverſion may have this writ by Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 24. See Caſu Conſimili.

Entry in caſu Proviſo, Lies where a tenant in dower aliens in fee, or for term of life, or of another's life; then he in the reverſion ſhall have this writ, provided by the Stat. of Glouc. 6 Ed. 1. cap. 7. By which ſtatute, it is enacted, "that if a woman alien her dower in fee, or for life, the next heir, &c. ſhall recover by writ of entry." And the writ may be brought againſt the tenant of the freehold of the land, on ſuch alienation, during the life of the tenant in dower, &c. New Nat. Br. 456. Theſe writs of entry may be all brought either in the per, or in the cui or poſt.

Entry ſine aſſenſu Capitali, Is a writ of entry that lies where a biſhop, abbot, &c. aliens lands or tenements of the church, without the aſſent of the chapter or convent. F. N. B. 195.

Enure, Signifies in the law to take place or be available; and is as much as effectum: as for example; a releaſe made to tenant for life, ſhall enure, and be of force and effect to him in the reverſion. Lit. How many ſeveral ways a releaſe may enure. See Co. Lit. 193. b. 273. b.

Equality, The law delights [illegible] equality; ſo that when a charge is made upon one, and divers ought to bear it, he ſhall have relief againſt the reſt. 2 Rep. 25. And where a man leaves a power to his wife to give an eſtate among three daughters, in ſuch proportions, as ſhe ſhall think fit: it has been held ſhe muſt divide it equally; un-unleſs good reaſon be given for doing otherwiſe. Preced. Canc. 256. See Contribution.

In equity it is a maxim, that "EQUALITY IS EQUITY." See Francis's Maxims, fol. 9, &c.

Eques Auratus, (Lat.) Is taken for a knight; becauſe anciently none but knights were allowed to beautify and guild their armour with gold: but this word is rather uſed by the heralds than lawyers; for eques auratus is not a word in our law for knight, but miles, and formerly Chevalier. 4 Inſt. 5.

Equity, (æquitas, quaſi æqualitas) Is defined to be a correction, or qualification, of the law generally made in that part wherein it faileth, or is too ſevere. And likewiſe ſignifies the extenſion of the words of the law to caſes unexpreſſed, yet having the ſame reaſon; ſo that where one thing is enacted by ſtatute, all other things are enacted that are of the like degree: for example; the ſtatute of Glouc. gives action of waſte againſt him that holds lands for life or years; and by the equity thereof, a man ſhall have action of waſte againſt a tenant that holds but for one year, or half-year, which is without the words of the act, but within the meaning of it; and the words that enact the one, by equity enact the other. Terms de Ley.

So that equity is of two kinds; the one doth abridge and take from the letter of the law; and the other inlarge and add thereto. Æquitas eſt perfecta quædam ratio, quæ jus ſcriptum interpretatur & emendat. Co. Lit. 24. And ſtatutes may be conſtrued according to equity; eſpecially where they give remedy for wrong, or are for expedition of juſtice, &c. Co. Lit. 24, 54, 76. 2 Inſt. 106, 107. &c. Equity ſeems to be the interpoſing law of reaſon, exerciſed by the Lord Chancellor in extraordinary matters, to do equal juſtice, and by ſupplying the defects of the law, gives remedy in all caſes. See Chancery.

As previous to the publication of the learned commentaries, by Blackſtone, there was not any work extant, that could give a ſtranger a tolerable idea of the courts of equity ſubſiſting in England, as diſtinguiſhed from the courts of law, and as that author's obſervations are far ſuperior, to any we have met on the ſubject, we ſhall give a full extract, for the uſe of thoſe, who are not poſſeſſed of that excellent work.

EQUITY, ſays that learned author, "in it's true and genuine meaning, is the ſoul and ſpirit of all law: poſitive law is conſtrued, and rational law is made by it. In this, equity is ſynonymous to juſtice; in that, to the true ſenſe and ſound interpretation of the rule. But the very terms of a court of equity and a court of law, as contraſted to each other, are apt to confound and miſlead us: as if the one judged without equity, and the other was not bound by any law. Whereas every definition or illuſtration to be met with, which now draws a line between the two juriſdictions, by ſetting law and equity in oppoſition to each other, will be found either totally erroneous, or erroneous to a certain degree.

1. 'Thus, in the firſt place it is ſaid, (a) [illegible] it is the buſineſs of a court of equity in England to [illegible] the rigour of the common law. But no ſuch power is contended for. Hard was the caſe of bond-creditors, whoſe debtor deviſed away his real eſtate; rigorous and unjuſt the rule, which put the deviſee in a better condition than the heir: (b) yet a court of equity had no power to interpoſe. Hard is the common law ſtill ſubſiſting, that land deviſed, or deſcending to the heir, ſhall not be liable to ſimple contract debts of the anceſtor or deviſor, (c) although the money was laid out in purchaſing the very land; and that the father ſhall never immediately ſucceed as heir to the real eſtate of the ſon: (d) but a court of equity can give no relief; though in both theſe inſtances the artificial reaſon of the law, ariſing from feodal principles, has long ago intirely ceaſed. The like may be obſerved of the deſcent of lands to a remote relation of the whole blood, or even [illegible] eſcheat to the lord in preference to the owner's half-brother, (e) and of the total ſtop to all juſtice, by cauſing the parol to demur, (f) whenever an infant is ſued as heir or is party to a real action. In all ſuch caſes of poſitive law, the courts of equity, as as well as the courts of law, muſt ſay with Ulpian, (g) 'hoc quidem perquam durum eſt, ſed ita lex ſcripta eſt.'

2. 'It is ſaid, (h) that a court of equity determines according to the ſpirit of the rule, and not according to the ſtrictneſs of the letter. But ſo alſo does a court of law. Both for inſtance, are equally bound, and equally profeſs, to interpret ſtatutes according to the true intent of the legiſlator. In general laws all caſes cannot be foreſeen; or, if foreſeen, cannot be expreſſed: ſome will ariſe that will fall within the meaning, though not within the words of the legiſlator, and others, which may fall within the letter, may be contrary to his meaning, though not expreſly excepted. Theſe caſes, thus out of the letter, are often ſaid to be within the equity, of an act of parliament; and ſo caſes within the letter are frequently out of the equity. Here by equity we mean nothing but the ſound interpretation of the law; though the words of the law itſelf may be too general, too ſpecial or otherwiſe inaccurate or defective. Theſe then are the caſes which, as Grotius (i) ſays, 'lex non exacte definit, ſed arbitrio boni viri permittit;' in order to find out the true ſenſe and meaning of the law-giver, from every other topic of conſtruction. But there is not a ſingle rule of interpreting laws, whether equitably or ſtrictly, that is not equally uſed by the judges in the courts both of law and equity: the conſtruction muſt in both be the ſame: or, if they differ, it is only as one court of law may alſo happen to differ from another. Each endeavours to fix and adopt the true ſenſe of the law in queſtion; neither can enlarge, diminiſh, or alter, that ſenſe in a ſingle tittle.

3. 'AGAIN, it has been ſaid, (k) that fraud, accident, and truſt are the proper and peculiar objects of a court of equity. But every kind of fraud is equally cognizable, and equally adverted to, in a court of law: and ſome frauds are only cognizable there, as frauds in obtaining a deviſe of lands, which are always ſent out of the equity courts to be there determined. Many accidents are alſo ſupplied in a court of law; as, loſs of deeds, miſtakes in receipts or accounts, wrong payments, deaths which make it impoſſible to perform a condition literally, and a multitude of other contingencies: and many cannot be relieved even in a court of equity; as if by accident a recovery is ill ſuffered, a deviſe ill executed, a contingent remainder deſtroyed, or a power of leaſing omitted in a family ſettlement. A technical truſt, indeed, created by the limitation of a ſecond uſe, was forced into the courts of equity, in the manner formerly mentioned: (l) and this ſpecies of truſts, extended by inference and conſtruction, have ever ſince remained as a kind of peculium in thoſe courts. But there are other truſts, which are cognizable in a court of law: as depoſits, and all manner of bailments; and eſpecially that implied contract, ſo highly beneficial and uſeful of having undertaken to account for money received to another's uſe, (m) which is the ground of an action on the caſe almoſt as univerſally remedial as a bill in equity.'

4. 'Once more; it has been ſaid that a court of equity is not bound by rules or precedents, but acts from the opinion of the judge, (n) founded on the circumſtances of every particular caſe. Whereas the ſyſtem of our courts of equity is a laboured connected ſyſtem, governed by eſtabliſhed rules, and bound down by precedents, from which they do not depart, although the reaſon of ſome of them may perhaps be liable to objection. Thus, the refuſing a wife her dower in a truſt eſtate, (o) yet allowing the huſband his curteſy: the holding the penalty of a bond to be merely a ſecurity for the debt and intereſt, yet conſidering it ſometimes as the debt itſelf, ſo that the intereſt ſhall not exceed that penalty: (p) the diſtinguiſhing between a mortgage at five per cent. with a clauſe of reduction to four, if the intereſt be regularly paid, and a mortgage at four per cent. with a clauſe of enlargement to five, if the payment of the intereſt be deferred: ſo that the former ſhall be deemed a conſcientious, the latter an unrighteous bargain: (q) all theſe, and other caſes that might be inſtanced, are plainly rules of poſitive law; ſupported only by the reverence that is ſhewn, and generally very properly ſhewn, to a ſeries of former determinations; that the rule of property may be uniform and ſteady. Nay, ſometimes a precedent is ſo ſtrictly followed, that a particular judgment, founded upon ſpecial circumſtances, (r) gives riſe to a general rule.'

'In ſhort, if a court of equity in England did really act, as a very ingenious writer in the other part of the iſland ſuppoſes it (from theory) to do, it would riſe above all law, either common or ſtatute, and be a moſt arbitrary legiſlator in every particular caſe. No wonder he is ſo often miſtaken: Grotius or Puffendorf, or any other of the great maſters of juriſprudence, would have been as little able to diſcover, by their own light, the ſyſtem of a court of equity in England, as the ſyſtem of a court of law. Eſpecially, as the notions beforementioned, of the character, power, and practice of a court of equity, were formerly adopted and propagated (though not with approbation of the thing) by our principal antiquarians and lawyers; Spelman, (ſ) Coke, (t) Lambard, (u) and Selden, (x) and even the great Bacon (y) himſelf. But this was in the infancy of our courts of equity, before their juriſdiction was ſettled, and where the chancellors themſelves, partly from their ignorance of law (being frequently biſhops or ſtateſmen) partly from ambition and luſt of power (encouraged by the arbitrary principles of the age they lived in) but principally from the narrow and unjuſt deciſions of the courts of law, had arrogated to themſelves ſuch unlimited authority, as hath totally been diſclaimed by their ſucceſſors for now above a century paſt. The decrees of a court of equity were then rather in the nature of awards, formed on the ſudden prozenatta, with more probity of intention than knowledge of the ſubject; founded on no ſettled principles, as being never deſigned, and therefore never uſed, for precedents. But the ſyſtems of juriſprudence, in our courts both of law and equity, are now equally artificial ſyſtems, founded in the ſame principles of juſtice and poſitive law; but varied by different uſages in the forms and mode of their proceedings; the one being originally derived (though much reformed and improved) from the feodal cuſtoms, as they prevailed in different ages in the Saxon and Norman judicatures; the other (but with equal improvements) from the imperial and pontificial formularies, introduced by their clerical chancellors.'

'The ſuggeſtion indeed of every bill, to give juriſdiction to the courts of equity, (copied from thoſe early times) is, that the complainant hath no remedy at the Common law. But he, who ſhould from thence conclude, that no caſe is judged of in equity where there might have been relief at law, and at the ſame time caſts his eye on the extent and variety of the caſes in our equity-reports, muſt think the law a dead letter indeed. The rules of property, rules of evidence, and rules of interpretation in both courts are, or ſhould be, exactly the ſame: both ought to adopt the beſt, or muſt ceaſe to be courts of juſtice. Formerly ſome cauſes, which now no longer exiſt, might occaſion a different rule to be followed in one court, from what was afterwards adopted in the other, as founded in the nature and reaſon of the thing: but, the inſtant theſe cauſes ceaſed, the meaſure of ſubſtantial juſtice ought to have been the ſame in both. Thus the penalty of a bond, originally contrived to evade the abſurdity of thoſe monkiſh conſtitutions which prohibited taking intereſt for money, was therefore very pardonably conſidered as the real debt in the courts of law, when the debtor neglected to perform his agreement for the return of the loan with intereſt: for the judges could not, as the law then ſtood, give judgment that the intereſt ſhould be ſpecifically paid. But when afterwards the taking of intereſt became legal, as the neceſſary companion of commerce, (z) may after the ſtatute of 37 Hen. VIII. c. 9. had declared the debt or loan itſelf to be 'the juſt and true intereſt' for which the obligation was given, their narrow-minded ſucceſſors ſtill adhered wilfully and technically to the letter of the ancient precedents, and refuſed to conſider the payment of principal, intereſt, and coſts, as a full ſatisfaction of the bond. At the ſame time more liberal men, who ſate in the courts of equity, conſtrued the inſtrument according to it's 'juſt and true intent,' as merely a ſecurity for the loan: in which light it was certainly underſtood by the parties, at leaſt after theſe determinations; and therefore this conſtruction ſhould have been univerſally received. So in mortgages, being only a landed as the other is a perſonal ſecurity for the money lent, the payment of principal, intereſt, and coſts ought at any time, before judgment executed, to have ſaved the forfeiture in a court of law, as well as in a court of equity. And the inconvenience, as well as injuſtice, of putting different conſtructions in different courts upon one and the ſame tranſaction, obliged the parliament at length to interfere, and to direct by the ſtatutes 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. and 7 Geo. II. c. 20. that, in the caſes of bonds and mortgages, what had long been the practice of the courts of equity ſhould alſo for the future be followed in the courts of law.'

'Again; neither a court of equity nor of law can vary men's wills or agreements, or (in other words) make wills or agreements for them. Both are to underſtand th[illegible]y, and therefore both of them uniformly. One cou[illegible]ght not to extend, nor the other abridge, a lawful proviſion deliberately ſettled by the parties, contrary to its juſt intent. A court of equity, no more than a court of law can relieve againſt a penalty in the nature of ſtated damages; as a rent of 5 l. an acre for ploughing up ancient meadow: (a) nor againſt a lapſe of time, where the time is material to the contract; as in covenants for renewal of leaſes. Both courts will equitably conſtrue, but neither pretend to controul or change, a lawful ſtipulation or engagement.'

The

(n) This is ſtated by Mr. Seldon (Table-talk. tit. Equity.) with more pleaſantry than truth. 'For law, we have a meaſure, and know what to truſt to, equity is according to the conſcience of him that is chancellor; and, as that is larger or narrower, ſo is equity. It is all one, as if they ſhould make the ſtandard for the meaſure of a chancellors foot. What an uncertain meaſure would this be! One chancellor has a long foot, another a ſhort foot, a third an indifferent foot; it is the ſame with a chancellor's conſcience.'

‘The rules of deciſion are in both courts equally appoſite to the ſubjects of which they take cognizance. Where the ſubject-matter is ſuch as requires to be determined ſecundum æquum et bonum, as generally upon actions on the caſe, the judgments of the courts of law are guided by the moſt liberal equity. In matters of poſitive right, both courts muſt ſubmit to and follow thoſe ancient and invariable maxims ‘ quæ relicta ſunt et tradicta.(b) Both follow the law of nations, and collect it from hiſtory and the moſt approved authors of all countries, where the queſtion is the object of that law: as in caſe of the privileges of embaſſadors, (c) hoſtages, or ranſom-bills. (d) In mercantile tranſactions they follow the marine law, (e) and argue from the uſages and authorities received in all maritime countries. Where they exerciſe concurrent juriſdiction, they both follow the law of the proper forum: (f) in matters originally of eccleſiaſtical cognizance they both equally adopt the canon or imperial law, according to the nature of the ſubject; (g) and, if a queſtion came before either, which was properly the object of a foreign municipal law, they would both receive information what is the rule of the country, (h) and would both decide accordingly.’

‘Such then being the parity of law and reaſon which governs both ſpecies of courts, wherein (it may be aſked) does their eſſential difference conſiſt? It prinpally conſiſts in the different modes of adminiſtring juſtice in each; in the mode of proof, the mode of trial, and the mode of relief. Upon theſe, and upon two other accidental grounds of juriſdiction, which were formerly driven into thoſe courts by narrow deciſions of the courts of law, viz. the true conſtructions of ſecurities for money lent, and the form and effect of a truſt or ſecond uſe; upon theſe main pillars hath been gradually erected that ſtructure of juriſprudence which prevails in our courts of equity, and is inwardly bottomed upon the ſame ſubſtantial foundations as the legal ſyſtem which hath hitherto been delineated in theſe commentaries; however different they may appear in their outward form, from, the different taſtes of their architects.’ *Black. Equity of Redemption, on mortgages. If where money is due on a mortgage, the mortgagee is deſirous to bar the equity of redemption, he may oblige the mortgagor either to pay the money or to be forcloſed of his equity; which is done by proceedings in the court of Chancery. But the Chancery cannot ſhorten the time of payment of the mortgage money, where it is limited by expreſs covenant; though it may lengthen it: and then upon non-payment, the practice is to forecloſe the equity of aedemption of the mortgagor. 2 Vent. 364.

To forecloſe the equity, a bill in Chancery is exhibited; to which an anſwer is put in, and a decree being obtained, a Maſter in Chancery is to certify what is due for principal, intereſt and coſts, which is to be paid at a time prefixed by the decree, whereupon the premiſſes are to be reconveyed to the mortgagor; or, in default of payment, the mortgagor is ordered to be forecloſed from all equity of redemption, and to convey the premiſſes abſolutely to the mortgagee. Law of Securities, p. 129, 133.

A fine or non-claim will bar equity of redemption: but in a common mortgage, a covenant to reſtrain it ſhall not be regarded in Chancery. 2 Vent. 365. If the condition of a mortgage is, that the mortgagor only ſhould redeem during life, or that he and the heirs of his body ſhall do it; yet the general heir ſhall have the equity of redemption, for if the principal and intereſt be offered, the land is free. 1 Vern. 30, 190. And it is held, though a bond be conditioned, that if the money be not paid at ſuch a time, then for a further ſum the mortgage ſhall have the land abſolutely, as a purchaſeor, &c. in ſuch caſe a man may alſo redeem. Ibid. 488.

A perſon who has mortgaged lands to one man, in caſe he mortgages the ſame land with ſome others to another, and this appears to be a contrivance to evade the ſtatute, the mortgagee ſhall not take advantage thereof. 2 *Vern. A writ of error is a commiſſion to judges of a ſuperior court, by which they are authoriſed to examine the record, upon which a judgment was given in an inferior court, and on ſuch examination to affirm or reverſe the ſame, according to law. *Jenk. error to reverſe it, whether he be party or no; but principal and bail cannot join in a writ of error. And where there are ſeveral defendants, if one of them releaſe the errors, he may be ſummoned and ſevered, and the others may reverſe the judgment. 6 Rep. 26. Hob. 72.

No perſon can reverſe a thing for error, unleſs the error be to his prejudice. 5 Rep. 38. One in remainder may have writ of error upon judgment given againſt tenant in tail: But he in reverſion or remainder ſhall not have writ of error, in the life-time of tenant for life, on judgment given againſt ſuch tenant, becauſe they cannot be parties grieved in his time. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 712.

No perſon can bring a writ of error to reverſe a judgment who was not party or privy to the record, or who was not injured by the judgment, and therefore to receive advantage by the reverſal thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 747. Dyer 90.

So a writ of error does not lie againſt any but him, who is party or privy to the firſt judgment, his heirs, executors, or adminiſtrators. 1 Rol. Abr. 747. Dyer 90.

And therefore, on a judgment for recovery of land, the writ muſt be brought againſt him who was party to the judgment, although he hath nothing in the land, and not againſt the tenant, and on ſuch writ the judgment may be reverſed; but there muſt go a ſcire facias againſt all the tertenants. 1 Rol. Abr. 749. 1 Rol. Rep. 302.

Upon this rule, that none ſhall have a writ of error to reverſe a judgment, but he who is privy to, or hath ſome prejudice thereby; it hath been reſolved, that if one hath lands on the part of his mother, and loſeth them by erroneous judgment, and dies, the heir of the part of the mother ſhall have the writ of error. 1 Leon. 261. 2 Sid. 56. See Owen. 68. Godb. 377.

So the younger ſon, when intitled to the land by the cuſtom of Borough-Engliſh, ſhall bring the writ of error, and not the heir at Common law; for this remedy deſcends with the land. Owen 68. 1 Leon. 261. 4 Leon. 5.

So if there be an erroneous judgment, tenant in tail female, the iſſue female, and not the ſon, ſhall bring a writ of error. Dyer. 90. 1 Leon. 261. 1 Rol. Abr. 747.

So if a man ſettles land to the uſe of himſelf and the heirs of his body, the remainder to his own right heirs, and dies, leaving iſſue only a daughter, who levies a fine, and dies without iſſue, and J. S. brings a writ of error as couſin and collateral heir of the daughter, yet he ſhall never reverſe the fine; for there could no right deſcend to him from the daughter, becauſe ſhe had but an eſtate tail, which determined by her death without iſſue; and it does not appear, that the remainder in fee was in the daughter as right heir, wherefore J. S. ſhall not reverſe the fine, quia de non apparentibus & non exiſtentibus eadem eſt ratio, eſpecially in a court of judicature, where the judges can take notice of nothing that does not come judicially before them, and appear in the pleading. Dyer 89. Cro. Eliz. 469. 3 Lev. 36.

If there be ſeveral parties to an erroneous fine, they ſhall all join with the party that is to enjoy the land, though they themſelves can have nothing; and this is ſaid to be neceſſary only by way of conformity. 1 Rol. Abr. 747. Dyer 89. Sed qu. If any refuſe to join, whether they may not be ſummoned and ſevered? See 6 Rep. 26. Hob. 72. et infra.

But if tenant for life, and he in remainder in fee, (being an infant) join in a fine, the infant alone may bring error for the error in reſpect of the perſon of the infant, which is the cauſe of the action for him, and for no other. 1 Leon. 317. Cro. Eliz. 115.

A writ of error may be brought by him that is made party by the law, though he was not originally party to the ſuit, as he who comes in as a vouchee. 1 Rol. Abr. 748, 755.

Judgment againſt two, one brought a writ of error, and held it ſhould be quaſhed with coſts; that it could not be amended, and that if the other party would not join, the defendant who choſe to bring a writ of error, muſt proceed by ſummons and ſeverance. Ratcliff. and Burton, Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly 135, 136.

If a man is indicted for felony, and thereupon a capias and exigent are awarded, but he dies before attainder, his adminiſtrators may have error upon this award of the exigent, becauſe by the award of the exigent, his goods were forfeited; and this is ad grave damnum, &c. though the principal judgment can never be given. 11 Co. 41. b.

Writ of error lies in B. B. to reverſe a fine levied in the Common Pleas, and to cancel the ſame if it be erroneous: And if there be not an original; or not proper writs of covenant, or if there be any fraud, &c. writ of error may be brought to make the fine void. Co. Lit. 9.

With reſpect to the time of bringing this writ.

It was formerly holden, that a writ of error could not be brought before the judgment given; and if it bore teſte before, it was no ſuperſedeas, for the words of the writ are, Si judicium redditum ſit, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 749. But it ſeems now agreed, that a writ of error that bears teſte before the judgment is good; and this is the uſual courſe for preventing and ſuperſeding execution; but the judgment muſt be given before the return of the writ. March 140. 1 Vent. 255. Moor 461. 3 Keb. 308. 1 Vent. 96. Latch 133. If the party who has obtained judgment, delays ſigning final judgment, where error is brought with a view to have the writ of error ſpent, without effect, I conceive he may be compelled to do it, on motion, or by judges order.

But a writ of error, that bears teſte before any plaint entred, is not good. March 140.

So where the defendant, upon an indictment of barretry, brought a writ of error, bearing teſte before the aſſiſe: it was diſallowed, becauſe if ſuch practice ſhould obtain, it would diſappoint all proceedings there. 1 Vent. 255. 3 Keb. 308.

By the 10 & 11 W. 3. cap. 14. It is enacted, "That no fine or common recovery, nor any judgment in any real or perſonal action, ſhall be reverſed or avoided for any error or defect therein, unleſs the writ of error, or ſuit for the reverſing ſuch fine, recovery or judgment be commenced or brought, and proſecuted with effect, within twenty years after ſuch fine levied, or ſuch recovery ſuffered, or judgment ſigned or entred of record." Note, in this ſtatute, are the uſual ſavings as to infants, feme coverts, perſons non compos, in priſon, or beyond ſea.

A writ of error cannot be brought after twenty years. Street v. Hopkinſon, Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly 345. The ſtatute of limitation muſt be be pleaded to a writ of error, as well as to an original action. Id. 346.

II. In what caſes a writ of error will lie, and how it is to be brought.

Writ of error will not lie in the Exchequer chamber on judgment in replevin in B. R. nor on judgment in action of ſcandalum magnatum. 2 Nelſ. 708, 709. But on judgment in replevin in C. B. there may be writ of error brought in B. R. The Stat. 27 Eliz. c. 8. is only to relieve on the merits of the cauſe, as it ſtood on the firſt judgment. Vide poſt, diviſion III.

Error de recordo quod coram vobis reſidet lies in the court of B. R. for errors in fact in the judgment of the ſame court; as nonage of the parties, want of an original, &c. which doth not proceed from the error of the judges; and this writ is allowed without bail. Cro. Jac. 254. And errors in fact may be corrected in C. B. the ſame term, without this writ, which lies not in the Exchequer chamber. Ibid. 620.

If judgment is given in B. R. in civil actions, a writ of error will not lie in the ſame court, only for errors in fact triable by a jury; but upon a judgment in criminal caſes, error will lie in B. R. whether the error be in fact or in law; though it lies alſo in parliament. 3 Salk. 147.

Where a judgment in C. B. is affirmed upon a writ of error in B. R. and afterwards a ſcire facias is brought on that judgment, and the plaintiff hath judgment thereon; no writ of error lieth in the Exchequer chamber, becauſe the record was not in B. R. by bill, but by writ of error. 1 Roll. Rep. 264. 3 Salk. 148. See 1 Salk. 263.

On judgment given in the court of Kings Bench in Ireland, even after error brought and determined there, writ of error may be ſued in the King's Bench in England. 2 Nelſ. 730. Writ of error cannot be brought on any record which is not a judgment. 1 Salk. 145. The want of a bill in B. R. is error upon a judgment by confeſſion, or default, (but not after a verdict) becauſe the bill is the original proceſs there. Ibid. Sed qu. If a bill may not be filed, &c. before aſſignment of error? I take it for granted, the court will on motion give leave to file a bill, as well after error brought, as after motion in arreſt of judgment.

Error lies for variance between the original writ and declaration; or want of an original: And where proceedings are ſo erroneous, as not to be amended; for faults in verdicts, executions, &c. And when any thing material is omitted in a judgment, writ of error lies, and the judgment ſhall be reverſed: So where the ſtiles of inferior courts are wrong or inſufficiently named, &c. their judgments may be reverſed. But where faults are ſmall, they ſometimes paſs as vitium clerici. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 714, 715, 721, &c. 728.

By the practice of the court of Common Pleas, a defendant coming in by capias utlagatum the ſame term in which an exigent is returnable, may avoid the outlawry without a writ of error, by ſhewing that he purchaſed a ſuperſedeas out of the ſame court, and delivered it to the ſheriff before the quinto exactus, &c. or by ſhewing any other matter apparent on record, which makes the outlawry erroneous, as the want of an original, or the omiſſion of proceſs, or want of form in a writ of proclamation, &c. or a return by a perſon appearing not to be ſheriff, or a variance between the original and exigent, or other proceſs, or the want of ſuch addition as is required by the 1 H. 5. c. 5. 2 Hawk. P. C. 458—9. 1 Rol. Abr. 742—3. And ſee 5 Eliz. c. 23. ſec. 13 & 14.

If one be attainted upon an erroneous indictment, he cannot be relieved but by writ of error, for the judgment being quod ſuſpendatur, &c. which is the judgment of law due for the offence, it muſt be preſumed to have been given, for that he was guilty of the offence; but if judgment of acquittal is given upon ſuch indictment, the King need bring no writ of error; but the offender may be newly indicted, for the judgment being quod eat ſine die, &c. may be given as well for the inſufficiency of the indictment, as for the party's innocence. 3 Inſt. 214.

Alſo any judgment whatſoever, given by perſons who had no good commiſſion to proceed againſt the perſon condemned, may be falſified, by ſhewing the ſpecial matter, without writ of error, becauſe it is void; as where a commiſſion authorizes to proceed on an indictment taken before A. B. C. and twelve others, and by colour thereof the commiſſioners proceed on an indictment taken before eight perſons only. 3 Inſt. 231. Hawk. P. C. 459.

If one is attainted of felony, and after, by relation of a general pardon, the felony is pardoned, he ſhall be diſcharged, for he hath no remedy by writ of error, to reverſe the attainder. 6 Co. 5. a.

No writ of error will lie of any judgment that is not given in a court of record; nor of a judgment given in an inferior court, as the county-court, &c. Co. Lit. 288. b. Nor of a decree or ſentence in Chancery proceeding according to equity. 37 Hen. 6. Bro. Error 95. 1 Rol. Abr. 744. But of a judgment given in the limited court of Chancery, called the Petty-bag, which proceeds according to the Common law, and holds plea of ſcire facias for repeal of the King's letters patent, &c. a writ of error lies in B. R. 1 Rol. Abr. 744. Dyer 315. 4 Inſt. 80. Plow. 393.

Wherever a new juriſdiction is erected by act of parliament, and the court or judge, that exerciſes this juriſdiction, acts as a court or judge of record, according to the courſe of the Common law, a writ of error lies on their judgments; but where they act in a ſummary method, or in a new courſe different from the Common law, there a writ of error lies not, but a certiorari. 1 Salk. 263.

As to the manner of bringing it.

Error in the King's Bench is thus proſecuted: The curſitor of the county makes out the writ of error, from a præcipe or copy of the declaration left with him; which is to be allowed with the clerk of the errors, who has a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* and a certificate of the allowance of the writ muſt be ſerved on the defendant's attorney in error; alſo the plaintiff's attorney in the action, is to procure an original to warrant his judgment; and warrants of attorney muſt be filed, and bail put in, where required, &c. And then the proceedings are by ſcire facias ad audiend. errores againſt the plaintiff in the action, wherein judgment was obtained; and the writ of error being received by the ſheriff to whom directed, he is to give notice to the plaintiff in error to ſhew cauſe why execution ſhould not be on the judgment, and make a return to that purpoſe; then a rule is to be given with the clerk of the rules for the plaintiff in error to aſſign his errors by ſuch a day, which if he ſhall not do before the rule is out, the plaintiff in the original action may take out execution againſt him.

If the plaintiff in error aſſign errors in the record, then the defendant muſt plead In nullo eſt erratum, and thereupon enter the cauſe with the clerk of the papers, for the errors to be argued; and paper books for the counſel and judges, are to be made out, &c. If ſome part of the record be not returned, a certiorari muſt be prayed to bring it into court; and if matters of fact are alledged in error, as nonage, death of the plaintiff, &c. a proper plea muſt be made thereto, and iſſue thereupon taken and tried as in any other iſſue: But if only matters of law are aſſigned, the errors are argued by counſel on both ſides, and the judgment is either reverſed or affirmed: And when judgment is affirmed, the defendant in error may proceed againſt the defendant in the action, by taking out execution on the affirmetur, or bringing action of debt on the judgment; or he may proſecute the bail by ſcire facias upon their recogniſance. 2 Vol. Mod. Ent. Eng. 373, 378. But it is ſaid by ſome, that an aſſignment of errors in fact and in law, is bad on demurrer; by others, that the aſſignment of error in law may ſtand, and the fact be conſidered as nothing. Sed qu. Where there is an error in fact, if the writ of error ought not to be coram vobis reſidens, i. e. in the court where the judgment was given. In this caſe, however, we muſt except the want of warrants of attorney, &c. which are facts; and it is every day's practice to aſſign ſuch, with errors in law; and the uſual courſe is, if defendant in error does not pray a certiorari, for the plaintiff to pray it.

When a judgment is reverſed or affirmed in the Exchequer chamber, the tranſcript of the record thereof will be remitted back to this court, to be entered up at the end of the judgment here: and if ſuch judgment ſhall be affirmed in the Exchequer chamber, yet a writ of error may be brought thereupon returnable in parliament. Practiſ. Solic. 252, 253.

If you would bring a writ of error in parliament to reverſe a judgment in B. R. there muſt be a petition to the King for his warrant, which petition has the allowance of the Attorney General, and then the King writes on the top of it Fiat Juſtitia; whereupon a writ of error is made out by the clerk of the errors, (who hath 4*l.* fee, and the King's warrant coſts 5*l.*) And then the Lord Chief Juſtice of this court carries the record, and a tranſcript thereof, up to the Houſe of Lords in full Parliament, and after they are examined there, leaves the tranſcript with the Lords, but brings back the record: And this being done, the attorney for the defendant in error, gets ſome Lord to move that the plaintiff in error may aſſign his errors; but if for the plaintiff, motion is to be made, that upon his aſſigning errors, the defendant may appear and make his defence, and counſel be heard on both ſides: then, after the judgment is either affirmed or reverſed, the clerk of the parliament remands the tranſcript of the record into B. R. with the affirmation or reverſal thereof, to be entered upon the record of the ſaid court, which court, if affirmed, awards execution, &c. Dyer 385. Practiſ. Attorn.

A writ of error in parliament is made returnable immediately; or on a prorogation ad proximum ad parliamentum; and it doth not determine by a prorogation. But if a parliament is diſſolved before the errors are heard, it is otherwiſe. And on motion, execution hath been granted in B. R. on a judgment in ſuch a caſe, the record being never out of the court. Raym. 5. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 731.

To bring a writ of error in the King's Bench here in England to reverſe a judgment given the King's Bench in Ireland, a writ muſt be procured from the curſitor, directed to the Chief Juſtice of the court of B. R. in Ireland, requiring him to ſummon the plaintiff in the action there, to appear here in this court, to anſwer the errors; whereupon a tranſcript of the record is ſent over, (not the record itſelf of the judgment, which remains in Ireland) and when the errors are argued, if the judgment is reverſed, there muſt go a writ to the Chief Juſtice of Ireland to reverſe it; ſo that the judgment is not actually reverſed here, but there. And where the judgment in Ireland is affirmed here, there can be no writ of execution granted here; but on affirmance of the judgment a writ goes, reciting all the proceedings, directed to the judges of B. R. in Ireland, commanding them to iſſue proceſs of execution. Cro. Car. 368. 1 Salk. 321.

The party bringing the writ of error is to cauſe the roll where the judgment is entered, to be marked with the word error in the margin, that the other party may have notice on the record that the writ of error is brought, and this marking of the roll, on giving notice thereof, is as it were a ſuperſedeas in itſelf to hinder execution: Though a ſuperſedeas is to be made out, allowed and left with the ſheriff of the county: And the plaintiff's attorney is not obliged to ſearch the record, whether writ of error is brought or not; but may make out execution upon the judgment, if no ſuperſedeas be taken forth, or he hath no notice of the writ of error. Trin. 24 Car. B. R.

On a writ of error of a judgment in the Common Pleas, or other inferior court, in every adverſary ſuit, the record itſelf ſhall be removed, that it may remain as a precedent and evidence of the law in the like caſes. 1 Rol. Abr. 753. 5 Co. 39.

But in the caſe of a fine the tranſcript only is removed, for fines are only a more ſolemn acknowledgment or contract of the parties, and therefore are no memorials of the law, and need only be affirmed or vacated; if the former, the contract ſtands as it was; if the latter, the juſtices of B. R. may ſend for the fine itſelf, and reverſe it, or they may ſend a writ to the treaſurer and chamberlain to take it off the file; beſides, ſhould the record itſelf be removed and affirmed, it could not be ingroſſed for want of a chirographer in B. R. 1 Rol. Abr. 752. 1 Bendl. 51. Dyer. 89. Godb. 248. 2 Rol. Rep. 233. F. N. B. 20.

If the judges of the Common Pleas, or other judges upon a writ of error, will not certify all the record, the party that ſues the writ of error may alledge diminution of the record, and pray a writ to the juſtices that certified the record before, to certify the whole record. F. N. B. 25. a.

But diminution cannot be alledged upon a writ of error brought upon a judgment in any inferior court. 1 Sid 40. Yet ſee infra.

By ſtatute, he that brings writ of error, to reverſe a judgment in a ſuperior court, in all caſes after a verdict, or in any action of debt, upon bond for payment of money only, or on a contract, muſt put in good ſureties to proſecute his writ of error with effect, and pay the debt and damages if judgment be affirmed: But inferior courts, as well upon verdicts as other judgments, by default, &c. have their writs of error allowed without putting in bail, they being omitted in the ſtatute. 3 Jac. 1. cap. 8. If bail be not put in, on the writ of error brought upon a judgment in the courts at Weſtminſter, in thoſe caſes where bail is required, the writ of error is no ſuperſedeas to the execution; though ſuch writ is in being, until a nolle proſequi is entered, or judgment affirmed, &c. And it is the ſame where inſufficient bail is given, on rule to put in better bail, or juſtify thoſe put in, which if the plaintiff doth not do, execution is ordered upon the judgment, with a non obſtante to the writ of error, &c. Mich. 9 W. 3. B. R.

A plaintiff in error is, in the time appointed by the rule for that purpoſe, to certify the record into B. R. or the court will grant a nolle proſequi on the writ of error. Mich. 22 Car. B. R. A writ of error is a commiſſion, it is not an action. But ſee ante, previous to the Diviſions. And ſee Diviſion V.

The court will not let the plaintiff in error quaſh his own writ of error; though they may grant leave to diſcontinue it. 5 Mod. 67. If a verdict is for a defendant in error, and judgment is affirmed, coſts are allowed by Stat. 3 Hen. 7. c. 10. occaſione dilationis executionis. And by 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. Upon quaſhing writs of error, for defect or variance from the record, &c. the defendant is to have coſts as if judgment were affirmed. When a writ of error is not in dilatione executionis, as where it is brought after the execution is executed, the plaintiff ſhall not have damages and coſts. Cro. Jac. 636.

When a writ of error is brought to reverſe a judgmen in an inferior court, though the record is not certified as it ought, yet execution cannot be ſued; but on certificate of the neglect, &c. a writ of executione judicii may be iſſued. 1 Lill. Abr. 526. Upon a writ of error, if the clerk below will certify the record wrong, action on the caſe lies againſt him; and if he make no return, the plaintiff may have the writ executione judicii out of Chancery. Mod. Caſ. 245.

If erroneous judgment be for the defendant in an inferior court, and it is reverſed in B. R. and the merits appear for the plaintiff, he ſhall have judgment; but if the merits be againſt the plaintiff, the defendant ſhall have new judgment, in like manner as in the Exchequer chamber; for the judges are to reform, as well as to affirm or reverſe. Fareſl. Rep. 2, 3. If a writ of error to reverſe a judgment be diſcontinued for want of proſecution; execution cannot be had upon the judgment, until the diſcontinuance is certified from the court where diſcontinued. 1 Lil. 518. If a writ of error is brought to remove a record of a judgment given in C. B. and the plaintiff in error leaves the record there, without removing it before the return of the writ; or in caſe there be a longer return-day than is convenient in the writ of error, as if it is purchaſed the beginning of Michaelmas term, and made returnable in Hillary term; the court may award execution, although the writ of error be delivered. Jenk. Cent. 180. Dyer 245.

III. In what court error is to be brought.

Erroneous judgments given in the court of B. R. were only reformed by the parliament till ſtat. 27 Eliz. cap. 8. By that ſtatute, a writ of error lies out of the Chancery upon all judgments given in the King's Bench, when the ſuit is by bill, (except the King is a party to the ſuit) returnable in the Exchequer chamber, before the judges of the Common Pleas, and Barons of the Exchequer, &c. who may examine the errors, and reverſe or affirm the judgment; other than for errors, concerning the juriſdiction of the court, or want of form in writs, pleadings, &c. and after the errors are examined, and judgment affirmed or reverſed, the record is ſent back to the King's Bench, to proceed and award execution; but if the ſuit is by original writ, or on qui tam, &c. where the King is party, writ of error lies only in parliament. Stat. Ibid.

Not only on reverſing or affirming a judgment, the Exchequer chamber is to ſend back the record into B. R. but alſo if the plaintiff in the writ of error is nonſuit, or if the ſuit is diſcontinued in the court of Exchequer chamber, the record ſhall be ſent back: And the court of Exchequer ſhall give coſts and damages to the plaintiff in the original action for his delay, &c. though if the plaintiff in error was plaintiff in the original action, there no coſts can be given. 2 And. 122. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 707.

Where a writ of error determines in the Exchequer chamber, by abatement or diſcontinuance, the judgment is not again in B. R. till a remittitur is entered. 1 Salk. 261. The Exchequer chamber doth not award a ſci. fac. ad audiend. errores; but notice is given to the parties concerned. 1 Vent. 84.

The court of parliament is the ſupreme court, where anciently cauſes of great conſequence, as between the Magnates Regni, were heard and determined; hence the dernier reſort is to the houſe of lords, to which a writ of error lies; and therefore, if a writ of error be brought of a judgment in the King's Bench into the Exchequer chamber, and there the judgment is reverſed; yet a writ of error lies of ſuch judgment into parliament, and the lords may reverſe ſuch ſecond judgment. Show. Parl. Caſ. 24, 110. 1 Vent. 334. Raym. 330. 2 Jon. 99. 2 Lev. 232.

So a writ of error lies into parliament upon a judgment in B. R. either in a cauſe brought there by writ of error, or originally commenced there. 1 Rol. Abr. 745.

And tho' upon a judgment in the King's Bench, ſince the 27 Eliz. cap. 8. the party may elect either to bring a writ of error in the Exchequer chamber, or in parliament; yet if the cauſe commenced in the King's Bench by original writ there lies no writ of error but into parliament; alſo if he elects to bring error in the Exchequer chamber, regularly he cannot after bring error in parliament upon the firſt judgment. 1 Saund. 346. Carth. 180. S. P. See 2 Rol. Abr. 492. 2 Lev. 232.

To reverſe a judgment given in the court of Common Pleas, the writ of error is made returnable in the King's Bench, and error is not to be brought in parliament: Though where a writ of error is brought in B. R. upon a judgment given in C. B. and the judgment is reverſed or affirmed in B. R. the party grieved may have writ of error returnable in parliament. 31 Eliz. c. 1. 1 Lill. Abr. 519, 521. Erroneous judgment in the court of Exchequer, is to be examined by the Lord Chancellor, &c. with ſome of the juſtices, and ſuch other ſage perſons as they think fit; and if any error be found, they ſhall correct the rolls, and ſend them into the Exchequer, in order to make execution, &c. Stat. 31 Ed. 3. cap. 12.

No writ of error lies in Banco or Banco Regis, upon a judgment given within the five ports; but by cuſtom ſuch judgment is examinable by bill in nature of a writ of error coram domino cuſtode ſeu gardiano quinque portuum apud curiam ſuam de Shepway. 4 Inſt. 224.

If a judgment be given in the court of ſtannaries of the dutchy of Cornwall, no writ of error lies upon this in Banco or Banco Regis, becauſe it hath not been uſed; but of this there may be an appeal to the guardian of the ſtannaries, and from him to the Prince; and when there is no Prince, to the King's counſel. 1 Rol. Abr. 745. This muſt, I ſhould think, mean the Privy Council. See 4 Inſt. 230. and 2 Danv. Abr. 304.

Upon a judgment given in the Huſtings in London, a writ of error lies at St. Martin's before certain juſtices. 1 Rol. Abr. 745. 1 Lev. 309. 2 Saund. 253. S. P. and upon a judgment of the ſaid juſtices, a writ of error lies in parliament. See 2 Leon. 107.

In Wales, at the Great Seſſions there, a writ of error lies on perſonal actions to the council of the Marches of Wales; and if they give an erroneous judgment, it is final, for the ſtatute 34 H. 8. c. 26. ordains this writ to the council there; and ſince that act, no writ of error has been granted of ſuch erroneous judgment: Upon errors in real or mixed actions in Wales, writ of error lieth into the King's Bench. Jenk. Cent. 71. And ſo in perſonal actions now by 1 W. & M. c 27.

In ſome caſes a writ of error lies in the ſame court wherein the record is.

If upon a judgment in B. R. there be error in the proceſs, or through the default of the clerks, it ſhall be reverſed in the ſame court by writ of error ſued there before the ſame juſtices. F. N. B. 21. Poph. 181. 1 Rol. Abr. 746.

So if one is indicted of treaſon or felony in B. R. or being indicted elſewhere, the indictment is removed in B. R. and by proceſs of that court he is erroneouſly outlawed, and ſo returned; a writ of error may be brought in B. R. for the reverſal thereof. 3 Inſt. 214.

Alſo if an erroneous judgment in point of law be given in B. R. upon an indictment in London, a writ of error may be brought in the ſame court; for though in civil caſes error does not lie in the ſame court, unleſs for a matter of fact; yet in criminal caſes it lies as well for an error in law as fact. 1 Sid. 208.

But if an erroneous judgment be given, and the error lies in the judgment itſelf, and not in the proceſs, a writ of error does not lie in B. R. of ſuch judgment. 1 Rol. Abr. 746.

If a record is removed by writ of error out of the Common Pleas into the King's Bench, and the writ of error for inſufficiency is quaſhed in the King's Bench, the plaintiff in error may have a writ coram vobis reſiden'. But ſuch new writ is not a ſuperſedeas in itſelf as the firſt writ was, and therefore he muſt move the court for a ſuperſedeas, and put in bail thereon. Carth. 368.—9.

So if ſuch ſecond writ be quaſhed for inſufficiency, yet the court will grant a new or ſecond writ of error coram vobis reſiden'. As alſo a ſuperſedeas on putting in bail; for ſuch ſecond writ being void, is as if there had been none before. Carth. 369, 370.

IV. How errors are to be aſſigned.

The parties, upon the removal of the record by the writ of error, have no day in court given to either of them; ſo that if the plaintiff in error delay to ſue forth his ſci. fac. ad audiend. errores, the defendant hath no way to compel him, but by ſuing out a ſcire facias quare executionem non, &c. And if thereupon the plaintiff in error doth not plead that his errors are aſſigned, but ſuffer judgment to paſs upon two nihils, no errors afterwards aſſigned ſhall prevent execution. Carthew's Rep. 41. The ſci. fac. ad audiend errores is only uſed in B. R. In the Exchequer chamber notice is given. It is ſaid the uſual practice is, that the defendant in the writ of error, by conſent doth voluntarily take notice of the aſſignment of errors, and this conſent is teſtified by his pleading In nulla eſt errat. and then there is no occaſion for a ſcire facias ad audiend. error'. Ibid.

Errors are to be aſſigned in the term, or the writ of error will be quaſhed. 1 Lill. Abr. 524. When the record is in court by writ of error, the plaintiff in errors is to aſſign his errors; and may have a ſcire facias before the record is entered: And the manner of aſſigning errors, according to the ancient practice, is to put a bill into court, and ſay in the bill, in ho: erratum eſt, &c. ſhewing in certain in what things. F. N. B. 20. The aſſignment of error, in omnibus erratum is not good; for the judgment is founded upon the original writ, count, pleading, iſſue, proceſs, trial, and ſo is manifold. Jenk. Cent. 84. Errors in law not aſſigned in the record, may be aſſigned after a ſcire facias ad audiend. errores; as the record is in court; but it is not ſo of a warrant of attorney, which is an error in fact, and not upon record. Ibid. 140. 5 Rep. 37.

If one in execution brings error, he ought to aſſign the errors in his proper perſon: And in caſes of outlawry for felony, errors ſufficient muſt be certainly alledged in writing, before the writ of error is allowed. Jenk. Cent. 165, 179. Where a recovery is had, and error brought, if the original writ doth not abate by death; but is abateable only, as by entry into the land pending the writ, or coverture, acquiſition of a dignity, a partial array returned, aid denied, &c. that ſhould have been pleaded, and were not: Theſe ſhall not be aſſigned for error; for they are waived. 9 Rep. 47. 21 H. 6. 29.

The aſſigning general errors is to ſay that the declaration, &c. is not ſufficient in law: and that judgment was given for the plaintiff, where it ought to have been for the defendant: And the errors of a judgment are now to be aſſigned on the record, to appear with it to the court.

If the plaintiff in error aſſigns errors in fact, and errors in law, which are not aſſignable together, and the defendant in error pleads in nullo eſt erratum; this is a confeſſion of the error in fact, and the judgment muſt be reverſed, for he ſhould have demurred for the dupli- city. Style 69. 1 Lev. 76. Salk. 268. 6 Mod. 113, 206.

Alſo if an error in fact be well aſſigned, in nullo eſt erratum is a confeſſion of it, for the defendant ought to have joined iſſue upon it, ſo as to have it tried by the country. 1 Sid. 93. Raym. 59. Becauſe, in nullo eſt erratum is in the nature of a demurrer, which confeſſes the fact, if well pleaded, or well aſſigned.

But if an error in fact, be ill aſſigned, in nullo eſt erratum is no confeſſion of it; as if it be aſſigned, that ſuch a one at the time of the return of the venire was not ſheriff, and the record be removed into B. R. by certiorari, there in nullo eſt erratum is no confeſſion of that error, becauſe the record is not in court, that being no part of the record, for the plea is in nullo eſt erratum in recordo. Cro. Jac. 12, 29, 521. Raym. 231. Cro. Car. 421. 1 Rol. Abr. 758.

So if the plaintiff in error aſſigns an error in fact, viz. that the defendant, who was an infant, did not appear by guardian, but by attorney, and concludes with hoc paratus eſt verificare, inſtead of concluding to the country, as he ought to do, though the defendant in error pleads in nullo eſt erratum; yet it ſhall not amount to a confeſſion, but ſhall be taken only for a demurrer. Yelv. 58.

Alſo if an error in fact, that is not aſſignable, be aſſigned, and in nullo eſt erratum be pleaded, it is no confeſſion; as if it be aſſigned, that ſuch a day there was no court of Common Pleas ſitting, becauſe that is againſt the record, and in ſuch caſe in nullo eſt erratum is only a demurrer; ſo if a man ſays he did not appear, and the record ſays he did, in nullo eſt erratum is no confeſſion, but a demurrer, becauſe it is againſt the record. Cro. Car. 12, 29, 52. Yelv. 58. Raym. 231. 1 Vent. 252. 3 Keb. 259. 1 Lev. 76.

It has been held, that an error in fact cannot be aſſigned in the Exchequer chamber: Though by ſome authorities, errors in fact may be aſſigned as errors in law. 2 Mod. 194. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 708.

By 30 Car. 2. c. 6. In actions real, perſonal, and mixed, the death of either part between verdict and judgment, ſhall not be alledged for error.

It ſeems a general rule, that nothing can be aſſigned for error that contradicts the record; for the records of the courts of juſtice being things of the greateſt credit, cannot be queſtioned but by matters of equal notoriety with themſelves; wherefore, though the matter aſſigned for error ſhould be proved by witneſſes of the beſt credit, yet the judges would not admit of it. 1 Rol. Abr. 757.

Hence it is, that in a writ of error to reverſe a fine, the plaintiff cannot aſſign, that the conuſor died before the teſte of the dedimus, becauſe that contradicts the record of the conuſance taken by the commiſſioners, which evidently ſhews that the conuſor was then alive, becauſe they took his conuſance after they were armed with the commiſſion, and the dedimus iſſued. Dyer 89. 1 Roll. Abr. 757.

V. What defence may be made by a defendant in error.

The defendant in error may plead a releaſe of all errors, or a releaſe of all ſuits, and theſe pleas, if found for him, will for ever bar the plaintiff in error. 1 Rol. Abr. 788.

So where by a writ of error the plaintiff ſhall recover, or be reſtored to any perſonal thing, as debt, damage, or the like, a releaſe of all actions perſonal is a good plea; and when land is to to be recovered or reſtored in a writ of error, a releaſe of actions real is a good bar; but where by a writ of error the plaintiff ſhall not be reſtored to any perſonal or real thing, a releaſe of all actions real or perſonal is no bar. Co. Lit. 288. b. 8 Co. 152. 1 Rol. Abr. 788. 2 Rol. Abr. 405.

Alſo if a man loſes in a real action, and he releaſes all his right to the land, and ſo where there is a fine levied, this ſhall bar him of his writ of error, for no perſon can bring a writ of error to reverſe a judgment that is not intitled to the land, &c. for the courts of law will not turn out the preſent tenant, unleſs the demandant can make out a clear title; poſſeſſion always carrying with it the preſumption of a good title, till the right owner appears. 1 Rol. Abr. 747, 788. Dyer 90. a. 3 Leo. 36. Cro. Eliz. 469. 1 Rol. Abr. 789.

If the tenant, pending a præcipe againſt him, aliens in fee, and after judgment is given againſt him, and he brings a writ of error; this feoffment is not any bar to the writ, becauſe he was privy to the judgment after. 1 Rol. Abr. 788. Bridg. 77. 1 Rol. Rep. 306.

In a writ of error to reverſe a common recovery, it is no good plea, that the plaintiff pending the writ of error hath entered into part, for before the poſſeſſion was taken from him, he might have error to reverſe the judgment, though not to have reſtitution. 1 Lev. 72.

In a ſci. fac. againſt a tertenant, he may plead a releaſe of error, though he be not privy to the judgment. 9 H. 6. 48. Bro. 9. S. C.

But the tertenants cannot plead in abatement of the writ of error, but only in bar as a releaſe, &c. in maintenance of their title. 1 Lev. 72.

After in nullo eſt erratum pleaded, the party affirms the record to be perfect, and he is forecloſed to ſay there is error in it: Though the court is not reſtrained from examining into it. 1 Salk. 270. The judges are not bound to ſearch for errors in the record, which were not aſſigned; but may if they will; and if they find error they ought to reverſe the judgment. Jenk. Cent. 159.

VI. Of the judgment to be given on a writ of error.

A judgment, as being an intire thing, cannot be reverſed in part, and ſtand good as to other part; or be reverſed as to one party, and remain good againſt the reſt: Though if there be error in awarding execution, the execution only ſhall be reverſed, and not the judgment. Hob. 90. Carth. Rep. 235. If judgment is entered againſt joint defendants, when one of them is dead, the judgment ſhall be reverſed for error as to all of them; for in ſuch caſe the plaintiff ought to make a ſpecial entry of the death of the party, with Nihil ulterius verſus eum fiat, and then take judgment only againſt the others. Ibid. 149.

The court of Exchequer chamber have not any authority, but to reverſe or affirm the judgment, &c. for they cannot make execution. Cro. Eliz. 108. But where judgment is given for the defendant, and the plaintiff brings a writ of error; if the judgment is reverſed, the court which reverſes the judgment ſhall give judgment for the plaintiff, as the other court ought to have done. Yelv. 117, 118. In the Exchequer chamber, after reverſal of a judgment, &c. in B. R. the court gave judgment, quod quer. recuperet, &c. but becauſe they wanted power to award a writ of inquiry which was neceſſary, being on a demurrer, therefore it was ſent back into B. R. for the execution of that writ, and thereupon to give final judgment: But if the judgment is againſt the plaintiff in B. R. upon a ſpecial verdict, and that judgment is reverſed in the Exchequer chamber, there being no writ of inquiry requiſite, the court of Exchequer chamber doth not only give judgment of reverſal, but a compleat judgment for the plaintiff in the action. Carth. 181. If erroneous judgment be had by conſent of parties, it may be reverſed in the Exchequer chamber; for conſent of parties may not change the law; but if the conſent is entered upon and made part of the record, it may be good. Hob. 5. Cro. Eliz. 664. The reverſal in the Exchequer chamber, is res judicata: No writ of error lies upon ſuch judgment, except in parliament; and it is by ſix judges at leaſt, by the ſtatute 17 Eliz. c. 8. and 31 Eliz. c. 1.

When judgment is given in B. R. for the plaintiff in errors, there ſhall be only a judicium revocetur, &c. entered with coſts: If for the defendant in errors, that the plaintiff nil capiat per breve ſuum de errore. The Chief Juſtice of B. R. &c. or the eldeſt judge ought to allow a writ of error which is in judgment of law a ſuperſedeas until the errors are examined, and the judgment affirmed or reverſed. Cro. Jac. 534. As a plaintiff having erroneous judgment may reverſe it; and new judgment may be given for him: So if a judgment is reverſed, the plaintiff may bring a new action for the ſame cauſe. 1 Lev. 310. Where a judgment is pleaded in bar of another action, &c. and judgment given on that plea; writ of error may be had to reverſe the ſecond judgment. Cro. Eliz. 503. Jenk. Cent. 259. And debt lies upon a judgment in B. R. after a writ of error brought; which is only a ſuperſedeas to the execution. 1 Lev. 153. But the court will ſtay proceedings in ſuch action on giving judgment.

In a writ of error upon a judgment in treſpaſs againſt ſeveral, if the judgment be erroneous, becauſe one of the defendants was within age, and appeared by attorney, the judgment ſhall be reverſed in toto againſt all. 1 Rol. Abr. 776. Cro. Jac. 289. S. C. and 303. S. P. adjudged. Allen 74, 75. S. C. and S. P. adjudged. Style 121, 125, 406. S. P. adjudged.

By Stat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 13. it is enacted, That all writs of error, wherein there ſhall be any variance from the original record, or other defect, may be amended by the court, and made agreeable to the record: And where any verdict hath been given, in any action, ſuit, &c. in any of his Majeſty's courts at Weſtminſter, or other court of record, the judgment thereon ſhall not be ſtayed or reverſed for any defect or fault in form or ſubſtance, in any bill, writ, &c. or for variance in any ſuch writs from the declaration and other proceedings: but this is not to extend to any appeal of felony, or proceſs on indictment, informations, and appeals. See Judgment.

Erthmiotum, An ancient word for a meeting of the neighbourhood to compromiſe differences among themſelves; which was cuſtomary in former days; it is mentioned in Leg. Hen. 1. c. 57.

Eſbrancatura, (from the Fr. eſbrancher) Cutting off branches or boughs in foreſts, &c. Hoved. 784.

Eſcaldare, To ſcald: Eſcaldare porcos, was one of our ancient tenures in ſerjeanty; as appears by the inquiſition of the ſerjeancies and knights fees in the 12th and 13th years of King John, within the counties of Eſſex and Hertford. Lib. Rub. Scaccar' MS. 137.

Eſcambio, (derived from the Span. cambier to change) Was a licence granted to make over bill of exchange to another beyond the ſea: for by the Stat. 5 R. 2. c. 2. No merchant ought to exchange or return money beyond ſea, without the King's licence. Reg. Orig. 194. See Exchange.

Eſcape, (eſcapium, from the Fr. eſchapper, i. e. effugere to fly from) Signifies a violent or privy evaſion out of ſome lawful reſtraint; as where a perſon is arreſted or impriſoned, and gets away before delivered by due courſe of law. Staundf. P. C. cap. 26, 27.

Eſcapes are either in civil or in criminal caſes. As to eſcapes in civil caſes it is to be conſidered,

I. Where the party ſhall be ſaid to be legally committed, ſo that the ſuffering him to go at large will be adjudged an eſcape; and what degree of liberty, or going at large, ſhall be deemed an eſcape, as alſo what perſons are anſwerable for an eſcape.

II. Of the difference between voluntary and negligent eſcapes, as alſo between eſcapes on meſne proceſs and execution.

III. Of the nature of the action to be brought for an eſcape, and of the manner of laying it.

IV. Of the party's defence ſued for the eſcape, and therein of pleading freſh ſuit.

I. Of legal commitment, what ſhall be deemed an eſcape, and who anſwerable.

It ſeems agreed as a general rule, that wherever a ſheriff or other officer hath a perſon in cuſtody, by virtue of an authority from a court which hath juriſdiction over the matter, that the ſuffering ſuch a perſon to go at large is an eſcape, for he cannot judge of the validity of the proceſs or other proceedings of ſuch court, and therefore cannot take advantage of any errors in them; hence the law allows him, in an action of falſe impriſonment, to plead ſuch authority, which will excuſe him, though it be erroneous; but if the court has no juriſdiction of the matter, then all is void, and conſequently the officer not puniſhable for ſuffering a perſon taken upon ſuch void authority to eſcape. Moor 274. Dyer 66, 175, 306. Popb. 203. 1 Leon. 30. 5 Co. 64. 8 Co. 141. b. Cro. Jac. 280, 289. 2 Bulſt. 64, 237, 256. If a ca. ſa. iſſue after a year and a day, without ſuing out a ſcire facias, this error will not excuſe the ſheriff in an eſcape. Cro. Car. 288. Salk. 273. But though a ſheriff may not take advantage of an erroneous proceſs; yet he ſhall of a void proceſs, on which it is no eſcape to let a priſoner go.

If at the petition of A. and the reſt of the creditors of B. a commiſſion upon the ſtatute againſt bankrupts is iſſued out againſt B. and thereupon the commiſſioners ſit and offer interrogatories to C. and he refuſes to be examined, and by them is thereupon committed to priſon, and the gaoler ſuffers him to eſcape, as the commiſſioners had ſufficient authority to commit, and A. was prejudiced by the eſcape, he may maintain an action againſt the gaoler. 1 Rol. Rep. 47. Moor 834. pl. 1123. S. C.

The ſheriff cannot be charged with an eſcape before he had the party in actual cuſtody by a legal authority; and therefore if an officer, having a warrant to arreſt a man, ſee him ſhut up in a houſe, and challenge him as his priſoner, but never actually have him in his cuſtody, and the party get free, the officer cannot be charged with an eſcape. Bro. Eſcape, 22.

But if A. is arreſted, and in the actual cuſtody of the ſheriff, and afterwards another writ is delivered to him at the ſuit of J. S. upon the delivery of the writ, A. by conſtruction of law is immediately in the ſheriff's cuſtody, without an actual arreſt; and if he eſcapes, the plaintiff may declare, that he was arreſted by virtue of the ſecond writ, which is the operation it has by law, and not according to the fact. 5 Co. 89. But where the ſheriff, not having actually arreſted a defendant, but accepted the undertaking of an attorney to put in bail, who put in bail, and the ſheriff had returned a cepi corpus, held per Lord Mansfield at Surry aſſizes, ſummer 1775, in Hodgſon and Akerman, Eſq; that the ſheriff was not liable, upon a writ of non eſt inventus, on another proceſs, to an action, either for an eſcape or a falſe return, or for negligence in not taking the defendant, no actual negligence being proved, and the plaintiff was non-ſuited.

Note, the writ returned cepi corpus was a latitat, returnable three or four days after the other proceſs, which was an original, but that difference was not, in this caſe, conſidered as material.

If a perſon out upon bail renders himſelf in diſcharge of his bail, and a reddidit ſe is entred in the judge's book, and a committitur filed in the office, and the priſoner afterwards eſcapes; yet if no notice was given to the marſhal of ſuch render, nor no entry made of the commitment in his book, the priſoner ſhall not be deemed in cuſtody ſo as to charge the marſhal with an eſcape; but it ſeems this matter cannot be inſiſted upon after trial. 1 Salk. 272—3. Vide poſt.

It hath been held, that entring a committitur upon the roll was not ſufficient to charge the marſhal with any eſcape, without proving an actual impriſonment; but that proving the party to be actually in priſon, though there be no entry made in the marſhal's book (without which he pretends he knows not how to take charge of them) is ſufficient. 1 Sid. 220. 1 Keb. 775.

And now, for the greater ſecurity of creditors, and the better to enable them to prove the actual cuſtody of the priſoner, by Stat. 8 & 9 Wil. 3. cap. 27. ſect. 9. it is enacted, "That if any one, deſiring to charge any perſon with any action or execution, ſhall deſire to be informed by the marſhal or warden, or their reſpective deputies, or by any other keeper of any other priſon, whether ſuch perſon be a priſoner in his cuſtody, or not, the ſaid marſhal or warden, or ſuch other keeper, ſhall give a true note in writing thereof, to the perſon ſo requeſting the ſame, or to his lawful attorney, upon demand, at his office for that purpoſe, or, in default thereof, ſhall forfeit the ſum of 50*l.* and if ſuch marſhal or warden, or their reſpective deputy, &c. exerciſing the ſaid office, or other keeper, &c. of any other priſon, ſhall give a note in writing that ſuch perſon is an actual priſoner in his or their cuſtody, every ſuch note ſhall be taken as a ſufficient evidence, that ſuch perſon was at that time a priſoner in actual cuſtody."

A committitur upon the roll is good evidence in eſcape, without an entry in the marſhal's book. Ld. Raym. 705.

As to the degree of liberty which may be deemed an eſcape.

Every perſon in priſon by proceſs of law is to be kept in ſalva & arcta cuſtodia, in order to compel them the more ſpeedily to pay their debts, and make ſatisfaction to their creditors. Plowd. 36. 3 Co. 44. 2 Inſt. 381. 1 Rol. Abr. 806.

Perſons in the King's Bench and Fleet priſons, are to be actually detained within the ſaid priſons; and if they eſcape, action of debt lies againſt the warden, &c. 1 R. 2. c. 12. But now the marſhal or warden grant the liberty of the rules to ſuch as they think proper, (not criminally charged) on proper ſecurity. Keepers of thoſe priſons ſuffering priſoners either upon contempt or meſne proceſs, or in execution, to be out of the rules (except on rule of court, &c.) is an eſcape; and perſons conniving at an eſcape ſhall forfeit 500 l. &c. by 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 27. And by this ſtatute, where any priſoner in execution eſcapes, the creditor may have any other new execution againſt him.

By Stat. 5 Ann. c. 9. If any perſon in cuſtody, for not performing any decree in Chancery, &c. eſcape, the party for whom the money is decreed may have the ſame remedy againſt the ſheriff, as if the priſoner had been in cuſtody on execution. A priſoner in execution ſhould not be allowed to go out of the gaol; for if he goes out, though he returns again, it is an eſcape. 3 Rep. 43, 44. 2 Inſt. 260, 381. And yet in London, by ſpecial cuſtom there, in ſome caſes the priſoner may go abroad with his keeper, and it will be no eſcape. Ibid. See Hob. 202. Where the Juſtice of the court, and plaintiff in the ſuit, agree that the priſoner ſhall be at liberty, and he go out and return at his time; it is no eſcape: but this may not be without the ſheriff's conſent. Dyer 275.

If a plaintiff by word licenſe the ſheriff to deliver the priſoner, no action will lie for this as an eſcape. 27 H. 8. 24.

If there be an eſcape by the plaintiff's conſent, when he did not intend it, the law is hard that the debt ſhould be thereby diſcharged; as where one was in execution in B. R. and ſome propoſals being made to the plaintiff in behalf of the priſoner, ſeeing there was ſome likelihood of an accommodation, the plaintiff conſented to a meeting in a certain place in London, and deſired the priſoner might be there, who came accordingly: this was held to be an eſcape, with the plaintiff's conſent, and he could never after be in execution at his ſuit for the ſame matter. 2 Mod. 136.

It hath been adjudged no eſcape to let a priſoner go where the ſheriff hath the priſoner in cuſtody, if it be before the return of the writ: it is ſufficient if the officer have the party at the return of the writ, &c. Moor 299. 1 Salk. 401. 2 Nelſ. 739, 740. Yet it hath been held, that where a habeas corpus is granted to bring a perſon into court, if the ſheriff on the way let him go at large in the county or carry him round about a great way, &c. it will be an eſcape. 1 Mod. 116. And an eſcape in one place is an eſcape in all places; for a priſoner being once eſcaped, and at large, it ſhall be intended he is confined to no place. 1 Lil. Abr. 537. Committing the marſhal of the marſhalſea to priſon, where an eſcape in law of all the priſoners there. See Style 375.

If a woman, warden of the Fleet priſon, marries her priſoner, or if a ſheriff, &c. marries a woman in execution with him, in either caſe it will be deemed an eſcape in law. Plowd. 17.

If a man hath judgment againſt two perſons, and both are taken in execution, if the ſheriff ſuffer one of them to eſcape, he ſhall be anſwerable for the whole debt, though he hath one of them ſtill in cuſtody. 1 Rol. Abr. 810. But in an action on the caſe, tried before Lord Manſfield, in Surry, for an eſcape of one, of two defendants, under very favourable circumſtances for the officer, his Lordſhip left it to the jury, whether they would find the whole of plaintiff's debt, in damages, or only half, and found only half, to the great ſatisfaction of every one there except the plaintiff.

By the Stat. 8 & 9 Wil. 3. cap. 27. ſect. 8. It is enacted, "That if the marſhal or warden for the time being, or their reſpective deputy or deputies, or other keeper or keepers of any other priſon or priſons, ſhall, after one days notice in writing given for that purpoſe, refuſe to ſhew any priſoner committed in execution to the creditor, at whoſe ſuit ſuch priſoner was committed or charged, or to his attorney, every ſuch refuſal ſhall be adjudged to be an eſcape in law."

With reſpect to the perſon anſwerable for an eſcape.

In civil actions the ſheriff is to anſwer for the eſcape of his bailiff; as the bailiff is for that of his ſervant: and action on the caſe lies againſt the ſheriff for an eſcape upon meſne proceſs, becauſe the plaintiff is prejudiced in his ſuit by it. Cro. Eliz. 623, 625. 1 Danv. Abr. 183. See alſo Cro. Jac. 419. Dyer 241. See Ni. Pri. 59, 60. Where a perſon is in cuſtody on meſne proceſs, and being outlawed after judgment at the ſuit of another, the judgment creditor brings a warrant on a capias utlagatum, and delivers it to the ſheriff's officer, who hath him in cuſtody; if the officer afterwards permits the perſon to eſcape, though he refuſe to execute the warrant, the ſheriff is chargeable in action on the caſe. 5 Rep. 89.

Where one has the cuſtody of a gaol of freehold or inheritance, and commits it to another perſon, who is inſufficient, the ſuperior is anſwerable for all eſcapes ſuffered by his inferior; but if the inferior be ſufficient, the action ſhould be brought againſt him, and not againſt the ſuperior. See 9 Co. 98. 2 Jon. 60. 2 Lev. 158. 1 Vent. 314. 2 Mod. 119. 4 Rep. 98.

Alſo by the Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 27. ſect. 11. it is enacted, "that the offices of marſhal of the King's Bench priſon and warden of the Fleet, ſhall be executed by the ſeveral perſons to whom the inheritance of the priſons, priſon-houſes, &c. of the ſaid priſons, or either of them, ſhall then belong reſpectively, in his or their reſpective proper perſon, &c. or by their ſufficient deputies; for which deputies, and for all forſeitures, eſcapes, and other miſdemeanors in their offices by ſuch deputies permitted, &c. the ſaid perſon in whom the aforeſaid inheritances reſpectively are, ſhall be anſwerable; and the profits and inheritances of the ſaid offices ſhall be ſequeſtered, &c. to make ſatisfaction for ſuch forfeitures, eſcapes, &c. reſpectively, as if permitted, &c. by the perſons themſelves, in whom the reſpective inheritance of the ſaid priſons ſhall then be."

A priſoner eſcapes out of the King's Bench, or Marſhalſea, or the Fleet; the keeper of the priſon out of which he eſcaped is to be charged with it; but if the eſcape be from either of the Counters, the action muſt be brought againſt the ſheriffs of London. Dyer 278. 3 Rep. 52.

Action of eſcape againſt the warden of the Fleet for an eſcape upon meſne proceſs; the priſoner returns to the Fleet the ſame day, and the plaintiff afterwards proceeds to final judgment againſt him, yet the action lies againſt the warden. Ravenſcroft v. Eyles, Eſq. Wilſ. Rep. par. 2. p. 294. In an eſcape upon meſne proceſs out of the borough court, brought in B. R. againſt the bailiff thereof, the defendant ſhall not take advantage in B. R. of any error in the proceſs below. Id. Bull v. Steward, par. 1. fo. 255.

Action of eſcape will not lie againſt the executor or adminiſtrator of a ſheriff, &c. for an eſcape, becauſe it was perſonal, and moritur cum perſona: but it may be otherwiſe if there be a judgment recovered againſt the ſheriff before he died. Dyer 322.

If there are two ſheriffs of the ſame place, and an action of eſcape is brought againſt them both, if one of them dies, yet the writ ſhall not abate; for it being in nature of a treſpaſs, and merely perſonal, the party can only have remedy againſt the ſurvivor. Cro. Eliz. 625. But the death ſhould be ſuggeſted. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. ſect. 7. The death of one plaintiff or defendant, where the action will ſurvive to, or againſt the ſurvivor, ſhall not abate the ſuit. But the death muſt be ſuggeſted on the roll.

An old ſheriff omits turning over a priſoner in execution to the new ſheriff, it is ſaid to be an eſcape; ſo where there are two executions againſt a man, and in the indenture of turning over mention is made but of one, &c. 3 Rep. 71. Sed qu. as to this point?

II. Of the difference between negligent and voluntary eſcapes, and alſo between eſcapes on meſne proceſs and execution.

There are two kinds of eſcapes; voluntary and negligent: Voluntary, is when one arreſts another for felony, or other crime, and lets him go by conſent; in which caſe the party that permits the eſcape is eſteemed guilty of the crime committed, and muſt anſwer for it: Negligent eſcape, is when one is arreſted, and afterwards eſcapes againſt the will of him that arreſted him, or had him in cuſtody; and is not purſued by freſh ſuit, and taken again before the party purſuing hath loſt ſight of him. Cromp. Juſt. 36. And for theſe negligent eſcapes, the gaoler, &c. is to be fined. One negligent eſcape will not amount to a forfeiture of a gaoler's office, as one voluntary one will; but many negligent eſcapes will do it: and the fine for ſuffering a negligent eſcape of a perſon attainted, was by the Common law of courſe 100 l. and in other caſes at the diſcretion of the court. 3 Lev. 288. 2 Lev. 81.

If any priſoner eſcapes who was in execution, his creditors may retake him by cap. ad ſatisfac. or bring action of debt on the judgment, or a ſcire facias againſt him, &c. 1 Vent. 269. 3 Salk. 160. And ſee 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 27. If a man eſcapes, with the conſent of the gaoler in a civil caſe, he cannot retake him. 3 Rep. 32. This muſt mean on an eſcape warrant, but cannot mean that the plaintiff, if he thinks proper, is barred from ſuing forth a new execution. For tho' the ſheriff is highly culpable, yet the defendant is not, with reſpect to the plaintiff, leſs culpable. The eſcape as to him is tortious. See in confirmation of my opinion. 1 Vent. 4.

If the plaintiff permit the priſoner to eſcape, he cannot afterwards retake him; and if the body and goods, &c. of a conuſor are taken in execution upon a ſtatute-merchant, if the conuſee agree that he ſhall go at large, it is a diſcharge of the whole execution, and the conuſor ſhall have his lands again: it is otherwiſe if the ſheriff had permitted him to eſcape, the execution on the lands would not be diſcharged. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 737.

A difference is to be obſerved between permiſſive and negligent eſcapes, with reſpect to the ſheriff; for if a ſheriff ſuffer a priſoner voluntarily to go at large, the ſheriff cannot retake him even upon freſh ſuit; and if he does, the priſoner may have an action of treſpaſs againſt him. Car. 212.

If the marſhal of the King's Bench, or warden of the Fleet, or any other who hath the keeping of priſons in fee, ſuffer a voluntary eſcape, it is a forfeiture of the office. 3 Mod. 146. Carter 212. And there is likewiſe a farther penalty of 500 l. added by 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 27. above-mentioned.

There is this difference between an eſcape on meſne proceſs and execution; if the ſheriff arreſt a perſon on meſne proceſs, and he is reſcued by J. S. he may return the reſcue, and ſuch return is good, and no action of eſcape lies againſt him after ſuch return; but the court will iſſue proceſs againſt ſuch reſcuer, or fine him; for in this caſe, though the ſheriff may, yet he is not obliged to raiſe the poſſe comitatus 1 Rol. Abr. 807. 1 Jon. 207. 1 Rol. Rep. 388. 3 Lev. 46.

But after judgment on a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, the ſheriff cannot return a reſcue, for in ſuch caſe the ſheriff is obliged to raiſe the poſſe comitatus, if needful, and therefore, if he return a reſcue, an action of eſcape lies, or a new capias, for the return of an ineffectual execution is as none. 1 Rol. Abr. 807. Cro. Car. 240, 255. 8 Co. 42. See Ni. Pri. 59, 60. And 6 Rep. 51. Cro. Eliz. 868.

III. O*f the nature of the* action to be brought for an eſcape, and the manner of laying it.

At Common law the plaintiff had no remedy againſt the ſheriff for an eſcape, whether upon meſne proceſs, or in execution, but by ſpecial action upon the caſe. 2 Inſt. 382. 1 Show. 176. 2 Saund. 34. Hard. 30.

But now, by an equitable conſtruction of Weſtm. 2. cap. 11. Action of debt is given againſt the ſheriff, and by the 1 Rich. 2. cap. 12. againſt the warden of the Fleet (which extends to all gaolers and keepers of priſons, though infants or feme coverts. 2 Inſt. 382.) for eſcapes in execution.

The plaintiff, at his election, may maintain either an action upon the caſe, or debt, for an eſcape in execution. Cro. Jac. 361, 533, 619. Cro. Eliz. 877. Dyer 278. b. See 1 Jon. 144. 1 Sid. 364. S. C.

If a priſoner in cuſtody upon a capias utlagatum is ſuffered to eſcape, the plaintiff may either maintain an action qui tam againſt the ſheriff, or bring an action of debt againſt him in his own right. Cro. Jac. 361, 533, 619. Cro. Eliz. 877.

An action of eſcape is not a local action; and therefore if one eſcape out of the Marſhalſea, which is in Surry, the action may be laid in Middleſex. Dyer 278. b. See 1 Jon. 144. 1 Sid. 364. S. C.

It is uſual now, on an eſcape on meſne proceſs, to declare againſt the ſheriff, &c. in caſe, on execution, in debt.

As to the manner of laying the action.

In this action it is not neceſſary to ſet forth all the formalities required by law in other caſes. Cro. Eliz. 877. See 2 Show. 424.

Therefore, if upon a judgment obtained by the teſtator, the executor brings a ſcire facias, and has judgment, whereupon a capias ad ſatisfac. iſſues, and B. is arreſted, and ſuffered to eſcape, the plaintiff, in an action againſt the ſheriff for this eſcape, may declare briefly upon the judgment in the ſcire facias, without ſhewing the gradual proceedings at length, as is uſually done in an action of debt upon a judgment. Carth. 148, 149. 3 Mod. 324. S. C. Cro. Eliz. 877.

So if a defendant is arreſted on a ſpecial capias, founded on an original returnable in B. R. in action for his eſcape, it is not neceſſary to ſet forth the original.

If the plaintiff declares that he ſued out a writ of execution againſt J. S. without ſetting forth any judgment, and that the defendant ſuffered him to eſcape; this is an incurable fault; for by this means he loſt the benefit of pleading nul tiel record, which he might do if the plaintiff had ſet forth the judgment. 1 Saund. 37—38. 1 Lev. 191. and 1 Sid. 306. S. C.

If A. recovers againſt B. as executor, and has him in execution, and the ſheriff ſuffers him to eſcape, the action muſt be brought as executor in the detinet only, and not in the debet and detinet. 1 Lutw. 893. Comb. 114. S. C.

If the plaintiff declares, that the priſoner was committed, and eſcaped, but does not ſay, Prout patet per recordum; yet upon a general demurrer this ſhall be good; for the giſt of the action was the eſcape, and the commitment only inducement. 2 Salk. 565. 5 Mod. 8. S. C. See 3 Lev. 393.

If in eſcape the plaintiff declares, that he had J. S. and his wife in execution, and that the defendant ſuffered them to eſcape, and the jury find ſpecially, that the huſband only was taken in execution (it being for a debt due from the wife before coverture) and that he eſcaped; this is ſufficient, and the plaintiff ſhall have judgment; for the ſubſtance of the iſſue is found, though not purſuant to the declaration. 1 Sid. 5.

So in an action on the caſe for the eſcape of A. where the jury found that A. was taken by J. S. the former ſheriff, and not by the defendant, the preſent ſheriff; but finding that he was legally in his cuſtody, and that he ſuffered him to eſcape, the plaintiff had judgment. Cro. Jac. 380.

By the Stat. 8 & 9. W. 3. cap. 27. ſect. 12. it is enacted, "That it ſhall be lawful for any perſon, having cauſe of action againſt the warden of the Fleet priſon, upon bill filed in the courts of Common Pleas or Exchequer againſt the warden, and a rule being given to plead thereto to be out eight days at moſt after filing ſuch bill, to ſign judgment againſt the warden, unleſs he plead to the bill within three days after ſuch rule is out."

IV. With regard to the defence of the party.

If the priſon takes fire, by means whereof the priſoners eſcape, this ſhall excuſe the ſheriff, and he may well plead it. 1 Rol. Abr. 808.

So if the priſon is broke by the King's enemies, this ſhall excuſe the ſheriff, for he can have no remedy over againſt them. 4 Co. 84. 1 Rol. Abr. 808.

But if the priſon was broke by rebels and traitors, the King's ſubjects, this ſhall not excuſe him, for he may have his remedy over againſt theſe. Ibid.

When a priſoner tortiouſly eſcapes from the cuſtody of the gaoler, he may be retaken; and the ſheriff, &c. may purſue a perſon eſcaping into that or any other county; and if he retakes the priſoner on freſh purſuit before action brought, it ſhall excuſe the ſheriff, for there the priſoner ſhall be ſaid to be in execution ſtill. 3 Rep. 44. Cro. Jac. 657. 1 Jon. 144. 1 Rol. Abr. 808. And where the ſheriff is to anſwer the debt and damages for ſuch eſcape, he ſhall have his counter-remedy againſt the party eſcaping; and may take him at any time and place, and impriſon him 'till he hath ſatisfied the ſheriff as much as he hath paid to the plaintiff; or he may bring an action upon the caſe againſt the priſoner, and ſo relieve himſelf. 5 Rep. 52. Cro. Eliz. 393.

It was formerly held that the ſheriff, &c. might give freſh purſuit in evidence, and need not have pleaded it. See 1 Mod. 116. 1 Sid. 13.

But now, by the 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 27. ſect. 6. it is enacted, "That no retaking on freſh purſuit ſhall be given in evidence, unleſs the ſame be ſpecially pleaded, nor ſhall any ſpecial plea be allowed, unleſs oath be firſt made in writing by the defendant, and filed in the proper office of the reſpective courts, that the priſoner for whoſe eſcape ſuch action is brought, did, without his conſent, privity or knowledge, make ſuch eſcape; and if ſuch affidavit ſhall at any time afterwards appear to be falſe, and the defendant ſhall be convicted thereof by due courſe of law, he ſhall forfeit the ſum of 500 l." See Sheriff.

We are next to conſider eſcapes in criminal caſes, and herein is to be enquired,

I. What ſhall be deemed an eſcape, and where it ſhall be adjudged voluntary, and where negligent.
II. Where the priſoner may be retaken after an eſcape, and where the eſcape is excuſed by ſuch a retaking; or by killing the priſoner, if he cannot be retaken.
III. How the officer ſuffering an eſcape is to be indicted, and the eſcape to be tried and adjudged.
IV. Of the puniſhment of voluntary and negligent eſcapes, and of perſons aiding and aſſiſting priſoners to attempt their eſcape.

I. What ſhall be deemed an eſcape, and where it ſhall be adjudged voluntary, and where negligent.

A man muſt be committed to priſon by lawful mittimus, or breach of priſon and eſcaping is not felony. If a party is committed for treaſon, to break priſon and eſcape is but felony; but if a priſoner let out traitors, it will be treaſon. H. P. C. 109. 2 Inſt. 590. Where one is impriſoned for petit larceny, or killing a man ſe defendendo, &c. to break priſon and eſcape is not felony; and if a priſon be ſet on fire, not by the privity of the priſoner, he may break priſon for the ſafety of his life. 2 Inſt. 590. A gaoler refuſing to receive a perſon arreſted by the conſtable for felony, whereby he is let go, is guilty of an eſcape; but there muſt be an actual arreſt, which arreſt muſt be juſtifiable, to make an eſcape; for if it be for a ſuppoſed crime, where no crime was committed, and the party is neither indicted nor appealed, &c. it is no eſcape to ſuffer a perſon to go at large. Fitz. Coron. 224. Bro. Eſca. 27, 28. If a private perſon arreſt another for ſuſpicion of felony, he is to deliver him to a public officer, who ought to have the cuſtody of him; for if he let him go, it will be an eſcape. 2 Hawk. 138. And if no officer will receive him, he is to deliver him to the townſhip where arreſted; or get him bailed.

A. a meer private man, knows B. to have committed felony, and thereupon arreſts him, he is lawfully in cuſtody of A. until he be diſcharged, by delivering him to a conſtable or common gaol; and therefore if he voluntarily ſuffers ſuch perſon to eſcape, though he were no officer, nor B. indicted, it is felony in A. But it is otherwiſe if he never takes him nor attempts it, and lets him go. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 594. Juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions are empowered to inquire of eſcapes of perſons arreſted, and impriſoned for felony. Stat. 1 R. 3. c. 3.

As to the ſecond point, viz. Where ſuch eſcape is to be eſteemed voluntary, and where negligent.

There can be no doubt, but that where-ever an officer, who hath the cuſtody of a priſoner, charged with and guilty of a capital offence, doth knowingly give him his liberty, with an intent to ſave him, either from his trial or execution, he is guilty of a voluntary eſcape, and thereby involved in the guilt of the ſame crime of which the priſoner was guilty and ſtood charged with. And it ſeems to be the opinion of Sir Matthew Hale, that in ſome caſes an officer may be adjudged guilty of ſuch eſcape, who hath not ſuch intent, but only means to give his priſoner that liberty which by the law he hath no colour of right to give him.

Thus, to bail a perſon not bailable by law is a negligent eſcape. Plowd. 476. And it is ſaid that the crime is equal in a juſtice of peace, for taking a felon out of priſon, without bail; or ſuffering him to go at large without commitment, &c. where the offender confeſſeth the felony, as it is in the caſe of a gaoler's permitting an eſcape. Dalt. 382.

If the gaoler ſo cloſely purſue the priſoner, who flies from him, that he retake him without loſing ſight of him, the law looks on the priſoner ſo far in his power all the time, as not to adjudge ſuch a flight to amount at all to an eſcape; but if the gaoler once loſe ſight of the priſoner, and afterwards retake him, he ſeems in ſtrictneſs to be guilty of an eſcape; and a fortiori therefore, if he kill him in the purſuit, he is in like manner guilty, tho' he never loſt ſight of him, and could not otherwiſe take him, not only becauſe the King loſes the benefit he might have had from the attainder of the priſoner, by the forfeiture of his goods, &c. but alſo becauſe the public juſtice is not ſo well ſatisfied by the killing him in ſuch an extrajudicial manner. 2 Hawk. 130. See poſt. Div. 2.

II. Where the priſoner may be retaken after an eſcape, and where the eſcape is licenſed by ſuch a retaking, or by killing the priſoner if he cannot be retaken.

It ſeems to be clearly agreed by all the books, that an officer making a freſh purſuit after a priſoner, who hath eſcaped through his negligence, may retake him at any time after, whether he find him in the ſame or in a different county. And it is ſaid generally in ſome books, that an officer who hath negligently ſuffered a priſoner to eſcape, may retake him where-ever he finds him, without mentioning any freſh purſuit; and indeed, ſince the liberty gained by the priſoner is wholly owing to his own wrong, there ſeems to be no reaſon he ſhould take any manner of advantage from it. But where a gaoler hath voluntarily ſuffered a priſoner to eſcape, it is ſaid by ſome, that he can no more juſtify the retaking him, than if he had never had him in cuſtody before, becauſe by his own free conſent he hath admitted, that he hath nothing to do with him.

Where-ever a priſoner, by the negligence of his keeper, gets ſo far out of his power that the keeper loſes ſight of him, the keeper is finable at the diſcretion of the court, notwithſtanding he retook him immediately after; for it ſeems agreed, that this is to be adjudged a negligent eſcape, which implies an offence, and conſequently that it muſt be puniſhable. It is true indeed, that in an action againſt a gaoler, for ſuffering one arreſted in a civil action to eſcape, it is a good excuſe for the gaoler, that, before the action brought, he took the priſoner upon freſh ſuit, which is well maintained by ſhewing that he purſued him immediately after notice of the eſcape, though it were ſome hours after it, and retook him; but it does not from hence follow, that the like excuſe will ſerve for the negligent eſcape of a criminal, becauſe this is an offence againſt the public, but the other is only a private damage to the party: neither will it be an hardſhip to the officer, to be expoſed to ſuch puniſhment as the court, in diſcretion, ſhall think fit to impoſe upon him for the negligent eſcape of a criminal, as it would be to be liable to an action of eſcape, for ſuffering a perſon in his cuſtody, in a civil action, to eſcape; for that in the former caſe the court would moderate his fine according to the circumſtances of the whole matter, and would certainly mitigate, if not wholly excuſe it, if he ſhould appear to have taken all reaſonable care: but in the other caſe, if he ſhould be liable to an action, his judgment would not lie in the diſcretion of the court, but he would be bound to pay the whole debt, for which the party was in cuſtody, if the eſcape ſhould be adjudged againſt him. However it is certain, that it will be no advantage to a gaoler to retake his priſoner, after he has been fined for the eſcape, as hath been ſhewn in the precedent ſection; alſo it is clear, that he cannot excuſe himſelf by killing a priſoner in the purſuit, though he could not poſſibly retake him; but muſt, in ſuch caſe, be contented to ſubmit to ſuch fine as his negligence ſhall appear to deſerve. 2 Hawk. P. C. 132.

III. With regard to the indictment for an eſcape, whether ſuch eſcape be negligent or voluntary.

The indictment muſt expreſsly ſhew, that the party was actually in the defendant's cuſtody for a crime, action, or commitment for it; and that it is not ſufficient to ſay, that he was in the defendant's cuſtody, and charged with ſuch a crime; for that a perſon in cuſtody may be ſo charged, and yet not be in cuſtody by reaſon of ſuch charge: and it ſeems alſo, that every ſuch indictment muſt expreſsly ſhew that the priſoner went at large. Alſo it ſeems neceſſary, to ſhew the time when the offence was committed, for which the party was in cuſtody, not only that it may appear, that it was prior to the eſcape, but alſo that it was ſubſequent to the laſt general pardon. Alſo it ſeems clear, that every indictment for a voluntary eſcape muſt alledge that the defendant felonice & voluntarie A. B. ad largum ire premiſit; and muſt alſo ſhew the ſpecies of the crime for which the party was impriſoned; for it is not ſufficient to ſay in general, that he was in cuſtody for felony, &c.

The crime of the priſoner eſcaping, for which the gaoler is anſwerable, muſt be ſuch as it was at the time of the eſcape; as where a perſon is committed for dangerouſly wounding another, it is treſpaſs only, and not felony, till the party wounded is dead: and he who ſuffers another to eſcape who was in cuſtody for felony, cannot be arraigned for ſuch eſcape as for felony, until the principal is attainted, but he may be indicted and tried for miſpriſion before the attainder of the principal. And in high treaſon it is ſaid the eſcape is immediately puniſhable, whether the party eſcaping be ever convicted or not. 2 Haw 135.

In reſpect to the manner of trying eſcapes.

Where perſons, being preſent in a court of record, are committed to priſon by ſuch court, the keeper of the gaol is bound to have them always ready, whenever the court ſhall demand them of him; and if he ſhall fail to produce them at ſuch demand, the court will adjudge him guilty of an eſcape, without any farther inquiry, unleſs he have ſome reaſonable matter to alledge in his excuſe; as that the priſon was ſet on fire, or broke open by enemies, &c. for he ſhall be concluded, by the record of the commitment, to deny that the priſoners were in his cuſtody. 2 Hawk. P. C. 133.

As to other priſoners who are not ſo committed, but are in the cuſtody of a gaoler, ſheriff, conſtable, or other perſon, by any other means whatſoever, it ſeems agreed, that the perſon who has them in cuſtody is in no caſe puniſhable for their eſcape, except in ſome ſpecial caſes, until it be preſented: for by Stat. Weſt. 1. c. 3. it is enacted that "Nothing be demanded nor taken, nor levied by the ſheriff, nor by any other, for the eſcape of a thief, or felon, until it it be judged for an eſcape by the juſtices in eyre; and that he who does otherwiſe, ſhall reſtore to him or them that have paid it, as much as he or they have taken or received, and as much alſo unto the King."

It hath been adjudged, that this ſtatute reſtrains not the court of King's Bench from receiving ſuch preſentments, for that its juriſdiction includes in it that of juſtices in eyre, and this court is itſelf the higheſt court of eyre. 2 Haw. P. C. 134.

It is farther enacted by Stat. 31 Ed. 3. c. 14. "That the eſcape of thieves and felons, and the chattels of felons, and of fugitives, and alſo eſcapes of clerks convicts, out of their ordinary's priſon, from thenceforth to be judged before any of the King's juſtices, ſhall be levied from time to time, as they ſhall fall, as well of the time paſt as time to come." By which it ſeems to be implied, that other juſtices, as well as thoſe in eyre, may take cogniſance of eſcapes; and it is certain, that juſtices of gaol-delivery may puniſh juſtices of peace for a negligent eſcape, in admitting perſons to bail, who are not bailable. 2 Hawk. P. C. 134.

And it is farther enacted, by Stat. 1 Rich. 3. cap. 3. "That juſtices of peace ſhall have authority to inquire, in their ſeſſions, of all manner of eſcapes of every perſon arreſted and impriſoned for felony."

Where-ever an eſcape is finable, the preſentment of it is traverſable; but where the offence is amerciable only, there the preſentment is of itſelf concluſive; ſuch amercements being reckoned among thoſe minima de quibus non curat lex; and this diſtinction ſeems to be well warranted by the old books. 2 Hawk. P. C. 134.

IV. Of the puniſhment of voluntary and negligent eſcapes, and of perſons aiding and aſſiſting in ſuch eſcapes; and firſt, as to the puniſhment of voluntary eſcapes.

Such eſcape amounts to the ſame kind of crime, and is puniſhable in the ſame degree, as the offence of which the party was guilty, and for which he was in cuſtody, whether it be treaſon, felony, or treſpaſs; and whether the perſon eſcaping were actually committed to ſome goal, or under an arreſt only, and not committed; and whether he were attainted, or only accuſed of ſuch crime, and neither indicted nor appealed: and it is ſaid to be no excuſe of ſuch eſcape, that the priſoner had been acquitted on an indictment of death, and only committed till the year and day be paſſed, to give the widow, or heir of the deceaſed, an opportunity of bringing their appeal. 2 Hawk. 134.

Alſo ſuch an eſcape, ſuffered by one who wrongfully takes upon him the keeping of a gaol, ſeems to be puniſhable in the ſame manner as if he were never ſo rightfully intitled to ſuch cuſtody, for that the crime is in both caſes of the very ſame ill conſequence to the public; and there ſeems to be no reaſon that a wrongful officer ſhould have greater favour than a rightful, and that for no other reaſon, but becauſe he is a wrongful one. 2 Hawk. P. C. 134.

Alſo if the warrant of a commitment do plainly and expreſsly charge the party with treaſon or felony, but in ſome other reſpect be not ſtrictly formal, yet it ſeems, that it may be probably argued, that the gaoler ſuffering an eſcape, is as much puniſhable as if the warrant were perfectly right. 2 Hawk. P. C. 134, 135.

None ſhall ſuffer capitally for the crime of another, ſo that a principal gaoler is only finable for a voluntary eſcape ſuffered by his deputy. 2 Hawk. P. C. 135.

As to negligent eſcapes.

Whoever de facto occupies the office of gaoler is liable to anſwer for ſuch an eſcape; and that it is no way material whether his title to the office be legal or not. 2 Hawk. P. C. 135. A ſheriff is as much liable to anſwer for an eſcape ſuffered by his bailiff, as if he had actually ſuffered it himſelf, and the court may charge either the ſheriff or bailiff for ſuch an eſcape; and if a deputy gaoler be not ſufficient to anſwer a negligent eſcape, his principal muſt anſwer for him; but if the gaoler who ſuffers an eſcape, have an eſtate for life, or years in the office, it is not agreed how far he in reverſion is liable to be puniſhed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 135, 136.

One negligent eſcape will not amount to a forfeiture of the gaoler's office, as one voluntary one will; yet if a gaoler ſuffer many negligent eſcapes, it is ſaid, that he puts it in the power of the court to ouſt him of his office by its diſcretion. 2 Hawk. P. C. 136.

Where-ever a perſon is found guilty, upon an indictment, or preſentment, of a negligent eſcape of a criminal actually in his cuſtody, he ought to be condemned in a certain ſum to be paid to the King, which ſeems moſt properly to be called a fine.

It hath been holden, that a negligent eſcape may be pardoned by the King before it happens, but that a voluntary one cannot ſo be pardoned. 2 Hawk. P. C. 136.

And it ſeems by the Common law, the penalty for ſuffering the negligent eſcape of a perſon attainted, was of courſe 100 l. and for ſuffering ſuch eſcape of a perſon indicted, and not attainted, was 5 l. but if the perſon eſcaping were neither attainted nor indicted, it ſeems that it was left to the diſcretion of the court to aſſeſs ſuch a reaſonable forfeiture as ſhould ſeem proper; and if the party had twice eſcaped, it ſeems, that the penalties above mentioned were of courſe to be doubled; yet it ſeems, that the forfeiture was to be no greater for ſuffering a priſoner, committed on two ſeveral accuſations, to eſcape, than if he had been committed but on one. 2 Hawk. P. C. 136.

As to the manner offences of this kind are puniſhable by ſtatute, it is recited by 5 Ed. 3. ch. 8. "That perſons indicted of felonies in times paſt, had removed the indictments before the King and there yielded themſelves, and by the marſhals of the King's Bench had been incontinently let to bail, and after had done many evil deeds, &c." And thereupon it is enacted, "That if any ſuch priſoner be found wandering out of priſon, by bail, or without bail, and that he be found at the King's ſuit, or at the ſuit of the party, the marſhal which ſhall be found thereof guilty, ſhall have half a year's impriſonment, and be ranſomed at the King's will; and the juſtices ſhall thereof make inquiry when they ſee time; and as to the marſhals, it ſhall be done within the verge that which reaſon will. And in caſe that the marſhals ſuffer by their aſſent ſuch priſoners to eſcape, they ſhall be at law, as before the time of the ſtatute they had been. And the King intendeth not by this ſtatute to loſe the eſcape, where he ought to have the ſame."

Alſo it is enacted by 19 H. 7. c. 10. "That every ſheriff have the cuſtody of the King's common gaols, during the time of his office, except all goals whereof any perſon or perſons have the keeping of eſtate of inheritance. And that for every negligent eſcape from any ſheriff, having the keeping of any gaol, or from any conſtable of caſtle, or other, being keeper of any goals where ſuch priſoners accuſtomably have been or ſhall be kept, of perſons indicted of high treaſon being in their keeping, that no leſs fine be ſet or made for every ſuch eſcape, than 100 marks, and more, by the diſcretion of the juſtices that ſhall aſſeſs ſuch fines: and for every eſcape of perſons eſcaping, being in their keeping for ſuſpection of high treaſon, no leſs fine to be ſet nor made than 40*l.* and for every eſcape of perſons indicted of murder, or petit treaſon, 20*l.* at leaſt, and more, by the diſcretion of the juſtices that ſhall aſſeſs ſuch fines: and for every perſon eſcaping, being in their keeping, indicted of felony, other than murder or treaſon, 10*l.* and for every perſon ſuſpected of felony, other than murder or treaſon, 100 ſhillings, or more, by the diſcretion of the juſtices, after the manner and quantity of their demerits; ſaving to every perſon ſuch right and title to any ſuch eſcapes, and fines for the ſame, as to be quit of ſuch eſcapes, or of any other eſcapes, as they had, or ought to have had at the time of making of the ſaid act."

Concerning the puniſhment of perſons aiding and aſſiſting priſoners to attempt their eſcape.

It is enacted, That perſons who any ways aſſiſt a priſoner, committed for treaſon, or felony, to attempt his eſcape from any gaol, ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony and be tranſported; and if the priſoner be committed for any other crime; or upon proceſs for 100 l. debt, &c. the offenders are liable to fine and impriſonment. 16 Geo. 2. c. 31. And where any perſon conveys any arms, inſtrument or diſguiſe, to a priſoner in gaol for felony, &c. or for his uſe, in order to an eſcape, it is likewiſe felony and tranſportation. Alſo if one aſſiſt any priſoner to eſcape from any conſtable, or other officer or perſon in whoſe cuſtody he is, by virtue of a warrant of commitment for felony, it is declared to be the like offence. Ibid.

Eſcape-Warrant. If any perſon committed or charged in cuſtody in the King's Bench or Fleet priſon, in execution, or on meſne proceſs, &c. go at large; on oath thereof before a judge of the court where the action was brought, an eſcape-warrant ſhall be granted, directed to all ſheriffs, &c. throughout England, to retake the priſoner, and commit him to gaol where taken, there to remain till the debt is ſatisfied: and a perſon may be taken on a Sunday upon an eſcape-warrant. Stat. 1 Ann. c. 6. And the judges of the reſpective courts may grant warrants, upon oath to be made before perſons commiſſioned by them to take affidavits in the country, (ſuch oath being firſt filed) as they might do upon oath made before themſelves. 5 Ann. c. 9.

A ſheriff ought not to receive a perſon taken on eſcape-warrant, &c. from any but an officer; not from the rabble, &c. which is illegal. Paſch. 3 Ann. 3 Salk. 149. A perſon being arreſted and carried to Newgate by virtue of an eſcape-warrant, moved to be diſcharged, becauſe he ſaid he was abroad by a day-rule when taken; but it appearing by affidavit, that he was taken upon the eſcape-warrant before the court of B. R. ſat that morning, they refuſed to ſet him at liberty. 2 Ld. Raym. 927. I believe nothing is more common now, than letting priſoners go out, who have paid for day-rules, and complied with the uſual terms, ſeveral hours before the ſitting of the courts: and was not this done, the very end of the rules might be defeated, as a priſoner could not probably meet with perſons, or tranſact concerns, after ſitting of the courts, as they might early in a morning.

Eſcapio Quietus, Is an eſcape of beaſts in a foreſt; and he that by charter is quietas de eſcapio, is delivered from that puniſhment which by the laws of the foreſt lieth upon thoſe whoſe beaſts are found within the land where forbidden. Cromp. Juriſd. 196.

Eſcheat, (eſchaeta, from the Fr. eſcheoir, i. e. accidere) Signifies any lands or tenements that caſually fall to a lord, within his manor, by way of forfeiture, or by the death of his tenant, leaving no heir general or ſpecial. Mag. Chart. cap. 31. Eſcheat is alſo uſed ſometimes for the places or circuit, in which the King, or other Lord, hath eſcheats of his tenants. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 2. And it is likewiſe applied to a writ, which lies where the tenant having an eſtate in fee-ſimple in any lands or tenements holden of a ſuperior lord, dies without heir; in which caſe the lord brings this writ againſt him that is in poſſeſſion of the lands after the death of his tenant, and ſhall thereby recover the ſame in lieu of his ſervices. F. N. B. 144.

In our law eſcheats were of two ſorts: 1. Regal, Thoſe forfeitures which belong to our kings by the antient rights and prerogative of the crown. 2. Feodal, which accrue to every Lord of the fee as well as the King, by reaſon of his ſeigniory. Where a perſon commits treaſon, his eſtate ſhall eſcheat and be forfeited to the King; and when a tenant in fee-ſimple committeth felony, and is attainted, the King ſhall have year, day, and waſte in his lands, (or rather year and day in lieu of waſte) and afterwards it comes to the lord by eſcheat. And the lord may compound with the King, and have the eſtate preſently. 3 Inſt. 111.

It has been holden, that a ſaving againſt the corruption of blood in a ſtatute concerning felony, doth by conſequence ſave the land to the heir, ſo as not to eſcheat; becauſe the eſcheat to the lord for felony is only pro defectu tenentis, occaſioned by the corruption of blood: but it hath been adjudged, that a ſaving againſt the corruption of blood, in a ſtatute concerning treaſon, doth not ſave the land to the heir: for in treaſon the land goes to the King by way of immediate forfeiture. 3 Inſt. 47. 1 Salk. 85.

Inheritances of things not lying in tenure, as of rents, commons, &c. cannot eſcheat to the lord, becauſe there is no tenure: nor deſcend, by reaſon the blood is corrupted; though they are forfeited to the King by an attainder of treaſon, and the profits of them ſhall be alſo forfeited to the King on attainder of felony, during the life of the offender; and after his death it is ſaid the inheritance ſhall be extinguiſhed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 449.

A perſon is ſeiſed of lands in fee holden of a lord, his ſon is attainted of treaſon, and the father dieth, the land ſhall eſcheat to the lord, and not to the King; who cannot have the land, becauſe the ſon who was attainted never had any thing to forfeit; but the King ſhall have the eſcheat of all the lands whereof the perſon attainted of high treaſon was ſeiſed, of whomſoever they were holden. Co. Lit. 13. Huſband and wife, tenants in ſpecial tail; the huſband is attainted of treaſon and executed, leaving iſſue; on the death of the wife the lands ſhall eſcheat, becauſe the iſſue in tail ought to make his conveyance by father and mother, and from the father he cannot by reaſon of the attainder. Dyer 322. If tenant in fee-ſimple is attainted of treaſon, and executed, upon his death the fee is veſted in the King, without office found; yet he muſt bring a ſcire facias againſt the tertenants; lands ſhall never eſcheat to a lord of whom they are holden, until office found. 3 Rep. 10

Eſcheat ſeldom happens to the lord for want of an heir to an eſtate; but when it doth before the lord enters, the homage jury of the lord's court ought to preſent it. 2 Inſt. 36. Land ſhall eſcheat to the lord, where heirs are born after attainder of felony. 3 Rep. 40. Though if the King pardons a felon before conviction, the lord ſhall not have his lands by eſcheat; for the lord hath no title before attainder. Owen 87. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 744. If on appeal of death or other felony, proceſs is awarded againſt the party, and pending the proceſs he conveyeth away the land, and after is outlawed, the conveyance is good to defeat the lord of his eſcheat: but if where a perſon is indicted of felony, pending the proceſs againſt him, he conveys away his land, and afterwards is outlawed, the conveyance ſhall not prevent the lord of his eſcheat. Co. Lit. 13. See Corruption of Blood.

Eſcheator, (eſchaetor) Was an officer appointed by the Lord Treaſurer, &c. in every county, to make inqueſts of titles by eſcheat; which inqueſts were to be taken by good and lawful men of the county, impanelled by the ſheriff. Stat. 14 Ed. 3. c. 8. 34 Ed. 3. c. 13. 8 H. 6. c. 16. Theſe eſcheators found offices after the death of the King's tenants, who held by knight-ſervice, or otherwiſe of the King; and certified their inquiſitions into the Exchequer, and Fitzherbert called them officers of record. F. N. B. 100. No eſcheator could continue in his office above one year: and whereas before the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. cap. 24. Eſcheators, ſheriffs, &c. would ſeize into the King's hands the freehold of the ſubjects, and thereby diſſeiſe them; by this act it is provided that no ſeizure can be made of lands or tenement into the King's hands, before office found. 2 Inſt. 206. And no lands can be granted before the King's title is found by inquiſition, 18 H. 6. c. 6. The office of eſcheator is an ancient office, and was formerly of great uſe to the crown; but having its chief dependance on the court of wards, which is taken away by act of parliament, it is now in a manner out of date. 4 Inſt. 225. There was anciently an officer called Eſcheator of the Jews. Clauſ. 4 Ed. 1. m. 7.

Eſcrow, Is a deed delivered to a third perſon, to be the deed of the party making it, upon a future condition, when ſuch a thing is performed; and then it is to be delivered to the party to whom made. It is to be delivered to a ſtranger, mentioning the condition; and has relation to the firſt delivery. 2 Rol. Abr. 25, 26. Co. Lit. 31. A delivery as an eſcrow ſignifies, in fact, as a ſcrowl or writing, which is not to take effect as a deed, till the condition be performed. Co. Lit. 36. Black. Com. 2 V. 307.

Eſcuage, (ſcutagium, from the Fr. eſcu, a ſhield) Is a kind of knight ſervice, called ſervice of the ſhield, whereby the tenant was bound to follow his lord into the wars at his own charge. Alſo it has been ſometimes taken for that duty or payment, which they who held lands under this tenure, were bound to make to the lord, when they neither went to the wars, nor provided any other in their places; being in lieu of all ſervices. And ſometimes eſcuage ſignified a reaſonable aid, demanded and levied by the lord of his tenants who held in knight-ſervice, &c. Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. F. N. B. 8. Eſplees, (expletiæ, from expleo) Are the products which ground or land yield; as the hay of the meadows, the herbage of the paſture, corn of the arable; rent and ſervices, &c. And of an advowſon, the taking of tithes in groſs by the parſon; of wood, the ſelling of wood; of an orchard, the fruits growing there; of a mill, the taking of toll, &c. Theſe and ſuch like iſſues are termed eſplees. And it is obſerved, that in a writ of right of land, advowſon, &c. the demandant ought to alledge in his count, that he or his anceſtors took the eſplees of the thing in demand; otherwiſe the pleading will not be good. Terms de Ley. Sometimes this word hath been applied to the farm, or lands, &c. themſelves——Dominus E. habebit omnia expletias & proficua de corona emergentia. Eſpouſals, (ſponſalia) Are a contract or mutual promiſe between a man and a woman to marry each other; and where marriages may be conſummated, eſpouſals go before them. Marriage or matrimony is ſaid to be an eſpouſal de præſenti, and a conjunction of man and woman in a conſtant ſociety. Wood's Inſt. 57. See Matrimony.

Eſquire, (from the Fr. Eſcu. and the Lat. Scutum, in Greek σκυτος) which ſignifies an hide of which Shields were anciently made and afterwards covered: For here in the time of the Sxaons, the ſhields had a covering of leather; ſo that an eſquire was originally he who attending a knight in the time of war, did carry his ſhield, whence he was called Eſcuier in French, and Scutifer or Armiger, (i. e. armour-bearer) in Latin.

Hotoman ſaith, that thoſe whom the French call Eſquires, where a military kind of vaſſals, having jus ſcuti, viz. liberty to bear a ſhield, and in it the enſigns of their family, in token of their gentility or dignity: But this addition hath not of long time had any relation to the office or employment of the perſon to whom it hath been attributed, as to carrying of arms, &c. but been merely a title of dignity, and next in degree to a knight.

Thoſe to whom this title is now of right due, are all the younger ſons of noblemen, and the eldeſt ſons of ſuch younger ſons; the eldeſt ſons of knights, and their eldeſt ſons; the officers of the King's courts and of the King's houſhold; counſellors at law; juſtices of peace, &c. But theſe latter, are eſquires in reputation; and he who is a juſtice of peace, has this title only during the time he is in commiſſion, and no longer, if he be not otherwiſe qualified to bear it.

A ſheriff of a county being a ſuperior officer retains the title of Eſquire during his life; in reſpect of the great truſt he has in the commonwealth. The chief of ſome ancient families are eſquires by preſcription; and in late acts of parliament for poll money, many wealthy perſons (commonly reputed to be ſuch) were ranked among the eſquires of this kingdom. Blount.

Eſquires of the King, Are ſuch who have the title by creation: Theſe, when they are created, have put about their necks a collar of SS, and a pair of ſilver ſpurs is beſtowed on them: And they were wont to bear before the Prince in war, a ſhield or lance. There are four eſquires of the King's body, to attend on his Majeſty's perſon. Camb. 111.

Eſſendi quietum de Tolonio, A writ to be quit of toll; and lies for citizens and burgeſſes of any city or town that by charter or preſcription ought to be exempted from toll, where the ſame is exacted of them. Reg. Orig. 258.

Eſliſors, or Eliſors, Are perſons appointed by a court of law, to whom a writ of venire facias is directed to impanel a jury, on challenge to the ſheriff and coroners; who return the writ in their own names, with a panel of the jurors names. 15 Ed. 4. 24. pl. 4. Black. Com. 3 V. 355.

Eſſoin, (Eſſonium, Fr. Eſſoine) Signifies an excuſe for him that is ſummoned to appear and anſwer to an action, or to perform ſuit to a court baron, &c, by reaſon of ſickneſs and infirmity, or other juſt cauſe of abſence. It is a kind of imparlance, or craving of a longer time, that lies in real, perſonal and mixed actions: And the plaintiff as well as the defendant ſhall be eſſoined, to ſave his default. Co. Lit. 131.

The cauſes that ſerve to eſſoin, and the eſſoins are divers under theſe heads. 1. Eſſoin de ultra mare, whereby the defendant ſhall have forty days. 2. De terra ſancta, where defendant ſhall have a year and a day. 3. De malo veniendi, which is likewiſe called the common eſſoin. 4. De malo lecti, wherein the defendant may by writ be viewed by four knights. 5. De ſervitio Regis. Bract. lib. 5. Britton, cap. 122. Fleta, lib. 6. And beſides the common eſſoin de malo veniend. i. e. by falling ſick in coming to the court, and other eſſoins abovementioned; there were ſeveral other excuſes, to ſave a default in real actions; as conſtraint of enemies, the falling among thieves, floods of water, and breaking down of bridges, &c. 2 Co. Inſt. 125.

After iſſue joined in dower, quare impedit, &c. one eſſoin only ſhall be allowed. Stat. 52 H. 3. c. 13. And in writs of aſſiſe, attaints, &c. after the tenant hath appeared, he ſhall not be eſſoined; but the inqueſt ſhall be taken by default. 3 Ed. 1. c. 42.

Eſſoin ultra mare will not be allowed, if the tenant be within the four ſeas; but it ſhall be turned to a default, c. 44. There is no eſſoin permitted for an appellant. 13 Ed. 1. c. 28. Nor doth eſſoin lie where any judgment is given; or the party is diſtrained by his lands; the ſheriff is commanded to make him appear; after the party is ſeen in court, &c. 12 Ed. 2. ſt. 2.

And eſſoin de ſervitio Regis lies not when the party is a woman; in a writ of dower; where the party hath an attorney in his ſuit, &c. Ibid. The eſſoin day in court is regularly the firſt day of the term; but the fourth day after is allowed of favour, 1 Lill. 540.

An eſſoin is entered thus: A. B. offers himſelf on the fourth day againſt C. D. in a plea or action of, &c. and he did not appear, and was ſummoned, &c. Therefore let him be attached, that he be here on the day, &c. And be it known, that the ſaid A. hath the ſame day to appear by his eſſoin, &c. Raſt. 520.

Eſſoin Day of the Term. The firſt return in every term, is, properly ſpeaking, the firſt day in that term: And thereon the court ſits to take eſſoigns, or excuſes for ſuch as do not appear according to the ſummons of the writ: wherefore this is uſually called the eſſoign day of the term. But the perſon ſummoned hath three days grace, beyond the return of the writ in which to make his appearance, and if he appears on the fourth day incluſive, the quarto die poſt, it is ſufficient. Black. Com. 3 V. 278.

Eſſoin de Malo Villæ, Is when the defendant is in court the firſt day; but gone without pleading, and being afterwards ſurpriſed by ſickneſs, &c. cannot attend, but ſends two eſſoigners, who openly proteſt in court that he is detained by ſickneſs in ſuch a village, that he cannot come, pro lucrari & pro perdere; and this will be admitted, for it lies on the plaintiff to prove whether the eſſoign is true or not.

Eſtabliſhment of Dower, Is the aſſurance or ſettlement of dower, made to the wife by the huſband, on marriage: And aſſignment of dower, ſignifies the ſetting it out by the heir afterwards, according to the eſtabliſhment. Brit. cap. 102, 103.

Eſtache, (From the Fr. Eaſtacher, to faſten) Is uſed for a bridge, or ſtank of ſtone and timber. Cowel.

Eſtandard, or ſtandard, An enſign for horſemen in war. See Standard.

Eſtate, (Fr. Eſtat. Lat. Jus) Signifies that title or intereſt which a man hath in lands or tenements, &c. And eſtates are acquired divers ways, viz. by diſcent from a father to the ſon, &c. Conveyance, or grant from one man to another; by gift or purchaſe; deed or will: And a fee-ſimple is the largeſt eſtate that can be in law. 1 Lil. 541.

Eſtates are real, of lands, &c. or perſonal, of goods or chattels; otherwiſe diſtinguiſhed into freeholds, that deſcend to the heir, and chattels which go to the executors: Some eſtates are made by the words of deeds, and others made by law; as an eſtate in frank marriage given to a couſin, makes a gift in tail.

Alſo there is an eſtate that is implied, where tenant in tail bargains and ſells his land to a man and his heirs; by this he hath an eſtate deſcendible, and determinable upon the death of the tenant in tail. Co. Lit. 10 Rep. 97. If I give lands in Dale to a certain perſon for life, and after to his heirs or right heirs, he hath the fee-ſimple; and if it be to heirs males, he will have an eſtate-tail. 1 Rep. 66. A man grants to one and his heirs and aſſigns for his life, and a year over; this is an eſtate for life only. 39 E. 3. 25. Lit. 46. If a leaſe be made, and not expreſſed for what number of years, it is an eſtate at will. 2 Shep. Abr. 81.

The word eſtate generally in deeds, grants, and conveyances, comprehends the whole in which the party hath an intereſt or property, and will paſs the ſame. 3 Mod. 46. A perſon in poſſeſſion of an eſtate mortgaged in fee, by will gave it to his two daughters, and their heirs; one of them married, and then died: And it being a queſtion, whether her ſhare ſhould be held real or perſonal eſtate, and go to the heir, or her huſband adminiſtrator? It was adjudged for the heir; for here the mortgaged lands ſhall deſcend as other lands of inheritance, and be ſubject to the ſame rules. Preced. Canc. 266. In ſuch caſe, if the mortgage in fee be paid off, the money ſhall be conſidered as land, and belong to heirs, as the eſtate in the land would have done. Ibid.

Perſonal eſtate was deviſed by a man to his wife for life, and what ſhe left at her death to be divided between his kindred: He died, and the widow married again; this deviſe over was held good in equity, on a bill brought to have an inventory taken of the eſtate, and ſecurity given not to imbezil it. But if the ſame were of ſmall value, that the widow could not live thereupon, without ſpending the ſtock, it would be otherwiſe. Ibid. 71, 72. One by will gives to his wife, all his goods and furniture at ſuch a place; the goods that are there, at the time of his death ſhall paſs, though they were not there on making of the will; for the perſonal eſtate is fluctuating until the teſtator's death. 2 Vern. 688. Some hold, that where goods of a houſe or chamber are deviſed, there ought to be a particular inventory of them, to make thoſe paſs that were there when the will was made. See titles Fee-Eſtate and Tail.

Eſtoppel, (From the Fr. Eſtouper, i. e. Oppilare, obſtipare) Is an impediment or bar of an action ariſing from a man's own act: or where he is forbidden by law, to ſpeak againſt his own deed; for by his act or acceptance, he may be eſtopped to alledge or ſpeak the truth. F. N. B. 142. Co. Lit. 352. If a perſon is bound in an obligation by the name of A. B. and is afterwards ſued by that name on the obligation; now he ſhall not be received to ſay in abatement, that he is miſnamed but ſhall anſwer according to the obligation, though it be wrong; and foraſmuch as he is the ſame perſon that was bound, he is eſtopped and forbidden in law to ſay contrary to his own deed; otherwiſe he might take advantage of his own wrong, which the law will not ſuffer. Terms de Ley. If a man enters into a bond, with condition to give to another all the goods which are deviſed to him by the father; in this caſe the obligor is eſtopped to plead that the father made no will, but he may plead that he had not any goods deviſed to him by his father. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 751.

In a deed, all the parties are eſtopped to ſay any thing againſt what is contained in it: It eſtops a leſſee to ſay that the leſſor had nothing in the land, &c. And parties and privies are bound by eſtoppel. Lit. 58. Co. Lit. 352. 4 Rep. 53. None but privies and parties ſhall regularly have advantage by eſtoppels: But if a man makes a leaſe of part of a term whereby he is eſtopped; and after aſſign away the term, the aſſignee will be eſtopped alſo. 30 H. 6. 2. 4 Rep. 56. In eſtoppels, both parties muſt be eſtopped; and therefore, where an infant or feme covert makes a leaſe, they are not eſtopped to ſay that it is not their deed, becauſe they are not bound by it; and as to them it is void. Cro. Eliz. 36. And though eſtoppels conclude parties to deeds to ſay the truth; yet jurors are not concluded, who are ſworn ad veritatem de & ſuper præmiſſis dicendam: For they may find any thing that is out of the record; and are not eſtopped to find truth in a ſpecial verdict. 4 Rep. 53. Lut. 570.

An eſtoppel ſhall bind only the heir, who claims the right of him to whom the eſtoppel was. 8 Rep. 53. Acceptance of rent from a diſſeiſor by the diſſeiſee, may be an eſtoppel: And a widow accepting leſs than her thirds for dower, is an eſtoppel, &c. 2 Danv. Abr. 130, 671.

Our books mention three kinds of eſtoppel, viz. By matter of record, by matter in writing, and by matter in pais. Co. Lit. 352. If a feoffment be made to two, and their heirs, and the feoffor afterwards levies a fine to them, and the heirs of one of them; this will be an eſtoppel to the other to demand fee-ſimple according to the deed; for the fine ſhall enure as a releaſe. 6 Rep. 7, 44. Tenant in tail ſuffers a recovery, that his iſſue may avoid; he himſelf ſhall be eſtopped and concluded by it, and may not demand the land againſt his own recovery. 3 Rep. 3.

The taking of a leaſe by indenture of a man's own land, whereof he is ſeiſed in fee, is an eſtoppel to claim the fee during the term. Moor, ca. 323. And. 121. A leaſe is made to one man for eighty years, and then to another by deed indented for the ſame term, this ſecond leaſe may be good by way of eſtoppel: And if the firſt determine by ſurrender, forfeiture, &c. the ſecond leſſee ſhall have the land. Co. Rep. 155. If a leſſor at the time of making the leaſe hath nothing in the land, but after he gets it by purchaſe or diſcent, it is a good leaſe by eſtoppel. Dyer 256. Plowd. 344. Co. Lit. 47. A recital in a deed ſhall not eſtop a perſon, unleſs it be of a particular fact, or where it is material, when it may be an eſtoppel. Cro. Eliz. 362.

The lord, by deed indented, reciting that his tenant holds of him by ſuch ſervices, whereas he doth not, confirms to the tenant, ſaving his ſervices; it is no eſtoppel to the tenant. 35 H. 6. 33. Plowd. 130. If one make a deed by dureſs, of impriſonment, and when he is at large makes a defeaſance to it; he is eſtopped to ſay it was per dureſs. Bro. Defeaſ. 17. Where the condition of a bond is in the particularity, as to enfeoff J. S. of the manor of D .or to pay ſuch a ſum of money as he ſtands bound to pay to W. S. or to ſtand to the ſentence of J. S. in a matter of tithes in queſtion between them; here the party is eſtopped to deny any of theſe things, which in the condition he did grant: But if a condition be in the generality, to enfeoff one of all his lands in D. or to be non-ſuit in all actions, &c. it is no eſtoppel. Dyer 196. 18 Ed. 4. 54.

If a man in pleading confeſs the thing he is charged with, he cannot afterwards deny it: Though a plaintiff ſhall not be eſtopped to alledge any thing againſt that which before he hath ſaid in his writ, or declaration; and one may not be eſtopped by the record upon which he was non-ſuited. 21 H. 7. 24. 2 Leon. 3. 17.

An eſtoppel ought to be certain and affirmative, and a matter alledged that is not traverſable, ſhall not eſtop; one may not be eſtopped by acceptance, before his title accrued; an eſtoppel muſt be inſiſted and relied on; and where there is eſtoppel againſt eſtoppel, it puts the matter at large. Co. Lit. 352. Hob. 207. Eſtoppels are to be pleaded relying on the eſtoppel; without demanding judgment ſi actio, &c. 4 Rep. 53. See Black. Com. 2 V. 295, 308.

Eſtovers, (Fr. Eſtover, from the verb Eſtoffer) Signifies to ſupply with neceſſaries; and is generally uſed in the law for allowances of wood made to tenants, comprehending houſe-bote, hedge-bote, and plough-bote, for repairs, &c. And in ſome manors, the tenants pay a certain ſmall annual rent, for eſtovers out of the lord's woods. Weſtm. 2. c. 25. 20 Car. 2. c. 3. This word hath been taken for ſuſtenance; as Bracton uſes it, for that ſuſtenance or allowance, which a man committed for felony is to have out of his lands or goods for himſelf and his family during his impriſonment Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 18. And the Stat. 6 Ed. 1. cap. 3. applies it to an allowance in meat, clothes, &c. In which ſenſe it has been uſed for a wife's alimony. See Common of Eſtovers.

Eſtoveriis habendis, Writ de. A writ at Common law, for a woman divorced from her huſband, a menſa & thoro, to recover her alimony, ſometimes called her eſtovers. 1 Lev. 6. Black. Com. 1 V. 441.

Eſtray, (Extrabura, from the old Fr. Eſtrayeur) Is any beaſt that is not wild, found within a lordſhip, and owned by any man; pecus quod elapſum a cuſtode campos pererrat, ignoto domino: In which caſe if it be tried and proclaimed according to law in the two next market-towns on two market-days, and is not claimed by the owner within a year and a day, it belongs to the lord of the liberty. Brit. cap. 17. And ſwans may be eſtray, as well as beaſts, and are to be proclaimed, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 878. If the beaſt ſtray to another lordſhip within the year, after it hath been an eſtray, the firſt lord cannot retake it, for, until the year and day be paſt, and proclamation made as aforeſaid, he hath no property; and therefore the poſſeſſion of the ſecond lord is good againſt him. Wood's Inſt. 213. Cro. Eliz. 716. If the cattle were never proclaimed, the owner may take them at any time: And where a beaſt is proclaimed as the law directs, if the owner claims it in a year and a day, he ſhall have it again; but muſt pay the lord for keeping. 1 Rol. Abr. 879. Finch 177.

An owner may ſeize an eſtray, without telling the marks, or proving the property, (which may be done at the trial, if conteſted) and tendering amends generally is good in this caſe, without ſhewing the particular ſum; becauſe the owner of the eſtray is no wrong doer, and knows not how long it has been in the poſſeſſion of the lord, &c. which makes it different from treſpaſs, where a certain ſum muſt be tendered. 2 Salk. 686. In caſe of an eſtray the lord ought to make a demand of what the amends ſhould be for the keeping; and then if the party thinks the demand unreaſonable, he muſt tender ſufficient amends; but if what he tenders is not enough, the lord ſhall take iſſue, and it is to be ſettled by the jury. Noy 144. Trin. 5 Ann. A beaſt eſtray is not to be uſed in any manner, except in caſe of neceſſity; as to milk a cow, or the like, but not to ride an horſe. Cro. Jac. 148. 1 Rol. 673. Eſtrays of the Foreſt are mentioned in the ſtatute of 27 H. 8. cap. 7. The King's cattle cannot be eſtrays or forfeited, &c.

Eſtreat, (Extractum) Is uſed for the true copy or note of ſome original writing or record, and eſpecially of fines, amercements, &c. impoſed on the rolls of a court, to be levied by the bailiff or other officer. F. N. B. 57, 76. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 8. Juſtices, commiſſioners, &c. are to deliver their eſtreats into the Exchequer yearly after Michaelmas: And fines to have writs, which ſhall be entered in the eſtreat, in order as they are entered in the Chancery Rolls, &c. 51 H. 3. ſtat. 5. 16 Ed. 2. Theſe eſtreats relate to fines for crimes and offences, defaults and negligences of parties in ſuits and officers, non-appearance of defendants, and jurors, &c. And all forfeited recognizances are to be firſt eſtreated in the Exchequer, by ſheriffs of counties; on which proceſs iſſues to levy the ſame to the uſe of the King. Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 22.

Eſtreats are to be levied on the right perſons: And ſheriff's eſtreats muſt be in two parts, indented and ſealed by the ſheriff, and two juſtices of the peace; who are to view them, and one of them is to remain with the ſheriff, and the other with the juſtices. 11 H. 7. c. 15. The eſtreats of fines, at the quarter-ſeſſions, are to be made by the juſtices; and to be double, one whereof is to be delivered to the ſheriff by indenture. 14 R. 2. cap. 11. Fines, poſt-fines, forfeitures, &c. muſt be eſtreated into the Exchequer twice a year, on pain of 50*l.* And officers are to deliver in their returns of eſtreats upon oath. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 22. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24. It is the courſe of the court of B. R. to ſend the eſtreats twice a year into the Exchequer, viz. on the laſt day of the two iſſuable terms; but in extraordinary caſes there may be a rule to eſtreat them ſooner. 1 Salk. 45. Amercements are not uſually diſcharged on motion, and there ought to be a conſtat of the eſtreat; though the court may give leave to the ſheriff to compound them. Ibid. 54. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 207. See 3 Ed. 1. c. 45. 13 Ed. 1. c. 8. 27 Ed. 1. c. 2. 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. ſect. 12.

Eſtreciatus, Is a word ſignifying ſtreightened.—— Inquirendum eſt de viis Domini Regis eſtreciatis. R. Hoveden, p. 783.

Eſtrepe, (Fr. Eſtropier) To make ſpoil in lands to the damage of another, as of the reverſioner, &c.

Eſtrepement, (Eſtrepamentum) from the Fr. Eſtropier, mutilare, or from the Lat. Extirpare) Is where any ſpoil is made by tenant for life, upon any lands or woods, to the prejudice of him in reverſion; and alſo ſignifies to make land barren by continual ploughing. Stat. 6 Ed. 1. cap. 13. It ſeems by the derivation, that eſtrepement is the unreaſonable drawing away the heart of the ground, by ploughing and ſowing it continually, without manuring or other good huſbandry, whereby it is impaired: And yet eſtropier ſignifying mutilare, may no leſs be applied to the cutting down trees, or lopping them further than the law allows.

In ancient records, we often find veſtum & eſtrepamentum facere: And this word is uſed for a writ, which lies in two caſes; the one, when a perſon having an action depending, as a formedon, writ of right, &c. ſues to prohibit the tenant from making waſte, during the ſuit; the other is for the demandant, who is adjudged to recover ſeiſin of the land in queſtion, before execution ſued by the writ habere facias poſſeſſionem, to prevent waſte being made till he gets into poſſeſſion. Reg. Orig. 76. Reg. Judic. 33. F. N. B. 60, 61.

The writ of eſtrepement lies properly where the plaintiff in a real action, ſhall not recover damages by his action; and as it were ſupplies damages; for damages and coſts may be recovered for waſte, after the writ of eſtrepement is brought. See Moor 100. 2 Inſt. 328. If tenants commit waſte in houſes aſſigned a feme for dower, on her bringing action of dower, writ of eſtrepement lies. 5 Rep. 115. See Cro. Eliz. 114. Moor 622. But pending a writ of partition between coparceners, if the tenant commit waſte, this writ will not be granted; becauſe there is equal intereſt between the parties, and the writ will not lie, but where the intereſt of the tenant is to be diſproved. Goldſb. 50. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 754.

Writ of eſtrepement is directed to the tenant and his ſervants, or to the ſheriff: and if it be directed to the tenant and his ſervants, and they are duly ſerved with it, if they afterwards commit waſte, they may be committed to priſon: But it is ſaid not to be ſo, when directed to the ſheriff, becauſe he may raiſe the poſſe comitatus to reſiſt them who make waſte. Hob. 85. Though it hath been adjudged, that the ſheriff may likewiſe impriſon offenders, if he be put to it; and that he may make a warrant to others to do it. 5 Rep. 115. 2 Inſt. 329.

In the Chancery, on filing of a bill, and before anſwer, the court will grant an injunction to ſtay waſte, &c. 1 Lil. 547.

Etheling or Ætheling, (Sax.) Signifies noble, and among the Engliſh Saxons, it was the title of the Prince, or the King's eldeſt ſon. Cambden. See Adeling.

Evaſion, (Evaſio) Is a ſubtle endeavouring to ſet aſide truth, or to eſcape the puniſhment of the law; which will not be indured. If a perſon ſays to another that he will not ſtrike him, but will give him a pot of ale to ſtrike firſt; and accordingly he ſtrikes, the returning of it is puniſhable; and if the perſon firſt ſtriking be killed, is murder; for no man ſhall evade the juſtice of the law, by ſuch a pretence to cover his malice. 1 H. P. C. 81. No one may plead ignorance of the law to evade it, &c.

Evenings, The delivery at even or night of a certain portion of graſs or corn, &c. to a cuſtomary tenant, who performs the ſervice of cutting, mowing, or reaping for his lord, given him as a gratuity or encouragement. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Eveſdroppers, Are ſuch perſons as ſtand under the eves or walls, or windows of a houſe, by night or day, to hearken after news, and carry it to others, and thereby cauſe ſtriſe and contention in the neighbourhood. Terms de Ley. They are called evil members of the commonwealth; and by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. c. 33. they may be puniſhed, either in the court-leet by way of preſentment, and fine; or in the quarter-ſeſſions by indictment, and binding to good behaviour. Kitch. 11. See Eaveſdroppers.

Eviction, (From Evinco to overcome) Is a recovery of land, &c. by law. If land is evicted, before the time of payment of rent on a leaſe, no rent ſhall be paid by the leſſee. 10 Rep. 128. Where lands taken on extent are evicted or recovered by better title, the plaintiff ſhall have a new execution. 4 Rep. 66. If a widow is evicted of her dower or thirds, ſhe ſhall be endowed in the other lands of the heir. 2 Danv. Abr. 670. And if on an exchange of lands, either party is evicted of the lands given in exchange, he may enter on his own lands. 4 Rep. 121.

Evidence, (Evidentia) Is uſed in the law for ſome proof, by teſtimony of men on oath, or by writings or records. It is called evidence, becauſe thereby the point in iſſue in a cauſe to be tried, is to be made evident to the jury; for probationes debent eſſe evidentes & perſpicuæ. Co. Lit. 283. The evidence to a jury ought to be upon the oath of witneſſes; or upon matters of record, or by deeds proved, or other like authentical matter. 1 Lil. Abr. 547. And evidence containeth teſtimony of witneſſes, and all other proofs to be given and produced to a jury for the finding of any iſſue joined between parties. Co. Lit. 283. If the ſubſtance of an iſſue be proved it is ſufficient. Alcorn executor v. Weſtbrook. Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. p. 115.

The ſyſtem of evidence, as now eſtabliſhed in our courts of Common law, is very full, comprehenſive and refined. Far different from, and far ſuperior to any thing known in the middle ages;—as far ſuperior in that as in all other improvements and refinements in ſcience, arts, and manners.

The nature of evidence, during the age of ignorance was extremely imperfect, and the people were incapable of making any rational improvement. See this ſubject very judiciouſly treated, in Robert. Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 48, 49, &c. It was the imperfection of human reaſon, ſon, that cauſed the invention and introduction of the or-deal, as an appeal to the Supreme Being. The reader will readily excuſe the inſertion of the following paſſage from that author:

As men are unable to comprehend the manner in which the Almighty carries on the government of the univerſe, by equal, fixed, and general laws, they are apt to imagine that in every caſe which their paſſions or intereſt render important in their own eyes, the Supreme Ruler of all ought viſibly to diſplay his power, in vindicating innocence and puniſhing vice. It requires no inconſiderable degree of ſcience and philoſophy to correct this popular error. 1 V. 51.

But to proceed more immediately to our ſubject.

Under this head it is material to conſider the ſeveral kinds of evidence which may be divided into

I. Written evidence: Wherein of matters of record, as alſo of writings under ſeal, and other writings.
II. Unwritten evidence: Wherein—
1. Who may be witneſſes.
2. Of the number of witneſſes, and of compelling them to appear, as alſo of the manner of their giving evidence.
3. Of parol, preſumptive, and hear-ſay evidence.
4. Where depoſitions in another court may be given in evidence.

I. Of written evidence: Wherein of matters of record, as alſo of writings under ſeal, and other writings.

Evidence by records and writings, Is where acts of parliaments, ſtatutes, judgments, fines and recoveries, proceedings of courts, and deeds, &c. are admitted as evidence. A general act of parliament may be given in evidence; and need not be pleaded; and of theſe the printed ſtatute-book is good evidence: But in the caſe of a private act, a copy of it is to be examined by the records of parliament, and it is to be pleaded. Trials per pais 177, 232. The ſtatute of limitations muſt be pleaded. Journals and other proceedings in the Houſe of Commons have been held to be no evidence. State Trials, Vol. 3. 470. Though it is otherwiſe, Vol. 3. 800. A hiſtory of England, or printed trial, may not be read as evidence. 1 Lil. 557. Cambden's Britannia was not allowed as evidence: But it has been held, that an hiſtory may be evidence of the general hiſtory of the realm though not of a particular cuſtom, &c. Mich. 7 W. 3. B. R. Skinner's Rep. 623.

An exemplification of the inrolment of letters patent under the Great Seal, may be pleaded in evidence. 3 Inſt. 173. Records and inrolments prove themſelves; and a copy of a record or inrolments ſworn to, may be given in evidence. Co. Lit. 117, 262. A tranſcript of a record in another court, may be given in evidence to a jury. 1 Lil. Abr. 551. There is a difference between pleading a record, and giving the record in evidence; if it be pleaded, it muſt be ſub pede ſigilli, or the judges cannot judge thereof: Though where it is given in evidence, if it be not under the ſeal, the jury may find the ſame, if they have other good matter of inducement to prove it. Style's Rep. 22.

A fine or recovery may be given in evidence, without vouching the roll of the recovery; for the part indented is the uſual evidence that there is ſuch a fine: But it is ſaid the fine ought to be ſhewn with the proclamations under ſeal. 10 Rep. 92. 2 Rol. Abr. 574. A record of an inferior court, hath been rejected in evidence, and the party put to prove what was done: And proceedings of county courts, courts barons, &c. may be tried by a jury; for it hath been adjudged, that they cannot be proved by the rolls, but by witneſſes. Lit. 75. But court-rolls of a court baron, when ſhewn, are good evidence; and in many caſes, copies of the court-rolls are allowed as evidence. Trials per pais 178, 228.

Inrolment of a deed is proved on certifying it by an examined atteſted copy; though inrolment of a deed which needs no inrolment, or the eſtate doth not paſs by it, is only evidence to ſome purpoſes. 3 Lev. 387. An ancient deed proves itſelf, where poſſeſſion has gone accordingly: But later deeds muſt be proved by witneſſes. Co. Lit. 6. If all the witneſſes to a deed are dead, continual and quiet poſſeſſion is preſumptive evidence of the truth of it; yet it may receive farther credit by compariſon of hands and ſeals. Wood's Inſt. 599. When witneſſes to deeds are dead, their hand-writing muſt be proved. 2 Inſt. 118. And where there are ſeveral witneſſes to a deed, and they are all dead but one, a ſubpæna muſt be taken out againſt the living man, and ſtrict inquiry made after him, and affidavit is to be made that he cannot be found; before the dead men's hands are to be proved. 1 Lil. 556.

An old deed proved to have been found among deeds and evidences of lands, may be given in evidence to a jury; though the executing of it cannot be proved and made out. Trin. 9 W. 3. B. R. 3 Salk. 153. A deed may be good evidence, though the ſeal is broken off: And where a deed is burnt, &c. the judges may allow it to be proved by witneſſes, that there was ſuch a deed, and this be given in evidence. 1 Lev. 25. But the court will not allow the jury on a trial at bar to carry deeds, writings or books with them out of court, as evidence to conſider of, but ſuch as have been proved: Though by the aſſent of parties, or by aſſent of the court without the parties, they may be delivered to the jurors. Cro. Eliz. 421. All deeds or writings under ſeal, and given in evidence, they may have; and nothing which was not given in evidence, for the court gives their direction to the jury upon the evidence given in court. 1 Lil. 313.

It is dangerous to ſuffer any who by law ought to ſhew forth any deed, to prove in evidence, that there was ſuch a deed, which they had ſeen or read, &c. For there might be imperfections in the deed, or it may be on condition, with limitation, &c. 10 Rep. 92. A deed tho' ſealed and delivered, if not ſtamped according to act of parliament, cannot be pleaded or given in evidence in any court. Stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 21. A deed cannot be proved by a counterpart of it or copy, if the original is in being, and may be had; though it may be when the original cannot be procured. Co. Lit. 225. 10 Rep. 92. The counterpart of an ancient deed hath been allowed to be given in evidence. Mod. Caſ. 225. But it hath been held that the counterpart of a deed, without other circumſtances, is not ſufficient evidence; unleſs in a caſe of fine, when a counterpart is good evidence of itſelf. 1 Salk. 287.

Where a deed was cancelled by practice, that being proved, it was allowed to be evidence in an action under the deed. Hetl. 138. The recital of a deed is no evidence without ſhewing the deed; or proving that there was ſuch a deed, and it is loſt. Co. Lit. 352. Vaugh. 74. Recital of a leaſe, in a deed of releaſe, is good evidence that there was ſuch a leaſe againſt the releaſor, and thoſe claiming under him; but not againſt others, except there be proof that there was ſuch a leaſe. 1 Salk. 286. A ſettlement ſet forth in a bill in Chancery, and admitted in the anſwer; and where it was proved that the deed was in the poſſeſſion of ſuch a one, &c. hath been adjudged a good evidence of the deed of ſettlement where not to be found. 5 Mod: 384.

The probate of a will, when it concerns perſonal eſtate only, may be given in evidence: But where title of lands is claimed under a will, the will muſt be ſhewn, not the probate: Though if the will be proved in the Chancery, copies of the proceedings there will be evidence. 2 Rol. Abr. 678. Trials per pais 234. This I conceive muſt mean where the witneſſes are dead, or are abroad, or cannot be found, after due ſearch made. See 1 Salk. 286. and Raym. 335. A bill in Chancery has been admitted as ſlight evidence againſt the complainant: An anſwer in Chancery is evidence againſt the defendant himſelf, tho' not againſt others. 1 Vent. 66. Trials per pais 167. But when a party gives an anſwer in Chancery in evidence at a trial, though he inſiſt to read only ſuch a part of it; yet the other ſide may require to have the whole read. 5 Mod. 10. As in caſe of a writing permitted to be read to prove one part of an evidence, which may be read to prove any other part of the evidence given to the jury. Depoſitions of witneſſes in Chancery between the ſame parties, may be given in evidence at law, if the witneſſes are dead, and the bill and anſwer proved, Trials per pais 167, 207, 234.

Regularly depoſitions in Chancery, of a witneſs, may not be given in evidence, if he be alive; unleſs he be in another kingdom, not ſubject to the dominion of our King. Ibid. 359. But depoſitions in Chancery, after anſwer, between the ſame parties, may be read as evidence, though the witneſſes are not dead, if they cannot be found on ſearch. Shower 3. 1 Salk. 278. Depoſitions in Chancery in perpetuam rei memoriam, are not to be given in evidence, ſo long as the parties are living. 1 Salk. 286. And it hath been adjudged, that theſe depoſitions to perpetuate teſtimony, on a bill exhibited, ſhall not be admitted as evidence at a trial at law, except an anſwer be put in. Raym. 335. If depoſitions are taken out of the realm, he who makes them is ſuppoſed there ſtill, and they ſhall be read as evidence; but if it appears he is in England, they cannot be read, but he muſt come in perſon. 1 Lil 555. Things done beyond ſea may be given in evidence to a jury; and the teſtimony of a public notary of things done in a foreign country, will be good evidence. 6 Rep. 47.

Depoſitions in the eccleſiaſtical courts may not be given in evidence to a jury at a trial; but a ſentence may in a cauſe of tithes, &c. And the ſentence of the ſpiritual court is concluſive evidence in cauſes within their juriſdiction. 1 Salk. 290. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 761.

Depoſitions before a coroner are admitted as evidence, the witneſſes being dead. 1 Lev. 180. Likewiſe they have been admitted where a witneſs hath gone beyond ſea. 2 Nelſ Abr. 760. The confeſſion of a priſoner before a magiſtrate, &c. may be given in evidence againſt him: And the examination of an offender need not to be on oath, but muſt be ſubſcribed by him, if he confeſſes the fact; and then be given in evidence upon oath by the juſtice of the peace who took the ſame. The examination of others muſt be on oath, and proved by the juſtice, or his clerk, &c. as to their evidence, if they are dead, unable to travel, or kept away by the priſoner. H. P. C. 19, 162. Kel. 18, 55. Wood's Inſt. 647.

The examination of an informer before a juſtice, taken on oath, and ſubſcribed, may be given in evidence on a trial if he be dead, or not able to travel, &c. which is to be made out on oath. 2 H. P. C. 429. A verdict againſt one, under whom either the plaintiff or defendant claims, may be given in evidence againſt the party ſo claiming; but not if neither claim under it. Mich. 1656. B. R. In ejectment where the plaintiff hath title to ſeveral lands, and brings action of ejectment againſt ſeveral defendants, if he recovers againſt one, he ſhall not give that verdict in evidence againſt the reſt. 3 Mod. 141. In a court of common law, a decree in Chancery is no evidence: Affidavits are not evidence. Letters may be produced as evidence againſt a man, in treaſon, &c. Similitude of hands, ſworn to, has been allowed as evidence: But ſince the attainder of Algernoon Sidney, it hath not been admitted in any criminal caſe. 2 Hawk. 431. Although a witneſs ſwear to the hand and contents of a letter, if he never ſaw the party write, he ſhall not be allowed as evidence. Mich. 8 W. 3. Skin. 673.

Since no witneſſes are preſent when goldſmiths notes are given, ſuch notes are allowed as evidence of the receipt of money, or other thing. 1 Salk. 283. A ſhop-book is evidence; but it may not be given in evidence for goods ſold, &c. after one year, before the action brought; unleſs there be a bill, &c. for the debt; though this extends not to any buying or ſelling, or trading between tradeſmen and tradeſmen. Stat. 7 Jac. 1. c. 12. To make theſe books evidence, there ought to be the hand of the perſon to the books that delivered the goods, which muſt be proved. 1 Salk. 285. A church-book ſome writers ſay is not to be admitted as evidence; tho' others ſay it may. Cro. Eliz. 411. It is ſaid copies of public books of corporations, &c. ſhall be evidence. 1 Lev. 25. 1 Lil. 551. But as to books of corporations where things are entered not of record, the originals are to be produced as evidence.

A pedigree drawn by a herald at arms, will not be admitted for evidence, without ſhewing the records or ancient books from whence taken; for the entries in the herald's office are no records, but only circumſtantial evidence: But a copy of an inſcription on a grave-ſtone, has been given in evidence in ſuch a caſe. 2 Rol. Abr. 686, 687. An almanack wherein the father had writ the day of the nativity of his ſon, was allowed an evidence to prove the nonage of the ſon. Raym. 84.

Matter in law ought not to be given in evidence at a trial, but only matters of fact, unleſs it be in caſe of a ſpecial verdict; matter in law is diſputable, and reſerved to be ſpoken to in arreſt of judgment. Vaugh. 143, 147. In debt the defendant may give in evidence, that he paid money on an obligation before the day, &c. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 755. And a releaſe may be given in evidence on nil debet. 5 Mod. 18. Though in indebitatus aſſumpſit the plaintiff ſhall not give any ſpecialty in evidence to prove his debt, as a bond, indenture, &c. becauſe he may bring action of debt upon that ſpecialty. Moor 340.

Entry and expulſion may be given in evidence in debt for rent: Coverture may be given in evidence to avoid a deed, &c. Mod. Caſ. 230. Uſurious contracts, &c. may be given in evidence. 2 Nelſ. 756. Fraud may be given in evidence, on the general iſſue: And tampering with witneſſes may be given in evidence againſt a party, &c. 5 Rep. 60. But many things are to be pleaded; as juſtifications without title, in treſpaſs, &c. and cannot be given in evidence upon Not guilty. Trials per pais 404. If in treſpaſs, Not guilty be pleaded; a licence may not be given in evidence to excuſe the treſpaſſor; for it muſt be pleaded. Kel. 59. And if the iſſue in detinue is non detinet, it ſhall not be given in evidence that the goods were pledged for money, and the money not paid; this is not good without pleading it: But a gift of the goods by the plaintiff may be given in evidence. Co. Lit. 283. But in an action of trover, for goods, evidence that they were pledged, for money lent or owing, and the money not being paid, or tendered, is a good bar to the action. Garnett Adm. & Cox. before Lord Mansfield, at the ſummer aſſize, for Surry, 1775: and admitted to be law.

So in an iſſue in waſte, no waſte done, the defendant may give in evidence, that it came by lightning, tempeſt, or enemies; but that he repaired before action brought, muſt be ſpecially pleaded, &c. Ibid. 282. If an iſſue be taken on the cutting of twenty oaks, evidence may be for ten; becauſe either is a breach of covenant not to do waſte. 2 Shep. Abr. 142. In ejectione firmæ, the plaintiff declares for 100 acres of land, and gives evidence only for forty, it will be good for ſo much. Cro. Eliz. 13. But if the point in iſſue be the ſealing and delivery of a leaſe, and the witneſſes prove ſealed and delivered, but did not know the leſſor that ſealed it: Or where proof is not made of livery and ſeiſin, on iſſue of a leaſe for life: Or if on an iſſue upon a taking by capias ad ſatisfaciend. Evidence be of taking by capias utlagatum, &c. in theſe caſes the evidence will not be good to maintain the iſſue. II. As to unwritten evidence, we are under this head to conſider,

1. Who may be witneſſes: Wherein it is to be obſerved, That the King cannot be a witneſs under his ſign manual, &c. 2 Rol. Abr. 686. Though it has been allowed he may, in relation to a promiſe made in behalf of another. Hob. 213. A peer produced as an evidence, ought to be ſworn. 3 Keb. 631. It is no exception to an evidence, that he is a judge, or a juror, to try the perſon; for a judge may give evidence going off from the Bench. 2 Hawk. P. C. 432. And a juror may be an evidence as to his particular knowledge; but then it muſt be on examination in open court, not before his brother juorrs. 1 Lil. 552. Members of corporations ſhall be admitted or refuſed to give evidence in actions brought by corporations as their intereſt is ſmall or great; whereby it may be judged whether they will be partial or not. 2 Lev. 231, 241. But they will not generally be admitted; though inhabitants not free of the corporation may be good witneſſes for the corporation, as their intereſt is not concerned; and members may be diſfranchiſed on theſe occaſions. Ibid. 236.

In actions againſt church-wardens and overſeers of the poor for recovery of money miſpent on the pariſh account, the evidence of the pariſhioners, not receiving alms, ſhall be allowed. Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 11. And in informations or indictments for not repairing highways and bridges, the evidence of the inhabitants of the town, corporation, &c. Where ſuch highways lie ſhall be admitted. 1 Ann. cap. 18. A party intereſted in the ſuit; or a wife for or againſt her huſband, a huſband againſt the wife, (except in caſes of treaſon) may not be witneſſes. 4 Inſt. 279.

By Stat. 21 Jac. 19. ſect. 6. "The commiſſioners ſhall have power to examine the wife of a bankrupt upon oath for the diſcovery of his eſtate, goods and chattels, and ſuch wife refuſing to appear, or to anſwer interrogatories, ſhall incur the ſame penalties as are provided againſt other perſons in the like caſes."

Kinſmen, though never ſo near, tenants, ſervants, maſters, attornies for their clients, and all others that are not infamous, and which want not underſtanding, or are not parties in intereſt, may give evidence in a cauſe; though the credit of ſervants is left to the jury. 2 Rol. Abr. 685. 1 Vent. 243. A counſellor, attorney, or ſolicitor, is not to be examined as an evidence againſt their clients, becauſe they are obliged to keep their ſecrets; but they may be examined, as to any thing of their own knowledge before retained, not as counſel or attorney, &c. 1 Vent. 97.

The bail cannot be an evidence for his principal. If the plaintiff makes one a defendant in the ſuit, on purpoſe to impeach his teſtimony, under a pretence of his being a party in intereſt, he may nevertheleſs be examined de bene eſſe; and if the plaintiff prove no cauſe of action againſt him, his evidence ſhall be allowed in the cauſe. 2 Lil. Abr. 701. But in civil ſuits, and indictments for treſpaſſes, &c. the plaintiff or proſecutor uſually goes through his evidence, and thoſe defendants who are not affected are ſometimes, by direction of the judge, acquitted, and then give evidence for the other defendant or defendants, and ſometimes they have been examined, without the form of an acquittal. If a man makes himſelf a party in intereſt, after a plaintiff or defendant has an intereſt in his evidence, he may not by this deprive them of the benefit of his teſtimony. Skin. Rep. 586.

One that hath a legacy given him by will, is not a good witneſs to prove the will; but if he releaſe his legacy, he may be a good evidence. Ibid. 704. It is the ſame of a deed; he that claims any benefit by it, may not be an evidence to prove that deed, in regard of his intereſt: And a perſon any ways concerned in the ſame title of land in queſtion, will not be admitted as evidence. Ibid. 705. But it has been held, that an heir apparent may be a witneſs concerning a title of land; and yet a remainder-man, who hath a preſent intereſt, cannot. 1 Salk. 385. If a legatee is permitted to be ſworn and examined, the counſel cannot afterwards except againſt his evidence. 1 Ld. Raym. 730.

Creditors, &c. are made competent witneſſes to wills, by Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 6. and witneſſes competent at law, are competent to prove a nuncupative will by Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſ. 14. See thoſe two ſtatutes. The ſon of a legatee, is no witneſs to a will in the ſpiritual court; nevertheleſs it is held, he may be a good evidence to prove a nuncupative will, within the intent of the ſtatute of frauds. 1 L. Ray. 85.

A grantee who is a bare truſtee, it is ſaid, is a good witneſs to prove the execution of the deed made to himſelf. 1 P. Wil. 290. If an action is brought againſt many perſons for taking of goods, one of them concerned may be admitted as an evidence againſt the reſt, Comberb. 367. See 1 Mod. 282. In criminal caſes, as of robbery on the highway, in action againſt the hundred; in rapes of women, or where a woman is married by force, &c. a man or a woman may be an evidence in their own cauſe. 1 Vent. 243. And in private enormous cheats, a perſon may give evidence in his own cauſe, where no body elſe can be a witneſs of the circumſtances of the fact, but he that ſuffers. 1 Salk. 286. Upon an information on the ſtatute againſt uſury, he that borrows the money, after he hath paid it, may be an evidence; but not before. Raym. 191.

An alien infidel, may not be an evidence; but a Jew may, and be ſworn on the Old Teſtament. 1 Inſt. 6. A quaker ſhall not be permitted to give evidence in any criminal cauſe, (unleſs he will take an oath): Though on other occaſions, his ſolemn affirmation ſhall be accepted inſtead of an oath. Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 34. Perſons non ſanæ memoriæ; thoſe that are attainted of conſpiracy, or in a præmunire upon the ſtatute 5 Eliz. c. 1. Popiſh recuſants convict, on the Stat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. are diſabled to give evidence. So perſons convicted of felony, perjury, &c. And if one by judgment hath ſtood on the pillory, or been whipped; for his infamy he ſhall not be admitted to give evidence, whilſt the judgment is in force: But the record of conviction muſt be produced, on objecting againſt his teſtimony; and the witneſs ſhall not be aſked any queſtion to accuſe himſelf, though his credit may be impeached by other evidences, as to his character in general, ſo as not to make proof of particular crimes, whereof he hath not been convicted. 3 Inſt. 108, 219. 3 Lev. 426. If after a man hath ſtood in the pillory, &c. he be pardoned, he may be an evidence: And notwithſtanding judgment of the pillory infers infamy at common law; by the civil and canon law it imports no infamy, unleſs the cauſe for which the perſon was convicted was infamous; and therefore ſuch may be a good witneſs to a will, if not convicted of any infamous act. 3 Lev. 426, 427. It has been held, that it is not ſtanding in the pillory, diſables a perſon to give evidence; but ſtanding there upon a judgment for an infamous crime, as forgery, &c. If for a libel, a man may be witneſs. 5 Mod. 74. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 557.

A man is convicted of felony, and afterwards pardoned, he may be a good evidence. Raym. 369. So where burnt in the hand, which is quaſi a ſtatute pardon; and it is ſaid it is burning in the hand reſtores the offender to his credit. Ibid. 330. A perſon who was condemned to be hanged for burglary, but having a pardon for tranſportation, hath been allowed to be a good evidence. 5 Mod. 18. One outlawed for treaſon and pardoned, may be an evidence. State Trials, Vol. 3. 515. Perſons acquitted, or guilty of the ſame crime, (while they remain unconvicted) may be evidence againſt their fellows. Kel. 17. Though no evidence ought to be given of what an accomplice hath ſaid, who is not in the ſame indictment. State Trials, Vol. 2. 414. An informer may be a witneſs, though he is to have part of the forfeiture, where no other witneſſes can be had. Wood's Inſt. 598. Members of either Houſe of Parliament may be witneſſes on impeachments. State Trials, Vol. 2. 632.

2. As to the number of witneſſes.

The Common law required no certain number of witneſſes, though they are required by ſtatute in ſome caſes: The teſtimony of one ſingle evidence is ſufficient for the King in all cauſes, except for treaſon; where there muſt be two witneſſes to the ſame overt-act, &c.

There muſt be one witneſs to one, and another witneſs to another overt-act of the ſame ſpecies of treaſon, or at leaſt one witneſs to an overt-act, and another to a material circumſtance to prove it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 428. In all other criminal matters, one evidence is ſufficient. 3 Inſt. 20. Mich. 23 Car. B. R. Stat. 7 W. 3. cap. 3.

It is required by the 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. "That all deviſes of lands ſhall be atteſted and ſubſcribed in the preſence of the teſtator, by three or four credible witneſſes, or elſe ſhall be void."

With reſpect to the compelling witneſſes to appear.

If a witneſs ſerved with proceſs in a civil cauſe refuſe to appear, being tendered reaſonable charges, and having no lawful excuſe, action on the caſe lies againſt him, whereon damages ſhall be recovered: And a feme covert not appearing, action may be brought againſt the huſband and her. Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 9. 1 Leon. 112.

If there is a doubt that a witneſs will not attend, the beſt way is to ſerve him with the original ſubpœna, keeping a copy, and, if he is at any diſtance from the place of trial, tender reaſonable charges: If he does not appear at the trial, call him three times on his ſubpœna, and then, if occaſion requires, the party may bring his action, or move for an attachment.

In a criminal cauſe, if a witneſs refuſe to appear and give evidence, being ſerved with proceſs, the court will put off the trial, and grant attachment againſt him; and, as refuſing to give evidence is a great contempt, the party may be committed and fined. 1 Salk. 278.

Preventing evidence to be given againſt a criminal, is puniſhable by fine and impriſonment; and a perſon was fined one thouſand marks in ſuch a caſe. Hill. 1663. B. R. Perſons diſſuading a witneſs from giving evidence, &c. And jurors or others diſcloſing evidence given, are likewiſe offences puniſhed by fine and impriſonment. 1 Hawk. 59.

In regard to the manner of their giving evidence.

Where neceſſity requires, witneſſes may be examined apart in court, till they have given all they have to ſay in evidence; ſo that what one has depoſed, may not induce another to give his evidence to the ſame effect. Forteſc. 54.

A witneſs ſhall not be examined where his evidence tends to clear or accuſe himſelf of a crime. State Trials, Vol. 1. 557. And a witneſs ſhall not be croſs examined till he hath gone through the evidence on the ſide whereon produced. Ibid. Vol. 2. 772. The court in criminal caſes, is to examine the witneſſes, and not the priſoner or proſecutors. Ibid. Vol. 1. 143. Though in caſe of the court, counſel are frequently admitted to examine the evidence. An evidence ſhall not be permitted to read his evidence, but he he may look on his notes to refreſh his memory. Ibid. Vol. 4. 45. An evidence may not recite his evidence to the jury, after gone from the bar, and he hath given his evidence in court; if he doth, the verdict may be ſet aſide. Cro. Eliz. 159. One that is to be an evidence at a trial, ought not to be examined before the trial, but by the conſent of both parties, and a rule of court for that purpoſe.

No evidence ought to be produced againſt a man in a trial for his life, but what is given in his preſence. State Trials, Vol. 4. 227. And evidence ſhall not be given againſt the priſoner for any other crime than that for which proſecuted. Ibid. Vol. 3. 947. A priſoner may bring evidence to prove that the witneſſes gave a different teſtimony before a juſtice of peace, or at another trial: though he may not call witneſſes to diſprove what his own evidence have ſworn. Ibid. Vol. 2. 623, 792. And no objection can be made to the evidence after verdict given. Vol. 4. 35. It is juſtifiable to maintain or ſubſiſt an evidence, but not to give him any reward; for this, if proved, will avoid his teſtimony. Ibid. Vol. 2. 470.

A witneſs ſhall not be examined to any thing that does not relate to the matter in iſſue. Ibid. Vol. 2. 343. And where an iſſue is not perfect, no evidence can be applied, nor can the juſtices proceed to trial. Brownl. 42, 47, 435. If evidence doth not warrant and maintain the ſame thing that is in iſſue, the evidence is defective, and may be demurred upon; but proving the ſubſtance is ſufficient. Trials per Pais 425. Evidence may be given of facts before and after the time they are laid in the indictment. And where a place is laid only for a venue in an indictment, or an appeal, (and not made part of the deſcription of the fact) proof of the ſame crime may be made at any other place in the ſame county; and after a crime hath been proved in the county where laid, evidence may be given of other inſtances of the ſame crime, in another county, to ſatisfy the jury. 2 Hawk. P. C. 436.

But where a certain place is made part of the deſcription of the fact againſt the defendant, the leaſt variation as to ſuch place between the evidence and indictment is fatal. Ibid. 435. It hath been alſo adjudged, that where an indictment ſets forth all the ſpecial matter, in reſpect whereof the law implies malice, variance between the indictment and evidence as to the circumſtances of the fact, doth not hurt; ſo that the ſubſtance of the matter be found by the evidence. 2 Hawk. 438. An evidence againſt the King in treaſon, or felony, for the criminal, was not to be examined on oath by the Comman law: but by ſtatute, witneſſes for a priſoner are to be ſworn, as in caſe for the King, and proceſs for their appearance is to be taken out. 3 Inſt. 79. Stat. 7 W. 3. 1 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 9.

The burthen of proving lies on the plaintiff; and the preſumption ſhall ſtand, until the contrary appear: though that which plainly appeareth, need not be given in evidence. 7 Rep. 40. Co. Lit. 233. The defendant's counſel is to conclude by way of anſwer to the evidence given to the jury by the plaintiff's: but he who doth begin to maintain the iſſue to be tried, ought to conclude and ſum up the evidence given, which is no more than to put the jury in mind how he hath proved his cauſe. 1 Lill. 551. When a witneſs hath been fully examined by the party producing him, and croſs examined by counſel for the adverſe party, the court will ſometimes aſk a queſtion or two of the witneſs, when the jury may put any queſtions they think proper to the judge, for him to put to the witneſs, after which counſel on either ſide cannot aſk a ſingle queſtion of the witneſs, without leave of the court; and in fact, the uſual method is to pray the court, if not improper, to aſk ſuch a queſtion, or to examine to ſuch a fact, &c. which may have dropped from the witneſs, after both council had finiſhed their examination of him. If it is proper and neceſſary, the court will do it, otherwiſe not.

3. Of parol, preſumptive, and hear-ſay evidence.

It ſeems to have been agreed, as a general rule, (even before the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries) that no parol evidence could be admitted to controul what appeared on the face of a deed or will, not only from the danger of perjury, but from a preſumption, that whatſoever the parties at that time had in contemplation, was reduced into writing. 5 Co. 68. a. b. 8 Co. 155. a. Kelw. 49.

But this rule has received a relaxation, eſpecially in the courts of equity, where a diſtinction has been taken between evidence, that may be offered to a jury, and to inform the conſcience of the court; viz. that in the firſt caſe no ſuch evidence ſhould be admitted; becauſe the jury might be inveigled thereby; but that in the ſecond it could do no hurt, becauſe the court were judges of the whole matter, and could diſtinguiſh what weight and ſtreſs ought to be laid on ſuch evidence. 2 Vern. 98, 337, 625.

Alſo to aſcertain a fact, parol evidence hath been admitted to explain the intent of the teſtator; as where the teſtator had two ſons both named John, and he deviſed lands to his ſon John; here parol evidence was admitted, to ſhew which of his ſons he meant; and it being proved, that one of his ſons of that name had been abſent ſeveral years beyond ſea, and that the teſtator apprehended that he was dead, the deviſe was held good, and that the other ſhould take; for without ſuch evidence the will muſt be void. 2 Vern. 98, 337, 625.

Parol evidence to prove that a bond was given, in lieu of dower, refuſed. Finney v. Finney, in Chanc. Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. fo. 34. parol proof admitted that the teſtator intended his wife executrix ſhould have the reſidue undiſpoſed of. Id. Lake v. Lake in Chanc. fo. 313. Debt upon bond with condition for payment of money to Lydia Dovey, who is a third perſon, ſhe declares the defendant owes her nothing, and upon proof thereof, a verdict was for the defendant; ſuch declaration was properly given in evidence, for Lydia Dovey is to be conſidered as the real plaintiff. Id. Hanſon v. Parker, fo 257.

As to preſumptive proof.

Sometimes violent preſumption will be admitted for evidence without witneſſes; as where a perſon is run thro' the body in a houſe, and one is ſeen to come out of the houſe with a bloody ſword, &c. But on this the court ought not to judge haſtily. 1 Inſt. 6, 673. And tho' preſumptive and circumſtantial evidence may be ſufficient in felony, is not ſo in treaſon. State Trials, Vol. 4. p. 307.

Perſons once in being ſhall be intended ſtill living, if the contrary is not proved. 2 Rol. Rep. 461. But now by Stat. 19 Car. 2. c. 6. it is enacted, "That if any perſon or perſons, for whoſe life or lives eſtates have been, or ſhall be granted, ſhall remain beyond the ſeas, or elſewhere abſent themſelves in this realm, by the ſpace of ſeven years together, and no ſufficient and evident proof made of the life or lives of ſuch perſon or perſons reſpectively, in any action commenced for the recovery of ſuch tenements by the leſſors or reverſioners, in every ſuch caſe the perſon or perſons, upon whoſe life or lives ſuch eſtate depended, ſhall be accounted as naturally dead; and in every action brought for the recovery of the ſaid tenements, by the leſſors or reverſioners, their heirs or aſſigns, the judges, before whom ſuch action ſhall be brought, ſhall direct the jury to give their verdict, as if the perſon ſo remaining beyond the ſeas, or otherwiſe abſenting himſelf, were dead." But the ſtatute contains a proviſo for thoſe who are evicted, and not actually dead, at the time of the eviction, on due proof, &c. to re-enter, &c.

By the Stat 21 Jac. 1. cap. 27. it is enacted, "That if any woman be delivered of an iſſue, which being born alive ſhould, by the laws of this realm, be a baſtard, and endeavour privately, either by drowning or ſecret burying, or any other way, either by herſelf, or the procuring of others ſo to conceal the death thereof, as that it may not come to light, whether it were born alive or not, but be concealed; in every ſuch caſe, the mother ſo offending ſhall ſuffer death, as in caſe of murder, unleſs ſhe can prove by one witneſs at leaſt, that ſuch child was born dead."

As to hearſay evidence, it ſeems agreed, that what another has been heard to ſay, is no evidence, becauſe the party was not on oath; alſo, becauſe the party, who is affected thereby, had not an opportunity of croſs-examining; but ſuch ſpeeches or diſcourſes may be made uſe of by way of inducement or illuſtration of what is properly evidence. 1 Mod, 383. Skin. 402.

Alſo what a witneſs hath been heard to ſay at another time, may be given in evidence, in order either to invalidate or confirm the teſtimony he gives in court. 2 Hawk. P. C. 431.

So what a perſon accuſed of a crime hath been heard to ſay at another time, may be given in evidence at his trial, for or againſt him. 2 Hawk. P. C. 431.

A witneſs by hearſay of a ſtranger ſhall not be allowed, except perhaps to confirm the evidence of a witneſs that ſpoke of his knowledge. Wood's Inſt. 644.

But in matters of preſcription, ancient rights, &c. the declarations of very old people that are dead, may be given in evidence.

4. Where depoſitions in another court may be given in evidence.

If a perſon who gave evidence in a former trial, be dead; upon proof of his death, any perſon who heard him give evidence, may be admitted to give the ſame evidence between the ſame parties; but a copy of the record of the trial when the evidence was given ought to be produced. 3 Inſt. 2 Lill. Abr. 705.

And evidence given at one trial in criminal caſes, has been held not to be evidence at another's trial. State Trials, Vol. 2. 863. Though that was over-ruled in the caſe of Sir John Fenwick, on a bill of attainder. See title Bill of Attainder, and Chandler's Debates in the Houſe of Commons, 3 V. 30, &c. Debates in the Houſe of Lords, 1 V. 463, &c.

Depoſitions cannot be given in evidence againſt any perſon who was not party to the ſuit; and the reaſon is, becauſe he had not liberty to croſs-examine the witneſſes; and it is againſt natural juſtice that a man ſhould be concluded in a cauſe to which he never was a party. Hardr. 22, 472. Bunb. 50. pl. 84.—91. pl. 148.—321. pl. 403. 9 Mod. 229. Carth. 181. Vern. 113. *Gilb. Examiners in the Chancery, (examinatores) Are two officers of that court, who examine upon oath, witneſſes produced by either ſide, in London, or near it, on ſuch interrogatories as the parties to any ſuit exhibit for that purpoſe: and ſometimes the parties themſelves are, by particular order, likewiſe examined by them. In the country, witneſſes are examined by commiſſioners, (uſually attornies not concerned in the cauſe) on the parties joining in commiſſion, &c.

Exception, (exceptio) Is a ſtop or ſtay to an action; and divided into dilatory and peremptory. Bract. lib. 5. tract. 5. In law proceedings, it is a denial of a matter alledged in bar to the action: and in Chancery it is what is alledged againſt the ſufficiency of an anſwer, &c. The counſel in a cauſe are to take all their exceptions to the record at one time; and before the court hath delivered any opinion thereon. 1 *Lil. And when a pardon is with an exception as to perſons, the party who pleads it ought to ſhew, that he is not any of the parties excepted. 1 Lev. 26. A negative expreſſion may be taken to enure to the ſame intent as an exception; for an exception in its nature is but a denial of what is taken to be good by the other party, either in point of law or pleading. And exceptio in non exceptis ſirmat regulam. 1 Lill. 559.

Exception to Evidence, &c. See Bill of Exceptions.

Exception in Deeds and Writings, Keeps the things from paſſing thereby, being a ſaving out of the deed, as if the ſame had not been granted: but it is to be a particular thing out of a general one, as a room out of an houſe, a ground out of a manor, timber out of land, &c. And it muſt not be of a thing expreſly granted in a deed: alſo it muſt be of what is ſeverable from, and not inſeparably incident to, the grant. Co. Lit. 47. 1 Lev. 287. Cro. El. 244.

Where an exception goeth to the whole thing granted or demiſed, the exception is void. Cro. El. 6. A man makes a leaſe of a manor, excepting all courts, &c. the exception is void as to the courts; for having leaſed the manor, it cannot be ſuch without courts. Hob. 108. Moor 870. A leaſe was made of all a man's lands in L. excepting his manor of H. and he had no lands in L. but the ſaid manor; it was adjudged that the manor paſſed, and that the exception was void. Hob. 170. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 764. A leaſe of an houſe and ſhops, except the ſhops; though this may extend to other ſhops, it is void as to the ſhops belonging to the houſe demiſed, becauſe it is repugnant to the leaſe. Dyer 265.

If an exception croſſes the grant, or is repugnant to it, the ſame is void: and if there be a ſaving or exception out of an exception, it may make a particular thing as if never excepted; as if a leaſe be made of a rectory, excepting the parſonage-houſe, ſaving to the leſſee a chamber; this chamber not being excepted out of the leaſe, ſhall paſs by the leaſe of the rectory. Hob. 72. 170. Cro. El. 372. Owen 20.

By exception of trees, the ſoil is not excepted, but only ſufficient nutriment for the trees: for the leſſee ſhall have the paſture growing under them, though the leſſor ſhall have all the benefit of the trees, maſt, fruit, &c. and the trees are parcel of the inheritance. 5 Rep. 11. 11 Rep. 48, 50. But it has been adjudged, that, by an exception of woods, underwood and coppices, the ſoil of the coppices is excepted. Poph. 146. Cro. Jac. 487. If a leſſee for years aſſign over his term, excepting the trees, &c. the exception is not good; becauſe no one can have a ſpecial property in the trees, but the owner of the land. 2 Nelſ. 764. Tho' where leſſee for life makes a leaſe for years excepting the wood, &c. this may be a good exception, although he hath not any intereſt in it but as leſſee, in regard he is chargeable in waſte, &c. and hath not granted his whole term. Cro. Jac. 296. 1 Lill. Abr. 560. Theſe exceptions are commonly in leaſes for life and years; and muſt be always of a thing in eſſe. Co. Lit. 47.

Exchange, (excambium or cambium) Signifies generally as much as permutatio with the Civilians; as the King's exchange, which is the place appointed by the King for exchange of plate or bullion for the King's coin, &c. Theſe places have been divers heretofore; but now there is only one, viz. the Mint in the Tower. Stat. H. 6. c. 4. See 9 Ed. 3. c. 7. 25 Ed. 3. c. 12. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 19.

There is a Royal Exchange of Merchants in London, and exchange among merchants is a commerce of money, or a bartering or exchanging of the money of one city or country for that of another: money in this ſenſe, is either real or imaginary; real, any real ſpecies current in any country at a certain price, at which it paſſes by the authority of the ſtate, and of its own intrinſic value: and by imaginary money, is underſtood all the denominations made uſe of to expreſs any ſum of money, which is not the juſt value of any real ſpecies. Lex Mercatoria, or Merch. Comp. 98.

The methods of exchange for money uſed in England ought to be par pro pari, according to value for value: and our exchange is grounded on the weight and fineneſs of our own money, and the weight and fineneſs of that of other countries, according to their ſeveral ſtandards, proportionable in their valuation; which being truly and juſtly made, reduces the price of the exchange of money of any nation or country to a certainty. But this courſe of exchange is of late abuſed, and money is become a merchandiſe, that riſes and falls in its price in regard to the plenty and ſcarcity of it. Ibid. At London, all exchanges are made upon the pound ſterling of 20 s. In the Low Countries, France and Germany, upon the French crown; Spain and Italy, &c. upon the ducat; and at Florence, Venice, and other places in the Streights, by the dollar and florin. See Bill of Exchange, and Lex Mercatoria.

Exchanges of Goods and Merchandiſe, Were the original and natural way of commerce, precedent to buying; for there was no buying till money was invented; though in exchanging, both parties are as buyers and ſellers, and both equally warrant. 3 Salk. 157.

Exchange of Lands, Is a mutual grant of equal intereſt in lands or tenements, the one in exchange for the other: and is uſed peculiarly in our Common law for that compenſation which the warrantor muſt make to the warrantee, value for value, if the land warranted be recovered from the warrantee. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 16. Accomp. Conv. 1 Vol. 170. Alſo there is a tacit condition of re-entry in this deed, on the lands given in exchange, in caſe of eviction; and on the warranty to vouch and recover over in value, &c. For if either of the parties is evicted, even of a part, the exchange is defeated. 4 Rep. 121. Cro. Eliz. 903.

An exchange may be made of lands in fee-ſimple, fee-tail for life, &c. The eſtates granted are to be equal, as fee-ſimple for fee-ſimple, &c. tho' the lands need not be of equal value, or of the like nature: for a rent in fee iſſuing out of land, may be exchanged for land in fee; Lit. 63, 64. Co. Lit. 50, 51. If an exchange be made between tenant for life, and tenant in tail after poſſibility of iſſue extinct, the exchange is good; becauſe their eſtates are equal. 11 Rep. 80. Moor 665.

An exchange made between tenant in tail, and another, of unequal intereſt, may be good during his life; but his iſſue, when of full age, ſhall avoid it. And exchanges made by infants; by perſons non ſanæ memoriæ; a huſband of the wife's lands, &c. are not void, but voidable only, by the infant at his full age, the heir of the perſon non ſanæ memoriæ, and the feme after the death of the huſband, who may waive the poſſeſſion and diſagree to them. Perk. Sect. 277, 281.

Jointenants and tenants in common, after they have made partition, may exchange their lands: and by this deed, freeholds paſs without livery and ſeiſin; but the word exchange is to be uſed, and there muſt be execution of the exchange, by entry on the lands in the life of the parties, or the exchange will be void. Co. Lit. 50. 1 Mod. 91.

Sometimes lands intended to paſs by exchange, not having the qualities and incidents of exchanged lands, may paſs by way of gift or grant: as if two perſons are ſeiſed of two acres of land, and one of them by deed gives his acre to the other, and the other his acre to him, and each of them gives livery of ſeiſin upon his acre given in exchange; here the acres will paſs from one to the other, but not in a way of exchange, becauſe there was no word of exchange in the deed. Lit. Sect. 62. Perk. 253.

A man grants to another lands in fee-ſimple, for lands in tail by way of exchange; or land in tail, for lands for life, &c. theſe deeds will not take effect as exchanges. Fitz. Exchange 15, 64. Co. Lit. 64. If tenant in tail give his land in exchange, for other land of the ſame eſtate-tail, the iſſue in tail may make it good if he will, or avoid the exchange. 1 Rep. 96. A feoffment is made to A. and B. and the heirs of A. and they exchange the land for other lands; this will be good, and they ſhall hold the lands in the ſame nature that the land given in exchange was held. Perk. Sect. 277.

If a lord releaſe to the tenant his ſervices in tail, in exchange of land given to the lord in exchange in tail alſo, it is ill: but if leſſee for life of one acre, give another acre to his leſſor in tail, in exchange for a releaſe from him of that acre, habendum in tail in like manner, it is a good exchange. Ibid. 219, 276, 283. In caſe two perſons make an exchange of land, and limit no eſtate; each ſhall have an eſtate for life, by implication: but if an expreſs eſtate be limited to one for life, and none to the other, it will be void. 19 H. 6. 27. And to make a good exchange, both the things muſt be in eſſe at the time of the exchange. Co. Lit. 50. 3 Ed. 4. 10.

But an exchange may be made to take effect in futuro, as well as preſently; for if it be, that after the feaſt of Eaſter A. B. ſhall have ſuch lands in D. in exchange for his lands in S. this is good. Perk. Sect. 265.

By a ſpecial kind of agreement, an exchange may be of unequal eſtates. Moor, c. 209. The condition and warranty in exchanges run to the parties in privity; not to an aſſignee, &c. And if after two have exchanged lands, one of them releaſes to the other the warranty in law; it will not deſtroy the exchange. 4 Rep. 122. 1 Rol. Abr. 815. The parties themſelves, and all privies and ſtrangers for the moſt part, may take advantage of exchanges void by any defect or accident: contra, if they are voidable, &c. 1 Rep. 105. Dyer 285. Exchange of Church Livings. Exchanges are now ſeldom uſed, except that parſons ſometimes exchange their churches, and reſign them into the biſhop's hands: and this is not a perfect exchange till the parties are inducted; for if either dies before they both are inducted, the exchange is void. Wood's Inſt. 284.

By the 31 El. c. 6. ſ. 8. If any incumbent of any benefice with cure of ſouls, ſhall corruptly reſign or exchange the ſame; or corruptly take for or in any reſpect of the reſigning or exchanging the ſame, directly or indirectly, any penſion, ſum of money, or other benefit whatſoever; as well the giver as the taker, ſhall loſe double the value of the ſum; half to the Queen, and half to him that ſhall ſue for the ſame.

If two parſons by one inſtrument agree to exchange their benefices, and in order thereto reſign them into the hands of the ordinary, ſuch exchange being executed on both parts, is good; and each may enjoy the other's living: but the patrons muſt preſent them again to each living; and if they refuſe to do it, or the ordinary will not admit them reſpectively, then the exchange is not executed; and in ſuch caſe either clerk may return to his former living, even though one of them ſhould be admitted, inſtituted and inducted to the benefice of the other; which is expreſſed in the exchange itſelf, and the proteſtation uſually added to it. Rights Clerg. 2 *Co. Exchequer, (ſcaccarium, from the Fr. eſchequier, i. e. abacus, tabula luſoria, or from the Germ. ſchatz, viz. theſaurus) Is an ancient court of record, wherein all cauſes touching the revenue and rights of the crown are heard and determined; and here the revenues of the crown are received. Cambden in his Britan. p. 113. ſaith, This court took its name a tabula ad quam aſſidebant, the cloth which covered it being party coloured, or chequered: we had it from the Normans, as appears by the Grand Cuſtumary, cap. 56. where it is deſcribed to be an aſſembly of high juſticiers, to whom it appertained to amend that which the inferior juſticiers had miſdone, and unadviſedly judged, and to do right to all as from the Prince's mouth.

Some perſons think there was an Exchequer under the Anglo-Saxon Kings; but our beſt hiſtorians are of opinion, that it was erected by King William the Firſt, called The Conqueror, its model being taken from the tranſmarine Exchequer, eſtabliſhed in Normandy long before that time. Madox's Hiſt. Excheq.

In the reign of Hen. the Firſt, there was an Exchequer, which has continued ever ſince: and the judges of the court were at that time ſtiled Barones Scaccarii, and adminiſtred juſtice to the ſubjects. In ancient times the Barons of the Exchequer dealt in affairs relating to the ſtate, or public ſervice of the crown and realm: and were greatly concerned in the preſervation of the prerogative, as well as the revenue of the crown; for at the Exchequer it was the care of the Treaſurer and Barons to ſee that the rights of the crown were no ways invaded. Lex Conſtitutionis 198.

For the authority and dignity of the court of Exchequer, anciently it was held in the King's palace; and the acts thereof were not to be examined or controlled in any other of the King's ordinary courts of juſtice: the Exchequer was the great repoſitory of records, wherein the records of the other courts at Weſtminſter, &c. were brought to be laid up in the Treaſury there. And writs of the Chancery were ſometimes made forth at the Exchequer; writs of ſummons to aſſemble parliaments, &c. Ibid.

The Exchequer has been commonly held at Weſtminſter, the uſual place of the King's reſidence; but it hath been ſometimes holden at other places, as the King pleaſed; as at Wincheſter, &c. And in the Exchequer there are reckoned ſeven courts, viz. the court of Pleas; the court of Accounts; the court of Receipts; the court of the Exchequer Chamber (being the aſſembly of all the judges of England for difficult matters in law); the court of Exchequer Chamber for Errors in the court of Exchequer; for Errors in the King's Bench; and the court of Equity in the Exchequer chamber. 4 Inſt. 119.

But, according to the uſual diviſion for the diſpatch of all common buſineſs, the Exchequer is divided into two parts; one whereof is converſant eſpecially in the judicial hearing and deciding of cauſes pertaining to the Prince's coffers, anciently called Scaccarium Computorum; the other is the Receipt of the Exchequer, which is properly employed in the receiving and payment of money. And it has been obſerved, that about the time of the Conqueſt there was very little money in ſpecie in the realm; for then the tenants or knights fees anſwered their lords by military ſervices: and till the reign of King Hen. 1. the rents or farms due to the King were generally rendered in proviſions and neceſſaries for his houſhold; but in that reign the ſame were changed into money; and afterwards, in ſucceeding times, the crown revenue was changed or paid into the Exchequer chiefly in gold and ſilver. Lex Conſtitutionis, p. 208.

By ſtatute, all ſheriffs, bailiffs, &c. are to account in the Exchequer before the Treaſurer and Barons: and annual rolls are to be made of the profits of counties, &c. Alſo inquiſitors ſhall be appointed in every county, of debts due to the King. 51 H. 3. ſtat. 5. 10 Ed. 1. Stat. Rutl. And all fines of counties for the whole year are to be ſent into the Exchequer. Stat. de Vicecom. 14 Ed. 2. Perſons impeached in the Exchequer, may plead in their own diſcharge; and there ſhall be writs for diſcharging perſons, &c. 5 R. 2. c. 9, 14. Any perſon to whom money is due from the Exchequer, having an order regiſtred for payment, may aſſign the ſame by indorſement. 19 Car. 2. c. 12. And the officers of the Receipt may receive and take for their fees 1*d.* in the pound for ſums iſſued out, &c. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 20.

Officers of the Exchequer are without delay to receive money brought thither: and the money in the Receipt is to be kept in cheſts under three different locks and keys, kept by three ſeveral officers, &c. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 28. The Tellers of the Exchequer were allowed 15,144*l.* to make good the deficiency in their offices by the reduction of guineas. Stat. 10 Geo. 1. c. 5. See 2 Geo. 2. c. 16.

In the lower part of the Exchequer, called the Receipt, the debtors of the King, and their debtors, the King's tenants, and the officers and miniſters of the court, &c. are privileged to ſue and implead one another, or any ſtranger, and to be ſued in the like actions as are proſecuted in the King's Bench and Common Pleas.

The judicial part of the Exchequer is a court both of law and equity; the court of common law is held in the office of Pleas, after the courſe of the Common law, coram Baronibus; and here the plaintiff ought to be a tenant or debtor to the King, or ſome way accountant to him; but this is now become a meer fiction, and the court is open to all. But the form is ſtill preſerved.

The leading proceſs is either a writ of ſubpæna, or quo minus. The court of Equity is holden in the Exchequer chamber coram Theſaurario, Cancellario & Baronibus, but uſually before the Barons only; the Lord Chief Baron being the chief Judge to hear and determine all cauſes in law or equity; the proceedings are by Engliſh bill and anſwer, agreeable to the practice of the High Court of Chancery; but the plaintiff muſt likewiſe ſet forth that he is debtor to the King, though it is not material whether he be ſo or not, it being, as above obſerved, only matter of form.

In this court the clergy uſually exhibit bills for recovery of their tithes, &c. And here the Attorney General brings bills for any matters concerning the King; and any perſon grieved in any cauſe proſecuted againſt him on behalf of the King, may bring his bill againſt the Attorney General to be relieved in equity, in which caſe the plaintiff muſt attend the King's Attorney with a copy of the bill, and procure him to anſwer the ſame; and Mr. Attorney may call any that are intereſted in the cauſe, or any officer or others, to inſtruct him in the making of his anſwer, ſo as the King be not prejudiced thereby, and his anſwer is to be put in without oath. 4 Inſt. 109, 112, 118.

The practice and proceedings generally in uſe at the Exchequer Bar, where anciently there was very much buſineſs and very various, are chiefly relating to debtors, farmers, receivers, accountants, &c. for debts and duties due to the crown: and all penal puniſhments, intruſions, forfeitures, upon popular actions, &c. are matters cogniſable by this court. Practiſ. Attorn. edit. 1. p. 292, 293.

The Exchequer is now ſaid to be the laſt of the four courts at Weſtminſter; governed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Lord Chief Baron, and three other Barons, who are the ſovereign auditors of England, and the judges of the court. There alſo fits in this court a Puiſne Baron, who adminiſters the oath of all high-ſheriffs, under-ſheriffs, bailiffs, auditors, receivers, collectors, controllers, ſurveyors, and ſearchers of all the cuſtoms in England.

The Chancellor or Under Treaſurer hath the cuſtody of the ſeal of this court. The King's Attorney General is made privy to all manner of pleas that are not ordinary and of courſe, which riſe upon the proceſs of the court; and he puts into court in his own name, informations of concealments of cuſtoms, ſeizures, &c. And alſo for intruſions, waſtes and incroachments upon any of the King's lands; or upon penal ſtatutes, forfeitures, &c.

The Remembrancers keep the records of the court betwixt the King and his ſubjects, and enter the rules and orders there made: one is called the King's Remembrancer, and the other the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer: The Remembrancer for the King hath all manner of informations upon penal ſtatutes uſed in his office only; and he calls to account, in open court, all the great Accountants of the Crown, Collectors of Cuſtoms, &c. he makes out writs of privilege, enters judgments of pleas; and all matters upon Engliſh bill are remaining in his office.

The Remembrancer for the Lord Treaſurer makes out all the eſtreats; he ſets down in his book the debts of all ſheriffs, and takes their foreign accounts; and iſſues out writs and proceſs in many caſes, &c. And theſe Remembrancers have ſeveral attornies to do buſineſs under them; who by ſtatute are not to iſſue out of the Remembrancer's office, any writs upon ſuppoſition, but upon juſt grounds, &c. 1 Jac. 1. c. 26.

There are two Chamberlains that keep the keys of the Treaſury, where the records lie, with the book of Domeſday, &c. They may ſit in court if they pleaſe, but not intermeddle with any thing; unleſs it be relating to the Sheriffs, in the pricking whereof they have a vote. And beſides the Chamberlains, there is a Clerk of the Pipe, in whoſe cuſtody are conveyed out of the King's and Treaſurer's Remembrancer, &c. as water through a pipe, all accounts and debts due to the King.

The Controller of the Pipe; who is ſaid to be the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Clerk of the Eſtreats, who receives the eſtreats from the Remembrancer's office, and writeth them out to be ſerved for the King, &c. The Foreign Oppoſer, who oppoſes or makes a charge on all ſheriffs, &c. of their green wax, i. e. fines, iſſues, amerciaments, recogniſance, &c. certified in eſtreats annexed to the writ, under the ſeal in green wax, and delivereth the ſame to the Clerk of the Eſtreats to be put in proceſs. The Auditors, that take the accounts of the King's Receivers, Collectors, &c. and perfect them. The four Tellers, whoſe buſineſs to receive and pay all money is well known. The Clerk of the Pells, from his parchment rolls, called Pellis Receptorum. The Clerk of the Nihils, who makes a roll of ſuch ſums as the ſheriff upon proceſs returns Nihil, &c. The Clerk of the Pleas, in whoſe office all officers and privileged perſons are to ſue and be ſued; and here are divers Under Clerks employed in ſuits commenced or depending in this court. There is a Clerk of the Summons; Under Chamberlains of the Exchequer; Secondaries in the offices of the Remembrancers; Secondaries of the Pipe; the Uſher of the Exchequer, Marſhal, &c. For the ſtatutes relating to the Exchequer, ſee the Table to the 4to edition of the Statutes at Large, title Exchequer.

Exchequer Bills. By Stat. 5 Ann. c. 13. The Lord Treaſurer may cauſe Exchequer Bills to be made of any ſums not exceeding 1,500,000 l. for the uſe of the war; and the duties upon houſes were made chargeable with 4 l. 10 s. per cent. per annum to the Bank for circulating them. The Bank not paying the bills, actions to be brought againſt the Company, and the money and damages recovered: and if any Exchequer bills be loſt, upon affidavit of it before a Baron of the Exchequer, and certificate from ſuch Baron, and ſecurity given to pay the ſame if found, duplicates are to be made out: alſo when bills are defaced, new ones ſhall be delivered. Ibid. The King, or his officers in the Exchequer, by former ſtatutes, might borrow money upon the credit of bills, payable on demand, with intereſt after the rate of 3*d. per diem* for every 100*l.* bill. 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 31. And by 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 20. An intereſt of 5*d.* a day was allowed for every 100*l.* But 12 W. 3. c. 1. lowered the intereſt on theſe bills to 4*d.* a day per cent. And by 12 Ann. cap. 11. it is ſunk to 2*d.* a day. Forging Exchequer bills, or the indorſements thereon, is felony. See Felony.

Exciſe, (from the Belg. acciiſe tributum) Is a duty or impoſition laid upon beer, ale, and other liquors which had its beginning in the reign of King Charles the Second. 12 Car. 2. c. 23. One principal office of exciſe to be erected in London, &c. and the commiſſioners and ſub-commiſſioners appointed to levy this duty, may, under their hands and ſeals, appoint ſo many gaugers as ſhall be needful; who are to enter the houſes of brewers, innkeepers, &c. to gauge all the coppers, fats, and veſſels in the ſame, and make returns to the commiſſioners of exciſe, &c. under whoſe office and limits they live: and upon refuſal, may forbid the parties to ſell any beer, under 5 l. forfeiture, &c. by this act. And by ſubſequent ſtatutes, additional duties have been granted on low wines, ſpirits, or brandy drawn from corn: alſo a duty of exciſe is laid upon malt, and upon ſweets, &c. which is annually continued.

Excommunication, (excommunicatio) An eccleſiaſtical cenſure, by which a perſon is excluded from the communion of the church, and from the company of the faithful. It hath been thus defined: excommunicatio eſt nihil aliud quam cenſura a canone vel judice eccleſiaſtico prolata & inflicta privans legitima communione ſacramentorum & quandoq; hominum.

And it is divided into majorem and minorem; minor eſt, per quam quis a ſacramentorum participatione conſcientia vel ſententia arcetur: major eſt, quæ non ſolum a ſacramentorum, verum etiam fidelium communione excludit, & ab omni actu legitimo ſeparat & dividit. Venatorius de Sent. Excom'. The form of an excommunication was of old: Auctoritate Dei Patris omnipotentis & Filii & Spiritus Sancti, & Beatæ Dei Genetricis Mariæ, omniumque Sanctorum, excommunicamus, anathematizamus, et a limitibus Sanctæ Matris Eccleſiæ ſequeſtramus, &c. Leg. Wil. 1.

The ſentence of excommunication was inſtituted originally for preſerving the purity of the church; but eccleſiaſtics did not ſcruple to convert it into an engine for promoting their own power, and inflicted it on the moſt frivolous occaſions. Robertſ. Hiſt. Emp. Charles V. 2 V. 109, &c.

Herein is to be conſidered,

I. In what caſes and by whom perſons may be excommunicated.

II. Of the diſabilities the excommunicated are under.

III. Of the proceedings in excommunications, and how the excommunicated are abſolved.

I. In what caſes and by whom perſons may be excommunicated.

This excommunication is generally for contempt in not appearing, or not obeying a decree, &c. And in other reſpects the cauſes of it are many; as for matters of hereſy, refuſing to receive the ſacrament, or to come to church; incontinency, adultery, ſimony, &c. A man may not be excommunicated for matter of defamation, &c.

In ſome caſes perſons incur excommunication ipſo facto by act of parliament; but they are to be firſt convicted of the offence by law, and the conviction is tranſmitted to the ordinary. Dyer 275. 1 Ventr. 146.

By Ed. 6. c. 4. "If any perſon ſhall ſmite, or lay violent hands upon any other, either in any church or churchyard, that then ipſo facto every perſon ſo offending ſhall be deemed excommunicate, and be excluded from the fellowſhip and company of Chriſt's congregation."

And it is further enacted by the ſaid ſtatute, "That if any perſon ſhall maliciouſly ſtrike any perſon with any weapon, in any church or churchyard, or ſhall draw any weapon in any church or churchyard, to the intent to ſtrike another with the ſame weapon, that then every perſon ſo offending ſhall ſtand ipſo facto excommunicated as aforeſaid."

By the Stat. 3 Jac. 1. cap. 5. ſect. 11. & 12. it is enacted, "That every popiſh recuſant convict ſhall ſtand to all intents and purpoſes diſabled, as a perſon lawfully excommunicated."

None but the biſhop is to certify excommunication, unleſs the biſhop be beyond ſea, or in remotis; or except the certificate be by one that hath ordinary juriſdiction, &c. And if the ordinary excommunicates a perſon for any thing where he hath not cogniſance of the cauſe; the party may bring an action againſt him, or the ordinary it is ſaid may be indicted. Co. Lit. 134. 2 Inſt. 527. Wood's Inſt. 508.

Anno 38 H. 3. Boniface archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the other biſhops, with burning tapers in their hands, in Weſtminſter-Hall before the King, and the other eſtates of the realm, denounced a curſe and excommunication againſt the breakers of the liberty of the church: and by Stat. 9 E. 3. Biſhops may excommunicate not only all perturbers of the peace of the church, but alſo felons, and other offenders, &c. And by the eccleſiaſtical laws, excommunicated perſons are not permitted to have Chriſtian burial.

II. Of the diſabilities the excommunicated are under.

An offender excommunicated is diſabled to do any judicial act, as to ſue any action at law, be a witneſs, &c. though he may be ſued: but every excommunication doth not diſable one; for if a mayor and commonalty bring an action, an excommunication of the mayor ſhall not diſable them, becauſe they ſue and anſwer by attorney: and if a biſhop is defendant, an excommunication by that biſhop ſhall not diſable the plaintiff: and an excommunication againſt an appellant, while the appeal is depending, is void. Co. Lit. 134. 4 Inſt. 340. Wood 508.

Excommunication is a good plea to an executor or adminiſtrator, though they ſue in auter droit, for an excommunicate perſon is excluded from the body of the church, and incapable to lay out the goods of the deceaſed to pious uſes: alſo it is one of the effects of excommunication, that he cannot be a procurator or attorney for any other perſon, and therefore cannot repreſent the deceaſed. 43 E. 3. 13. Co. Lit. 134.

Excommunication is no plea in a qui tam, becauſe it is for example; and the ſtatute having given the informer an ability to ſue, and not excepted excommunicated perſons from the liberty of informing, he is enabled to ſue by the ſtatute, notwithſtanding the cenſures of the church. 12 Co. 61.

When excommunication is pleaded in the plaintiff, he ſhall not reply, that he has appealed from the ſentence, for the ſentence is in force until it is repealed; and whilſt it is in force, he cannot appear in any of the courts of juſtice, but he may reply, he is abſolved; for then his diſability is taken away. Bro. Excommunication 3. 3 Bulſt. 72. 20 H. 6. 25. Placita. Gen. 10, 72.

III. Of the proceedings in excommunications, and how the excommunicated are abſolved.

Excommunication is publiſhed in the church, and if the offender do not ſubmit in forty days, then the biſhop is to certify the excommunication into the temporal courts, ſetting forth ſpecially the cauſe of excommunication, that the judges may ſee whether the eccleſiaſtical court hath cogniſance of the matter; and thereupon the party may be taken and impriſoned by virtue of the writ ſignificavit or capias excommunicatum, and is to remain in priſon till he ſubmits and is abſolved; when the biſhop likewiſe certifying the ſame, another writ iſſues to the ſheriff to diſcharge him. 2 Inſt. 189. 8 Rep. 68. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 768.

The biſhop's certificate, if he die before the return of the writ, ſhall not be received, for his ſucceſſor ſhall certify; the ſignificavit muſt mention that the party lived within the dioceſe where he was excommunicated, and by what biſhop; if it be pleaded, the time when is to be ſhewn; and excommunication muſt be declared in the eccleſiaſtical court before they proceed, &c. 8 Rep. 68. Cro. Jac. 82. Moor, ca. 667. Latch 174. Hetley 86.

It hath been adjudged, that the ſpiritual court hath not power to meddle with the body of any perſons whatſoever, or to ſend proceſs to take them; for if a perſon is excommunicate for contempt, &c. they ought to certify it into the Chancery, whence it is ſent into B. R. and thence iſſues proceſs. Cro. Eliz. 741. See the next article, Excommunicato Capiendo.

As to the method by which perſons excommunicated may be abſolved.

If a perſon be unjuſtly excommunicated for a matter of which the ſpiritual court hath not conuzance, and he is taken on a writ of excommunicato capiendo, the party grieved ſhall have a writ out of Chancery to the ſheriff, to deliver him out of priſon. 2 Inſt. 623. 12 Co. 76. F. N. B. 141.

So if the ſpiritual court proceeds inverſo ordine, as if they refuſe a copy of the libel, &c. a prohibition ſhall go, with a clauſe to abſolve and deliver the party injured. 1 Sid. 232.

Alſo if a man be excommunicated, and offers to obey and perform the ſentence, and the biſhop refuſeth to accept it, and to aſſoil him, he ſhall have a writ to the biſhop, requiring him, upon performance of the ſentence, to aſſoil him; and the reaſon thereof is, for that by the excommunication the party is diſabled to ſue any action, or to have any remedy for any wrong done unto him, ſo long as he ſhall remain excommunicate; and alſo the party grieved may have his action upon his caſe againſt the biſhop, in like manner as he may when the biſhop doth excommunicate him for a matter which belongeth not to the eccleſiaſtical conuſance; alſo the biſhop, in thoſe caſes, may be indicted at the ſuit of the King. 2 Inſt. 623.

But if the excommunication be for a juſt cauſe, the party muſt make preſent ſatisfaction before he can be abſolved, or he muſt put in caution, that he will hereafter perform that which the biſhop ſhall reaſonably and according to law enjoin him; which caution, in the Civil law, is of three ſorts. 1. Fidejuſſoria, as when a man bindeth himſelf with ſureties to perform ſomewhat. 2. Pignoratio, or realis cautio, as when a man engageth goods or mortgageth lands for the performance. 3. Juratoria, when the party who is to perform any thing, taketh a corporal oath to do it; which laſt is now the moſt frequent method.

This method of taking caution was held to be againſt law. 1 Bulſt. 122.—— But was afterwards on great debate held to be good; and that the biſhop having a diſcretionary power herein, it was as much in his option to take caution by obligation as by either of the two other methods. 2 Lev. 36. Raym. 225.

If after a perſon is excommunicated, there comes a general act of pardon, which pardons all contempts, &c. it ſeems that this offence is taken away without any formal abſolution. See Cro. Car. 199. Cro. Jac. 212. 8 Co. 68. 1 Jon. 227. 2 Lev. 36. Gibſ. Cod. 1110.

Excommunicato Capiendo, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff for apprehending him who ſtands obſtinately excommunicated forty days; for the contempt of ſuch a perſon not ſeeking abſolution, being certified or ſignified into the Chancery; this writ iſſues for the impriſoning him without bail or mainpriſe until he conforms. F. N. B. 62. By the Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 23. Writs de excommunicato capiendo ſhall iſſue out of the court of Chancery in term-time, and be returnable in B. R. &c. They ſhall be brought ſealed into the King's Bench, and there opened and delivered of record to the ſheriff, and there muſt be twenty days between the teſte and the return: and if the ſheriff return a non eſt inventus on the writ, a capias with proclamation is to be granted for the party to yield his body to gaol under the penalty of 10 l. And if he do not appear on the firſt capias and proclamation, a ſecond is to go forth, and he is to forfeit 20 l. &c.

But, by this ſtatute, if in the excommunicato capiendo, the party excommunicated hath not a ſufficient addition, as to his place of dwelling, &c. according to 1 H. 5. c. 6. Or if in the ſignificavit it is contained, that the excommunication proceeds upon a cauſe of contempt or ſome original matter of hereſy; for refuſing to have a child baptized, to receive the ſacrament, to come to divine ſervice, or for error in matters of religion and doctrine, for incontinency, uſury, ſimony, perjury in the eccleſiaſtical courts, or idolatry; he ſhall not incur the penalties in this act, for his contempt in not rendering himſelf priſoner upon the capias, &c. So that the ſtatute doth not require the capias with proclamations, and the penalties in other caſes, beſides the ten caſes mentioned. 2 Inſt. 661.

And it has been adjudged, where a perſon has been excommunicated, and none of thoſe cauſes were contained in the ſignificavit, that the perſon excommunicate ſhould be diſcharged of the penalties; but not of the excommunication. 3 Mod. 89. It has alſo been held, that for any of the cauſes expreſſed in the ſtatute there ought to go a capias with a penalty, and be an addition to the writ: in other caſes it is not neceſſary; and if then the capias be with a penalty, the court will not diſcharge the party, but the penalty only: but for want of addition, in caſes where that is required, the party ſhall be diſcharged upon motion. 1 Salk. 294, 295. See a very full Comment on the Stat. 25 Eliz. c. 23. for the due execution of this writ, and the mode of proceeding which the party who is taken ought to purſue, in Britiſh Liberties, fo. 224, &c.

Excommunicato Deliberando, Is a writ to the ſheriff for delivery of an excommunicate perſon out of priſon, upon certificate from the ordinary of his conformity to the eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction. F. N. B. 63. Reg. Orig. 67. And where a man is unduly excommunicated, he may be delivered in ſome caſes by an habeas corpus; and ſometimes by pleading, as well as by an excommunicato deliberando: alſo ſometimes by prohibition, &c. And on a general pardon, the party may have a writ to the biſhop to abſolve him. 12 Rep. 76. Latch 205. Godb. 272. If a plaintiff in an action be excommunicate, and after he gets letters of abſolution; on ſhewing them in court, he may have a re-ſummons, &c. upon his original. 1 Inſt. 133.

Excommunicato Recipiendo, Is a writ whereby perſons excommunicated being for their obſtinacy committed to priſon, and unlawfully delivered, before they have given caution to obey the authority of the church, are commanded to be ſought after and impriſoned again. Reg. Orig. 67.

Execution, (executio) Signifies the laſt performance of an act, as of a judgment, &c. And is the obtaining of poſſeſſion of any thing recovered by judgment of law. 1 Inſt. 289. Sir Edw. Coke, in his Reports, makes two ſorts of executions; one final, another with a quouſque, tending to an end: an execution final is that which makes money of the defendant's goods, or extends his lands, and delivers them to the plaintiff, which he accepts in ſatisfaction, and is the end of the ſuit, and all that the King's writ requires to be done; the other writ with a quouſque, though it tendeth to an end, is not final: as in caſe of a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, which is not a final execution, but the body of the party is to be taken, to the intent the plaintiff be ſatisfied his debt, &c. and the impriſonment of the defendant not being abſolute, but until he do ſatisfy the ſame. 6 Rep. 87.

Under this head it is material to conſider,

I. Of the nature and ſeveral kinds of executions, and what things were liable thereto at Common law, &c.

II. Of the judgments on which the ſeveral executions may be taken out, and where the party ſhall be concluded by the election of one of them, &c.

III. By whom, againſt whom, and at what time executions may be ſued, and by whom they ſhall be executed, and how they are to be releaſed and diſcharged.

IV. To what time executions ſhall relate, ſo as to avoid alienation, and of the King's prerogative in reſpect of executions.

V. Of the party's remedy againſt irregular executions, and of the offence of obſtructing execution.

I. Of the nature and ſeveral kinds of executions, and what things were liable thereto at Common law, &c.

The writs of execution at Common law were only a fi. fa. on the goods and chattels; and a levari facias to levy the debt or damages upon the land and chattels: afterwards a ca. ad ſatisfac. was given by Stat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 17. And an elegit by Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 18. which makes the body liable, and the future profits of lands, &c. 1 Inſt. 154. 2 Inſt. 394.

The reaſon why by the Common law, where a ſubject had execution for debt or damages, he could not have the body of the defendant, or his lands in execution, (unleſs it were in ſpecial caſes) was, that the defendant's body might be at liberty, not only to follow his own affairs and buſineſs, but alſo to ſerve his King and country; and taking away the poſſeſſion of his lands would hinder the following of his huſbandry and tillage. 2 Inſt. 394.

Though neither the body nor lands of the debtor on a judgment could be taken in execution at Common law, but only his goods; yet in action of debt againſt an heir, upon the bond of his anceſtor, his land which he had by diſcent was ſubject to be taken in execution. 3 Rep. 11. In action of debt againſt the heir upon his anceſtor's bond, there was judgment by nil dicit: and it was held that the plaintiff ſhould have execution againſt the heir, of any of his own lands or goods. Dyer 89, 149. Judgment was had againſt the heir by nil dicit, and a ſcire facias being brought againſt him to have execution, he pleaded riens per diſcent; it was adjudged that this plea was too late after the judgment by nil dicit, and the execution ſhall be on his own lands. Dyer 344.

But there is a difference between a ſcire facias and an action of debt brought againſt an heir upon a bond of his anceſtor, in which the heir is named. Poph. 193. On a judgment for the debt of an anceſtor, where the heir hath made over lands deſcended to him, execution may be taken againſt ſuch heir to the value of the land, &c. for the debt of his anceſtor, as if his own debt. Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14.

If a perſon have judgment given againſt him for debt or damages, or be bound in a recognizance and dieth, and his heir be within age, no execution ſhall be ſued of the lands during the minority; and againſt an heir within age, no execution ſhall be ſued upon a ſtatute merchant or ſtaple, &c. 1 Inſt. 290. There is an execution on body, lands and goods, upon a ſtatute merchant, ſtaple and recognizances. 1 Inſt. 289. 2 Inſt. 678.

In perſonal actions, execution is either by capias ad ſatisfaciend. or fieri facias againſt the body or goods; or elegit againſt the lands, &c. In real and mixed actions the writs of execution are habere facias ſeiſinam, to put the party in poſſeſſion of his freehold recovered by judgment of law; and habere facias poſſeſſionem, to put him in poſſeſſion of his term, &c. And after judgment, iſſues proceſs of execution; for it begins where the action ends. No execution for damages recovered in a real action, ſhall be had by capias ad ſatisfaciendum: but where a man hath judgment to recover lands and damages, he may have execution of both together. 8 Rep. 141.

Whatever may be aſſigned or granted may be taken on an execution. Francis and Naſh Rep. temp. Hardw. per Annaly. 53. Nothing can be taken in execution that cannot be ſold, as deeds, writings, &c. Id. Banknotes, &c. cannot be taken in execution as they remain, in ſome meaſure, choſes in action. Ib.

II. Of the judgments on which the ſeveral executions may be taken out, and where the party ſhall be concluded by the election of one of them, &c.

When a judgment is ſigned, execution may be taken out immediately upon it, and need not be delayed till it is entered, it being a perfect judgment of the court before entered. Co. Lit. 505. And if the judges of the court of B. R. ſee one againſt whom there is a judgment of that court walk in Weſtminſter hall, they may ſend an officer to take him up, if the plaintiff deſire it, without a writ of execution. Farreſt. Rep. 52. If execution be not ſued within a year and a day after judgment, where there is no fault in the defendant, as if writ of error be not brought, &c. there muſt be a ſcire facias to revive the judgment, which in that time may be had without moving the court; but if it be of longer ſtanding, the court is to be moved for it. 1 Inſt. 290. 2 Inſt. 771. But if the defendant be outlawed after judgment, (as he may where he cannot be taken in execution, or hath no lands or goods to pay the debt, &c. when the ſuit is commenced by original) the plaintiff need not renew the judgment by ſcire facias to obtain execution after a year. 1 Inſt. 290.

It hath been adjudged, that by the Common law, if a man was outlawed after judgment in debt, the plaintiff was at the end of his ſuit, and he could have no other proceſs after that perſonally; but was put to his new original, &c. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 772. If the plaintiff does not proceed upon the ſcire facias, he may bring an action upon the judgment: and after judgment againſt the defendant, in action where ſpecial bail hath been given, the plaintiff may have execution againſt the defendant, or proſecute his bail. Common Law Com. placed 206. If one be arreſted upon proceſs in B. R. and puts in bail; and afterwards the plaintiff recovers, and the defendant renders not himſelf according to law, in ſafe-guard of his bail, the plaintiff may at his election take execution againſt the principal, or his bail after judgment againſt them; but if he takes the bail, he ſhall never afterwards meddle with the principal. Cro. Jac. 320.

If one recovers jointly againſt two in debt, the execution muſt be joint againſt them: the court cannot divide an execution, which is intire, and grounded on the judgment. Mich. 24 Car. B. R. A man and his wife recovered in an action of debt againſt the defendant 100 l. and damages; then the wife died, and the huſband prayed to have execution upon this judgment: the court at firſt inclined, that it ſhould not ſurvive to the huſband, but that adminiſtration ought to be committed of it, as a thing in action; but at laſt they agreed that the husband might take out execution, for that by the judgment it became his debt due to him in his own right. Cro. Car. 608. 1 Mod. Rep. 179, 180.

If judgment be againſt two, on the death of one, the plaintiff ſhall have execution by ſcire facias againſt the ſurvivor; and though he pleads, that the other defendant has an heir alive, &c. it will not prevent it. Raym. 26. And where two perſons recover in debt, and before execution one of them dies; it has been held that execution may be ſued in both their names by the ſurvivor, and it will be no error; which may be done without a ſcire facias. Noy 150. An execution may be executed after the death of the defendant; for his executor being privy, is bound as well as the teſtator: and where execution is once begun, it cannot be delayed, unleſs there appears irregularity; an audita querela is no ſuperſedeas to it, nor ſhall any thing ſtop the ſheriff from ſelling, &c. Cro. Eliz. 73. Comberb. 33, 389.

A man can have but one execution; but it muſt be intended an execution with ſatisfaction, and the body of the defendant is no ſatisfaction, only a pledge for the debt. 5 Rep. 86. When a perſon dies in execution, it is without ſatisfaction; ſo that the plaintiff may have a fieri facias againſt the goods, or elegit againſt the lands. It was not ſo at Common law. Hob. 57. But it is given by Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 24. Where a perſon was taken on a capias utlagatum, and died in priſon, the plaintiff having choſen this execution, which is the higheſt in law; it has been held that the defendant dying, the law will adjudge it a ſatisfaction. Cro. Eliz. 850.

By ſtatute, if a perſon in execution dies, a new execution ſhall iſſue againſt the lands, &c. as if he had never been taken in execution. 21 Jac. 1. c. 24. If an execution be executed and filed the party can have no other execution upon that judgment; becauſe there can be but one execution with ſatisfaction upon one judgment. 1 Lill. Abr. 565. If the execution be not returned and filed, another execution may be had: and if only part of the debt be levied on a fieri facias, another writ of execution may be ſued out for the reſidue thereof. Ibid.

But if you once charge the body of the defendant in execution on a capias ad ſatisfaciend. you may not have any other execution againſt his goods, &c. except the defendant make an eſcape, or is privileged, or die in execution. Practiſ. Solic. 248. Though if one take out any writs of execution, and they have no effect, he may have other writs on on their failure. Hob. 57.

In caſe any priſoner committed in execution ſhall eſcape, any creditor, at whoſe ſuit he ſtands charged, may retake him by a new capias ad ſatisfaciend. or ſue forth any other kind of execution, as if the body of ſuch priſoner had never been taken in execution. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 27. Where two are bound jointly and ſeverally, and judgment is had againſt both of them, if one in execution eſcapes, the creditor may take out execution againſt the other: but if he go by licence of the creditor, then the other will be diſcharged. Cro. Car. 53. If one in execution be delivered by privilege of parliament, when the privilege ceaſes, the plaintiff may ſue out a new execution againſt him. 1 Jac. 1. c. 13.

III. By whom, againſt whom, and at what time executions may be ſued, and by whom they ſhall be executed, and how they are to be releaſed and diſcharged.

See ante Diviſion II.

No perſon is intitled to, or can ſue out execution, who is not privy to the judgment, or intitled to the thing recovered, as heir, executor, or adminiſtrator to him who has judgment. 1 Rol. Abr. 889.

If one have judgment to recover lands, and die before execution, his heir ſhall have it; and where tenant in tail recovers and dies before the execution without iſſue, he in remainder may ſue out execution: an heir is to have execution for lands, and the executor or adminiſtrator for damages. Co. Litt. 251. Dyer 26. The executors of executors may ſue out execution of a judgment; but an adminiſtrator getting judgment in behalf of the inteſtate, and then dying, neither his executor, or adminiſtrator ſhall take out the execution, but the adminiſtrator de bonis non adminiſtratis of the firſt inteſtate. 5 Rep. 9. And ſee 17 Car. 2. c. 18.

But if an adminiſtrator, durante minori ætate of an executor, recovers in debt, and before execution the executor comes of age, he ſhall have a ſcire facias on this judgment; for carrying on the ſuit in right of the executor, made the executor privy thereto. 1 Rol. Abr. 888-9.

If a man has judgment for the arrears of rent, and dies, his executor ſhall ſue out execution, and not the heir; for by the recovery it becomes a chattel veſted, to which the executor is intitled. 1 Rol. Abr. 880.

If a ſtatute be entered into, to huſband and wife, and the huſband dies, the wife ſhall take out execution. 1 Rol. Abr. 889.

So if huſband and wife recover lands and damages, and the huſband dies, the wife ſhall have execution of the damages, and not the executors of the huſband. 1 Rol. Abr. 342, 889, 890.

If there be judgment in debt againſt two, and one dies, a ſcire facias lies againſt the other alone, reciting the death; and he cannot plead, that the heir of him that is dead has aſſets by deſcent, and demand judgment, if he ought to be charged alone; for at Common law, the charge upon a judgment being perſonal ſurvived, and the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. that gives the elegit, does not take away the remedy of the plaintiff at Common law; and therefore the party may take out his execution which way he pleaſes, for the words of the ſtatute are, ſit in electione; but if he ſhould, after the allowance of this writ and revival of the judgment, take out an elegit to charge the land, the party may have remedy by ſuggeſtion, or elſe by audita querela. Raym. 26. 1 Lev. 30. S. C. 1 Keb. 92, 123. S. C.

By the Common law, if judgment be given againſt a man for debt, or damages, and the defendant dies before execution ſued, his heir within age is not liable to execution during his minority; but the parol muſt demur (i. e. the plea muſt ſtand ſtill) in ſuch caſe till he comes of age. Co. Lit. 290. a. 1 Rol. Abr. 140.

And this privilege of infancy does not only protect the infant, but all others who are affected by the judgment; as if there be father and two daughters, and judgment be given for debt againſt the father, who dies, one of the daughters being within age, partition being made, the eldeſt ſhall not be charged alone, but ſhall have the benefit of her ſiſter's minority, which puts a ſtop to the execution. Co. Lit. 290. a.

There can be no execution taken out againſt a member of parliament during privilege of parliament: alſo no capias can iſſue againſt a peer; for even in the caſe of a private perſon at Common law, the body was not liable to creditors; and the ſtatute of Ed. 3. which ſubjects the body, does not extend to peers, becauſe their perſons are ſacred; as alſo the law ſuppoſes, that perſons thus diſtinguiſhed by the King, have wherewithal otherwiſe to ſatisfy their creditors. 6 Co. 52. Hob. 61. Cro. Car. 205.

If a writ of execution be taken out againſt a clerk in holy orders, on a judgment obtained againſt him, or upon a ſtatute ſtaple, or recognizance in nature of it, which he has entred into; and the ſheriff returns, that he is a clerk, he ought to extend his lay fee and chattels, or return that he hath neither; but if he returns, quod clericus ſit beneficiatus nullum habens laicum feodum, ſed quod beneficiatus eſt in ſuch a dioceſe, then a writ of ſequeſtration ſhall iſſue to the biſhop to ſequeſter the living. 1 Rol. Abr. 891. 2 Rol. Abr. 474. 2 Inſt 472. Jenk. 207.

A capias ad ſatisfaciendum may be executed upon a priſoner in priſon for felony; and if he be acquitted of the felony, the ſheriff is to keep him. 1 Lil. Abr. 567. But where a perſon is in priſon for criminal matters, he ought not to be charged with a civil action without leave of the court; yet if he be charged, he ſhall not be diſcharged. Raym. 58.

Where not allowed, on a pardon, ſee Farreſt. 153. A ca. ſa. will lie againſt a man who is outlawed for felony, and he may be taken in execution at the ſuit of a common perſon. Owen 69. And if he was taken upon a capias utlagat. which was at the King's ſuit, he ſhall be in execution at the ſuit of the party, if he will. Moor 566. But this is not without prayer of the party: and if after a judgment given, the judges of their own heads, or at the requeſt of any perſon, without prayer of the plaintiff, commit the defendant to priſon; by this he ſhall not be ſaid to be in execution for the plaintiff. Dyer 297. If one arreſted be in priſon for debt, and judgment is had againſt him; though it be in arreſt on a latitat, or capias, he ſhall not be in execution upon the judgment, unleſs the plaintiff prays it of record; or ſues a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, and delivers it to the ſheriff. Dyer 197, 306. Jenk. Cent. 165.

With reſpect to the time of ſuing execution.

At Common law, in real actions, where land was recovered, the demandant, after the year, might take out a ſcire facias to revive his judgment, becauſe the judgment being particular in the real action, quoad the lands with a certain deſcription, the law required, that the execution of that judgment ſhould be entred upon the roll, that it might be ſeen, whether execution was delivered of the ſame thing of which judgment was given: a ſcire facias iſſued to ſhew cauſe, why execution ſhould not be. 2 Inſt. 471. 5 Co. 88. Cro. Eliz. 416. 6 Mod. 288.

But if the plaintiff, after he had obtained judgment in any perſonal action, had lain quiet, and had taken no proceſs of execution within the year, he was put to a new original upon his judgment, and no ſcire facias was iſſuable at law on the judgment, becauſe there was not a judgment for any particular thing in the perſonal action, with which the execution could be compared; therefore after a reaſonable time, which was a year and a day, it was preſumed to be executed, and therefore the law allowed him no ſcire facias to ſhew cauſe why there ſhould not be execution; but if the party had ſlipped his time, he was put to his action on the judgment, and the defendant was obliged to ſhew how that debt, of which the judgment was an evidence, was diſcharged. 2 Inſt. 469. Carth. 30, 31. 1 Sid. 351.

To remedy this, and to make the forms of proceeding more uniform in both actions, the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 45. gave the ſcire facias to the plaintiff to revive the judgment, where he had omitted to ſue execution within the year after judgment obtained.

A ſcire facias lies on a judgment in ejectment, for the words of the act are, Sive ſervitia ſive conſuetudines ſive alia quæcunque irrotulata, which comprehend all judgments, and give the like remedy on them by ſcire facias, as the demandant had on a judgment in a real action at Common law. 1 Sid. 351. 2 Salk. 600.

But tho' the general rule be, that the plaintiff cannot take out execution after the year and day without a ſcire facias, yet the rule muſt be underſtood with theſe reſtrictions.

That if the defendant brings a writ of error, and thereby hinders the plaintiff from taking his execution within the year, and the plaintiff in error is nonſuit, or the judgment affirmed, the defendant in error may proceed to execution after the year without a ſcire facias, becauſe the writ of error was a ſuperſedeas to the execution, and the plaintiff muſt acquieſce till he hears the judgment above; beſides, while the cauſe is ſtill ſub judice, it is not known, whether the plaintiff ſhall recover, or not, and the year for the execution ought to be accounted from the final judgment given. Cro. Jac. 364. Yelv. 7. 1 Rol. Abr. 899. 4 Leon. 197. 5 Co. 88. Carth. 236-7. 6 Mod. 288.

So if the plaintiff hath a judgment, with ſtay of execution for a year, he may, after the year, take out his execution without the ſcire facias, becauſe the delay is by conſent of parties, and in favour of the defendant; and the indulgence of the plaintiff ſhall not turn to his prejudice, nor ought the defendant to be allowed any advantage of it, when it appears to be done for his advantage, and at his inſtance. 6 Mod. 288. 1 Rol. Rep. 104.

But if the defendant had been tied up by an injunction out of Chancery for a year, yet he cannot take out execution without a ſcire facias, becauſe the courts of law do not take notice of Chancery injunctions, as they do of writs of error; beſides, in that caſe it had been no breach of the injunction to have taken out the execution within the year, and continued it down by vic' non miſit breve, which cannot be done in the caſe of a writ of error, becauſe that removes the record out of the court where the judgment was; and therefore there can be no proceedings below till it be affirmed, and returned to the inferior courts. 1 Salk. 322. 6 Mod. 288. S. C.

In debt, if defendant acknowledge the action for part, and as to the remainder pleads to iſſue, and the plaintiff hath judgment for that he confeſſeth; here he may not have execution till the iſſue is tried for that which he is to recover damages: though if he releaſes the damages, he may have execution preſently for the reſt. Roll. 897.

All judgments of inferior courts in debt are to be executed in the peculiar juriſdictions where given, and cannot be removed to be executed by the ſuperior courts. Cro. Car. 34. But if a judgment given in another court be affirmed, or reverſed for error in B. R. becauſe the proceedings in the court below are entered upon record in the King's Bench, the party ſhall have execution in that court: And ſo if a judgment of debt, &c. in the Common Pleas be affirmed in B. R. on a writ of error. 5 Rep, 88. Though where the record of a judgment given in C. B. is removed into B. R. the party cannot take out execution upon it, without a ſcire facias quare executionem habere non debeat. 1 Lill. Abr. 562. And where a writ of error is brought in the Exchequer Chamber, to reverſe a judgment in B. R. if the judgment is affirmed there, yet that court cannot make out execution upon the judgment affirmed; but the record muſt be tranſmitted back to the court of King's Bench, where execution muſt be done. 1 Lill. 565.

As an execution is an entire thing, he who begins muſt end it; a new ſheriff may diſtrain an old one to ſell the goods on a diſtringas nuper vicecom. and to bring the money into court, or ſell and deliver the money to the new ſheriff; and the authority of the old ſheriff continues by virtue of the firſt writ, ſo that when he hath ſeized, he is compellable to return the writ, and liable to anſwer the value according to the return; likewiſe by the ſeizure the property of the goods, &c. is diveſted out of the defendant, and he is diſcharged, whereby no further remedy can be had againſt him. 1 Salk. 322. 3 Salk. 159.

A ſheriff ſhall have his fees for executions, upon a writ of capias ad ſatisfaciendum for the whole debt; upon a fieri fac. according to the ſum levied; and on an elegit it is held by ſome, that he ſhall have fees according to what is levied, and by others for the whole debt recovered, becauſe the plaintiff may keep the land till he is ſatisfied the intire debt. 1 Salk. 333. Where the ſheriff hath a fieri facias or ca. ſa. againſt a man, and before execution, he pays him the money, execution may not be done afterwards; if it be, treſpaſs or falſe impriſonment lies. 5 Rep. 93. 12 Car. B. R.

It is laid down as a general rule in our books, that the ſheriff in executing any judicial writ, cannot break open the door of a dwelling-houſe; this privilege, which the law allows to a man's habitation, ariſes from the great regard the law has to every man's ſafety and quiet, and therefore protects them from the inconveniencies which muſt neceſſarily attend an unlimited power in the ſheriff and his officers in this reſpect; hence, every man's houſe is called his caſtle. 5 Co. 91, &c. 3 Inſt. 162. Moor 668. Yelv. 28. Cro. Eliz. 908. Dalt. Sher. 350.

Yet in favour of executions, which are the life of the law, and eſpecially in caſes of great neceſſity, or where the ſafety of the King and commonwealth are concerned, this general caſe hath the following exceptions:

1. That whenever the proceſs is at the ſuit of the King, the ſheriff or his officer may, after requeſt to have the door opened, and refuſal, break and enter the houſe to do execution, either on the party's goods, or take his body, as the caſe ſhall be. 5 Co. 91. b.

2. So in a writ of ſeiſin or habere facias poſſeſſionem in ejectment, the ſheriff may juſtify breaking open the door, if denied entrance by the tenant; for the end of the writ being to give the party full and actual poſſeſſion, conſequently the ſheriff muſt have all power neceſſary for this end; beſides, in this caſe the law does not, after the judgment, look upon the houſe as belonging to the tenant, but to him who has recovered. 5 Co. 91.

3. Alſo this privilege of a man's houſe relates only to ſuch execution as affects himſelf; and therefore if a fieri facias be directed to the ſheriff to levy the goods of A. and it happens that A.'s goods are in the houſe of B. if after requeſt made by the ſheriff to B. to deliver theſe goods, he refuſes, the ſheriff may well juſtify the breaking and entring his houſe. 5 Co. 93. a. 1 Sid. 186.

4. It hath been adjudged, that the ſheriff, on a fieri facias, may break open the door of a barn, ſtanding at a diſtance from the dwelling-houſe, without requeſting the owner to open the door, in the ſame manner as he may enter a cloſe, &c. 1 Sid. 186. 1 Keb. 698. S. C.

5. So on a fieri facias, when the ſheriff or his officers are once in the houſe, they may break open any chamber-door or trunks for the compleating execution. 2 Show. 87.

6. So if the ſheriff's bailiffs enter the houſe, the door being open, and the owner locks them in, the ſheriff may juſtify breaking open the door, for the ſetting at liberty the bailiffs; for if, in this caſe, he were obliged to ſtay till he could procure a homine replegiando, it might be highly inconvenient; alſo it ſeems, that in this caſe, the locking in the bailiffs is ſuch a diſturbance to the execution, that the court will grant an attachment for it. Palm. 52. Cro. Jac. p. 555. S. C. 2 Roll. Rep. 132. S. C.

7. That if the ſheriff in executing a writ, breaks open a door, where he has no authority for ſo doing by law, yet the execution is good, and the party has no other remedy but an action of treſpaſs againſt the ſheriff. 5 Co. 93. a.

If the ſheriff refuſes to execute any judicial writ; this is a contempt to the court, for which an attachment will be granted. 1 Salk. 323.

So if he executes the writ, and makes a falſe return, the party injured may have an action on the caſe againſt him. 1 Salk. 323.

As to the manner of releaſing and diſcharging executions.

By a releaſe of all ſuits, execution is gone; for no one can have execution without prayer and ſuit, but the King only, in whoſe caſe the judges ought to award execution ex officio, without any ſuit: And a releaſe of all executions bars the King. By releaſe of all debts or duties, the defendant is diſcharged of the execution, becauſe the debt or duty on which it is founded is diſcharged: But if the body of a man be taken in execution, and the plaintiff releaſe all actions, yet he ſhall remain in execution. Co. Lit. 291. If a judgment is given in action of debt, and the defendant taken in execution, the plaintiff releaſeth the judgment, the body ſhall be diſcharged of the execution: And if the plaintiff after judgment releaſeth all demands, the execution is diſcharged. Ibid. where one is in execution at my ſuit, and I bid the ſheriff let him go; this is a good diſcharge and releaſe both to the party and ſheriff. Poph. 207.

But if the plaintiff make a releaſe to the defendant being in execution, or other act amounting to a diſcharge;

it will not be a diſcharge ipſo facto, but by this means he may have the ſame. 5 Rep. 86. Dyer 152.

Perſons charged in execution for any ſum not exceeding 100*l*. in any gaol, who are willing to ſatisfy their creditors as far as they are able, may exhibit a petition to the court whence the proceſs iſſued, with an account of their whole eſtate upon oath, praying to be diſcharged, &c. And thereupon the court ſhall order the priſoner to be brought up, and his creditors ſummoned at a certain day, when the court in a ſummary way is to examine into the ſame, &c. and order the eſtate and effects of the priſoner to be aſſigned to the creditors by indorſement on the back of the petition; whereupon the priſoner ſhall be diſcharged out of priſon; but if creditors are diſſatisfied with the truth of the priſoner's oath, he is to be remanded till another day, and then if his creditors cannot diſcover any effects omitted, he ſhall be releaſed; unleſs the creditors inſiſt on the priſoner's being detained in priſon, and agree by writing to pay him 2*s*. 4*d*. a week, &c. Stat. 32 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 13.

Priſoners in execution ut ſupra in any priſon (except in London and Weſtminſter) before they petition any of the courts from whence the proceſs iſſued for a rule to be brought up, are to give notice to their creditors in writing, that they deſign to petition, and alſo a true copy of the account or ſchedule of their whole eſtates which they intend to deliver into the court, &c. And then, upon ſuch petition, the priſoners ſhall have a rule of court to be brought to the next aſſizes for the county, at an expence not exceeding 12*d*. a mile, to be paid to the officer out of the effects of the priſoners, &c. And the creditors muſt be ſummoned to appear at the ſaid aſſiſes by order ſerved on them, or left at their houſes thirty days before; and at the aſſiſes, the judges on examination ſhall determine the matter, and give judgment and relief; a record of which judgment is to be returned and certified to the court whence the proceſs iſſued, on which the priſoners were taken in execution. No perſon charged in execution, ſhall be allowed to exhibit a petition to any court at law to be diſcharged, purſuant to the above acts, unleſs it be done before the end of the next term after he is charged; and thoſe ſtatutes ſhall not relate to any one taken on a capias for running cuſtomable goods, &c. Vide 32 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 13, 14, 15.

IV. To what time executions ſhall relate, ſo as to avoid alienation, and of the king's prerogative in reſpect of executions.

Writs of execution bind the property of goods only from the time of the delivery of the writs to the ſheriff; who upon receipt thereof indorſes the day of the month when received: But land is bound from the day of the judgment. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. Cro. Car. 149. But the judgment muſt be docketed, by 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 20. See Poſt. Notwithſtanding this ſtatute, if after the writ delivered to the ſheriff, and before execution is executed, the defendant becomes bankrupt, that will hinder execution. 3 Salk. 159. The plaintiff takes out execution by fieri facias againſt the defendant; all the goods and chattels that he had at the time of the execution, will be liable to it: And where debt or damages are recovered, the plaintiff ſhall have execution of any land the defendant had at the time of the judgment; not of the lands he had the day when the firſt writ was purchaſed. Rol. Abr. 892. Sheriffs may deliver in execution all lands whereof others ſhall be ſeiſed in truſt for him againſt whom execution is had, on a judgment, &c. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. If there are chattels ſufficient, the ſheriff ought not to take the lands; nor may things fixed to the freehold, goods bought bona fide, goods pawned, &c. be taken in execution. 8 Rep. 143. And if a defendant hides his goods in ſecret places, ſo that the plaintiff cannot take them in execution, it is ſaid no action will lie againſt him. 5 Rep. 92, 93.

The ſale of goods for a valuable conſideration, after judgment, and before execution awarded, is good: And if judgment be given againſt a leſſee for years, and afterwards he ſelleth the term before execution, the term aſſigned bona fide is not liable; alſo if he aſſign it by fraud, and the aſſignee ſells it to another for a valuable conſideration, it is not liable to execution in the hands of the ſecond aſſignee. Godb. 161. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 783. If a perſon has a bill of ſale of any goods, in nature of a ſecurity for money, he ſhall be preferred for his debt to one who hath obtained a judgment againſt the debtor before thoſe goods are ſold; for till execution lodged in the ſheriff's hands, a man is owner of his goods, and may diſpoſe of them as he thinks fit, and they are not bound by the judgment. Preced. Ch. 286. Qu. If the buyer ſhould not be in poſſeſſion? Vide poſt.

But where a man generally keeps poſſeſſion of goods after ſale, it will make the ſame void againſt others, by the ſtatute of fraudulent conveyances. And where on an execution, the owner of the goods by agreement was to have the poſſeſſion of them upon certain terms; afterwards another got judgment againſt the ſame perſon, and took thoſe goods in execution: It was adjudged they were liable, and that the firſt execution was by fraud, and void againſt any ſubſequent creditor; becauſe there was no change of the poſſeſſion, and ſo no alteration of property. Ibid. 287.

A fieri facias being executed fraudulently, a fieri facias at the ſuit of another perſon afterwards ſhall ſtand good, and be preferred; and on trial, it is a matter proper to be left to a jury. Bradley v. Wyndham, ſheriff of Hampſhire. Wilſ. Rep. Par. 1. fo. 44.

Execution may be made of lands that the defendant hath by purchaſe after the judgment; although he ſell the ſame before execution. Roll. 892. Where there is an execution againſt goods or chattels, of a tenant for life, or years, the plaintiff before removal of the goods by the execution is to pay the landlord the rent of the land, &c. ſo as there be not above a year due; and if more be due, paying a year's rent, the plaintiff may proceed in his execution, and the ſheriff ſhall levy the rent paid, as well as the execution money. Stat. 8 Ann. c. 17.

For the greater ſecurity of purchaſers, it is enacted by the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 20. That the clerk of the eſſoins of the court of C. B. the clerk of the doggets of the court of King's Bench, and the maſter of the office of pleas in the court of Exchequer, ſhall make and put into an alphabetical dogget, by the defendant's names, a particular of all judgments by confeſſion, non ſum informatus, nibil dicit, &c. entred in their ſeveral courts, &c. and that no judgment not doggeted, and entred in the books as aforeſaid, ſhall affect any lands or tenements as to purchaſers or mortgagees, or have any preference againſt heirs, executors or adminiſtrators, in their adminiſtration of their anceſtors, teſtators or inteſtate's eſtates."

With reſpect to the King's prerogative.

The King, by his prerogative, may have execution of the body, lands, or goods of his debtor, at his election. Hob. 60. 2 Inſt. 19. 2 Rol. Abr. 472.

And here we muſt obſerve, that the King's execution relates, as to land, to the time of becoming in debt to the King; for as to debts that were of record, they always bound the lands and tenements; for all lands being held mediately or immediately from the King, when any debt was returned of any perſon, it laid the eſtate as liable to ſuch debt, as if it had been a reſervation on the firſt grant. 8 Co. 171. 2 Rol. Abr. 156, 157.

And as to debts not of record, they bind the lands from the time they are entered into; but this is by force of the ſtatute 33 H. 8. cap. 39.

As to the King's execution of goods, the ſame relates to the time of the awarding thereof, which is the teſte of the writ, as it was in the caſe of a common perſon at law; for though by the 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. No execution ſhall bind the property of goods, but from the time of the delivery of the writ to the ſheriff; yet as this act does not extend to the King, an extent of a later teſte ſuperſedes an execution of the goods by a former writ; becauſe by the King's prerogative at Common law, if there had been an execution at the ſubjects ſuit, and afterwards an extent, the execution was ſuperſeded till the extent was executed, becauſe the publick ought to be preferred to private property. 2 New Abr. 363.

If the King's debt be prior on record, it binds the lands of the debtor, into whoſe hands ſoever they come, becauſe it is in the nature of an original charge upon the land itſelf, and therefore muſt ſubject every body that claims under it; but if the lands were aliened in whole, or in part, as by granting a jointure before the debt contracted, ſuch alienee claims prior to the charge, and in ſuch caſe the land is not ſubject. See 2 Roll. Abr. 156-7. Moor 126. 3 Leon. 239, 240. 4 Leon. 10.

V. Of the party's remedy againſt irregular executions, and of the offence of obſtructing executions.

An execution may be ſet aſide as irregular, by ſuperſedeas; and the party have reſtitution, &c. Carthew 460, 461, 468. It hath been reſolved, that a writ of error is a ſuperſedeas from the time of the allowance: though if a writ of execution be executed before the writ of error is allowed, it may be returned afterwards. 1 Salk. 321. No writ of execution ſhall be ſtayed by any writ of error or ſuperſedeas, after verdict and judgment, in any action upon the caſe for payment of money, covenant, detinue, treſpaſs, &c. until recognizance be entered into as directed by 3 Jac. 1. cap. 8. Stat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 2. And judgment was had againſt a perſon at Briſtol, and his goods attached there; and the court of B. R. being moved to ſtay the execution until a writ of error brought ſhould be determined, they granted a habeas corpus, but nothing to ſtay the execution. 1 Bulſt. 268.

A defendant cannot plead to any writ of execution, (tho' he may in bar of execution to a ſcire facias brought;) but if he hath any matter after judgment to diſcharge him of the execution, he is to have audita querela. Co. Lit. 290. Or, move the court for relief, which is now the uſual method.

If huſband and wife are taken in execution for the debt of the wife, the wife ſhall be diſcharged; for the huſband being in execution, the wife ſhall not be ſo alſo, and becauſe the wife hath nothing liable to the execution. 1 Lev. 51.

The execution of a liberate is good without being returned; and where a man is taken upon a ca. ſa. the execution is good, though the writ is not returned: And ſo in all caſes where no inqueſt is to be taken, but only lands delivered, or ſeiſin had, &c. which are only matters of fact. 4 Rep. 67. 5 Rep. 89.

With regard to the obſtructing of execution.

There were anciently caſtles, fortreſſes and liberties, where they reſiſted the ſheriff in executing the King's writs, which creating great inconvenience, the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 39. (13 Ed. 1.) hindered the ſheriff from returning reſcuers to the King's writ of execution, and directed him to take the poſſe comitatus. See the Stat. and 2 New Abr. 368.

The judges conſtrued the words of the ſtatute to extend only to executions, and not to writs on meſne proceſs, that the ſheriff was not obliged to carry the poſſe comitatus where the man was bailable, for they did not preſume, that in ſuch caſes the King's writ would be diſobeyed. 2 New Abr. 368.

The original of commitment for contempts ſeems to be derived from this ſtatute; for ſince the ſheriff was to commit thoſe who reſiſted the proceſs, the judges who awarded ſuch proceſs muſt have the ſame authority to vindicate it; hence, if any one offers any contempt to his proceſs, either by word or deed, he is ſubject to impriſonment during pleaſure, viz. from whence they ſhall not be delivered without the King's ſpecial commandment; ſo that, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of Magna Charta, that none be impriſoned without judgment of their peers, or by the law of the land, this is one part of the law of the land to commit for contempts, and confirmed by this ſtatute. 2 New Abr. 368. See tit. Debt-Error.

Execution for the King's debt, or prerogative execution, is always preferred before any other executions. 7 Rep. 20. And if a defendant is taken by capias ad ſatisfaciendum, and before the return thereof a prerogative writ iſſues from the Exchequer, for the debt of the King, teſted a day before he was taken, here he ſhall be held in execution for the King's debt, and that of the ſubject. Dyer 197. Lands intailed in the hands of the iſſue in tail, when ſubject to the King's extent, and where not, ſee 7 Rep. 21. See alſo King.

Execution of Criminals, Muſt be according to the judgment, and the King cannot alter a judgment from hanging to beheading, becauſe no execution can be warranted unleſs it be purſuant to the judgment. 3 Inſt. 52, 211. H. P. C. 272. But there are ancient precedents, wherein men condemned to be hanged for felony, have been beheaded by force of a ſpecial warrant from the King. Bract. 104. Staundf. 13. And the King may pardon part of the execution in judgment for treaſon, viz. all but beheading. The court may command execution to be done without any writ: though ſometimes execution is commanded by writ. 2 Hawk. P. C. 463. Judgment belongs to the judge; but the execution muſt be done by the ſheriff, &c. And an execution cannot be lawfully made by any but the proper officer; who may do it on the precept of the judge under his ſeal: And if the ſheriff, or other officer, alters the execution, or any other executes the offender, or if he is killed without authority of law, it is felony. 2 Hawk Ibid.

It is ſaid by Hale Chief Juſtice, That there is no warrant for the execution of perſons condemned, but a calendar directing it left with the ſheriff, under the hand of the juſtice that ſits; though anciently there was a precept, or warrant, under their hands and ſeals: And where the priſoner is in cuſtody of the ſheriff, the open pronouncing and entering the judgment ſuſpendatur, is a warrant for the execution. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 31, 409. See ante tit. Calendar of Priſoners.

Subſequent juſtices have no power by the Stat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 7. to award execution of perſons condemned by former judges; but if judgment has not been paſſed on the offenders, the other juſtices may give judgment and award execution, &c. 2 Hawk. 27. Execution ought to be in the ſame county where the criminal was tried and convicted; except the record of the attainder be removed into B. R. which may award execution in the county where it ſits. 3 Inſt. 31, 211, 217.

If upon a record removed, an outlawed perſon confeſs himſelf to be the ſame perſon, execution ſhall be had; but if he deny it, and the King's Attorney confeſſes he is not, he ſhall be diſcharged; though if the Attorney-General take iſſue upon it, the ſame ſhall be tried. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 402, 463. If a perſon, when attainted, ſtands mute to a demand why execution ſhall not go againſt him, the ordinary execution (and not penance) ſhall be awarded. 2 Hawk. 462. In caſe a man condemned to die, come to life after he is hanged, as the judgment is not executed till he is dead, he ought to be hung up again. Finch 389.

If a woman quick with child be condemned either for treaſon, or felony, ſhe may alledge her being with child in order to get the execution reſpited, and thereupon the ſheriff, or marſhal ſhall be commanded to take her into a private room, and to impanel a jury of matrons to try and examine whether ſhe be quick with child or not; and if they find her quick with child, the execution ſhall be reſpited till her delivery. But it is agreed, that a woman cannot demand ſuch reſpite of execution by reaſon of her being quick with child more than once; and that ſhe can neither ſave herſelf by this means from pleading upon her arraignment, nor from having judgment pronounced againſt her upon her conviction. Alſo it is ſaid, both by Staundford and Coke, that a woman can have no advantage from being found with child, unleſs ſhe be alſo found quick with child. 2 Hawk. P. C. 462, 463, 464.

The body of a traitor or felon is forfeited to the King by the execution; and he may diſpoſe of it as he pleaſes. The execution of perſons under the age of diſcretion is uſually reſpited, in order to obtain a pardon. 1 Hawk 2. By the Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 37. Perſons convicted of murder are to be executed the day after ſentence, and their bodies delivered to ſurgeons to be anatomiſed. The judge may ſtay the ſentence, and appoint the body to be hung in chains or anatomiſed, but not buried.

Execution of Statutes. The court of Star Chamber erected in the reign of King Hen. 7. was ſaid to be for for the execution of Statutes, &c. Stat. 3 H. 7. c. 1.

Executione facienda, Is a writ commanding execution of a judgment, and diverſly uſed. Reg. Orig.

Executione facienda in Withernamium, A writ that lies for taking his cattle, who hath conveyed the cattle of another out of the county, ſo that the ſheriff cannot replevy them. Reg. Orig. 82.

Executione Judicii, Is a writ directed to the judge of an inferior court to do execution upon a judgment therein, or to return ſome reaſonable cauſe wherefore he delays the execution. F. N. B. 20. If execution be not done on the firſt writ, an alias ſhall iſſue, and a pluries with this clauſe, vel cauſam nobis ſignifices quare, &c. And if upon this writ execution is not done, or ſome reaſonable cauſe returned why it is delayed, the party ſhall have an attachment againſt him who ought to have done the execution, returnable in B. R. or C. B. New Nat. Br. 43.

If the judgment be in a court of record, this writ ſhall be directed to the juſtices of the court where the judgment was given, and not unto the officer of the court; for if the officer will not execute the writs directed unto him, nor return them as he ought, the judges of the court may amerce him. Ibid. One may have a writ de executione judicii out of the Chancery to execute a judgment, in an inferior court, although a writ of error be brought to remove the record, and reverſe the judgment; if he that brings the writ of error do not take care to have the record tranſcribed, and the writ of error returned up in due time. 1 Lil. Abr. 562.

Executive Power. The ſupreme executive power of theſe kingdoms is veſted by our laws in a ſingle perſon, the King, or Queen, for the time being. Black. Com. 1 V. 190, &c.

The executive power, in this ſtate, hath a right to a negative, in parliament, i. e. to refuſe aſſent to any acts offered, or otherwiſe the other two branches of the legiſlative power would, or might, become deſpotic. See Monteſquieu's La'Eſprit des Lex Liv. Executor, (Lat.) Is one that is appointed by a man's laſt will and teſtament, to have the execution thereof after his deceaſe, and the diſpoſing of all the teſtator's ſubſtance according to the tenor of the will: he is as much as hæres deſignatus or teſtamentarius in the Civil law, as to debts, goods and chattels of his teſtator. Terms de Ley.

Herein is to be conſidered,

I. The different kinds of executors, &c.
II. Who may make executors, as alſo who may be appointed executor, and in what manner.
III. Of the probate of wills, with the power, intereſt, and duty of executors.
IV. Of actions by, and againſt executors, and therein of devaſtavit.

I. Of the different kinds of executors, &c.

Under this head might be conſidered, adminiſtrations during the minority of an infant executor, and adminiſtrations de bonis non; but for theſe ſee title Adminiſtrator. It will ſuffice in this place to treat of executor de ſon tort. An

Executor de ſon tort, or executor of his own wrong, is he that takes upon him the office of an executor by intruſion, not being ſo conſtituted by the teſtator; or, for want thereof, appointed by the ordinary to adminiſter. Dyer 166. If an executor of his own wrong takes upon himſelf the office of an executor without a lawful authority, he is chargeable to the rightful executor, and to all the creditors of the teſtator, and likewiſe to the legatees, ſo far as the goods amount unto which he wrongfully poſſeſſed: and ſuch an executor is made by any act of acquiſition, transferring or poſſeſſing himſelf of any of the eſtate or goods of the deceaſed; but not by acts of neceſſity, piety or charity. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 793. Where a perſon gets the goods of the inteſtate into his hands, he is chargeable for them as executor de ſon tort, until he gives ſatisfaction for them to the true adminiſtrator; or ſatisfies the true debts of the inteſtate to the value, Cro. Eliz. 88. 5 Rep. 31, 32. 8 Rep. 135. 9 Rep. 39. And ſuch a one cannot retain for his own debt, againſt another creditor. 5 Rep. 31. See Poſt. And by ſtatute, perſons obtaining any goods or debts of an inteſtate by fraud, or procuring adminiſtration to be granted to a ſtranger, &c. are chargeable as executors in their own wrong, to the value of the goods or debts, &c. And executors and adminiſtrators of executors in their own wrong, ſhall be liable to pay the debts of the teſtator; in like manner as their teſtator or inteſtate. 43 Eliz. cap. 8. 30 Car. 2. cap. 7.

When there is a rightful executor, and a ſtranger poſſeſſes himſelf of the teſtator's goods, without doing any further act as executor, he is not an executor de ſon tort, but a treſpaſſer: but where there is neither an executor or adminiſtrator, it is otherwiſe; for there the creditors have no perſon againſt whom they may bring any action but him who hath poſſeſſed himſelf of the goods. Dyer 105. Rol. Abr. 918. See 5 Rep. 82. An executor of his wrong may be ſued as executor; and he ſhall be ſued for legacies, as well as a rightful executor. Noy 13. Tho' an executor de ſon tort cannot maintain any ſuit or action becauſe he cannot produce any will to juſtify it: and he will be ſeverely puniſhed for a falſe plea, for in ſuch caſe the execution ſhall be awarded for the whole debt, tho' he meddled with a thing of very ſmall value. Noy 69.

Debt was brought againſt an executor of his own wrong, who pleaded that he never was executor, nor adminiſtred as ſuch; it was held, not to be material whether he had aſſets or no, but to prove that he had adminiſtered any thing was enough; for this would make him chargeable with the debt: but if he had not pleaded falſly, he would have been liable for no more than the value of the goods of the deceaſed. Style 120.

An executor of his own wrong poſſeſſes himſelf of goods, and afterwards adminiſtration is granted him, he may by virtue thereof retain goods for his own debt. 5 Rep. 30. And where a man took poſſeſſion of an inteſtate's goods wrongfully, and ſold them to another, and then took out adminiſtration, it was adjudged that the ſale was good by relation. Moor 126. An executor de ſon tort ſhall be allowed in equity, all ſuch payments which a rightful executor ought to have paid. 2 Chanc. Rep. 33.

The true and rightful executor is he who is appointed ſuch, by will: And he may do many acts before probate. See Div. III. &c.

II. Who may make executors, and who may be appointed an executor, and in what manner.

A man attainted of felony cannot make executors; becauſe he hath forfeited all that he had: but a perſon outlawed may make executors becauſe they ſue in auter droit, &c. 1 Leon. 326. Cro. Eliz. 577. Co. Lit. 128. Cro. Car. 8, 9. 1 Rol. Abr. 914. 1 Vern. 184. All perſons capable of making a will, are capable of being executors. Cro. Car. 9. And a woman covert may be an executor, and do any lawful act which another executor may do; but ſhe may not damage her huſband thereby, by aſſenting to a legacy before debts are paid, &c. 5 Rep. 27. A feme covert executrix cannot releaſe a debt of her teſtator's or give away the goods ſhe hath as executrix, without the huſband; but the huſband may do it, and yet the goods which the wife hath as executrix are not diveſted out of her, as her own goods are; nor if ſhe dies, ſhall they go to the huſband, but to her executors, or the next of kin, being admiſtrator of her teſtator. Offic. Exec. c. 17. Huſband and wife muſt be named in actions brought for goods which the wife is intitled to as executrix. Ibid. A woman may be executrix to her huſband, and the huſband executor to his wife; and by this means he may recover all the debts due to her before marriage, &c. Fitz. Executor 24, 47, 87. Quære, as to the power of a feme covert, to make a will? If ſhe has not that power, ſhe cannot make her huſband executor. But he may take out adminiſtration to her, and that will in every reſpect anſwer his purpoſe.

An infant may be an executor; though he cannot act till he is ſeventeen years of age; and till that time adminiſtration durante minori ætate is to be granted. 6 Rep. 67. 4 Inſt. 335. If two are executors, one whereof is under age, he of full age may ſolely prove the will. 1 Lev. 181.

A traitor, or felon, baſtard begotten in inceſt, or a notorious uſurer, it is ſaid, may not be executor to another. Swinb. 222. A popiſh recuſant convict cannot be an executor. 9 Rep. 37. A mayor and commonalty may be executors. 1 Rol. Abr. 915. And if the King is made executor, he appoints others to take the execution of the will upon them, and to take account. 5 Rep. 29. Where executors are appointed they may accept of, or refuſe the executorſhip; but they may not refuſe after acceptance, nor on the other hand accept after refuſal. 9 Rep. 37. Sed. qu. as to the latter poſition, unleſs the refuſal is by ſome act regiſtred in the Spiritual Court?

It ſeems agreed, that by our law, an alien, or one born out of the allegiance of our King, may be an executor or adminiſtrator; alſo it hath been adjudged, that ſuch a one ſhall have adminiſtration of leaſes as well as perſonal things, becauſe he hath them in auter droit, and not to his own uſe. Off. of Ex. 17.

But it has been long doubted, whether an alien enemy ſhould maintain an action as executor, for on the one hand it is ſaid, that by the policy of the law, alien enemies ſhall not be admitted to actions to recover effects, which may be carried out of the kingdom to weaken ourſelves and enrich the enemy, therefore public utility muſt be preferred to private convenience; but on the other hand it is ſaid, that thoſe effects of the teſtator are not forfeited to the King by way of repriſal, becauſe they are not the alien enemy's, for he is to recover them for others; and if he allows ſuch alien enemies to poſſeſs the effects as well as an alien friend, he muſt allow them power to recover, ſince in that there is no difference, and by conſequence he muſt not be diſabled to ſue for them; if it were otherwiſe, it would be a prejudice to the King's ſubjects, who could not recover their debts from the alien executor, by his not being able to get in the aſſets of the teſtator. Cro. Eliz. 683. Moor 431. Carter 49, 191. Skin. 370.

But an excommunicated perſon cannot be an executor or adminiſtrator, for by the excommunication he is excluded from the body of the church, and is incapable to lay out the goods of the deceaſed to pious uſes. Co. Lit. 134. Swinb. 349. Godolph. 85.

It is laid down as a general rule, that if a creditor makes his debtor executor, it is an extinguiſhment of the debt, for he cannot ſue himſelf. 1 Rol. Abr. 920-1. 5 Co. 30. Offic. of Ex. 30. Godolph. 113. Sed qu. If the executors debt is not aſſets, with reſpect to creditors, if the reſidue of the teſtators eſtate is not ſufficient, It is ſo laid down 8 Rep. 136. 2 Rol. Abr. 920.

But if a perſon dies inteſtate, and the ordinary commits adminiſtration to a debtor, the debt is not thereby extinguiſhed, for he comes into the adminiſtration by the act of law, whereas the other is the act of the party. 5 Co. 136. 1 Salk. 306. Offic. of Ex. 31.

An executor may be appointed either by expreſs words, or words that amount to a direct appointment; as if the teſtator declares by his will, that a certain perſon ſhall have his goods to pay debts, and otherwiſe diſpoſe of, &c. And executors may be made upon condition; for a fixed time; or ſome part of the eſtate. Wood's Inſt. 320. A man that can make an executor, may either make one, two, three, or more his executors; and he may appoint one perſon his executor for one year, and another man for another year, &c. If he make a will, and appoint an executor for ſeven years; after that the ordinary may grant adminiſtration of the goods; ſo till the power of executor takes place: and where one makes an executor as to part of his eſtate, he ſhall die inteſtate as to the reſidue. 4 Shep. Abr. 66, 67, 68. If there is no executor, there is properly no will; and where there is no will, there can be no executor: but this is underſtood of goods; for where lands in fee are deviſed, this is good, tho' no executor be named: executors having nothing to do with land, which is not teſtamentary but by act of parliament. Offic. Exec. 3, 4. Finch. 167.

III. Of the probate of wills, with the power, intereſt, and duty of executors.

When a will with executors is made, the ordinary may ſend out proceſs againſt the executors to come in and prove it; and if they do not come in, they are to be excommunicated; but if they come in, and refuſe to take upon them the execution of the will, then the ordinary is to commit adminiſtration, and the refuſal muſt be by ſome act regiſtered in the Spiritual Court. Offic. Exec. If an executor hath adminiſtered, he cannot refuſe; but the ordinary is to compel him to take upon him the executorſhip. Offic. Exec. 58. Executors cannot refuſe for a time, but for ever; but they may have time to adviſe upon it, and the ordinary is to grant letters ad colligendum, not adminiſtration. Cro. Eliz. 92. See Dyer 160.

If there are many executors of a will, and one of them only proves the will, and takes upon him the executorſhip, it is ſufficient for all of them; but the reſt after may join with him, and intermeddle with the teſtator's eſtate: but if they all of them refuſe the executorſhip, none of them will ever afterwards be admitted to prove the will; the ordinary in this caſe grants adminiſtration with the will annexed, and the teſtator is in law adjudged to die inteſtate, and without executor. 9 Rep. 37. 1 Rep. 113. Perk. 485.

If an executor dies before probate, it is the ſame; for ſuch an executor's executor cannot prove the will, becauſe he is not named therein, and no one can prove a will but he who is named executor in it; but if the firſt executor had proved the will, then his executor might have been executor to the firſt teſtator, there requiring no new probate. 1 Salk. 299.

An executor of an executor may be executor to the firſt teſtator; but he may take upon him the executorſhip of his own teſtator, and refuſe to intermeddle with the eſtate of the other: and if the firſt executor refuſes, or dies before probate, his executor ſhall not adminiſter to the firſt teſtator: nor can an executor of an adminiſtrator take adminiſtration of the goods of his inteſtate. Dyer 372.

A teſtator having thought the executor appointed a proper perſon to be intruſted with his affairs, the ordinary cannot adjudge him diſabled or incapax; but a mandamus ſhall iſſue from B. R. for the ordinary to grant probate of the will, and admit the executor, if he refuſe him: neither can the ordinary inſiſt upon ſecurity from the executor, as the teſtator hath thought him able and qualified. 1 Salk. 299.

And altho' an executor becomes bankrupt, yet it is ſaid the ordinary cannot grant adminiſtration to another: but if an executor become non compos, the Spiritual Court may commit adminiſtration for this natural diſability. 1 Salk. 307. If an executor takes goods of the teſtator's, and convert them to his own uſe; or if he either receive or pay debts of the teſtator, or give bond for payment; make acquittances for them, or demand the teſtator's debts as executor; or give away the goods of the teſtator, &c. theſe are an adminiſtration, ſo that he cannot afterwards refuſe the executorſhip: and it has been held, that if the wife of the teſtator take more apparel than is neceſſary, it is an adminiſtration. Offic. Exec. 39.

It is uſual when there is a conteſt about a will, or when the right of adminiſtration comes in queſtion, to enter a caveat in the Spiritual Court, which by their law is ſaid to ſtand in force for three months. Godolph. 258. Goldſb. 119. 2 Rol. Rep. 6. Cro. Jac. 463-4.

But it is ſaid, that our law takes no notice of a caveat, and that it is but a meer cautionary act done by a ſtranger, to prevent the ordinary from doing wrong, and that therefore, if adminiſtration be granted pending a caveat, this is valid in our law, tho', by the law in the Spiritual Court, it may be ſuch an irregularity as will be ſufficient to repeal it. 1 Rol. Rep. 191. Cro. Jac. 463. 2 Rol. Rep. 6.

As to their intereſt and power.

All goods and chattels which belonged to the teſtator at the time of his death, in any part of the world, come to the executor as aſſets, and make him chargeable to creditors and legatees; and debts, &c. recovered by the executor, by action after the death of the teſtator, are to be accounted as aſſets, but not before recovered. 6 Rep. 47. Co. Lit. 374. If an executor never recover, or get in a debt, he ſhall never be charged, provided he hath uſed his utmoſt endeavours to recover it, and cannot do it. 1 Rep. 98. And where an executorſhip is controverted in the Spiritual Court by another executor who ſets up another will; an injunction may be granted to the teſtator's debtors not to pay any money till the title to the executorſhip is ſettled. Chanc. Ca. 75

The chattels real and perſonal of the teſtator coming to the executor, are leaſes for years, rent due, corn growing and cut, graſs cut and ſevered, &c. cattle, money, plate, houſhold goods, &c. Co. Lit. 118. Dyer 130, 537. An executor having a leaſe for years of land in right of the deceaſed, if he purchaſe the fee, whereby the leaſe is extinct; yet this leaſe ſhall continue to be aſſets, as to the creditors and legatees. 1 Rep. 87. Bro. Leaſe 63. Though a plantation be an eſtate of inheritance, yet being in a foreign country, it is a chattel in the hands of executors to pay debts. 1 Vent. 358. The executor is not only intitled to all perſonal goods and chattels of the teſtator, of what nature ſoever they are; but they are alſo accounted to be in his poſſeſſion, though they are not actually ſo; for he may maintain an action againſt any one who detains them from him: he is likewiſe intitled to things in action; as right of execution on a judgment, bond, ſtatute, &c. Alſo to money awarded on arbitration, where the party dies before the day, &c. Co. Lit. 209. 2 Vent. 249. 1 Danv. Abr. 549.

If goods of the teſtator are kept from the executor, he may ſue for them in the Spiritual Court, or at common law; and if one ſeiſed of a meſſuage in fee, &c. hath goods in the houſe, and makes a will and executors, and dies, the executors may enter into the houſe, and carry away the goods. Lit. 60. An executor may, in convenient time after the teſtator's death, enter into a houſe deſcended to the heir, for removing and carrying away the goods; ſo as the door be open, or the key be in the door. Offic. Exec. 8. He may take the goods and chattels to himſelf, or give power to another to ſeize them for him. 9 Rep. 38. An executor with his own goods redeems the goods of the teſtator; or pays the teſtator's debts, &c. the goods of the teſtator ſhall, for ſo much, be changed into the proper goods of the executor. Jenk. Cent. 188.

Executors having their power wholly by the will, may releaſe an action, debt, or duty, or do any thing as executors before probate of the will, ſo as afterwards they prove it; except it be bringing actions for debts, &c. but to maintain theſe they muſt ſhew the teſtament proved, and the probate is to be brought into court before the defendant will be bound to plead. Plowd. 277. Co. Lit. 292. 1 Rol. Abr. 917, 926.

Where a man by will deviſes that his lands ſhall be ſold for payment of debts, his executors ſhall ſell the land, to whom it belongs to pay the debts. 2 Leon. c. 276. And if lands are deviſed to executors to be ſold for payment of the teſtator's debts, thoſe executors that act in the executorſhip, or that will ſell, may do it without the others. Co. Lit. 113. By Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 4. Bargains and ſales of lands, &c. deviſed to be ſold by executors, ſhall be as good, if made by ſuch of the executors only as take upon them the execution of the will, as if all the executors had joined in the ſale: if lands are thus deviſed to pay debts, a ſurviving executor may ſell them; but if the deviſe be, that the executor ſhall ſell the land, and not of the land to them to be ſold, here being only an authority, not an intereſt; if one dies the other cannot ſell. 1 Lev. 203.

When lands are deviſed or diſpoſed for paying debts, goods in the hands of an executor ſhall not be liable; though in caſe of an adminiſtrator it is otherwiſe. Ibid. Each executor hath the whole of the teſtator's goods and chattels, and each may ſell or aſſign the whole: (but one of them cannot aſſign or releaſe his intereſt to the other, if he doth it will be void.) If one executor grant his part of the teſtator's goods, all paſſeth, and nothing is left in the other, each having the whole, and there are no parts or moieties between executors: yet one executor may demiſe or grant a moiety of the land, for the whole term, and ſo may the other; and this way they may ſettle in friends truſted for them a moiety for each. Offic. Exec. c. 9.

As for the reſiduum of the teſtator's eſtate, if there is not any reſiduary legatee appointed, it ſeems now to be underſtood that wherever there is ſufficient on the face of a will to imply that the teſtator intended his executor ſhould not have the reſidue, the undivided ſurplus of the eſtate ſhall go to the next of kin. Such implication may be by means of a competent legacy, or otherwiſe. Black. Com. 2 V. 514, 515. See Gift. & 3 Salk. 82. & 2 Vern. 361, 677. See alſo further end of this Div. III. and vide Diſtribution.

With regard to their duty.

The duty and office of an executor is to bury the teſtator in a decent manner, according to his rank and quality, and with a due regard to the eſtate left after debts are ſatisfied: for whatever an executor lays out extravagantly in funeral charges, if there be not enough to pay debts, he muſt bear it at his own expence. Wood's Inſt. 325. The common ſum allowed for a funeral of an inſolvent is 40 s. But all reaſonable and neceſſary funeral charges muſt be allowed before debts and legacies. 1 Rol. Abr. 926. The executor is to make an inventory of all the goods and chattels of the deceaſed, with their value, and of all debts due to the teſtator; and this inventory ought to be made and appraiſed in the preſence of the executor, by two or more of the creditors, or two next of kin to the teſtator; or, in their default, by two or more of the neighbours or friends of the deceaſed; and then the executor muſt deliver the ſame upon oath to the ordinary. Doct. & Stud. c. 10. 21 H. 8. c. 5.

The inventory ſhews the charge of the executor, and his account muſt be his diſcharge, for ſo much as he can prove to be laid out in the payments for funeral charges, making the inventory, probate of the will; debts and legacies: this account will diſcharge him of all ſuits in the Spiritual Court; but will not diſcharge him of ſuits at the common law, for there each particular muſt be again proved. Wood 328. An executor is to paſs his account before the ordinary, for the goods and chattels of the teſtator; but the ordinary may not call executors to account ex officio. 9 Rep. 39.

By ſtatute no executor or adminiſtrator ſhall be cited into any eccleſiaſtical court to render an account, otherwiſe than by inventory, unleſs at the inſtance of a creditor, &c. 1 Jac. 1. c. 17. It has been held, an executor is bound to account; and the ordinary muſt take the executor's account, when he is ſummoned by any creditor, and cannot hold plea of it, becauſe it is made upon oath: but if a legatee comes, he may unravel the account, though if the executor will pay him his legacy, then he cannot compel him to exhibit an inventory or to account, he having the end of his ſuit. 2 Inſt. 600. Raym. 407. Hill. 6 Ann.

The executor is to prove the will before the ordinary in common form, by his own oath, or by witneſſes, if required by thoſe who have a right to queſtion it; and being exhibited in the regiſter's office of the Eccleſiaſtical Court, a copy in parchment is delivered the executor under the ordinary's ſeal, which is called the probate. Perk. 486. 9 Rep. 37. 2 Inſt. 488. One may prove a will before the ordinary, which contains goods and lands; though formerly a prohibition was granted as to the lands: and a will of freehold land is to be proved by witneſſes in the Chancery. 1 Vent. 207. 6 Rep. 23. The proving of the will is neceſſary for goods and chattels, to give the executor power to bring actions, and confirm the acts he did as executor before: when this is done, the executor is to pay all the teſtator's debts before any legacies. For the order of paying them. ſee Adminiſtrator, Alſo 1 Rol. Abr. 927. Plowd. 543. See Jenk. Cent. 274.

And if the executor pays the debts in any other order, he is liable to the payment of the debts of a higher degree, though out of his own eſtate. Doct. & Stud. c. 10. An executor is allowed to retain his own debt in preference to others of equal degree. Preced. Chan. 179. Noy Max. 104. 3 Leon. cap. 364. If no ſuit is begun againſt the executor, he may pay the whole debt to any one creditor in equal degree, though there be nothing left to pay another any part of his debt. Wood's Inſt. An executor pays a debt upon bond before a ſtatute broken, and afterwards the ſtatute is broken, the payment of the debt upon bond is a good plea againſt the ſtatute. Cro. Jac. 9. Pending a bill in equity againſt an executor, he may pay any other debt of a higher nature, or of as high a nature, where he has legal aſſets: but where there is a final decree againſt an executor, if he pays a bond, it is a miſpayment; for a decree is in nature of a judgment. 2 Salk. 507.

If there be ſeveral debts due on ſeveral bonds from the teſtator, his executor may pay which bond debt he pleaſes, except an action of debt is actually commenced againſt him upon one of thoſe bonds; and in ſuch caſe, if, pending an action, another bond-creditor brings another action againſt him, before judgment, obtained by either of them, he may prefer which he will by confeſſing a judgment to one and paying him, which judgment he may plead in bar to the other action. Vaugh. 89. See Sid. 21. But this judgment confeſſed muſt be before plea. The uſual way is, if there is time, and an executor or adminiſtrator is deſirous of preferring another creditor of equal degree with him who ſues is, inſtantly, before plea to confeſs a judgment, and then plead it, with a plene admiſtravit ultra.

If judgment for 100 l. is ſuffered, and the plaintiff compounds for 60 l. the judgment for the whole ſum ſhall not be allowed to keep off other creditors. 8 Rep. 133. Judgments are not to be kept on foot by fraud. Sid. 230. 1 Vent. 76.

On a Sci. fac. againſt an executor, he cannot plead fully adminiſtred, but muſt plead ſpecially that no goods of the teſtator came to his hands, whereby he might diſcharge the debt; for he may have fully adminiſtred, and yet be liable to the debt, where goods of the teſtator's afterwards come to his hands. 1 Lill. 568. Cro. Eliz. 575. In Scire facias againſt executors, upon a judgment againſt their teſtator, they pleaded Plene Adminiſtravit, by paying debts upon bonds ante Notitiam: It was adjudged no plea, for at their peril they ought to take notice of debts upon record, and firſt pay them; and though the recovery be in another county than that where the teſtator lived: but where an action is brought againſt executors in another county than where they live, and they, not knowing thereof, pay debts upon ſpecialty, it is good. Cro. Eliz. 793.

Where day of payment is paſt, the penalty of a bond is the ſum due at law, but where the day of payment is not come the ſum in the condition is the debt, and the executor cannot cover the aſſets any further. The Bank of England v. Morrice Widow. Rep. Temp. Hardw. Per Annaly 224.

A bill may be exhibited in the Chancery againſt an executor, to diſcover the teſtator's perſonal eſtate; and thereupon he ſhall be decreed to pay debts and legacies. Abr. Ca. Eq. 238. If a perſon being executor, and his teſtator greatly indebted, be deſirous to pay the aſſets as far as they will go, and that his payments may not be afterwards queſtioned, he may bring a bill in equity againſt all the teſtator's creditors, in order that they may, if they will, conteſt each other's debts, and diſpute who ought to be preferred in payment. 2 Vern. 37.

Where there are only equitable aſſets, they muſt be equally paid amongſt all the creditors; for a debt by judgment, and ſimple contract is in conſcience equal. 2 Peer Williams 416. As to what are legal, and what equitable aſſets, ſee Vin. Abr. title Payment. And it is held, that bonds, and other debts, ſhall be paid equally, by executors, where a perſon has deviſed lands to them, to be ſold, for the payment of his debts. 1 Peer Will. 430.

A debt deviſed by the teſtator, is not to be paid by the debtor to the legatee, but to the executor, who can give a ſufficient diſcharge for it, and is anſwerable to the legatee if there be ſufficient aſſets. If an executor pays out the aſſets in legacies, and afterwards debts appear, of which he had no notice, which he is obliged to pay; the executor by bill in Chancery may force the legatees to refund. Chan. Rep. 136, 149. One legatee paid ſhall refund againſt another, and againſt a creditor of the teſtator, that can charge the executor only in equity: but if an executor pays a debt upon ſimple contract, there ſhall be no refunding to a creditor of a higher nature. 2 Vent. 360.

Executors are not bound to pay a legacy, without ſecurity to refund. Chan. Rep. 149, 257. And if ſentence be given for a legacy in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, a prohibition lies, unleſs they take ſecurity to refund. 2 Vent. 358. If an executor pays legacies, and ſeven years after covenant is broken, for which action is brought againſt the executor; the court inclined that it was a Devaſtavit, and that the executor ought to have taken ſecurity for his indemnity upon payment of the legacies. Allen 38. Though it has been adjudged, that a covenant is no duty till broken; and therefore ſince it is uncertain, whether it will be broken or not, it ſhall be preſumed it will not; and the legacies being a preſent duty ſhall be paid by the executor, notwithſtanding any covenant not actually broken. Style 37. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 786. If one binds himſelf and his executors in an obligation, &c. to perform a certain thing, and in his will gives divers legacies and dies, leaving goods only ſufficient to pay the obligation when forfeited; this obligation ſhall be no bar to the legacies, becauſe it is uncertain whether the ſame may ever be forfeited; though the executor may therefore make a delivery upon condition, viz. to return the legacies if the obligation becomes forfeited, and the penalty be recovered. 1 Rol. Abr. 928. 2 Vent. 358.

The executor is to pay the legacies, after the debts: But executors cannot in equity pay their own legacies firſt, where there is not enough to pay all of them; but ſhall have an equal proportion with the reſt of the legatees. Chan. Rep. 354. An executor has election, where any chattel is given to him, to have and take in one right or the other, viz. as executor, or legatee; which is to be made by a ſpecial taking or declaration, &c. 10 Rep. 47. Plowd. 519. Dyer 277.

If there be a ſpecific legacy given of any thing, as a horſe, ſilver cup, &c. it muſt be delivered before any other legacy, provided there be aſſets. Offic. Exec. 317. And if there be enough to pay all the legacies, after the debts are ſatisfied, the legacies ſhall all be paid; but if there is not ſufficient to pay debts or more, the legatees muſt loſe their legacies, or a proportionable part of them. Plowd. 526. See 1 Lill. Abr. 579. Wood's Inſt. 322. 4 Ann. in B. R.

The ſurplus of the teſtator's perſonal eſtate, has been adjudged to be in truſt for his children, though they had particular legacies. 1 Vern. 473. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 244. A man by his will gave legacies to relations, near the value of his eſtate, and made a certain perſon executor, to whom he gave a ſmall legacy, and deſired him to take the trouble of the executorſhip; after the making of which will, the teſtator lived ten years, and acquired a conſiderable additional eſtate, and then died; on a bill brought by his relations, againſt the executor, to have an account of the perſonal eſtate, and the ſurplus diſtributed amongſt them; here the new acquired eſtate was decreed to go to the legatees, in proportion of each one's legacy. Preced. Canc. 12. The ſurpluſage of an eſtate, given to pay debts, &c. after debts, legacies and portions paid, hath been ordered by the Court of Chancery to go to the heir. Chan. Rep. 189. Overſeers of a will have nothing to do with the execution of it, but are only to give advice to the executors; and if they will not do their duty, to complain of them to the ſpiritual court, &c.

IV. Of actions by and againſt executors, and therein of Devaſtavit.

For the goods of the teſtator, taken from them, or for treſpaſs upon the land, &c. Executors may before the will proved bring action of treſpaſs, detinue, &c. And if they ſell cattle, or other goods of the teſtator, before the will is proved, they may have actions for the money payable, before the ſame is proved: and an executor may be ſued for the debts of the teſtator before probate of the will, if he be executor by his own act of adminiſtring, which makes him liable to actions. Offic. Exec. 35. It has been ruled, that an executor may commence an action before probate; but he cannot declare upon it, without producing in court the letters teſtamentary: he is not like an adminiſtrator, who hath no right till adminiſtration committed; for his right is the ſame before, as after probate of the will, and the not proving it, is only an impediment to the action. 1 Salk. 303.

I ſhould ſuppoſe probate obtained before trial of the action is ſufficient, unleſs oyer of the letters teſtamentary is demanded: for it is of the will, not the probate, profert is made, and on the trial, for any matters relative to the perſonal eſtate, with which the executors have to do, the probate is the proper proof of the will.

Executors may maintain action of trover for goods converted in the life of the teſtator. Cro. Eliz. 377. And by the ſtatute, executors ſhall have a writ of account, and the like action and proceſs, as the teſtator might have had. 13 Ed. 1. c. 23. The executors may bring actions for treſpaſs done to their teſtator, as for goods and chattels carried away in his life, and ſhall recover their damages in the ſame manner as he ſhould have done. Stat. 4 Ed. 3. c. 7. Alſo executors of executors ſhall have actions of debt, account, and of goods taken away of the firſt teſtator's; and have execution of ſtatutes, &c. and ſhall anſwer to others, ſo far as they recover goods of the firſt teſtator, as the firſt executors. 25 Ed. 3. c. 5.

The word executor is a word collective, and doth comprehend in it the executor of an executor; for he is accountable for the firſt teſtator's goods, and is as it were his executor for ſuch goods as remain unadminiſtred by the firſt executor. 1 Lill. Abr. 568. Formerly, if an executor waſted goods and left an executor, and died leaving aſſets, his executor ſhould not be chargeable, becauſe it was a perſonal tort. 2 Lev. 120. But now it is otherwiſe by the ſtatute 30 Car. 2. c. 7. made perpetual by 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24. And ſee Com. Dig. 1 V. 276. (I. 3.)

The law ſubjects the executors to every perſon's claim and action, which he had againſt the teſtator, except as to a treſpaſs, vi et armis, &c. committed by the teſtator; for which reaſon the executor is ſaid to be the teſtator's aſſignee, and to repreſent the perſon of the teſtator: but for perſonal wrongs done by the teſtator to the perſon, or goods, &c. of another, the executor doth not repreſent him; becauſe perſonal actions die with the perſon. Co. Lit. 209. 9 Rep. 89.

Nothing can be debt in the executor, which was not debt in the teſtator. Cro. Eliz. 232. A promiſe to pay to an executor, when the teſtator is not named, is not good. Cro. Jac. 570. But a teſtator may bind his executors as to his goods, though he himſelf is not bound. Ibid. And an executor may recover a duty due to the teſtator, though he be not named. Dyer 14. Action lies againſt an executor upon a collateral promiſe made and broken by the teſtator. Cro. Jac. 663. The teſtator's Aſſumpſit to do any collateral thing, as to build an houſe, &c. which is not a debt, binds executors. Jenk. Cent. 290, 336. Aſſumpſit lies upon a contract of the teſtator; and the reaſon is the ſame upon a promiſe, where the teſtator had a valuable conſideration. Palm. 329. Though a debt upon a ſimple contract of the teſtator, cannot be recovered of the executor by action of debt; yet it may by Aſſumpſit. 1 Lev. 200. 9 Rep. 87.

If two perſons are jointly bound, and one of them dies, the ſurvivor only ſhall be charged, and not the other's executor. Paſch. 16 Car. 2. When there are two executors, if one of them dies, action is to be brought againſt the ſurviving executor, and not the executor of the deceaſed: but in equity the teſtator's goods are liable in whoſeſoever's hands they are. 1 Leon. 304. Chanc. Rep. 57.

Aſſets ſhall be always intended, till the executors alledge the want of them in excuſe. 9 Rep. 90, 94. If an obligee makes the obligor executor, this is a releaſe in law of the debt; but it ſhall be aſſets in his hands; if there be no aſſets beſide to pay other creditors. 8 Rep. 136. 2 Roll. Abr. 920. When an obligor is made executor by the obligee, by adminiſtring ſome of the goods, he hath accepted the executorſhip, and 'tis that which makes the releaſe; becauſe by being executor he is the perſon who is to receive the money due on the bond, and he is likewiſe the perſon to pay it; and the rule is, that where the ſame hand is to receive and pay, that amounts to an extinguiſhment. 1 Salk. 305.

But a perſon who owed the teſtator 400*l.* was made executor, where debts, legacies, and a reſiduary eſtate were deviſed; and though it was inſiſted that the debt was diſcharged by the debtor's being made executor, and that there was ſufficient to pay the debts and legacies, yet it was decreed in equity againſt the executor, that he ſhould pay the 400*l.* to the reſiduary legatee. 1 Chanc. Rep. 292. It has been adjudged, that an obligee making the wife of an obligor executrix, had ſuſpended the action on the bond ſo long as the executorſhip continued; and that a perſonal action being ſuſpended by the act of the party himſelf, is quite extinguiſhed: this was in a caſe where the teſtator deviſed all his goods to the wife of the obligor, and made her ſole executrix. Moor 855. Hutt. 128. If there be no aſſets, the obligee executor may ſue the heir of the obligor teſtator in action of debt upon his bond. 1 Salk. 304. 1 Lil. Abr. 575.]

If an executor releaſes all actions, ſuits and demands, it extends only to demands in his own right, not ſuch as he hath as executor. Show 153. An executor ſhall be charged with rent in the detinet, if he hath aſſets; and if he continues the poſſeſſion, he ſhall be charged in the debet and detinet, in reſpect of the perception of the profits, whether he hath aſſets or not. 1 Lev. 127. But an executor is not ſuable in the debet and detinet for part, and in the detinet for the other part; becauſe they require ſeveral judgments, viz. De bonis propriis for the debet and detinet, and de bonis teſtatoris for the detinet. 3 Lev. 74. See title Debet and Detinet.

If an executor has a term, and the rent reſerved is more than the value of the premiſes, in action brought againſt him for it in the debet and detinet, he may plead the ſpecial matter, viz. That he hath no aſſets, and that the land is of leſs value than the rent, and demand judgment if he ought not to be charged in the detinet tantum: and he cannot waive the leaſe; without renouncing the whole executorſhip. 1 Salk. 297. It hath been held, that if an executor alters the property of things from the teſtator to himſelf, by paying a debt to the value; or by paying the rent of a leaſe, and receiving the profits, or part of the profits equal to the rent, the things and profits received are his own. Dyer 187, 885. 5 Rep. 31.

One executor cannot regularly ſue another at law; but he may have relief in equity: In the eye of the law all are but as one executor; and moſt acts done by, or to any of them, are eſteemed acts done by, or to all of them. 1 Rol. Abr. 918. If where one executor is ſued, he plead that there is another executor, he ought to ſhew that he hath adminiſtred. 1 Lev. 161. And he only that adminiſters is to be ſued in actions againſt executors; but actions brought by executors are to be in the name of all them, though ſome do not take upon them the executorſhip. 1 Rol. 924. Jenk. Cent. 106, 107. If any executor refuſes to join in an action, with his co-executors, he muſt be ſummoned and ſevered.

An executor is not diſabled by outlawry, to ſue for the debts of the teſtator. Special bail is not required of executors, &c. in any action brought for the teſtator's debt: and executors, or adminiſtrators are not liable to coſts, i. e. Where they ſue in right of the teſtator. Hut. 69. Cro. Eliz. 503. Yelv. 168. Dal. 96. Bend. pl. 28. 2 Rol. 87. Com. Dig. 2 V. 439.

If an executor brings a writ of error, though the judgment is affirmed, he ſhall not pay any coſts; becauſe as he is executor, it is in auter droit: alſo an executor ſhall not put in bail on a writ of error, cauſa ſupra. Mich. 5 W. & M. Executors are excuſed from paying coſts, as being preſumed to have no knowledge of the affairs of the teſtator; but they ſhall pay coſts for not going on to trial, or where the cauſe of action ariſes to the executor himſelf, &c. 1 Salk. 207. 3 Salk. 106. No action ſhall charge an executor to anſwer damages out of his own eſtate, upon any promiſe to another, unleſs there be ſome writing thereof ſigned by the party to be charged therewith. 29 Car. 2. c. 3.

On any judgment after verdict, had by or in the name of an executor, or adminiſtrator; an adminiſtrator de bonis non may ſue forth a ſcire facias, and take execution upon ſuch judgment. Stat. 17 Car. 2. c. 8. If an executor makes himſelf a ſtranger to the will of the teſtator, or pleads Ne unques executor or any falſe plea, and it is found againſt him, judgment ſhall be de bonis propriis: in other caſes, de bonis teſtatoris. Cro. Jac. 447.

If on a Scire facias againſt an executor, the ſheriff return a Devaſtavit; the plaintiff ſhall have judgment and execution de bonis propriis of the defendant: and if nulla bona be returned, he may have either a Capias ad Satisfaciend. or an Elegit. 2 Nelſ. 791. Dyer 185. But one executor ſhall not be charged with a Devaſtavit made by his companion; for the act of one ſhall charge the other no further than the goods of the teſtator in his hands amount to. Cro. Eliz. 318.

If an executor does any waſte, or miſemploys the eſtate of the deceaſed, or doth any thing by negligence or fraud, &c. it is a Devaſtavit, and he ſhall be charged for ſo much out of his own goods. 8 Rep. 133. And a new executor may have an action againſt a former executor, who waſted the goods of the deceaſed; or the old one may remain chargeable to creditors, &c. Hob. 266.

If an executor takes an obligation in his own name, for a debt due by ſimple contract to the teſtator, this ſhall charge him as much as if he had received the money; for the new ſecurity hath extinguiſhed the old right, and is quaſi a payment to him. Off. of Ex. 158. Yelv. 10. 1 Lev. 189.

So if the executor ſues a perſon in trover and converſion, in which he has a right to recover; and afterwards he and the defendant come to an agreement, that he ſhall pay the executor ſuch a ſum at a future day, and the party fails, this is a Devaſtavit; and he ſhall anſwer ad valorem. 2 Lev. 189. 2 Jon. 88. S. C. 1 Vern. 474. S. C.

It is a Devaſtavit to permit intereſt to run in arrear, and then ſuffer judgment for it; and want of aſſets to pay before the incurring of it by the adminiſtrator ſhall not be intended unleſs it be expreſly pleaded. 2 Lev. 40. Hil. 23 & 24 Car. 2. B. R. Seaman v. Dee.

Executory, Is where an eſtate in fee created by deed or fine is to be afterwards executed by entry, livery, writ, &c. And leaſes for years, rents, annuities, conditions, &c. are called inheritances executory. Wood's Inſt. 293. Eſtates executed are when they paſs preſently to the perſon to whom conveyed, without any after-act. 2 Inſt. 513.

Executory Deviſe, Is ſaid to be where a future intereſt is deviſed, that veſts not at the death of the teſtator, but depends on ſome contingency which muſt happen before it can veſt. 1 Eq. Caſ. Abr. 186.

Theſe executory deviſes may be,

I. Of lands of inheritance.
II. Of terms for years.

I. With reſpect to the former.

If a particular eſtate is limited, and the inheritance paſſes out of the donor, this is a contingent remainder; but where the fee by a deviſe is veſted in any perſon, and to be veſted in another upon contingency, this is an executory deviſe: and in all caſes of executory deviſes, the eſtates deſcend until the contingencies happen. Raym. 28. 1 Lutw. 798. Where a contingent eſtate limited, depends upon a freehold, which is capable of ſupporting a remainder, it ſhall never be conſtrued an executory deviſe, but a remainder. And ſo it is, if the eſtate be limited by words in præſenti, as when a perſon deviſes his lands to the heirs of A. B. who is living, &c. Though if the ſame were to the heir of A. after his death, it would be as good as an executory deviſe. 2 Saund. 380. 4 Mod. 255.

One by will deviſes land to his mother for life, and after her death, to his brother in fee; provided, that if his wife, being then enſient, be delivered of a ſon, then the lands to remain to him in fee, and dies, and the ſon is born; in this caſe it was held, that the fee of the brother ſhall ceaſe, and veſt in the ſon, by way of executory deviſe, on the happening of the contingency; and here ſuch fee eſtate enures as a new original deviſe to take effect when the firſt fails. Dyer 33, 127. Cro. Jac. 592. A remainder of a fee may not be limited by the rules of law after a fee ſimple; for when a man hath parted with his whole eſtate, there cannot remain any thing for him to diſpoſe of: but of late times a diſtinction hath been made between an abſolute fee-ſimple, and a fee-ſimple which depends upon a contingency, or is conditionally limited; eſpecially where ſuch a contingency may happen in the courſe of a few years, or of one or two lives; and where ſuch a remainder is limited by will, it is called an executory deviſe. 2 Nelſ. Abr 797

An eſtate deviſed to a ſon and his heirs, upon condition that if he did not pay the legacies given by the will within ſuch a time, that then the land ſhould remain to the legatees, &c. and their heirs: this limitation of a fee in remainder, after a fee limited to the ſon, being upon the contingency, of the ſon's failing in payment of the legacies, was adjudged good by way of executory deviſe. Cro. Eliz. 833. And where the father deviſed his lands to his youngeſt ſon and his heirs, and if he died without iſſue, the eldeſt ſon being alive, then to him and his heirs; this was held a good remainder in fee to the eldeſt brother, after the conditional contingent eſtate in fee to the youngeſt, as depending upon the poſſibility that he might be alive when his youngeſt brother died without iſſue; and his dying without iſſue, was a collateral determination of his eſtate, whilſt the other was living. Godb. 282. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 798.

There can be no executory deviſe after an eſtate-tail generally limited, becauſe that would tend to a perpetuity; and a contingency is too remote where a man muſt expect a fee upon another's dying without iſſue, generally: But dying without iſſue, living another, may happen in a little time, becauſe it depends upon one life; and therefore a deviſe of a fee-ſimple to one, but to remain to another upon ſuch a contingency, is now held good by executory deviſe. Cro. Jac. 695. Sometimes croſs remainders in tail by implication, have been pleaded againſt executory deviſes.

II. As to executory deviſes of terms.

Formerly where a term of years, (which is but a chattel) was deviſed to one; and that if he died, living another perſon, it ſhould remain to the other perſon, during the reſidue of the term, ſuch a remainder was adjudged void: For a deviſe of a chattel to one for an hour, was a a deviſe of it for ever. Dyer 74. But ſince it has been held, that a remainder of a term to one, after it was limited to another for life, was good: In a caſe where a teſtator having a term, deviſed that his wife ſhould have the lands for ſo many years of the term as ſhe ſhould live; and that after her death the reſidue thereof ſhould go to his ſon and his aſſigns; and this was the firſt caſe wherein an executory remainder of a term for years was adjudged good. Dyer 253, 358.

A perſon poſſeſſed of a term, deviſed it to his wife for eighteen years, and after to his eldeſt ſon for life, after to the ſon's eldeſt iſſue male during life; though he have no ſuch iſſue, at the time of the deviſe, and death of the deviſor, if he has before his own death, he ſhall have it as an executory deviſe. 1 Rol. 612. But if one deviſe a term to his wife for life; the remainder to his firſt ſon for life, and if he dies without iſſue, to his ſecond ſon, &c. the remainder to the ſecond ſon is void, and no executory deviſe; yet where he dying without iſſue living at a perſon's death, may be confined to one life, it hinders not a remainder over Abr. Ca. Eq. 194.

Exetutory deviſes, as to terms for years, are not extended beyond a life or lives; they ought to ariſe within the compaſs of one life. 1 Salk. 229. Where there is an executory deviſe, there needs not any particular eſtate to ſupport it; and becauſe the perſon who is to take upon contingency, hath not a preſent but future intereſt, his eſtate cannot be barred by a common recovery. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 797, 798. It is held executory deviſes, and limitations of the truſt of a term, are governed alike. 1 Vern. 234.

Leſſee for years deviſed all his term to his ſon, and his will was, that his wife ſhould have the occupation and profits of the lands, during the minority of his ſon, &c. and he made her ſole executrix, and died; ſhe afterwards proved the will, then ſhe ſold the term, and died; adjudged that this ſale was void againſt her ſon, becauſe it ſhall be intended that the deviſe to the wife, ſhall precede the deviſe to the ſon, though it followed in words, and then ſhe will not have the whole term, but only ſo much thereof for ſo long time as ſhe ſhould live, before her ſon came of age; and that the remainder was to veſt in him, upon the contingency of his living till he came of full age. Plow. Com. 53. Paramour verſus Yardley. And ſee Plow. Com. 519. Welkden v. Elkington.

The huſband being poſſeſſed of a term for years, deviſed the leaſe itſelf to his wife for her life, and after her death to her children unpreferred; it was inſiſted for the wife, that ſhe had the whole term, the deviſe being of the leaſe itſelf, and the lands are not mentioned throughout the will; but adjudged that the wife had only an eſtate for ſo many years of the leaſe as ſhe ſhould live, and that ſo much as remained unexpired at her death, was to veſt in the children upon the contingency of their living at that time. 1 And. 61. Amner verſus Ladington. 2 Leon. 92. S. C. 3 Leon. 89. S. C. Gold. 26. S. C.

In theſe caſes, (as ought to be in all) the court hath regarded the intent of the teſtator: and it ſeems ſo to have done, without much regard to the niceties in law. And with reſpect to deviſes, much greater latitude is allowed in the conſtruction of wills, than of deeds.

What ſhall be conſtrued an executory deviſe, and what a remainder, ſee Wealthy on the deviſe of Manley v. Boſville. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 258, &c. And ſee a moſt excellent and ſcientific work on Contingent Remainders, by Mr. Fearne.

Exemplification of Letters Patent, Is a copy or tranſcript of letters patent, made from the inrolment thereof, and ſealed with the Great Seal of England, which exemplifications may be ſhewn or pleaded, as the letters patent themſelves. But neither an exemplification nor conſtat was pleadable at Common law, becauſe there was only the tenor of an inrolment, and the tenor of a record is not pleadable: Though by the ſtatutes 6 R. 2. c. 4. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. c. 4. and 13 Eliz. c. 6. they are pleadable. 5 Rep. 53.

By the laſt mentioned ſtatute, exemplifications of the inrolment of grants by letters patent, ſhall be of as good force in pleading for the patentees, &c. as if the patents were produced, One may exemplify a patent under the Great Seal in Chancery; and alſo any record or judgment, in any of the courts at Weſtminſter, under the proper ſeal of each court; and ſuch an exemplification may be given in evidence to a jury, &c. 1 Lill. 583. Shep. Abr. 134. A rule made, or writ filed in any court at Weſtminſter, may be exemplified in the court where made, or filed. 1651. C. B. But nothing but matter of record ought to be exemplified. 3 Inſt. 173. Atteſted copies of records on ſtamped paper, are in general good evidence. The perſon who examines them proving the examination, and that the copy in queſtion is a true copy. And the only true method of examining is by a croſs examination; i. e. the perſon examining reading the original, whilſt the copy is read to him, and then the copy, whilſt the original is read to him. The editor ſaw a young gentleman examining a copy from domeſday, whilſt the officer read the original, who when deſired to read the original, did not underſtand, nor could he read, one half of the words. Yet under ſuch an examination he had attended at the preceding aſſizes in one of the northern counties, to prove an extract from the ſame book, but luckily was not called on, to expoſe himſelf.

Exemplificatione, Is a writ granted for the exemplification of an original record. Reg. Orig. 290.

Exemption, (Exemptio) Signifies a privilege to be free from ſervice or appearance; as knights, clergymen, &c. are exempted to appear at the county-court by ſtatute; and Peers from being put upon inqueſts. 6 Rep. 23. Perſons ſeventy years of age, apothecaries, &c. are alſo exempted by law from ſerving on juries: And juſtices of peace, attorneys, &c. from pariſh offices: 2 Inſt. 247. There is an exemption from tolls, &c. by the King's Letters Patent: And a writ of exemption, or of eaſe, to be quit of ſerving on juries, and all public ſervice. Shep. Epitom. 1049.

Exercituale, Was anciently uſed for a heriot; being paid only in arms and military accoutrements. Exercituale Vironis ſive Baronis Regis, qui erit proximus ei, quatuor equi. Leg. Edw. Conf. 1.

Exeter. By letters patent under the Great Seal, the ſite of the caſtle of Exon (part of the dutchy of Cornwall) to be granted to ſome perſons appointed by the juſtices in quarter-ſeſſions for the county of Devon, for the term of 99 years, to the uſe of the ſaid county and for other public uſes; under the ancient yearly rent of 10 l. per annum, payable to the crown. Stat. 9 Ann. c. 19.

Exfrediare, (From the Sax. Frede, Frith, Peace, and Frithian) To break the peace, or commit open violence. Leg. H. 1. c. 13.

Ex gravi Querela, Is a writ that lies for him to whom any lands or tenements in fee are deviſed by will, (within any city, town or borough, wherein lands are deviſeable by cuſtom) and the heir of the deviſor enters, and detains them from him. Reg. Orig. 244. Old Nat. Br. 87. And if a man deviſes ſuch lands or tenements unto another in tail, with remainder over in fee, if the tenant in tail enter, and is ſeiſed by force of the intail, and afterwards dieth without iſſue; he in remainder ſhall have the writ ex gravi querela to execute that deviſe. New Nat. Br. 441. Alſo where tenant in tail dies without iſſue of his body, the heir of the donor, or he who hath the reverſion of the land, ſhall have this writ in the nature of a formedon in the reverter. Ibid. If a deviſor's heir be ouſted by the deviſee, by entry on the lands; he may not after have this writ, but is to have his remedy by the ordinary courſe of the Common law. Co. Lit. 111. If the claimants title accrues within 20 years, the moſt eligible method of proceeding, will be by ejectment.

Exhenium or Exennium, A gift or preſent, and more properly a new year's gift——In expenſis domini Regis & exenniis eidem factis apud, &c. lxxv ſol.——Ex Compot. Dom. de Farend. MS.

Exhibit, (Exhibitum) A word mentioned in the ſtatute 14 Car. 2. cap. 14. And where a deed, or other writing is in a ſuit in Chancery exhibited to be proved by witneſſes, and the examiner or commiſſioners appointed certify on the back of it, that the deed or writing was ſhewed to the witneſs, to prove it at the time of his examination, and by him ſworn to; this is called an exhibit in law proceedings. The ſame, under a commiſſion of bankrupt.

Exhibitio, An allowance for meat and drink, ſuch as was cuſtomary among the religious appropriators of churches, who uſually made it to the depending vicar: and the benefactions ſettled for the maintaining of ſcholars in the univerſities, not depending on the foundation, are called exhibitions. Paroch. Antiq. 304.

Exigendaries of the Common Pleas, (Exigendarii de Banco Communi) Are otherwiſe called Exigenters, by Stat. 10 H. 6. c. 4. See Exigenter.

Exigent, (Exigenda) Is a writ that lies where the defendant in an action perſonal cannot be found, nor any thing of his within the county, whereby to be attached or diſtrained; and is directed to the ſheriff, to proclaim and call him five county-court days, one after another, charging him to appear upon pain of outlawry: It is called exigent, becauſe it exacteth the party, i. e. requires his appearance or forth-coming to anſwer the law; and if he come not at the laſt day's proclamation, he is ſaid to be quinquies exactus, and is outlawed. Cromp. Juriſ. 188.

The ſtatutes requiring proclamations on exigents awarded in civil actions, are 6 Hen. 8. c. 4. and 31 Eliz. cap. 3. Exigents are to be awarded againſt receivers of the King's money, who detain the ſame; and againſt conſpirators, rioters, &c. Stat. 18 Ed. 3. c. 1. And a writ of proclamation ſhall be iſſued to the ſheriff to make three proclamations in the county where the defendant dwells, for him to yield himſelf, &c. by the Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 3.

The writ of exigent alſo lies in an indictment of felony, where the party indicted cannot be found: And upon ſuing out an exigent for a criminal matter before conviction, there ſhall be a writ of proclamation, &c. 3 Inſt. 31. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 22. If a perſon indicted of felony abſent himſelf ſo long that the writ of exigent is awarded, his withdrawing will be deemed a flight in law, whereby he will be liable to forfeit his goods; and tho' he renders himſelf upon the exigent, after ſuch withdrawing, and is found Not guilty, it is ſaid the forfeiture ſhall ſtand. 5 Rep. 110. 3 Inſt. 232. After a capias directed to the ſheriff to take and impriſon a perſon, &c. if he cannot be taken, an exigent is awarded: And after a judgment in a civil action, the exigent is to go forth after the firſt capias; but before judgment there muſt be a capias, alias and pluries. 4 Inſt. 177. If the defendant be in priſon, or beyond ſea, &c. he or his executors may reverſe the award of the exigent. See Outlawry.

Exigenter, (Exigendarius) Is an officer of the court of Common Pleas; of which officers there are four in number: They make all exigents and proclamations, in actions where proceſs of outlawry doth lie; and alſo writs of ſuperſedeas, as well as the prothonotaries, upon ſuch exigents made out in their offices, 18 H. 6. c. 9. But the iſſuing writs of ſuperſedeas is taken from them by an officer in the ſame court, conſtituted by letters patent by King James the Firſt.

Exigi facias, The exigent is ſo called. See Black. Com. 3 V. 283. and Exigent.

Exile, A baniſhment or driving out of a perſon. Lit. Dict. And this exile is either by reſtraint, when the government forbids a man, and makes it penal to return; or it is voluntary, where he leaves his country upon diſguſt, but may come back at pleaſure. 2 Lev. 191.

Exilium, Signifies, in law conſtruction, a ſpoiling: And by the ſtatute of Marlbridge it ſeems to extend to the injury done to tenants, by altering their tenure. ejecting them, &c. and this is the ſenſe that Fleta determines; who diſtinguiſhes between vaſtum, deſtructio, and exilium; for he tells us that vaſtum and deſtructio are almoſt the ſame, and are properly applied to houſes, gardens or woods; but exilium is when ſervants are infranchiſed, and afterwards unlawfully turned out of their tenements.—Vaſtum & deſtructio fere æquipollent, & convertibiliter ſe habent in Domibus, Boſcis, & Gardinis; ſed exilium dici poterit, cum ſervi manumittuntur, aut à tenementis ſuis injurioſe ejiciuntur. Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 11.——Venditionem vel exilium non faciant de Domibus, Boſcis, vel hominibus, &c. Stat. Marlb. c. 25.

Exitus, Iſſue or off-ſpring: and applied to the iſſues or yearly rents and profits of lands.—Et ſciat vicecomes, quod redditus, blada in grangia, & omnia mobilia, præter equetaturam, indumenta & utenſilia domorum, continentur ſub nomine exituum. Stat Weſtm. 2. c. 45.

Exlegalitus, Is he who is proſecuted as an outlaw. Leg. Edw. Confeſ. c. 38.

Ex mero motu, Are words uſed in the King's charters and letters patent, to ſignify that he grants them of his own will and motion, without petition or ſuggeſtion of any other: And the intent and effect of theſe words, is to bar all exceptions that might be taken to the charters or letters patent, by alledging that the King in granting them was abuſed by falſe ſuggeſtions. Kitch. 352. When the words ex mero motu are made uſe of in any charter, they ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the King. 1 Co. Rep. 451.

Ex Officio, Is ſo called from the power a perſon has by virtue of an office, to do certain acts, without being applied to: As a juſtice of peace may not only grant ſurety of the peace, at the complaint or requeſt of any perſon, but he may demand and take it ex officio at diſcretion, &c. Dalt. 270.

Ex Officio Informations, Are informations at the ſuit of the King, filed by the Attorney-General, as by virtue of his office, without applying to the court wherein filed, for leave, or giving the defendant any opportunity of ſhewing cauſe why it ſhould not be filed. Add to this, the ſubject hereby loſes the benefit intended by Magna Charta, i. e. of one jury, out of two, in criminal charges.

How long this mode of proceeding will be admitted, in this free country, time muſt diſcover.

Exoneratione ſectæ, Was a writ that lay for the King's ward, to be free from all ſuit to the county-court, hundred court, leet, &c. during wardſhip. F. N. B. 158.

Exoneratione ſectæ ad Curiam Baron'. A writ of the ſame nature, ſued by the guardian of the King's ward, and directed to the ſheriff or ſtewards of the court, that they do not diſtrain him, &c. for not doing ſuit of court. New Nat. Br. 352. And if the ſheriff diſtrain tenants in ancient demeſne to come to the ſheriff's torn or leet, they may have a writ commanding the ſheriff to ſurceaſe, &c. Ibid. 359. Likewiſe if a man have lands in divers places in the county, and he is conſtrained to come to the leet where he is not dwelling, when he reſides within the precinct of any other leet, &c. then he ſhall have this writ to the ſheriff to diſcharge him from coming to any other court-leet than in the hundred where he dwelleth. Ibid. 357.

By the Common law, parſons ſhall not be diſtrained to come to court leets, for the lands belonging to their churches; and if they be, they may have the writ exoneratione ſectæ, &c. F. N. B. 394. So ſhall a woman holding land in dower, if ſhe is diſtrained to do ſuit of court for ſuch land; when the heir has lands ſufficient in the ſame county. Ibid.

Ex parte, Of the one part; as a commiſſion in Chancery ex parte, is that which is taken out and executed by one ſide or party only, on the other party's neglecting or refuſing to join: When both plaintiff and defendant proceed, it is a joint commiſſion.

Ex parte talis, Is a writ that lies for a bailiff or receiver, who having auditors aſſigned to take his account, cannot obtain of them reaſonable allowance, but is caſt into priſon: And the courſe in this caſe is to ſue this writ out of the Chancery, directed to the ſheriff to take four mainpernors to bring his body before the Barons of the Exchequer at a certain day, and to warn the lord to appear at the ſame time. F. N. B. 129.

Expectant, Having relation to or depending upon; and this word is uſed in the law with fee, as fee-expectant.

Expectancy, Eſtates in; Are of two ſorts; one created by act of the parties, called a remainder; the other by act of law, called a reverſion. Black. Com. 2 V. 163, 4, &c.

Expeditate, (Expeditare) In the laws of the foreſt, ſignifies to cut out the ball of the dog's fore-feet, for the preſervation of the King's game: But the ball of the foot of a maſtiff is not to be taken out, but the three claws of the fore-foot on the right ſide are to be cut off by the ſkin. Cromp. Juriſd. 152. Manwood, cap. 16. This relates to every man's dog who lives near the foreſt; and was formerly done once in every three years: And if any perſon keeps a great dog not expeditated, he forfeits to the King 3 s. 4 d. 4 Inſt. 308.

Expeditatæ Arbores, Trees rooted up or cut down to the roots.—Inquiratur de arboribus expeditatis in foreſta. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 41.

Expenditors, Are the perſons appointed by commiſſioners of ſewers to pay, diſburſe or expend the money collected by the tax for the repairs of ſewers, &c. when paid into their hands by the collectors, on the reparations, amendments and reformations ordered by the commiſſioners, for which they are to render accounts when thereunto required. Laws of ſewers 87, 88. Theſe officers are mentioned in the ſtatute 37 H. 8. c. 11. and other ſtatutes: The ſteward who ſuperviſes the repair of the banks and water-courſes in Romney-Marſh, is called the Expenditor.

Expenſæ Litis. Coſts of ſuit allowed a plaintiff or defendant recovering in his action. See Coſts.

Expenſis militum non levandis, &c. Is an ancient writ to prohibit the ſheriff from levying any allowance for knights of the ſhire, upon thoſe that hold lands in ancient demeſne. Reg. Orig. 261. For there is a writ de expenſis militum levandis, for levying expences for knights of the parliament, &c. Reg. Orig. 191.

Explees, The rents or profits of an eſtate, &c. Vide Eſplees.

Explorator, A ſcout; alſo a huntſman or chaſer.—In memoriam Henrici Croft equitis aurati, exploratoris in Hibernia generalis, qui obiit anno 1609.

Exportation, Is the ſhipping or carrying out the native commodities of England for other countries; mentioned in the ſtatutes relating to the cuſtoms. See Importation.

Expoſition of Deeds, It ſhall be favourable, according to the apparent intent; and be reaſonable and equal, &c. Co. Lit. 313. See Deed.

Courts will go great lengths in the conſtruction of words to ſupport the party's right, eſpecially after verdict. Rep. temp Hardw. per Annaly 21.

Ex poſt facto, Is a term uſed in the law, ſignifying ſomething done after another thing that was committed before. And an act done, or eſtate granted, may be made good by matter ex poſt facto, that was not ſo at firſt, by election, &c As ſometimes a thing well done at firſt, may afterwards become ill. 5 Rep. 22. 8 Rep. 146.

Extend, (Extendere) Is to value the lands or tenements of one bound by a ſtatute, who hath forfeited his bond, at ſuch an indifferent rate, as by the yearly rent the creditor may in time be paid his debt. F. N. B.

Extendi facias, A writ of extent, whereby the value of lands is commanded to be made and levied, &c. Reg. Orig.

Extent, (Extenta) Signifies a writ or commiſſion to the ſheriff for the valuing of lands or tenements; and ſometimes the act of the ſheriff or other commiſſioner upon this writ. Bro. 313. Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 5. It hath been held more frequently to be the eſtimate or valuation of lands, which when done to the utmoſt value, is ſaid to be the full extent; whence come our extended rents, or rack-rents. And if one bound to the King by ſpecialty, or to others by ſtatute, recognizance, &c. hath forfeited it; ſo that by the yearly rent of the debtor's lands, the creditor is to be paid his debt; upon this the creditor may ſue a writ to the ſheriff out of the Chancery to deliver him the lands and goods to the value of the debt, which is termed a liberate. F. N. B. 131. This is after the extent directed to the ſheriff to ſeize and value the lands, &c. of the debtor, to the utmoſt extent. 4 Rep. 67. Lands and goods are to be appraiſed and extended by the inqueſt of twelve men, and then delivered to the creditor, in order to the ſatisfaction of his debt: Every extent ought to be by inquiſition and verdict, by the Stat. Weſtm. 2. And the ſheriff cannot execute the writ without an inquiſition. Cro. Jac. 569.

The body of the cogniſor, and all lands and tenements that were his at the time of the ſtatute, &c. entered into, or afterwards, into whoſe hands ſoever they come, are liable to the extent. 2 Inſt. 396. But copyhold lands are chargeable only during the life of the cogniſor; and may not be extended by elegit, ſo as to admit a ſtranger to have intereſt in the lands held by copy, without the admittance of the lord. Lands in ancient demeſne, annuities, rents, &c. are extendible. 1 Rol. Abr. 88. Two parts of an entire rent may be delivered upon an extent by the ſheriff. Cro. Eliz. 742. But if the cogniſor of a ſtatute have a rent-charge, and before the extent he purchaſe parcel of the land; the rent is gone, and ſhall not be in execution: 'Tis otherwiſe if he purchaſes after extent of the rent. Dyer 206. A reverſion of lands, &c. may not be extended; but a plaintiff had judgment for his debt and damages de reverſione cum acciderit, and a ſpecial elegit to extend the moiety, &c. 2 Sid. 86. Dyer 373.

An advowſon in groſs is not extendible on elegit, &c. Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 18. An office of truſt cannot be extended, becauſe 'tis not aſſignable; and nothing ſhall be extended, but what may be aſſigned over. Dyer 7. Though an office is extendible in equity. Chanc. Rep. 39. Goods and chattels, as leaſes for years, cattle, &c. in the cogniſor's own hands, and not ſold for valuable conſideration, are ſubject to the extent. As the lands are to be delivered to the party at a reaſonable yearly value, ſo the goods ſhall be delivered in extent at a price that is reaſonable: And on a ſcire facias ad computand. the cogniſee is to account according to the extended value; not the real value of the land. Hardr. 136. If the extenders appraiſe and value the lands too high, the cogniſee at the return of the writ may pray that they may take and retain the lands at the rate appraiſed; and then 'tis ſaid he may have execution againſt their lands for the debt; but this may not be on elegit. Cro. Jac. 12. It has been adjudged, that at the return of the writ the cogniſee may refuſe the lands, &c. extended, if over-valued. Cro. Car. 148.

Where lands are extended at under-value, and delivered in execution; the cogniſee hath an intereſt in the land, which cannot be diveſted by finding of ſurpluſage. Cro. Eliz. 266. Cro. Jac. 85. The cogniſor cannot enter upon the cogniſee, when ſatisfaction is received for the debt, but is put to his ſcire facias on an extent: Tho' on an elegit, the defendant may enter becauſe the land is only awarded, till the debt, which is certain, is ſatisfied; whereas on extent, the land is to be held until the debt, damages and coſts, &c. are ſatisfied: And the cogniſee being in by matter of record, ſhall not be put out but by matter of record, viz. a ſcire facias brought againſt him. 4 Rep. 67. March's Rep. 207, 208. Sed qu. Where is the difference? Is not the tenant by elegit in by matter of record?

The cogniſee hath no abſolute property in lands by the extent, till the delivery upon the liberate; but notwithſtanding, by the very extent they are in cuſtodia legis for his benefit. Cro. Car. 106, 148. No actual ſeiſin can be on an extent, and a cogniſee of a ſtatute ſtaple, &c. cannot bring ejectment before the liberate; nor can the ſheriff upon the liberate turn the tertenant out of poſſeſſion, as he may upon a hab. fac. poſſeſſionem. 1 Vent. 41. Where there is an extent upon a ſtatute, and a liberate thereupon, but not returned, yet it is good; though regularly, when inquiſitions are taken, the writ ought to be returned. 4 Rep. 67. 1 Lill Abr. 592. The ſheriff may be charged to make a return of his writ, if he put the cogniſee in poſſeſſion of part only; and ſo the cogniſee may have poſſeſſion of the whole. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 774. But it is ſaid if a perſon ſuing out an extent, die before the return of a writ, the ſheriff may not proceed in his inquiſition, &c. afterwards; for there muſt be a proſecution de novo.

After a full and perfect execution had by extent, returned, and of record, there ſhall never be any re-extent upon an eviction: But if the extent be inſufficient in law, there may be a new extent. Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 5. Co. Lit. 290. So if lands be extended upon a miſtake, &c. and ſee Dyer 299. If part of the lands is evicted, the cogniſee is to hold over the reſidue of the land till the debt is ſatisfied. 4 Rep. 66. When lands are delivered in extent, it is as if the cogniſee had taken a leaſe thereof for years, until the debt is ſatisfied; and he ſhall never afterwards take out a new execution: The cogniſee having accepted the land upon the liberate, the law preſumes the debt to be ſatisfied. 1 Lutw. 429. An extent was filed, and though it was diſcovered that lands were omitted, the court would not grant a re-extent. Sid. 356. Lands or goods, &c. are not to be ſold on an extent; but delivered. Extent is alſo a proceſs which iſſues for the King, againſt his debtors, &c.

Where a fieri facias iſſues, and is delivered to the ſheriff to be executed, the property of the goods is veſted by the delivery, and an extent afterwards for the King comes too late, and that on the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. Per Holt. Comb. 123. See Statute.

Extinguiſhment, (From Extinguo) Signifies a conſolidation: For example; If a man hath a yearly rent out of lands, and afterwards purchaſes the lands whereout it ariſeth, ſo that he hath as good an eſtate in the land as the rent; now both the property and rent are conſolidated or united in one poſſeſſor; and therefore the rent is ſaid to be extinguiſhed. Alſo where a perſon has a leaſe for years, and afterwards buys the property; this is a conſolidation of the property and fruits, and is an extinguiſhment of the leaſe: But if a man have an eſtate in land but for life or years, and hath a higher eſtate as a fee-ſimple in the rent; the rent is not extinguiſhed, but in ſuſpence for a time; for after the term, the rent ſhall revive. Terms de Ley.

Extinguiſhment of a rent is a deſtroying of the rent by purchaſe of the land; for no one can have a rent going out of his own land; though a perſon muſt have as high an eſtate in the land, as in the rent, or the rent will not be extinct. Co. Lit. 147. If a perſon hath a rent-charge to him and his heirs iſſuing out of lands, and he purchaſeth any part of the land to him and his heirs; as the rent is intire and iſſuing out of every part of the land, the whole rent-charge is extinguiſhed: Though it is not ſo where one hath a rent-ſervice, and purchaſeth part of the land out of which it iſſues; rent-ſervice being apportionable according to the value of the land, ſo that it ſhall only extinguiſh the rent for the land purchaſed. Lit. 222. Co. Lit. 148. And if the grantee of a rent-charge purchaſes parcel of the lands, and the grantor by his deed granteth that he may diſtrain for the rent in the reſidue of the land, this amounts to a new grant. Co. Lit. 147.

If a man be ſeiſed of a rent-charge in fee, and grants it to another and his heirs, and the tenant attorns; the grantor is without remedy for the rent in arrear before his grant; and ſuch arrears become as it were extinct. Vaugh. 40. 1 Lill. Abr. 594. A. B. made a leaſe for years of lands to another, and afterwards granted a rent-charge to C. D. who deviſed the ſaid rent to the ſaid A. B. till 100*l.* ſhould be levied; then to B. G. and died: Adjudged that by the deviſe to A. B. the rent was ſuſpended, and that a perſonal thing once ſuſpended by the act of the party is extinguiſhed for ever. Dyer 140. Sed qu. with reſpect to the intereſt of B. G. But if a man in contemplation of marriage gives a woman a bond, to leave her at his death, if ſhe ſurvive him, ſo much, and afterwards marries her, dies, and ſhe ſurvives him, yet though the bond was by the marriage, in ſome ſort, extinguiſhed, yet on his death, the bond is revived.

If tenant for life, makes a leaſe for years, rendring rent, and after the reverſion deſcends to the tenant for life; this is not an extinguiſhment of the term; but it is otherwiſe if he have the reverſion by purchaſe. 1 Co. Rep. 96. A jointenant for life purchaſes the land in reverſion, it will extinguiſh the eſtate for life for a moiety, and ſever the jointure. 2 Rep. 60. Lands are given to two men, and the heirs of their bodies; though they have an eſtate for life jointly, and ſeveral inheritances, yet the eſtate for life is not extinct: Contra, if it be by ſeveral conveyances; as where a leaſe is made to two for their lives, and after the leſſor grants the reverſion to them and their heirs, &c. here the life eſtate will be extinguiſhed. Co. Lit. 182.

If one after his title begun to be tenant by the curteſy, make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and enter for the condition broken; the eſtate is extinct, ſo that if his wife die, he ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy. 1 Rep. 18. Where a man hath an eſtate for his own life, and for another's life at once; the eſtate pur auter vie will be extinguiſhed in the eſtate for his own life, which is greater in law than the other. 11 Rep. 87. Dyer 11. See Bro. 409. Moor 94. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 821.

When the freehold cometh to the term, the eſtate for years is extinct. Nelſ. Ibid. 820. Where the remainder of a term is granted over to another, if the party in poſſeſſion purchaſe the fee-ſimple, though by this means his intereſt is extinguiſhed; yet that ſhall not defeat the reverſionary intereſt. 10 Rep. 52. 2 Nelſ. 820.

A fine, &c. of lands, will extinguiſh a term: and by purchaſe of an eſtate in fee-ſimple, an eſtate-tail in land is extinct. 9 Rep. 139. But if a fee-ſimple and fee-tail meet together by diſcent, the eſtate tail will not be extinguiſhed. 3 Rep. 61. Diſcent of lands to the ſame perſon who has a term, will extinguiſh the term. Moor 286.

When a leſſor enters tortiouſly upon the leſſee againſt his conſent, the rent is extinguiſhed. 2 Lev 143. But it has been adjudged, that rent is not extinct by the entry of the leſſor, but only ſuſpended; and revives by the leſſee's re-entry. Dyer 361. An infant has a rent, and purchaſes the land out of which it is iſſuing; by this the rent will be ſuſpended, but not extinct. Bro. Extinguiſh. A man leſſee for years takes a wife, or woman leſſee a huſband, that hath the reverſion after the leaſe; here the term is not extinguiſhed. 12 Rep. 81.

There are likewiſe extinguiſhments of other kinds, which come next in their order. As Extinguiſhment of Common. By purchaſing lands wherein a perſon hath common appendant, the common is extinguiſhed. Cro. Eliz. 594. A commoner releaſes his common in one acre, it is an extinguiſhment of the whole common. Show. Rep. 350. And where a perſon hath common of vicinage, if he incloſes any part of the land, all the common is extinct. 1 Brownl. 174.

But if one hath common appendant in a great waſte, belonging to his tenant, and the lord improve part of the waſte leaving ſufficient; if he after make a feoffment to the commoner of the land improved, this will be no extinguiſhment. Dyer 339. Hob. 172. A commoner aliens part of his land, to which the common doth belong; the common is not extinct, but ſhall be divided. 2 Shep. Abr. 152. Vide Common.

Extinguiſhment of Copyhold. As to the extinguiſhment of copyholds, it is laid down as a general rule, that any act of the copyholder's, which denotes his intention to hold no longer of his lord, and amounts to a determination of his will, is an extinguiſhment of his copyhold. Hutt. 81. Cro. Eliz 21. 1 Jon. 41.

As if a copyholder in fee accepts a leaſe for years of the ſame land from the lord, this determines his copyhold eſtate; or if the lord leaſes the copyhold to another, and the copyholder accepts an aſſignment from the leſſee, his copyhold is extinct. Moor 184. 2 Co. 16. b. Godb. 11, 101.

So if a copyholder bargains and ſells his copyhold to the leſſee for years of the manor, his copyhold is thereby extinguiſhed; or if he joins with his lord in a feoffment of the manor, his copyhold is thereby extinct, for theſe are acts which denote his intention to hold no longer by copy. Hutt. 65. 1 Jon. 41. S. C. Godb. 11.

So if a copyholder accepts to hold of his lord, by bill under the lord's hand, this determines his copyhold; ſo if he accepts an eſtate for life by parol, if livery, this is an extinguiſhment; otherwiſe not; for without livery nothing but an eſtate at will paſſes, which cannot merge or extinguiſh an eſtate at will. 1 And. 199. Latch. 213.

If one ſeiſed of a manor in right of his wife lets lands by indenture for years; this doth not deſtroy the cuſtom as to the wife; for after the death of her huſband ſhe may demiſe it again by copy. Cro. Eliz. 459.

So if a copyhold is in the hands of a ſubject, who after becomes King, the copyhold is extinct, for it is below the Majeſty of a King to perform ſuch ſervile ſervices; yet after his deceaſe the next that hath right ſhall be admitted, and the tenure revived. 2 Sid. 82. 4 Co. 24. Cro. Eliz. 252. See 2 Leon. 208. 4 Co. 26. b. Cro. Eliz. 103. And a copyhold eſtate is extinct whenever it becomes not demiſable by copy. Coke's Copyhold 62.

Extinguiſhment of Debt. If feme ſole debtee take the debtor to huſband; or there be two joint obligors in a bond, and the obligee marries one of them; or in caſe a perſon is bound to a feme ſole and another, and ſhe takes the obligor to huſband; in theſe caſes, the debt will be extinguiſhed. 8 Rep. 136. And if a debtor makes the debtee his executor, or him and another executors, and they take the executorſhip upon them; or if the debtee makes his debtor executor, &c. it is an extinguiſhment of the debt, and it ſhall never revive. Plowd. 184. 1 Salk. 304. But in the latter caſe the debt is aſſets. But where a debtee or debtor executor legally refuſeth; or he and others being made executors they all refuſe, then the debt is revived again. Plowd. 185.

It is agreed as a general rule, that a creditor's accepting a higher ſecurity than he had before, is an extinguiſhment of the firſt debt; as if a creditor by ſimple contract accepts an obligation, this extinguiſhes the ſimple contract debt. 1 Rol. Abr. 470, 471, 604. 6 Co. 44.

So if a man accepts a bond for a legacy, he cannot after ſue for his legacy in the ſpiritual court; for by the deed the legacy is extinct, and it is become a mere debt at Common law. Yelv. 38.

So if a bond creditor obtains judgment on the bond, or has judgment acknowledged to him, he cannot afterwards bring an action on the bond; for the debt is drowned in the judgment, which is a ſecurity of a higher nature than the bond. 6 Co. 44. b.

But theſe caſes muſt be underſtood where the debtor himſelf enters into theſe ſecurities; and therefore if a ſtranger give bond for a ſimple contract due by another, this does not extinguiſh the ſimple contract debt; but if upon making the contract, a ſtranger gives bond for it, or, being preſent, promiſes to give bond for it, and after does ſo, the debt by ſimple contract is extinguiſhed, the obligation being made upon, or purſuant to the contract. 2 Leon. 110.

But the accepting a ſecurity of an inferior nature is by no means an extinguiſhment of the firſt debt; as if a bond be given in ſatisfaction of a judgment. Cro. Jac. 579. 2 Brownl. 29. Cro. Jac. 649, 650.

Alſo the accepting a ſecurity of equal degree is no extinguiſhment of the firſt debt; as where an obligee has a ſecond bond given to him; for one deed cannot determine the duty upon another. Cro. Eliz. 304, 716, 727. 1 Brownl. 74. Lit. Rep. 58. Cro. Car. 86.

Though a bond is taken for a ſimple contract debt, yet if it is after an act of bankruptcy, the ſimple contract is not extinguiſhed. Stran. 1042.

By releaſe of part of a debt due on bond, the whole is gone, and the obligation extinguiſhed. Bro. Contract 80. 1 And. 235.

Extinguiſhment of Liberties. As to liberties and franchiſes granted by the King, ſometimes they may be extinguiſhed, and ſometimes they ſhall not. Moor 474. When the King grants any privileges, liberties or franchiſes, which were in his own hands, as parcel of the flowers of the crown; ſuch as bona felonum, fugitivorum & utlagatorum, waifs, ſtrays, deodand, wreck on the ſea, &c. if they come to the crown again, they are drowned and extinct in the crown, and the King is ſeiſed of them jure coronæ: but if liberties of fairs, markets or other franchiſes, and juriſdictions, be erected and created by the King, they will not be extinguiſhed, nor their appendances ſevered from the poſſeſſions. 9 Rep. 25. A man has liberties by preſcription, if he takes letters patent of them, the preſcription will be gone and extinct; for things of a higher determine thoſe of a lower nature 2 H. 7. 5.

Extinguiſhment of Services. The lord purchaſes or accepts parcel of the tenancy, out of which an intire ſervice is to be paid or done; by this the whole ſervice will be extinct: but if the ſervice be pro bono publico, then no part of it ſhall be extinguiſhed; and homage and fealty are not ſubject to extinguiſhment, by the lord's purchaſing part of the land. 6 Rep. 1, 105. Co. Lit. 149. If the lord and another perſon do purchaſe the lands, whereout he is to have ſervices, they are extinct: alſo by ſeverance of the ſervices, a manor may be extinguiſhed. Co. Lit. 147. 1 And. 257.

Extinguiſhment of Ways. If a man hath a highway as appendant, and after purchaſes the land wherein this way is, the way is extinct. Terms de Ley. Though a way of neceſſity to market, or church, or to arable land, &c. is not extinguiſhed by purchaſe of ground, or unity of poſſeſſion. 11 H. 7. 25. Co. Lit. 155.

Extirpatione, Is a judicial writ, either before or after judgment, that lies againſt a perſon who when a verdict is found againſt him for land, &c. doth maliciouſly overthrow any houſe, or extirpate any trees upon it. Reg. Jud. 13, 56.

Extocare, To grub up lands, and reduce them to arable or meadow. Mon. Ang. tom. 2. p. 71.

Extortion, (extorſio, from extorqueo, to wreſt away) Is an unlawful taking by an officer, &c. by colour of his office, of any money, or valuable thing, from a perſon where none at all is due, or not ſo much is due, or before it is due. Co. Lit. 368. 10 Rep 102. At the Common law, which was affirmed by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. c. 26. it was extortion for any miniſter of the King, whoſe office did any way concern the adminiſtration and execution of juſtice, or the common good of the ſubject, to take any reward for doing his office, except what he received from the King: though reaſonable fees for the labour and attendance of officers of the courts of juſtice are not reſtrained by ſtatute, which are ſtated and ſettled by the reſpective courts; and it has been thought expedient to allow theſe officers to take certain immediate fees in many caſes. 2 Inſt. 209. 3 Inſt. 149. 1 Hawk. P. C. 170, 171.

The taking of money by virtue of an office, implies the act to be lawful; but to take any money by colour of an office, implies an ill action: and the taking being for expedition of buſineſs, is judged by colour of the office, and unlawful. 2 Inſt. 206. Co. Lit. 368.

Yet according to ſome it ſeems that an officer, who takes a reward which is voluntarily given to him, and which has been uſual in certain caſes, for the more diligent or expeditious performance of his duty, cannot be ſaid to be guilty of extortion; for without ſuch a premium it would be impoſſible in many caſes to have the laws executed with vigour and ſucceſs. 2 Inſt. 210. 3 Inſt. 149. Co. Lit. 368.

But it has been always held, that a promiſe to pay an officer money for the doing of a thing, which the law will not ſuffer him to take any thing for, is merely void, however freely and voluntarily it may appear to have been made. 1 Rol. Abr. 16. 1 Rol. Rep. 313. Noy 76. 1 Jon. 65. Cro. Eliz. 654. Moor 468. Cro. Jac. 103.

There muſt be a poſitive charge in caſes of extortion, and that the perſon charged with it took ſo much extorſive or colore officii; which words are as eſſential as proditorie or felonice for treaſon or felony. 2 Salk. 680. Extortion by the Common law is ſeverely puniſhed on indictment by fine and impriſonment, and removal of officers from the offices wherein committed. By the Stat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 30. Officers of juſtice, &c. guilty of extortion, are to render treble value; and there are divers ſtatutes for puniſhing extortions of ſheriffs, bailiffs, gaolers, clerks of the aſſiſe, and of the peace, attornies and ſolicitors, &c. 23 H. 6. c. 7. c. 9. 33 Hen. 8. c. 24. 3 Jac. 1. c. 7. 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23.

Againſt attornies for extortion, action may be brought, and the party grieved ſhall have treble damages and coſts; but information will not lie on the Stat. 3 Jac. 1. cap. 7. Sid. 434. 2 Nelſ. 822.

If an officer by terrifying another in his office, take more than his ordinary fees or duties, he is guilty of extortion which may be compared to unlawful uſury, &c. And Crompton ſays, that wrong done by any man is a treſpaſs; but exceſſive wrong is properly extortion. Cromp. Juſt. 8. And extortion has been deemed more odious than robbery, becauſe it carries an appearance of truth; and is often accompanied with perjury in officers, &c. by breaking their oaths of office.

Extrajudicial, Is when judgment is had in a cauſe, not depending in that court where given; or wherein the judge has not juriſdiction.

Extra-parochial, Signifies to be out of any pariſh; and where any thing is privileged and exempt from the duties of a pariſh.

If a place be a reputed pariſh, and have churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, it is within 43 Eliz. c. 2. though in truth it be no pariſh; but if it be merely extraparochial, as the juſtices cannot ſend to ſuch a place, ſo they cannot ſend from it; as it is exempt from receiving, ſo it ſhall not have the benefit of removing, for they have not proper perſons to complain; perſons in extraparochial places muſt ſubſiſt on private charity, as all perſons did at Common law before 43 Eliz. c. 2. which enacts, That every pariſh ſhall keep their own poor; and that act does not extend to extraparochial places. Per Holt Ch. Facto, In fact; as where any thing is actually done, &c. See De facto.

Factor, Is a merchant's agent reſiding beyond the ſeas, or in any remote parts, conſtituted by letter or power of attorney: if the principal give the factor a general commiſſion to act for the beſt, he may do for him as he thinks fit; but otherwiſe he may not. Though in commiſſions at this time, it is common to give the factor power in expreſs words, to diſpoſe of the merchandize, and deal therein as if it were his own; by which the factor's actions will be excuſed, though they occaſion loſs to his principal. Leg. Mercat. 151.

A bare commiſſion to a factor to ſell and diſpoſe of merchandize, is not a ſufficient power for the factor to entruſt any perſon, or to give a further day of payment than the day of the ſale of the goods; for in this caſe, on the delivery of the one he ought to receive the other: and by the general power of doing as if it were his own, he may not truſt an unreaſonable time, viz. beyond one or three months, &c. the uſual time allowed for the commodities diſpoſed of; if he doth, he ſhall be anſwerable to his principal out of his own eſtate. 1 Bulſt. 103. 7 Jac. 1. B. R.

If a factor buys goods on account of his principal where he is uſed ſo to do, the contract of the factor ſhall oblige the principal to a performance of the bargain; and he is the proper perſon to be proſecuted, on non-performance: but if the factor enters into a charter-party of affreightment with a maſter of a ſhip, the contract obliges him only; unleſs he lades aboard generally his principal's goods, when both the principal and lading become liable for the freight and not the factor. Goldſb. 137.

Goods remitted to a factor ought to be carefully preſerved; and he is accountable for all lawful goods which ſhall come to his hands; yet if the factor buy goods for his principal, and they receive damage after in his poſſeſſion, through no negligence of his, the principal ſhall bear the loſs; and if a factor be robbed, he ſhall be diſcharged in account brought againſt him by his principal. 4 Rep. 83. If the factor has orders from his principal not to ſell any goods but in ſuch a manner, and he breaks thoſe orders, he is liable to the loſs or damage that ſhall be received thereby: and where any goods are brought or exchanged without orders, it is at the merchant's curteſy whether he will accept of them, or turn them on his factor's hands. Lex Mercat. 154, 155.

When a factor has bought, or ſold goods purſuant to orders, he is immediately to give advice of it to his principal; leſt the former orders ſhould be contradicted before the time of his giving notice, whereby his reputation might poſſibly ſuffer: and where a factor has made a conſiderable profit for his principal, he muſt take due care in the diſpoſition of the ſame; for without commiſſion, or particular orders, he is anſwerable. Ibid. A factor ſhall ſuffer for not obſerving orders; and no factor acting for another man's account in merchandize, can juſtify receding from the orders of his principal, though there may be a probability of advantage by it: if he make any compoſition with creditors without orders, he ſhall anſwer it to his principal. Ibid.

Factors ought to obſerve the contents of all letters from their principals, or written to them by their order. A merchant is anſwerable in action upon the caſe for the deceits of his factor, in ſelling goods abroad: and as ſomebody muſt be a loſer by ſuch deceit, it is more reaſonable that he who employs, and puts confidence in the deceiver, ſhould loſe, than a ſtranger. 1 Salk. 289.

Factors are liable to the ſtatutes concerning bankrupts. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 39. Factor not to buy cattle on his own account. 31 Geo. 2. c. 40. ſect. 11.

It was held by Lee, Ch. J. that though a factor has power to ſell, and thereby bind his principal, yet he cannot bind or affect the property of the goods by pledging them as a ſecurity for his own debt, though there is the formality of a bill of parcels and a receipt. Stran. 1178. Where goods are ſold by a factor at his own riſque, the vendee is not anſwerable to the owner. Stran. 1182.

But where a factor ſells the goods of his principal, on credit, though without mentioning the name of his principal, and the factor becomes bankrupt, before payment, the aſſignees ſhall not receive the money, but the principal, and he may, before payment to the factor, maintain an action againſt the buyer. So determined in ſeveral caſes, before Lord Mansfield, at Guildhall, and affirmed by the court, on motion.

It hath been ruled in equity, that if one employs a factor, and entruſts him with the diſpoſal of merchandize, and the factor receives the money, and dies indebted, to debts of a higher nature, and it appears by evidence, that this money was veſted in other goods, and remains unpaid, thoſe goods ſhall be taken as part of the merchant's eſtate, and not the factor's; but if the factor have the money, it ſhall be looked upon as the factor's eſtate, and muſt firſt anſwer the debts of ſuperior creditors, &c. for as money has no ear-mark, equity cannot follow that in behalf of him who employed the factor. 1 Salk. 160.

If a perſon doth employ a factor to ſell goods, who ſells them on credit, and before the money is paid dies indebted, more than his aſſets will pay; this money ſhall be paid to the principal merchant, and not to the factor's adminiſtrator, but thereout muſt be deducted what was due for commiſſion: for a factor is in nature only of a truſtee for his principal. 2 Vern. 638.

Factorage, Is the wages or allowance paid and made to a factor by the merchant. The gain of factorage is certain, however the ſucceſs proves to the merchant; but the commiſſions and allowances vary according to the cuſtoms and diſtance of the country, in the ſeveral places where factors are reſident: in the Weſt-Indies, the commiſſion runs at about 8 per cent. but in France and Spain, &c. not above 2 per cent. and in Holland but one and a half per cent. Lex Mercat. 155.

Factum, A man's own act, fact, or feat, and particularly uſed in the Civil law, for any thing ſtated and made certain. See Fait.

Faculty, (facultas) As reſtrained from the original and active ſenſe, to a particular underſtanding in law, is uſed for a privilege granted to a man by favour and indulgence, to do that which by law he ought not to do. And for the granting of theſe, there is an eſpecial court under the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, called the Court of the faculties; and the chief officer thereof the Maſter of the Faculties; who has power by the Stat. 25 H. 8. cap. 21. to grant diſpenſations; as to marry perſons without the banns firſt aſked, (and every dioceſan may make the like grants) to ordain a deacon under age, for a ſon to ſucceed the father in his benefice, one to have two, or more benefices incompatible, &c. And in this court are regiſtred the certificates of biſhops and noblemen granted to their chaplains, to qualify them for pluralities and non-reſidence. 4 Inſt. 337.

Faſting-Men, In Mon. Ang. tom. 1. pag. 100. are rendered to ſignify vaſſals: but Cowel thinks they rather mean pledges or bondſmen; which, by the cuſtoms of the Saxons, were faſt bound to anſwer for one another's peaceable behaviour. See Feſting-men.

Fag, A knot or excreſcency in cloth; and in this ſenſe it is uſed in the ſtatute 4 Ed. 4. cap. 1. The fag-end, ſignifies that end of a piece of cloth or linen, where the weaver ends his piece, and works up the worſt part of his materials.

Faggot, A badge wore in the times of popery, by perſons who had recanted and abjured what the then powers adjudged hereſy: thoſe poor wretches that oppoſed the doctrine of the arbitrary prieſthood, were condemned not only to the penance of carrying a faggot, as an emblem of what they had merited, to ſuch an appointed place of ſolemnity; but, for a more durable mark of infamy, they were to have the ſign of a faggot embroidered on the ſleeve of their upper garment: and if this badge or faggot was at any time left off, it was often alledged as the ſign of apoſtacy.

Faida, Malice or deadly feud. Leg. H. 1. c. 88.

Failure of Record, Is when an action is brought againſt a man, who alledges in his plea matter of record in bar of the action, and avers to prove it by the record; but the plaintiff ſaith, Nul tiel record, viz. denies there is any ſuch record: upon which, the defendant hath day given him by the court to bring it in; and if he fails to do it, then he is ſaid to fail of his record, and the plaintiff ſhall have judgment to recover. Terms de Ley. In debt upon an eſcape, the plaintiff declared, that he had obtained a judgment in an inferior court, upon which the defendant was taken, and the ſheriff ſuffered him to eſcape; the defendant pleaded Nul tiel record, and being at iſſue, the record was certified at the day; by which it appeared that there were ſeveral variances in the continuances and proceſs; but becauſe the plaint, count, and judgment certified, agreed with the plaintiff's declaration, it was held that thoſe variances made no failure of record. Hob. 179. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 823.

In formedon for the manor of Isfield, the defendant pleaded in bar a common recovery of the ſaid manor againſt the donee in tail, who replied Nul tiel record, and the defendant having brought in the record, it appeared that the recovery was of the manor of Iſſield; and adjudged, that this being in a common recovery, ſhall be no failure of record for this ſmall variance, but ſhall be amended, being the miſpriſion of the clerk. 5 Rep. 46. And where a fine with proclamations was levied, and upon an iſſue of Nul tiel record, on which it was brought in at the day, tho' the year of the King was left out in the proclamations made in one term, as it was expreſſed in the proclamations of the other two terms, they were held to be right, and the omiſſion no failure of record. Dyer 234. If a judgment, &c. be reverſed for error, Nul tiel record may be pleaded. 8 Rep. 142. And where a tenor only of a record, &c. is brought in, it is a failure of record. Dyer 187. 2 Nelſ. 824.

Faint-Action, (Fr. feinte) A feigned action; ſuch that although the words of the writ are true, yet for certain cauſes the plaintiff hath no title to recover thereby; but a falſe action is properly where the words of the writ are falſe. Co. Lit. 361.

Faint-Pleader, Is a fraudulent, falſe or colluſory manner of pleading to the deceit of a third perſon; againſt which, among other things, was made the Stat. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 19.

Fair-Pleader, Or not pleading fairly, &c. See Beaupleader.

Fair, (Fr. feire, Lat. nundinæ) A ſolemn or greater ſort of market, granted to any town by privilege, for the more ſpeedy and commodious providing of ſuch things as the ſubject needeth; and the utterance of what commodities we abound in above our own uſes and occaſions: and both our Engliſh and the French word ſeems to come from feriæ, becauſe it is incident to a fair that perſons ſhall be privileged from being moleſted or arreſted in it, for any other debt, or contract than what was contracted in the ſame, or at leaſt was promiſed to be paid there. Stat. 17 Ed. 4. c. 2. And 1 R. 3. c. 6.

Herein is to be conſidered,

I. The right to a fair, and the manner of holding it.
II. The duty, power, and intereſt of the owners of fairs.
III. How far a ſale in a fair changes the property of a thing therein ſold.

I. Of the right to a fair, and the manner of holding the ſame.

The firſt inſtitution of fairs and markets ſeems plainly to be for the better regulation of trade and commerce, and that merchants and traders may be furniſhed with ſuch commodities as they want, at a particular mart, without that trouble and loſs of time which muſt neceſſarily attend travelling about from place to place; and therefore as this is a matter of univerſal concern to the commonwealth; ſo it hath always been held, that no perſon can claim a fair or market, unleſs it be by grant from the King, or by preſcription, which ſuppoſes ſuch a grant. 2 Inſt. 220. 3 Mod. 123.

And therefore, if any perſon ſets up any ſuch fair or market, without the King's authority, a quo warranto lies againſt him; and the perſons who frequent ſuch fair, &c. may be puniſhed by fine to the King. 3 Mod. 127.

Alſo it ſeems, that if the King grants a patent for holding a fair or market, without a writ of ad quod damnum executed and returned, that the ſame may be repealed by ſcire facias; for though ſuch fairs and markets are a benefit to the commonwealth; yet too great a number of them may become nuſances to the public, as well as a detriment to thoſe who have more ancient grants. 3 Lev. 222.

Fairs are generally kept once or twice in the year; and it has been obſerved, that fairs were firſt occaſioned by the reſort of people to the feaſt of dedication, and therefore in moſt places the fairs, by old cuſtom, are on the ſame day with the wake or feſtival of that ſaint to whom the church was dedicated; and for the ſame reaſon kept in the church-yard, till by authority reſtrained. 2 Inſt. 221. Blount. The court of Piepowder is incident to every fair, &c. by the Stat. 2 Ed. 3. cap. 15. Fairs are not to be kept longer than they ought by the lords thereof, on pain of their being ſeiſed into the King's hands, until ſuch lords have paid a fine for the offence; and proclamation is to be made how long fairs are to continue: alſo no merchant ſhall ſell any goods or merchandiſe at a fair after the time of the fair is ended, under the penalty of forfeiting double the value of the goods ſold, one fourth part thereof to the proſecutor, and the reſt to the King. 5 Ed. 3. c. 5. Any citizen of London may carry his goods or merchandiſe to any fair or market in England at his pleaſure. See 3 Hen. 7. c. 9.

It ſeems clearly agreed, that if a perſon hath a right to a fair or market, and another erects a fair or market ſo near his, that it becomes a nuſance to his fair, &c. that for this detriment and injury done to him, an action on the caſe lies; for it is implied in the King's grant, that it ſhould be no prejudice to another. 2 Rol. Abr. 140.

Alſo, although the new market be held on a different day, yet an action on the caſe lies; for this, by foreſtalling the ancient market, may be a greater injury to the owner, than if held on the ſame day with his. 2 Saund. 172. 1 Mod. 69.

If a man hath a fair or market, and a ſtranger diſturbs thoſe who are coming to buy or ſell there, by which he loſes his toll, or receives ſome prejudice in the profits ariſing from his fair, &c. an action on the caſe lies. 1 Rol. Abr. 106. 2 Vent. 26, 28. So if upon a ſale in a fair a ſtranger diſturbs the lord in taking the toll, an action upon the caſe lies for this. 1 Rol. Abr. 106.

The King is the ſole judge where fairs and markets ought to be kept; and therefore it is ſaid, that if he grants a market to be kept in ſuch a place, which happens not to be convenient for the country, yet the ſubjects can go to no other; and if they do, the owner of the ſoil where they meet is liable to an action at the ſuit of the grantee of the market. 3 Mod. 123. But if no place be limited for keeping a fair by the King's grant, the grantees may keep it where they pleaſe, or rather where they can moſt conveniently; and if it be ſo limited, they may keep it in what part of ſuch place they will. 3 Mod. 108.

By the 13 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. c. 6. No fairs or markets ſhall be kept in church-yards.

At what time fairs are to be held, ſee 27 H. 6. c. 5. & 1 Car. 1. c. 1. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. As alſo 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 21. & 9 Ann. c. 23.

II. Of the duty, power, and intereſt of the owners of fairs.

Owners and governors of fairs are to take care that every thing be ſold according to juſt weight and meaſure, who for that and other purpoſes may appoint a clerk of the fair or market, who is to mark and allow all ſuch weights, and for his duty herein can only take his reaſonable and juſt fees. See 4 Inſt. 274. Moor 523. 1 Salk. 327.

Fairs and markets are ſuch franchiſes as may be forfeited, as if the owners of them hold them contrary to their charter, as by continuing them a longer time than the charter admits, by diſuſer, and by extorting fees and duties where none are due, or more than are juſtly due. 2 Inſt. 220. Finch 164. 3 Mod. 108.

As to their intereſt, it ariſes chiefly from tolls. Toll payable at a fair or market is a reaſonable ſum of money due to the owner of the fair or market, upon ſale of things tollable within the fair or market, or for ſtallage, pickage, or the like. 2 Inſt. 222. 2 Jon. 207.

But this is not incident to a fair or market without ſpecial grant; for where it is not granted, ſuch a fair or market is accounted a free fair or market. 2 Inſt. 220. Cro. Eliz. 559.

Toll is a matter of private benefit to the owner of the fair or market, and not incident to them; therefore if the King grants a fair or market, and grants no toll, the patentee can have none, and ſuch fair or market is counted free. Cro. Eliz. 558. 2 Inſt. 220. S. P. 2 Lutw. 1336. S. P. reſolved.

Alſo if the King, at the time he grants a fair or market, grants a toll, and the ſame is outrageous and exceſſive, the grant of the toll is void, and the ſame becomes free. 2 Inſt. 220. 2 Lutw. 1336. But the King, after he grants a fair or market, may grant that the patentee may have a reaſonable toll; but this muſt be in conſideration of ſome benefit accruing from it to thoſe who trade and merchandiſe in ſuch fair or market. 2 Inſt. 221.

No toll ſhall be paid for any thing brought to the fair or market, before the ſame is ſold, unleſs it be by cuſtom time out of mind, and upon ſuch ſale the toll is to be paid by the buyer; and therefore my Lord Coke ſays, that a fair or market by preſcription is better than one by grant. 2 Inſt. 221.

And by Weſtm. 1. cap. 31. "Touching them that take outrageous toll, contrary to the common cuſtom of the realm in market towns, it is provided, that if any do ſo in the King's town, which is let in fee-farm, the King ſhall ſeize into his own hand the franchiſe of the market; and if it be another's town, and the ſame be done by the lord of the town, the King ſhall do in like manner; and if it be done by a bailiff, or any mean officer, without the commandment of his lord, he ſhall reſtore to the plaintiff as much more, for the outrageous taking, as he had of him, if he carried away his toll, and ſhall have forty day's impriſonment."

But where by cuſtom a toll is due upon the ſale of any goods in a fair or market, and he who ought to pay it refuſes, an action on the caſe lies againſt him. 1 Rol. Abr. 103, 104, 106. according to 3 Lev. 400. toll is quaſi a debt, for which debt, or an aſſumpſit lies.

Some perſons however are exempt from payment of toll, and if the King or any of his progenitors have granted to any to be diſcharged of toll, either generally, or ſpecially; this grant is good to diſcharge him of all tolls to the King's own fairs or markets, and of the tolls, which, together with any fair or market have been granted after ſuch grant of diſcharge; but cannot diſcharge tolls formerly due to ſubjects either by grant or preſcription. 2 Inſt. 221.

Alſo the King himſelf ſhall not pay toll for any of his goods; and if any be taken, it is puniſhable within the ſtatute Weſtm. 1. cap. 31. 2 Inſt. 221. So tenants in ancient demeſne are free and quit from all manner of tolls in fairs and markets, whether ſuch tenants hold in fee, or life, years, or at will. 2 Inſt. 221. 4 Inſt. 269. 1 Rol Abr. 321.

But this privilege does not extend to him who is a merchant, and gets his living by buying and ſelling, but is annexed to the perſon in reſpect of the land, and to thoſe things which grow and are the produce of the land. F. N. B. 228. 2 Leon. 191. Cro. Eliz. 227. 2 Inſt. 221. 1 Rol. Abr. 321-2.

Owners of fairs and markets are to appoint toll-takers or book-keepers, on pain of 40 s. and they ſhall enter and give account of horſes ſold, &c. 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 7. and 31 Eliz. c. 12.

III. How far a ſale in a fair changes the property of a thing therein ſold. See under title Market.

Fait, (factum) Is, in law ſignification, a deed or writing, lawfully executed to bind the parties thereto. Vide Deed.

Fait enrolle, (Fr.) Is a deed of bargain and ſale, &c. and forging the inrollment of it is a great miſdemeanor, but not forgery within the Stat. 5 Eliz. 1 Keb. 568.

Faitours, (Fr.) In the ſtatute 7 R. 2. cap. 5. is uſed for evil doers; and may be interpreted idle livers, from faitardiſe, which ſignifies a kind of ſleepy diſeaſe, proceeding from too much ſluggiſhneſs: and in the ſame ſtatute it ſeems to be ſynonimous with vagabonds. Terms de Ley.

Falang, A jacket or cloſe coat. Blount.

Falcatura, One day's mowing of graſs; a cuſtomary ſervice to the lord by his inferior tenants: falcata was the graſs freſh mowed, and laid in ſwathes; and falcator the ſervile tenant performing the labour. Kennet's Gloſſ

Falco, A faulcon.——King John, in the 14th year of his reign, granted to Owen Fitz David, and others, omnes accipitres & falcones gentiles & ſpuarios, &c.—— Pat. 14 Joh.

Falda, A ſheepfold.——Et quod oves ſint levantes & cubantes in propria falda, &c. Rot. Chart. 6 Hen. 3. m. 6.

Faldage, (faldagium) Is a privilege which ſeveral lords antiently reſerved to themſelves, of ſetting up folds for ſheep in any fields within their manors, for the better manurance of the ſame; and this was uſually done not only with their own but their tenant's ſheep, which they call ſecta faldæ. This faldage is termed in ſome places a fold courſe; and in old charters faldſoca, i. e. libertas faldæ, or faldagii.

Faldæcurſus, A ſheep walk, or feed for ſheep. 2 Vent. Rep. 139.

Faldfey, Fald-Fee, A fee or rent paid by ſome cuſtomary tenants for liberty to fold their ſheep upon their own land.

Faldiſtor, (Sax.) The higheſt ſeat of a biſhop, incloſed round with a lettice. Cowel.

Faldworth, A perſon of age, that he may be reckoned of ſome decennary. Du Freſne.

Faleræ, (Lat. phaleræ) The tackle and furniture of a cart or wain. Mon. Ang. tom, 2. f. 256.

Faleſia, A great rock, bank or hill by the ſea ſide. Domeſd.

Fallow-Land, Vide Warrectum & Terra Warrecta.

Fallum, Is a ſort of land, as appears by the Monaſticon Anglicanum.——De duobus acris & viginti fallis in, &c. Mon. tom. 2 425.

Falmotum, or falkmote, The ſame with folkemote.

Falſe Action, If brought againſt one, whereby he is caſt into priſon, and dies pending the ſuit, the law giveth no remedy in this caſe, becauſe the truth or falſhood of the matter cannot appear before it is tried: and if the plaintiff be barred or nonſuited, at Common law, regularly all the puniſhment is amercement. Jenk. Cent. 161. See Faint-Action. But if one commence a bailable action againſt another and hold him to bail thereon, either without a reaſonable cauſe, or for ſomething conſiderable, more than what is bona fide due, an action upon the caſe will lie for the vexation and injury.

Falſe Claim, By the foreſt laws, is where a man claims more than is his due, and is amerced and puniſhed for the ſame. A perſon had a grant by charter of the tenth of all the veniſon in the foreſt of Lancaſter. viz. In carne tantum ſed non in corio; and becauſe he made a falſe claim, by alledging that he ought to have the tenth of all veniſon within the foreſt, as well in carne, as in corio, therefore he was in miſericordia de decima venationis ſuæ in corio non percipiendo. Manwood, cap. 25. num. 3.

Falſe Form, In proceedings at law, is aided by a verdict; though not where there is want of certainty, &c. 1 Keb. 734, 876.

Falſe Impriſonment, (falſum impriſonamentum) Is a treſpaſs committed againſt a perſon, by arreſting and impriſoning him without juſt cauſe, contrary to law; or where a man is unlawfully detained without legal proceſs; and it is alſo uſed for a writ which is brought for this treſpaſs. If a perſon be any way unlawfully detained, it is falſe impriſonment; and conſiderable damages are recoverable in theſe actions. Co. Lit. 124. The law favours liberty, and the freedom of a man from impriſonment, ſo that falſe impriſonment is a great offence; and lawful impriſonment is ſo far pitied, that by ſeveral ſtatutes, as well as by the Common law, defaults are ſaved on that account. Wood's Inſt. 16.

The King cannot give any power to impriſon, where impriſonment may not be awarded by the Common law. 2 Brownl. 18. And if a perſon is impriſoned on any by-law of a corporation, &c. it is falſe impriſonment; becauſe a by-law to impriſon is againſt Magna Charta, quod nullus liber homo impriſonetur, &c. 5 Rep. 64. It is the ſame of a cuſtom to impriſon perſons; but it is incident to a court of record to impriſon. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 827.

If a juſtice of peace, &c. commits a perſon without juſt cauſe, it is falſe impriſonment; and a conſtable cannot impriſon a man at his pleaſure, to compel him to do any thing required by law: but is to carry him before a juſtice. Ibid. 1 Leon. 327. Where any juſtice ſends for a man, and commits him to gaol without any examination, the party may have action of falſe impriſonment againſt him; and if a juſtice of peace ſends a general warrant to arreſt a perſon, and ſay not for what; action lies againſt him, but not againſt the officer. Mich. 8 Jac. B. R.

In falſe impriſonment brought againſt an officer of an inferior court, if he juſtify an arreſt by virtue of their warrant, he muſt intitle the court to juriſdiction, or the action lies againſt him. Marſh. pl. 195. If erroneous proceſs iſſues out of a court that hath juriſdiction of the matter, and the bailiff or officer executes it, whereby the party is impriſoned, the officer ſhall be excuſed in action of falſe impriſonment: but if the court out of which the proceſs iſſues hath no cognizance of the cauſe, it is otherwiſe; for in ſuch caſe the whole proceedings are coram non judice, and the officer will not be excuſed. 10 Rep. 75.

An officer hath a warrant upon a capias ad ſatisfaciend. againſt an earl, or counteſs, &c. who are privileged in their perſons, and he arreſts them: it is ſaid action of falſe impriſonment will not lie againſt the officer, becauſe he is not to examine the judicial act of the court, but to obey. 6 Rep. 56. 10 Rep. 75.

If an arreſt is made by one who is no legal officer, it is falſe impriſonment, for which action lies. Co. Lit. 69. An action of falſe impriſonment lies againſt a bailiff for arreſting a perſon without warrant, though he afterwards receives a warrant: and ſo it is if he arreſt one after the return of the writ is paſt; for it is then without writ. 2 Inſt 53. If a ſheriff or any of his bailiffs arreſts a man out of his county, &c. or after the ſheriff is diſcharged of his office; or a perſon arreſts one on a juſtice's warrant after his commiſſion is determined, &c. it will be falſe impriſonment. Dyer 41. And if the ſheriff, after he hath arreſted a man lawfully, when a legal diſcharge comes to him, as a ſuperſedeas, or the like, do not then diſcharge the party, he may be ſued in this action. 2 R. 1. 12. Fitzh. 253.

In caſe the plaintiff in a ſuit brings an unlawful warrant to a ſheriff, and ſhews him the defendant, requiring him to make the arreſt; or if he bring a good warrant and direct the ſheriff to a wrong man, &c. for this the action of falſe impriſonment will lie againſt both. Bro. Treſp. 99, 307. Faux Impr. 19. 1 Brownl. 211. If a warrant be granted to arreſt, or apprehend a perſon, where there are ſeveral of the name, and the bailiff or other officer arreſts a wrong perſon, he is liable to action of falſe impriſonment; and he is to take notice of the right party at his peril. Dyer 244. Moor 457.

A man arreſted on a Sunday may bring his action of falſe impriſonment; but one has been refuſed to be releaſed in ſuch a caſe. 5 Mod. 95. If a bailiff demand more than his juſt fees, when offered him, and keep a perſon in cuſtody thereupon, it is falſe impriſonment and puniſhable: and if a ſheriff, or gaoler, keeps a priſoner in gaol, after his acquittal, for any thing except for fees, it is unlawful impriſonment. 2 Inſt. 482. Wood 16. If a man falſly impriſons A. B. and the gaoler detains him till he pays ſo much money, he ſhall have action of falſe impriſonment, and taking ſo much money from him againſt ſuch perſon. Mod. Caſ. 179.

Unlawful or falſe impriſonment is ſometimes called dureſs of impriſonment, where one is wrongfully impriſoned 'till he ſeals a bond, &c. 2 Inſt. 482.

An impriſonment will be unlawful, and give this action, altho' the cauſe be good, when he that makes it doth the ſame without any colour of authority; or if he has a colour, yet no good authority, from the court, &c. or where a court or officer hath power, but do not well make it out; or when the authority is well made forth, and not rightly purſued and executed. 4 Rep. 64. 8 Rep. 67. Dyer 242. And all perſons male or female, that have a hand in a wrong impriſonment, ſhall be ſued in action of falſe impriſonment; and the party grieved may ſue any one of them for it. Co. Lit. 57. Bro. Treſp. 113, 256.

A man under arreſt, or in ſtocks, &c. is ſaid to be in priſon: And in a common arreſt, where lawful, the officer may make any place his priſon, becauſe the writ commands that Habeas Corpus ejus coram, &c. apud Weſtm. which is a general authority. 1 Salk. 401.

It is not in every caſe where a man is wrongfully impriſoned, that an action vi et armis, for falſe impriſonment will lie, but in ſome caſes, it muſt be an action on the caſe, as where a warrant iſſues againſt a man, without legal cauſe, and he is, under colour of that authority, wrongfully impriſoned, as there was colour of authority, the action muſt be caſe, and not treſpaſs vi et armis, and ſo in ſimilar caſes.

In criminal caſes, where a man is falſly impriſoned, he may bring a Habeas Corpus, and upon return of the writ, ſetting forth the cauſe of the commitment, if it appears to be againſt law, he ſhall be diſcharged; or he may be bailed, if it be doubtful, &c. 4 Inſt. 182. See Arreſt, Impriſonment.

Falſe Judgment, (Falſum Judicium) Is a writ that lieth where falſe judgment is given in the county-court, court baron, or other courts not of record. F. N. B. 17, 18. This writ may be brought on a judgment in a plea, real or perſonal: and for errors in the proceedings of inferior courts; or where they proceed without having juriſdiction, writ of falſe judgment lieth: though the plaintiff aſſign errors in a writ of falſe judgment, he ſhall not ſay, In hoc erratum eſt, &c. but unde queritur diverſimodo ſibi falſum judicium factum fuiſſe judicium in hoc, &c. Moor 73. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 829. If a writ of falſe judgment abate for any fault in the writ, the plaintiff ſhall not have Scire facias ad audiend. errores, upon the record certified, becauſe it comes without an original: but if the plaintiff dies, and falſe judgment is given in the inferior court, his heir ſhall have a Sci. fac. ad audiend. error. againſt him who recovered upon that record which is removed into C. B. And where the plaintiff in a writ of falſe judgment is nonſuit, it was formerly a queſtion, whether the other party ſhall ſue execution upon this record ſo removed againſt the plaintiff, without ſuing out a Scire facias; but it has been adjudged, that he may do it. Hil. 23 Hen. 6. New Nat. Br. 39.

When a record is removed into C. P. by writ of falſe judgment, if the party alledges variance between the record removed, and that on which judgment was given, the trial ſhall be by thoſe who were preſent in court when the record was made up. 2 Lutw. 957. Stat. 1 Ed. 3. c. 4. A man ſhall not have a writ of falſe judgment but in a court where there are ſuitors; for if there be no ſuitors, there the record cannot be certified by them. New Nat. Br. 40. Where falſe judgment is given on a writ of juſticies, directed to the ſheriff, the party grieved ſhall have a faux judgment; although the judgment be for debt, or treſpaſs above the ſum of 40 s. Ibid.

Where a record of a judgment in the county-court was vicious, and the judgment reverſed in C. B. the ſuitors were ordered to be amerced a mark, and the county clerk fined 5 l. And if a plaintiff in an inferior court declare for more than 40 s. Judgment ſhall be reverſed by writ of falſe judgment: but where damages are laid under that ſum, coſts may make it amount to more. 1 Mod. 249. 2 Mod. 102, 206.

Upon falſe judgment before bailiffs, or others who hold plea by preſcription, in every ſum in debt by bill before them, a party ſhall not have a writ of falſe judgment; but a writ of error thereupon. M. 4 E. 4. For defaults of tenants for life, in writs of right, &c. Faux judgment lies by him in reverſion: and this writ may be brought againſt a ſtranger to the judgment, if he be tenant of the land. A judgment ſhall be intended good till reverſed by writ of falſe judgment, &c. See Accedas ad Curiam, and Attaint.

Falſe Latin. Before the late ſtatute for turning law proceedings into Engliſh, if a Latin word was ſignificant though not good Latin, yet an indictment, declaration, or fine, ſhould not be made void by it: but if the word was not Latin, nor allowed by the law, and it were in a material point, it made the whole vicious. 5 Rep. 121. 2 Nelſ. 830. Vide Latin.

Falſe News. Spreading falſe news, to make diſcord between the King and nobility, or concerning any great man of the realm, is puniſhed by common law, with fine and impriſonment, which is confirmed by ſtatutes Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 34. 2 Ric. 2. ſtat. 1. c. 5. And 12 Ric. 2. c. 11. See 2 Inſt. 226. 3 Inſt. 198.

Falſe Oath. See Perjury.

Falſe Plea. In præcipe quod reddat againſt two, if the one comes and takes the intire tenancy upon him, upon which they are at iſſue, and it is found againſt the tenant, by this he ſhall loſe his moiety; for it is found againſt the tenant for his part, becauſe it is tried per pais upon iſſue; contra, of plea to the writ by demurrer. Note the difference. Br. Peremptory, pl. 73. cites 8 Ed. 3. 17.

Plaintiff in a ſuit in Chancery againſt an executor, ſhall have the ſame advantage thereof, as if the ſame plea were found falſe by verdict at law; and ſhall have all the ſame conſequences here, as follow on a falſe plea at law to all intents. Mich. 26 Car. 2. 2 Chanc. Caſes 201. Parker v. Dee. See Plea.

Falſe Prophecy. See Prophecy.

Falſe Return, On a falſe return by a mayor, &c. to a mandamus, or by a ſheriff, &c. to a writ, a ſpecial action on the caſe will lie. See Black. Com. 3 V. 111, 163.

Falſe tokens, As where perſons get money or goods into their hands, by forged letters, or other counterfeit means, is puniſhable by impriſonment, &c. by Stat. 33 H. 8 c. 1. See Cheats and Counterfeits.

Falſe Verdict, A writ of attaint lieth, to inquire whether a jury of twelve men have given a falſe verdict; that ſo the judgment following thereupon may be reverſed. It is allowed in almoſt every action except in a writ of right. See ſtatutes 1 Ed. 3. c. 6. 5 Ed. 3. c. 7. 28 Ed. 3. c. 8. 34 Ed. 3. c. 7. 9 Ric. 2. c. 3. Black. Com. 3 V. 403. Quære, If it would not lie on a verdict, upon an information, as the defendant hath only the benefit of one jury? conſequently, is found guilty only by one jury.

Falſify, Seems to ſignify as much as to prove a thing to be falſe. Perk. 383.

Falſifying a Record. A perſon that purchaſes land of another, who is afterwards outlawed of felony, &c. may falſify the record, not only as to the time wherein the felony is ſuppoſed to have been committed, but alſo as to the point of the offence: but where a man is found guilty by verdict, a purchaſer cannot falſify as to the offence; though he may for the time, where the party is found guilty generally in the indictment, &c. becauſe the time is not material upon evidence. 2 Hawk. P. C. 456. And any judgment given by perſons who had no good commiſſion to proceed againſt the perſon condemned, may be falſified by ſhewing the ſpecial matter, without writ of error. Ibid. Alſo where a man is attainted of treaſon or felony, if he be afterwards pardoned by parliament, the attainder may be falſified, by him or his heir, without plea. Ibid.

Falſifying a Recovery. Iſſue in tail may falſify a recovery ſuffered by tenants for life, &c. And it has been held, that a perſon may falſify a recovery had by the iſſue in tail, where an eſtate tail is before bound by a fine. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 831. But where there is tenant for life, remainder in tail, and reverſion in fee, tenant for life ſuffers a common recovery, in which he in remainder is vouched, and the uſes declared to him, who had the remainder in tail; adjudged, that by the recovery all remainders and reverſions are barred, and that they could not falſify this recovery. 10 Rep. 43.

He in reverſion ſuffered a common recovery, and declared the uſes; his heir ſhall not falſify it by pleading that his father had nothing at the time of the recovery, becauſe he is eſtopped to ſay he is not tenant to the præcipe. Godb. 189. An infant brought an aſſiſe in B. R. Pending which action the tenant brought an aſſiſe againſt the infant in C. B. for the ſame land, and had judgment by default, which he pleaded in bar to the aſſiſe brought by the infant; who ſet forth all this matter in his replication, and that the demandant at the time of the ſecond writ brought was tenant of the land, and prayed that he might falſify this recovery; and it was held that he might, becauſe he could not have writ of error, or attaint. Godb. 271. Cro. Eliz. 284. It has been determined, that a recovery is not ſo firm, but it may be falſified in point of recovery of the thing itſelf, between the ſame parties. Ibid.

Falſifying a Verdict. Where in any real action, there is a verdict againſt tenant in tail, the iſſue can never falſify ſuch verdict in the point directly tried; but only in a ſpecial manner, as by ſaying that ſome evidence was omitted, &c. 2 Ld. Raym. 1050.

Falſonarius, A forger.——Et quod Falſonarios Chartam, &c. detegent. Hoveden 424.

Falſo returno Brevium, Is a writ that lieth againſt the ſheriff who hath execution of proceſs, for falſe returning of writs. Reg. Jud 43.

Familia, Signifies all the ſervants belonging to a particular maſter; but in another ſenſe it is taken for a portion of land, ſufficient to maintain one family: It is ſometimes mentioned by our writers to be a Hide of land, which is alſo called a Manſe; and ſometimes Carucata or a plough-land. Blount.

Fanaticks, Are perſons pretending to be inſpired, and being a general name for Quakers, Anabaptiſts, and all other ſectaries and factious diſſenters from the church of England. Stat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 6.

Fanatio, (Menſis Fanationis) Is the fawning ſeaſon or fence-months in foreſts. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Farandman, (Sax.) A traveller or merchant ſtranger, to whom by the laws of Scotland juſtice ought to be done with all expedition, that his buſineſs or journey be not hindered. Skene, c. 104.

Fardel of Land, (Fardelle Terræ) Is generally accounted the fourth part of a Yard-Land; but according to Noy, (in his Compleat Lawyer, p. 57.) It is an eighth part only, for there he ſays that two fardels of land make a nook, and four nooks a yard-land.

Farding-deal, (Quadrantata terræ) Is the fourth part of an acre: and beſides quadrantata terræ, we read of obolata, denariata, ſolidata, and librata terræ, which probably ariſe in proportion of quantity from the farding-deal, as an half penny, penny, ſhilling, or pound in money, riſe in value; and then muſt obolata be half an acre, denariata an acre, ſolidata twelve acres, and librata terræ twelve ſcore acres of land: but ſome hold obolata to be but half a perch, and denariata a perch; and I find viginti libratas terræ vel redditus. Reg. Orig. 94, 248. whereby it ſeems that librata terræ is ſo much as yields 20*s. per annum.* F. N. B. 87. Spelm. Gloſſ.

Fare, (Sax.) A voyage or paſſage by water; but more commonly the money paid for ſuch paſſage, in which ſenſe we now uſe it. 3 P. & M. cap. 16. So for what we pay an hackney or ſtage coachman for our carriage.

Farinagium, Toll of meal or flour——Et quod de cætero molendinarius non capiat Farinagium, &c. Ordin. Inſul. de Jerſey 17 Edw. 2.

Farleu, Is money paid by tenants in the weſt of England in lieu of a heriot: and in ſome manors in Devonſhire, farleu is diſtinguiſhed to be the beſt goods; as heriot is the beſt beaſt, payable at the death of a tenant. Cowel.

Farlingarii, Are whoremongers and adulterers. Saxon.

Farm, or Ferm, (Lat. firma, from the Sax. feorum, i. e. Food, and feormain to feed or yield victuals) ſignifies a large meſſuage and land, taken by leaſe under a certain yearly rent, payable by the tenant; and in former days, about the time of William the Firſt, called the Conqueror, theſe rents were reſerved to the lords in victuals and other neceſſaries ariſing from the land; but afterwards in the reign of King Hen. 1. were altered and converted into money. Terms de Ley. A farm is moſt properly the chief meſſuage in a village; and it is a collective word, conſiſting of divers things gathered into one, as a meſſuage, land, meadow, paſture, wood, common, &c. Locare ad firmam is ſometimes taken for as much as to let or ſet to farm; and the reaſon of it may be in reſpect of the firm or ſure hold the tenants thereof have above tenants at will. A farm in Lancaſhire is called Ferm-holt; in the north a Tack, and in Eſſex a Wike: And ferm is taken in various ways. Plowd. 195.

Farmer, Is he that tenants a farm, or is leſſee thereof. Terms de Ley. And it is ſaid generally every leſſee for life or years, although it be but of a ſmall houſe and land, is called Farmer, as he is that occupieth the farm: as this word implies no myſtery, except it be that of huſbandry, huſbandman, is the proper addition of a farmer. 2 Hawk. 188. By ſtatute, no parſon or ſpiritual perſon may take farms or leaſes of land, on pain of forfeiting 10*l. per* month, &c. 21 Hen. 8. c. 13. And no perſon whatſoever ſhall take above two farms together, and they to be in the ſame pariſh, under the penalty of 3*s.* 4*d.* a week. 25 H. 8. c. 13. 32 H. 8. c. 28. ſ. 4.

Farthing, Was the fourth part of a Saxon penny, as it is now of the Engliſh penny.

Farthing of Gold, (Quaſi fourth thing) A coin uſed in ancient times, containing in value the fourth part of a Noble. It is mentioned in the ſtat. 9 H. 5. cap. 7. where it is ordained, that there ſhall be good and juſt weight of the Noble, Half Noble, and Farthing of Gold, &c.

Farthing of Land, Seems to differ from Farthing-deal; for it is a large quantity of land: in a ſurvey book of the manor of Weſt Slapton in Com. Devon is entered thus: A. B. holds ſix farthings of land at 126*l. per annum.*

Farundel of land, the ſame with farding-deal.

Faſſus, (Fr. Faiſſeau) A faggot of wood. Mod. Ang. tom. 2. p. 238.

Faſt-Days, Are days of faſting and humiliation, appointed to be obſerved by publick authority. There are fixed days of faſting injoined by our church, at certain times in the year, mentioned in ancient ſtatutes, particularly the 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 19. and 5 El. c. 5. And by 12 Car. 2. c. 14. the 30th of January is ordained to be a day of faſting and repentance, for the murder of King Charles I. Other days of faſting which are not fixed, are occaſionally appointed by the King's Proclamation. Tho' abſtinence from eating of fleſh is required on thoſe days, by our laws; it is made penal to affirm that any forbearing of fleſh, is neceſſary to ſalvation. 1 Hawk. P. C. 8. See Embring Days.

Faſtermans, Among the Saxons were pledges. Leg. Ed. Confeſſ. cap. 38. Vide Fæſtingmen.

Fat, or Vate, Is a large wooden veſſel uſed by maltſters and brewers, for meaſuring of malt with expedition, containing eight buſhels or a quarter. Stat. 1 H. 5. c. 10. and 11 H. 6. c. 8. It is alſo a leaden veſſel or pan, made uſe of by brewers to run their wort into, and by others for the making of ſalt at Droitwich in the county of Worceſter.

Fatua mulier, A whore. Cum quadam fatua muliere nudus in lecto cum nuda extitit deprehenſus. Du Freſne.

Fauſetum, A faucet, muſical pipe or flute.——Organum & decentum fauſetum in divino officio omnibus noſtris, &c. interdicimus.

Fautors, Are favourers or ſupporters of others; abettors of crimes, &c.

Feal, The tenants by knight ſervice did ſwear to their lords to be feal and leal, i. e. to be faithful and loyal. Spel. de Parliament 59.

Fealty, (Fidelitas) Fr. Feaulte, i. e. Fides) Signifies an oath taken at the admittance of every tenant, to be true to the lord of whom he holds his land; and he that holds lands by the oath of fealty, has it in the freeſt manner; becauſe all perſons that have fee, hold per fidem and fiduciam, that is, by fealty at leaſt. Smith de Repub. Ang. lib. 3. c. 8. This fealty, which is uſed in other nations, as well as England, at the firſt creation of it bound the tenant to fidelity; the breach whereof was the loſs of his fee.

It is uſually mentioned with homage, but differs from it; being an obligation permanent, which binds for ever: and theſe differ in the manner of the ſolemnity, for the oath of homage is taken by the tenant kneeling; but that of fealty is taken ſtanding, and includes the ſix following things, viz.

1. Incolume, that he do no bodily injury to the lord. 2. Tutum, that he do no ſecret damage to him in his houſe, or any thing which is for his defence. 3. Honeſtum, that he do him no injury in his reputation. 4. Utile, that he do no damage to him in his poſſeſſions. 5. Facile, and 6. Poſſibile, that he render it eaſy for the lord to do any good, and not make that impoſſible to be done, which was before in his power to do: all which is compriſed in Leg. Hen. 1. c. 5.

Fealty has likewiſe been divided into general and ſpecial; general, to be performed by every ſubject to his prince; and ſpecial, required only of ſuch as in reſpect of their fee, are tied by oaths to their lords. Grand Cuſtum. Normand. Fealty ſpecial is with us performed either by freemen, or by villeins. The particulars of the oath of fealty, as it is uſed by the Feudiſts, is well expreſſed by Zaſius, in his Tractat. de Feudis. Part 7. Numb. 15, 16. which is worthy comparing with the uſual oath taken here in England.

By ſtat. 17 Ed. 2. ſt. 2. the form of this oath is appointed, and as now obſerved, it runs as follows, viz. I A. B. will be to you my lord C. true and faithful, and bear to you fealty and faith for the lands and tenements which I hold of you: and I will truly do and perform the cuſtoms and ſervices that I ought to do to you. So help me God. The oath is adminiſtred by the lord or his ſteward; the tenant holding his right hand upon the book, and repeating after the lord, &c. the words of the oath; and then kiſſing the book. Terms de Ley

This oath is in ſome manors neglected; but in copyhold manors, where courts are kept, and copyhold eſtates granted, it is generally uſed: leſſees for life or years, ought to do fealty to their lords, for the lands they hold; and there can be no tenure without ſome ſervice. Wood's Inſt. 183. But a bare tenant at will, ſhall not do fealty, becauſe he hath no certain eſtate; and the matter of an oath ought to be certain. Lit. 131, 132. Co. Lit. 93.

Fealty is incident to all manner of tenures, except frankalmoign and tenancy at will. Ibid. Fidelitas eſt fidei, obſequii et ſervitii ligamen quo particulariter vaſſalus domino aſtringitur. Spelm.

Feaſts, Anniverſary times of feaſting and thankſgiving, as Chriſtmas, Eaſter, Witſuntide, &c. The four feaſts which our laws eſpecially take notice of, are the feaſts of the annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, of the nativity of St. John the Baptiſt, of St. Michael the Archangel, and of St. Thomas the Apoſtle; (or in lieu of the laſt, the birth of our Lord Chriſt,) on which quarterly days, rent on leaſes is uſually reſerved to be paid. See the ſtatutes 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 3. 3 Jac. 1. c. 1. 12 Car. 2. c. 30.

Fee, (Feodum, or Feudum) Fee, comes of the French Fief, i. e. Prædium beneficiarium, vel res clientelaris, or from the Sax. Feh. viz. Merces, ſtipendium, quaſi dicitur ſtatus Beneficiarius; it is ſaid to be that eſtate which we hold by the benefit of another, and for which we do ſervice or pay rent to the chief lord; and is applied to all thoſe lands and tenements which are held by perpetual right, by an acknowledgment of any ſuperiority to a higher lord. The writers on this ſubject, divide all lands wherein a man hath a perpetual eſtate to him and his heirs, into allodium and feudum.

Allodium they define to be every man's land, &c. which he poſſeſſeth merely in his own right, without acknowledgment of ſervice or payment of any rent to another; and this is a property in the higheſt degree: (See Allodial, Allodium).

But feudum is ſuch land as is held of another, for which ſervice is done or rent is paid, as an acknowledgment thereof. All the land in England, except the crown-lands in the King's own hands in right of his crown, are in the nature of feudum, or fee; for though many have lands by diſcent from their anceſtors, and others have bought land, it cannot come to any either by diſcent or purchaſe, but with the burden that was laid upon him who had novel fee, or firſt of all received it from his lord; ſo that there is no perſon hath directum dominium, i. e. the very property of demain in any land but the King, in right of his crown: and notwithſtanding he that hath fee, hath jus perpetuum et utile dominium, yet he owes a duty for it, and therefore it is not ſimply his own; and he that can ſay moſt of his eſtate, ſaith thus: I am ſeiſed of this or that land or tenement, in my demain, as of fee; ſeiſitus inde in dominico meo ut de feodo, which is as much as if he had ſaid, it is my demain or proper land to me and my heirs for ever; but yet I hold it in nature of a benefit of and from another. Camb. Britan. 93.

By this doctrine is to be underſtood that every man in ſociety, holds his eſtate, ſubject to the laws of that ſociety, and muſt hold it of the community, as what he poſſeſſes is ſuppoſed to have been taken out of the common ſtock. When he neglects to fulfil the duties of ſociety, he forfeits to the community, the eſtate he hath received. The King is the truſtee for that community. He, as ſuch, is the ſuperior lord: and in that ſenſe every one may be ſaid to hold mediately, or immediately of the King. This is what the editor (J. M.) conceives is meant by the doctrine in queſtion.

All that write de feudis, hold that feudatarius hath not an entire property in his fee: and as fee cannot be without fealty, ſworn to a ſuperior, the lands of the crown are not properly fee; for no man may grant that our King or crown oweth fealty to any ſuperior on earth.

The word fee is ſometimes uſed for the compaſs or circuit of a lordſhip or manor, as we ſay the lord of the fee, &c. as well as the particular eſtate of the tenant: and alſo for a perpetual right incorporeal; as to have the keeping of priſons, &c. in fee. Bract. Lib. 2. c. 5. Old Nat. Br. 41. And when a rent or annuity is granted to one and his heirs, it is a fee perſonal. Co. Lit. 1, 2. Fee is commonly divided into fee abſolute, otherwiſe called fee-ſimple; and fee conditional, termed otherwiſe fee-tail. See Tail.

Fee-ſimple, (feodum ſimplex) Is where a man hath lands or tenements, to hold to him and his heirs for ever: fee-tail is an eſtate whereof one is ſeiſed with limitation, to him and the heirs of his body, &c. Lit. 14, 16. All eſtates at the common law were fee ſimple; and all other eſtates and intereſts are derived out of it, wherefore there muſt be a fee-ſimple at laſt in ſome body. Lit. 647.

Under this head it may be proper to conſider,

I. In what things a man may have a fee-ſimple.
II. By what means ſuch an eſtate may be acquired.
III. By what words it may be created.

I. In what things a man may have a fee-ſimple.

A man may have an eſtate, in fee-ſimple of all lands or tenements or other things real. Co. Lit. 1. b. Of lordſhips, advowſons, commons, eſtovers, and all hereditaments. Co. Lit. 4. a. So he may have a fee-ſimple in things mixt; as in franchiſes, liberties, &c. Co. L. 2. a.

So if a man grants to another and his heirs all woods, underwoods, timber-trees or others in ſuch a part of a foreſt, ſaving the ſoil; the grantee has a fee to take in alieno ſolo. R. 8 Co. 137. b.

So, in things perſonal; as in annuity. Co. Lit. 2. a. In a dignity granted to him and his heirs. Co. Lit. 2. a. In a ſwan-mark. 7 Co. 17. In a part or ſhare of the New River water. Ca. Parl. 207.

So, in the patronage of an hoſpital, or other thing created de novo, in which there was not a precedent eſtate, a man may have a fee to him and his heirs, qualified in a particular manner: as if a Queen conſort inſtitutes an hoſpital, and reſerves the patronage ſibi & reginis Angliæ ſuccedentibus. R. Ca. Ch. 214.

But in eſtates in eſſe before ſuch deſultory inheritance it cannot be: as the dutchy of Cornwal limited to the prince & filiis regis Angliæ primogenitis, ſhall not be good, except when limited by act of parliament. R. 8 Co. 16.

II. By what means ſuch an eſtate may be acquired.

A man may take a fee by deſcent, or by purchaſe.

In what manner a man may take by deſcent, ſee under title Deſcent.

With reſpect to purchaſers it is to be noted, that ſome are incapable of purchaſing.

An alien cannot purchaſe any lands in England. Vaugh. 227, 291. 7 Co. 16, 17, 18. Dyer 2. pl. 8. See Alien.

All perſons attainted of treaſon or felony are incapable of purchaſing. 2 New Abridg. 249. Co. Lit. 8. a. See Dig. Feud. lib. 2. tit. 23, 24. Vigellius 242, 350. Spelman's Gloſſ. 214, 215.

If a man be attainted of felony, and after purchaſe land, and dies, the King ſhall have it by his prerogative, and not the lord of the fee; becauſe his perſon being forfeited to the King, he cannot purchaſe but for the King. Co. Lit. 2. b.

A monſter not having human ſhape cannot purchaſe or inherit, but an hermaphrodite ſhall inherit or purchaſe ſecundum prævalentiam ſexus incaleſcentis; one born deaf and dumb may inherit; ſo may one born deaf, dumb and blind, becauſe it is for their advantage; but they cannot contract, becauſe they cannot underſtand the ſigns of contracting; an infant, an ideot, and a perſon of non ſane memory may inherit, becauſe the law, in compaſſion to their natural infirmities, preſumes them capable of property; ſo alſo an infant or a perſon of non ſane memory may purchaſe, becauſe it is intended for his benefit, and the freehold is in him till he diſagree thereto, becauſe an agreement is preſumed, it being for their benefit, and becauſe the freehold cannot be in the grantor, contrary to his own act, nor can be in abeyance, for then a ſtranger would not know againſt whom to demand his right; if at full age, or after recovery of his memory they agree thereto, they cannot avoid it; but if they die during minority or lunacy, the heirs may avoid it; for they ſhall not be ſubject to the contracts of perſons who wanted capacity to contract; ſo after his memory recovered, the lunatick or perſon non compos die without agreement to the purchaſe, their heirs may avoid it. Co. Lit. 2. 8. 2 Vent. 303.

A feme covert is capable of purchaſing; for ſuch an act does not make the property of the huſband liable to any diſadvantage, nor does it ſuppoſe a ſeparate will or power of contracting in the wife; but here the will of the wife is ſuppoſed the mind of the huſband, (he not objecting) ſince no man is ſuppoſed not to aſſent to that which is for his benefit; but in this caſe the huſband may diſagree, and it ſhall avoid the purchaſe. Co. Lit. 3. a.

By the ſtat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 4. Papiſts are diſabled from purchaſing lands, &c.

Perſons capable of purchaſing may gain a fee-ſimple by feoffment; or by fine, or common recovery; which are of the nature of a feoffment upon record; or by grant, or by exchange, releaſe, or confirmation, which are in the nature of grant; or by bargain and ſale; or by covenant to ſtand ſeiſed; or by deviſe. 3 Com. Dig. 215.

So a man may gain a fee by wrong: as by diſſeiſin, abatement, or intruſion. Id. Ibid.

III. By what words a fee-ſimple may be created.

It is the word heirs makes the inheritance; and a man cannot have a greater eſtate. Lit. 1. To have fee-ſimple implies, that it is without limitation to what heirs, but to heirs generally: though it may be limited by act of parliament. 4 Inſt. 206. If one give or grant land to J. S. and his heirs; and if he die without heirs, that J. D. ſhall have it to him and his heirs: by this J. S. hath a fee-ſimple, and J. D. will have no eſtate. Dyer 4, 33. This means by parol, with livery and ſeiſin, or by deed, &c. but not by will.

Where land is given or granted by fine, deed, or will, in poſſeſſion, reverſion, or remainder, to another and his heirs; it will be a fee ſimple. Plowd. 134. And if land be granted to a man and his heirs, habendum to him for life only, and livery of ſeiſin is made; it is a fee-ſimple eſtate, becauſe a fee is expreſſed in the grant. 2 Rep. 23.

A leaſe is granted to one for a term of years, and after that the leſſee ſhall have the land to him and his heirs by the rent of 10 l. a year; if the grantor make livery upon it, 'tis a fee-ſimple: otherwiſe but for years. Co. Lit. 217. Where lands are granted to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, the remainder to the right heirs of A. here A. hath a fee-ſimple. 20 Hen. 6. 35. Bro. Eſt. 34, 35. A gift or grant to a man's wife during life, after to him in tail, and after to his right heirs; he will have a fee-ſimple eſtate. 2 Rep. 91.

If lands are granted to a man and his ſucceſſors, this creates no fee-ſimple: but if ſuch a grant be made to a corporation, it is a fee-ſimple; and in caſe of a ſole corporation, as a biſhop, parſon, &c. a fee-ſimple is to them and their ſucceſſors. Co. Lit. 8. b. Wood 119. An eſtate granted to a perſon, to hold to him for ever, or to him and his aſſigns for ever, is only an eſtate for life; the word heirs being wanted to make it fee-ſimple: but in wills, which are more favoured than grants, the fee-ſimple and inheritance may paſs without the word heirs. Co. Lit. 19, 9.

And by deed of feoffment a fee-ſimple may be created, which would be an eſtate-tail by will; as where lands are given to another, and his heirs male, &c. without the word body. Hob. 32. A gift to a man and his children, and their heirs, is a fee ſimple to all that are living. Co. Lit. 8. Lit. Rep. 6.

A feoffment to B. & heredibus, without ſaying ſuis, gives him a fee-ſimple. Co. Lit. 8. b. So to a ſon and the heirs of his father. Semb. Co. Lit. 220. b. So to B. & liberis ſuis and their heirs; if he has iſſue, it gives them a joint eſtate in fee. Co. Lit. 9. a. So to B. heredibus & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, gives a fee. Co. Lit. 9. a.

So a grant to the King in perpetuum gives him a fee, without the words, his heirs or ſucceſſors, for he never dies. Co. Lit. 9. b. So a feoffment to a corporation aggregate in perpetuum gives a fee; for it never dies. Co. Lit. 9. b. 1 Rol. 832. l. 55.

Or, to a corporation ſole, to be held in frankalmoigne. Co. Lit. 9. b. 1 Roll. 833. l. 5. So, if A. re-enfeoffs B. adeo plene as B. enfeoffed him, he has a fee without the word, heirs. Co. Lit. 9. b.——This muſt mean where A. had an eſtate in fee of the feoffment of B. 1 Rol. 833. l. 12. So a grant to the church of B. gives a fee, without the word, heirs or ſucceſſors. 1 Rol. 833. l. 3.

And a limitation to the right heirs of B. gives a fee, without the words, and their heirs. 1 Rol. 833. l. 16. So a fee may be given without the words, his heirs, by fine ſur conuzance de droit come ceo, &c. Co. Lit. 9. b. Or, by a common recovery. Co. Lit. 9. b.

So, a fee paſſes without the words, his heirs, where a man gives land with his daughter, &c. in frankmarriage. Co. Lit. 9. b. If a parcener, or joint-tenant releaſes to his companion. Co. Lit. 9. b. If the lord, &c. releaſes to the tertenant; which enures by way of extinguiſhment. Co. Lit. 9. b. If a man releaſes a mere right; as, where a diſſeiſee releaſes to the diſſeiſor all his right. Co. Lit. 9. b.

So, if a rent be granted upon partition, for owelty (or equality) of partition. Co. Lit. 9, 10. So if a peer be ſummoned to parliament by writ, he has a fee in his dignity, without the word, heirs. Co. Lit. 9. b. So, by the foreſt law, if the King at a juſtice ſeat, grants to another an aſſart in perpetuum, without more, he has a fee. Co. Lit. 10. a. So, by cuſtom, a grant of a copyhold, ſibi & ſuis, or, ſibi & aſſignatis, may give the inheritance. 4 Co. 29. b.

A fee-ſimple determinable upon a contingency, is a fee to all intents; though not ſo durable as abſolute fee. Vaugh. 273. But ſee title Executory Deviſe.

In pleading eſtates in fee-ſimple, they may be generally alledged, but the commencement of eſtates-tail, and other particular eſtates, muſt regularly be ſhewn. Co. Lit. 303. The fee-ſimple eſtate, being the chief and moſt excellent; he who hath it in lands or tenements, may give, grant, or charge the ſame by deed or will at his pleaſure; or he may make waſte or ſpoil upon it: And if he bind himſelf and his heirs to warranty; or for money by obligation, or otherwiſe; and leaving ſuch land to the heir, it ſhall be charged with warranty and debts: Alſo the wife of a man that is ſeiſed of ſuch an eſtate, ſhall be endowed; and the huſband of a woman having this eſtate, be tenant by the curteſy (if he has iſſue born alive by her.) Co. Lit. 273. Dyer 330. Perk. Sect. 236.

Though fee-ſimple is the moſt ample eſtate of inheritance, it is ſubject to many incumbrances; as judgments, ſtatutes, mortgages, fines, jointures, dower, &c. And there is a fee-ſimple conditional, where the eſtate is defeaſible by not performing the condition; and a qualified fee-ſimple, which may be defeated by a limitation, &c. This is called a baſe fee, upon which no reverſion or remainder can be expectant. Co. Lit. 18. 10 Rep. 97. See Diſcent, Executory Deviſe, Wills.

Fee Expectant. (Feudum Expectativum) See Expectant.

Fee-Farm, (Feudi Firma) Is when the lord, upon creation of the tenancy, reſerves to himſelf and his heirs, either the rent for which it was before let to farm, or was reaſonably worth, or at leaſt a fourth part of the value; without homage, fealty or other ſervices, beyond what are eſpecially compriſed in the feoffment. 2 Inſt. 44. By Fitzherbert, a third part of the yearly value of the land may be appointed for the rent, where lands are granted in fee-farm, &c. F. N. B. 110. And Lord Coke ſays, fee-farm rents may be one half, a third, or fourth part of the value. Co. Lit. 143. Though theſe fee-farm rents ſeem to be more or leſs according to the conditions or conſideration of the purchaſe of the lands out of which they are iſſuing. It is the nature of fee-farm, that if the rent be behind and unpaid for the ſpace of two years, then the feoffor or his heirs may bring an action to recover the lands, &c. Brit. cap. 66. num. 4. See 10 Ann. c. 18. ſec. 4. 30 Geo. 2. c. 3. ſec. 5.

Fee-Farm Rents of the Crown. The fee-farm rents remaining to the Kings of England from their ancient demeſnes, were many of them alienated from the crown in the reign of King Charles II. And by Stat. 22 Car. 2. c. 6. the King was enabled by letters patent to grant fee-farm rents due in right of his crown, or in right of his dutchies of Lancaſter and Cornwall, except quit-rents, &c. to truſtees to make ſale thereof, and the truſtees were to convey the ſame by bargain and ſale to purchaſers, &c. who may recover the ſame as the King might. But it has been obſerved, that men were ſo very doubtful of the title to alienations of this nature, that while theſe rents were expoſed to ſale for ready money, ſcarce any would deal for them, and they remained unſold; but what made men earneſt to buy them, was the ſtop upon ſome of his Majeſty's other payments, which occaſioned perſons to reſort to this as the moſt eligible in that conjuncture: No tenant in tail of any of the ſaid rents, is enabled to bar the remainder. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 24. On the taxing of fee-farm rents, receivers, &c. were to allow to the perſons paying them ſo much in the pound as the land-tax amounts to. Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 18. See 30 Geo. 2. c. 3. ſec. 27, 28. 7 Geo. 2. c. 7. ſec. 5. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 24. ſec. 8. and 10 Ann. c. 18. ſec. 4.

Fees, Are certain perquiſites allowed to officers who have to do with the adminiſtration of juſtice, as a recompence for their labour and trouble; and theſe are either aſcertained by acts of parliament, or eſtabliſhed by ancient uſage, which gives them an equal ſanction with an act of parliament. 2 New Abr. 463.

Herein may be conſidered,

I. In what caſes fees are due.
II. At what time they may be demanded.

I. In what caſes fees are due.

At Common law no officer, whoſe office related to the adminiſtration of juſtice, could take any reward for doing his duty, but what he was to receive from the King. Co. Lit. 368. 2 Inſt. 176, 208-9.

And this fundamental maxim of the Common law is confirmed by Weſtm. 1. cap. 26. which enacts, "That no ſheriff, or other King's officer, ſhall take any reward to do his office, but ſhall be paid of that which they take of the King; and that he who ſo doth ſhall yield twice as much, and ſhall be puniſhed at the King's pleaſure."

This ſtatute comprehends eſcheators, coroners, bailiffs, gaolers, the King's clerk of the market, aulneger, and other inferior miniſters and officers of the King, whoſe offices do any way concern the adminiſtration or execution, of juſtice. 2 Inſt. 209.

And ſo much hath this law been thought to conduce to the honour of the King and welfare of the ſuject, that all preſcriptions whatſoever, which have been contrary to it, have been holden void; as where by preſcription the clerk of the market claimed certain fees for the view and examination of all weights and meaſures, and it was held merely void. 4 Inſt. 274. Moor 523. 2 Inſt. 209. 2 Rol. Abr. 226.

But it hath been holden, that the fee of 20 d. commonly called the bar fee, which hath been taken time out of mind, by the ſheriff, of every priſoner who is acquitted; and alſo the fee of one penny, which was claimed by the coroner of every viſne, when he came before the juſtices in eyre, are not within the meaning of the ſtatute, becauſe they are not demanded by the ſheriff or coroner for doing any thing relating to their offices, but claimed as perquiſites of right belonging to any them. 2 Inſt 210. Staun. P. C. 49.

Alſo it is holden by Lord Coke, that within the words of the ſtatute 34 Ed. 1. which are, "No tallage or aid ſhall be taken or levied by us or our heirs in our realm, without the good will and aſſent of archbiſhops, biſhops, earls, barons, knights, burgeſſes, and other freemen of the land; no new offices can be erected with new fees, or old offices with new fees; for that is a tallage upon the ſubject, which cannot be done without common aſſent by act of parliament. 2 Inſt. 533.

Yet it is holden, that an office erected for the public good, though no fee is annexed to it, is a good office; and that the party, for the labour and pains which he takes in executing it, may maintain a quantum meruit, if not as a fee, yet as a competent recompence for his trouble. Moor 808. Biſhop of Sarum's caſe.

All fees allowed by acts of parliament become eſtabliſhed fees; and the ſeveral officers intitled to them may maintain action of debt for them. 2 Inſt. 210. All ſuch fees as have been allowed by the courts of juſtice to their officers, as a recompence for their labour and attendance, are eſtabliſhed fees; and the parties cannot be deprived of them without an act of parliament. Co. Lit. 368. Prec. Chan. 551.

Where a fee is due by cuſtom, ſuch cuſtom, like all others, muſt be reaſonable; and therefore where a perſon libelled in the ſpiritual court for a burying fee due to him for every one who died in his pariſh, though buried in another; the court held this unreaſonable, and a prohibition was granted. Hob. 175. 1 Rol. Abr. 557, 559. S. C. adjudged.

The plaintiff brought an action on the caſe for fees due to him as Uſher of the Black Rod, and obtained a verdict. Stran. 747. Trin. 13 Geo. 1. No fee ſhall be taken for a report upon a reference from any court. 1 Jac. 1. c. 10. Certain fees of ſheriffs ſettled. 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. ſect. 16, &c. See Sheriff. Fees on niſi prius records out of the Exchequer to be the ſame as on other records. 23 Geo. 2. c. 26. ſect. 10. Fees of juſtices clerks to be regulated. 26 Geo. 2. c. 14. 27 Geo. 2. c. 16. ſect. 4. Debt lies for the ſheriff's fees for executing an elegit. Lord Raym. 1212.

As to the quantum of the fees due, it muſt be obſerved in general, that it is extortion for any officer to take more for executing his office, than is allowed by act of parliament, or is the known and ſettled fee in ſuch caſe. 10 Co. 102. a. Co. Lit. 368.

As to the fees of ſheriffs for executions, by 29 Eliz. cap. 4. it is enacted, "That it ſhall not be lawful for any ſheriff, &c. nor for any of their officers, &c. by colour of their office, to take of any perſon, directly or indirectly, for the ſerving and executing of any extent or execution upon the body, lands, goods or chattels of any perſon, more recompence than in this preſent act appointed, i. e. twelve-pence of and for every twenty ſhillings where it exceedeth not one hundred pounds; and ſix-pence of and for every twenty ſhillings, over and above the ſaid ſum of 100 l. that he or they ſhall ſo levy or extend, and deliver in execution, or take the body in execution for; upon pain, that the perſon offending, ſhall forfeit, to the party grieved, his treble damages; and ſhall forfeit the ſum of 40 l. for every time that he, they, or any of them ſhall do the contrary.

II. As to the time when fees may be demanded.

It is extortion for any officer to take his fee before it is due; and therefore where an under-ſheriff refuſed to execute a capias ad ſatisfaciendum till he had his fees, the court held, that plaintiff might bring an action againſt him for not doing his duty, or might pay him his fees, and then indict him for extortion. Co. Lit. 368. 10 Co. 102. a. 1 Salk. 330.

Officer muſt obey a writ, though fees unpaid. Stran. 814. Proceſs muſt be obeyed though fees are not tendered. Stran. 1262. If an habeas corpus ad ſubjiciendum be directed to a gaoler, he muſt bring up the priſoner altho' his fees were not paid him; and he can't excuſe himſelf of the contempt to the court, by alledging that the priſoner did not tender him his fees. 1 Keb. 272. pl. 57. So as to an habeas corpus ad faciendum & recipiendum. March 89. 2 Keb. 280. 2 Inſt. 178. but 1 Keb. 566. cont.

But if the gaoler brings up the priſoner by virtue of ſuch habeas corpus, the court will not turn him over till the gaoler be paid all his fees; nor, according to ſome opinions, till he be paid all that is due to him for the priſoner's diet; for that a gaoler is compellable to find his priſoner ſuſtenance. See 1 Rol. Rep 338. Co. Lit. 295 9 Co 87. Plowd. 68. a. 2 Rol. Abr. 32. 2 Jon. 178.

If a perſon pleads his pardon, the judges may inſiſt on the uſual fee of gloves to themſelves and officers, before they allow it. Fitz. Coron. 294. Pulton de Pace 88. Keling 25. 2 Jon. 56. 1 Sid. 452.

If an erroneous writ be delivered to the ſheriff, and he executes it, he ſhall have his fees, though the writ be erroneous. 1 Salk. 332. It ſeems to be laid down in the old books as a diſtinction, that upon an extent of land upon a ſtatute, the ſheriff is to have his fees, ſo much per pound according to the ſtatute immediately; but that upon an elegit he is not to have them till the liberate. Poph. 156. Winch 51. S. P.

A ſolicitor in Chancery may exhibit his bill for his fees for buſineſs done in that court; and ſo he may where the buſineſs is done in another court, if it relates to another demand the plaintiff makes in Chancery. 1 Vern. 203. 2 Chan. Ca. 153. But it hath been held, that chancellors, regiſters and proctors who are officers of temporal profit, and whoſe fees do not relate to the juriſdiction of the ſpiritual court, cannot ſue for them in the ſpiritual court. See 3 Leon. 268. 2 Rol. Rep. 59. 1 Mod. 167. 2 Keb. 615. 3 Keb. 303, 441, 516. 4 Mod. 254. 5 Mod. 242.

Fees of Attornies and Officers, Are conſiderations allowed them as a recompence for their labour: and in reſpect to officers, they are granted over and above their ſalaries, to excite them to diligence in executing their offices. They differ from wages which are paid to ſervants for certain work and labour done in a certain ſpace; whereas fees are diſburſed to officers, &c. for the tranſacting of buſineſs which occaſionally occurs. If a client, when his buſineſs in court is diſpatched, refuſeth to pay the officer his court fees; the court on motion will grant an attachment againſt him, on which he ſhall be committed until the fees are paid. 1 Lill. Abr. 598. Eccleſiaſtical courts have not power to eſtabliſh fees: But if a perſon bring a quantum meruit in B. R. &c. for fees, and the jury find for him, then they become eſtabliſhed fees. 1 Salk. 333.

Action on the caſe lies for an attorney for his fees, againſt him that retained him in his cauſe: And attornies are not to be diſmiſſed by their clients, till their fees are paid. 1 Lil. 142. But attornies are not to demand more than their juſt fees; nor to be allowed fees to counſel without tickets, &c. Stat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 7. An attorney may have action of debt for his fees, and alſo of counſel, and coſts of ſuit: As a counſellor is not bound to give counſel till he has his fee; it is ſaid he can have no action for it: Though it has been held otherwiſe. F. N. B. 121. 1 Brownl. 73. 31 H. 6. c. 9.

There were no fees due to ſheriffs for executing their offices, till the Stat. 29 Eliz. c. 4. which allows them fees for executing writs of execution, &c. By the Stat. of Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 42 & 44, the ancient fees of officers of courts of juſtice were ordained: And by ſtatutes, the fees of ſheriffs, gaolers, bailiffs, &c. are limited. See Extortion.

Feigned Action. See Faint Action.

Feigned Iſſue. If, in a ſuit in equity, any matter of fact is ſtrongly conteſted, the court uſually directs the matter to be tried by a jury; eſpecially ſuch important facts as the validity of a will, or whether A. is the heir at law to B. or the exiſtence of a modus decimandi, or real and immemorial compoſition for tithes. But as a jury cannot be ſummoned to attend a court of equity, the fact is uſually directed to be in the court of King's Bench, or at the aſſiſes, upon a feigned iſſue. For this purpoſe, a feigned action is brought, wherein the pretended plaintiff declares that he laid a wager of 5 l. with the defendant, that A. was heir at law to B. then he avers that he is ſo; and brings his action for the 5 l. The defendant allows the wager, but avers that A. is not the heir to B. and thereupon that iſſue is joined, which is directed out of Chancery to be tried: And thus the verdict of the jurors at law determines the fact in the court of equity. Black. Com. 3 V. 452. If it is a matter of great difficulty and conſequence, the direction may be for a trial at bar, with leave of the court.

Felagus, (Quaſi fide cum eo ligatus) A companion, but particularly a friend, who was bound in the decennary for the good behaviour of another. In the laws of King Ina, it is ſaid, if a murderer could not be found, &c. the parents of the perſon ſlain ſhould have ſix marks, and the King forty; if he had no parents, then the lord ſhould have it. Et ſi dominus non haberet, felagus ejus. LL. Inæ, cap. 15.

Feld, Is a Saxon word, ſignifying field; and in its compound it ſignifies wild, as feld honey, is wild honey, &c. Blount.

Fele Homagers, Were faithful ſubjects, from the Sax. fai, i. e. fides.

Felo de ſe, One that commits felony by laying violent hands upon himſelf, whereby he is the occaſion of his own untimely death. When a perſon with deliberation and direct purpoſe kills himſelf, by hanging, drowning, ſhooting, ſtabbing, &c. this is felo de ſe; but the perſon that commits this felony, muſt be of the age of diſcretion, and compos mentis: And therefore if an infant under fourteen years of age, or a lunatick during his lunacy, or one diſtracted by a diſeaſe, or an ideot, kills himſelf, it is not felony. 3 Inſt. 44. Dalt. ch. 145. Alſo if a perſon during the time that he is non compos mentis giveth himſelf a mortal wound, though he dieth thereof when he recovers his memory; he is not felo de ſe, becauſe at the time of the ſtroke he was not compos mentis. Dalt. 342, 344. And he who deſires and perſuades another man to kill him, is not a felo de ſe; his aſſent being void in law, and the perſon killing him a murderer. Kelw. 136. It is felo de ſe where a man maliciouſly attempts to kill another, and falls upon his ſword, &c. whereby he kills himſelf; but he muſt be the only agent. 1 H. P. C. 68.

A felo de ſe ſhall forfeit all his goods and chattels real and perſonal; but not until it is lawfully found by the oath of twelve men, before the coroner ſuper viſum corporis, that he is felo de ſe. 3 Inſt. 55. By the return of the inquiſition the goods, &c. are veſted in the King: Though it hath been ſaid, that the goods of a felo de ſe are forfeited before inquiſition, viz. immediately upon committing the fact. 1 Lev. 8. But ſee 5 Rep. 110. where it is adjudged that they are not forfeited till it is found of record. The lands of inheritance of a felo de ſe are not forfeited, by reaſon he was not attainted in his life-time: nor is ſuch a perſon's wife barred of dower, or his blood corrupted. 1 Hawk. 68. If a judgment is obtained by a plaintiff in any action, and the plaintiff hangs himſelf, ſo as to become felo de ſe, the debt is forfeited to the King. 1 Saund. 36. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 840. Goods are forfeited to the King by a felo de ſe, for the loſs of a ſubject, and breach of the peace. 1 Plowd. 261. But theſe forfeitures are oftentimes ſaved, by the coroner's jury finding their verdict lunacy; to which they are inclined on a favourable interpretation, that it is impoſſible for a man in his ſenſes to do a thing ſo contrary to nature; but if this argument be good, ſelf-murder can be no crime, becauſe a madman cannot be guilty of any crime. 1 Hawk. 67.

If a perſon felo de ſe is ſecretly made away with, that the coroner cannot view the body; preſentment is to be made of it by juſtices of peace, &c. to entitle the King to the forfeiture of goods. 5 Rep. 110. Where a perſon is found felo de ſe, who, on account of lunacy, &c. ought not to be ſo; or where one is returned non compos, when in truth the party is felo de ſe, &c. if there be no fault in the coroner, or incertainty in the inquiſition, a melius inquirendum will not be granted; but the inquiſition is traverſable in B. R. 3 Mod. 238. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 840. A pardon of murder, doth not pardon felo de ſe; but a pardon of all felonies and forfeitures doth. By cuſtom and practice, the bodies of felo's de ſe's are buried in the highway, &c.

Felons Goods. The ſtatute de prærogativa regis, 17 Ed. 2. c. 1. grants to the King, among other things, the goods of felons and fugitives. If the King grant to a man and his heirs felons goods, the grantee cannot deviſe them, &c. on the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 1. becauſe they are not of a yearly value; but where a perſon is ſeiſed of a manor, to which they are appendant, it is otherwiſe, for they will paſs as appurtenant. 3 Rep. 32. A perſon committed to priſon on ſuſpicion of felony, having the money taken from him which he had about him before conviction, brought an action of treſpaſs for ſeizing his money, &c. on the Stat. 1 R. 3. c. 3. by which it is enacted, that no perſon ſhall take the goods of another, &c. Raym. 414. 2 Nelſ. 839. See Flight.

Felony, (Felonia, Fr. Felonnie) As Sir Edward Coke tells us, is derived from the Latin word fel, or from the old Sax. fell, one ſignifying gall, and the other fierce; and his reaſon is, becauſe either of theſe words are ſuitable to the crime, which is always intended to be done with a bitter or fierce mind: But the learned Spelman gives a different account of the derivation of this word, that it comes from the Saxon word, feah, which ſignified a reward or eſtate, and the German lon, which in Engliſh is price; and this was formerly a crime puniſhed with the price, viz. the loſs of eſtate. And before the reign of K. Hen. 1. felonies were puniſhed with pecuniary fines; for he was the firſt who ordered felons to be hanged, about the year 1108.

The judgment againſt a man for felony hath been the ſame ſince the reign of that King, i. e. That he be hanged by the neck till dead; which is entered ſuſpendatur per collum, &c. 4 Inſt. 124. Felony was anciently every capital crime perpetrated with an evil intention: All capital offences by the Common law, came generally under the title of felony; and could not be expreſſed by any word but felonice; which muſt of neceſſity be laid in an indictment of felony. Co. Lit. 391. It is always accompanied with an evil intention; and therefore ſhall not be imputed to any miſanimadverſion. But the bare intention to commit a felony is ſo very criminal, that at the Common law it was puniſhable as felony, where it miſſed of its effect through ſome accident; and as our law now is, the party may be ſeverely fined for ſuch an intention. 1 Hawk. P. C. 65.

Felony is included in high treaſon. H. P. C. 11. We account any offence felony, that is in degree next petit treaſon; and at this day felony includes petit treaſon, murder, homicide, ſodomy, rape, burning of houſes, burglary, robbery, breach of priſon, (where the priſoner is chargeable with a felony,) reſcous and eſcape, after one is impriſoned or arreſted for felony, with other offences particularly enumerated in the tables to the ſtatutes.

It is either by the Common law, or by ſtatute: Felony, by the Common law, is againſt the life of a man; as murder, manſlaughter, felo de ſe, ſe defendendo, &c. Againſt a man's goods, ſuch as larceny, and robbery: Againſt his habitation, as burglary, arſon or houſe-burning; and againſt public juſtice, as breach of priſon. 3 Inſt. 31. Piracy, robbery, or murder upon the ſea, are felonies puniſhable by the Civil law; and likewiſe by ſtatute: And felonies by ſtatute are very numerous. Mod. Juſt. 180.

Felony is diſtinguiſhed from lighter offences, in that the puniſhment of it is death; but not always, for petit larceny is felony, and the indictment againſt ſuch an offender muſt run, felonice cepit, yet it is not puniſhed by death, though it be loſs of goods: And of felonies in general, there are two ſorts; one of which, for the firſt offence is allowed clergy, and another that is not; but clergy is granted where it is not expreſly taken away by ſtatute. Staundf. lib. 1. Felony is puniſhed with loſs of life, and of lands, not entailed, goods and chattels; but the ſtatutes make a difference in ſome caſes concerning lands, as the 37 H. 8. c. 6. And felony ordinarily works corruption of blood; unleſs a ſtatute making an offence felony, ordains it ſhall be otherwiſe, as ſome ſtatutes do.

The puniſhment of a perſon for felony, by our ancient books, is, 1ſt, To loſe his life. 2dly, To loſe his blood, as to his anceſtry, and ſo as to have neither heir nor poſterity. 3dly, To loſe his goods. 4thly, To loſe his lands; and the King ſhall have annum, diem & vaſtum, to the intent that his wife and children be caſt out of the houſe, his houſe pulled down, and all that he had for his comfort or delight deſtroyed. 4 Rep. 124. A felony by ſtatute incidentally implies, that the offender ſhall be ſubject to the like attainder and forfeiture, &c. as is incident to a felon at Common law. 3 Inſt. 47, 59, 90. And when perſons are to undergo judgment of life and member for any crime by ſtatute, it is felony thereby, whether the word felony be mentioned or not. 1 Hawk. 107.

All felonies are ſeveral, and cannot be joint; ſo that a pardon of one felon, cannot diſcharge another: but the felony of one man may be dependant upon that of another, and the pardon of the one by a neceſſary conſequence enure to the benefit of the other, as in caſes of principal and acceſſary, &c 2 Hawk. P. C. 380, 387

Private perſons may arreſt felons by their own authority, or by warrant from a juſtice of peace: And every private perſon is bound to aſſiſt an officer to take felons, &c. 2 Hawk. 75.

But one ought not to be arreſted upon ſuſpicion of felony, except there be probabilis cauſa ſhewed for the ground of the ſuſpicion. 1 Lil. Abr. 603. If a felony is not done by a man, but ſome perſon elſe, if another hath probable cauſe to ſuſpect he is the felon, and accordingly doth arreſt him, this is lawful, and may be juſtified: But to make good ſuch juſtification, there muſt be in fact a felony committed by ſome perſon, without which there can be no ground of ſuſpicion. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 78. And as to the perſon, there ought to be a reaſonable cauſe to ſuſpect him, otherwiſe the arreſt will be illegal.

A private man arreſting one for felony, cannot juſtify breaking doors, to take the party ſuſpected; but he doth it at his peril, viz. if in truth he be a felon, it is juſtifiable; but if innocent, then it it is not: To prevent a murder or manſlaughter, private perſons may break doors open. 2 Hale Ibid. 82. Officers may break open a houſe to take a felon, or any perſon juſtly ſuſpected of felony; and if an officer hath a warrant to take a felon, who is killed in reſiſting, it is not felony in the officer; but if the officer is killed, it is otherwiſe. Dalt. 289.

Perſons indicted of felony, &c. where there are ſtrong preſumptions and circumſtances of guilt, are not repleviſable; but for larceny, &c. when perſons are committed who are of good reputation, they may be bailed. 2 Hawk. 101. The former part of the poſition muſt be, with an exception to the power of the court of King's Bench. If one be committed to priſon for one felony, the juſtices of gaol delivery may try him for another felony, for which he was not committed, by virtue of their commiſſion. 1 Lil. 602.

A felon refuſing to plead, and put himſelf upon his trial, ſhall be put to the penance of paine fort & dure, &c.

In the higheſt crime, and in the loweſt ſpecies of felony, viz. in petit larceny, and in all miſdemeanors, ſtanding mute hath always been equivalent to conviction. But upon appeals or indictments for other felonies, or petit treaſon, the priſoner was not by the ancient law looked upon as convicted, ſo as to receive judgment for the felony, but ſhould, for his obſtinacy, have received the terrible ſentence of penance, or paine fort & dure. See Black. Com. 4 V. 325.

If a felon ſtands mute by the act of God, the felony is to be inquired of by jury, and whether the priſoner be the ſame perſon, and all other matters in the ſame manner as if the criminal had pleaded. 2 Hawk. 327. And it may be inquired of by inqueſt of office, whether he do ſo of malice, or by the act of God. Ibid.

Where a married woman commits felony, in company with her huſband, it ſhall be preſumed to be done by his command, and ſhe ſhall be excuſed. 3 Inſt. 310. If a man's horſe be going into the ground of another, and he takes it felleo animo, not as damage-feaſant, it is no finding, but felony: But if A.'s ſheep ſtray into the flock of B. and he drives the ſame along with his flock, or by miſtake ſhears him, this is not a felony; though if he knew it to be another perſon's, and marks it with his mark, it is an evidence of felony. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 506.

Where one ſteals another's goods, and a third perſon feloniouſly takes them from him; he is a felon as to both the others. And when there is a pretence of title to things unlawfully taken, it may be only a trick to colour felony; and the ordinary diſcovery of a felonious intent is, if the party doth it ſecretly, or being charged with the goods denies it. Ibid. 507, 509. If a perſon to whom goods are delivered on a pretended buying them, runs away with them, it is felony: And a gueſt ſtealing plate ſet before him at an inn, &c. is felony; alſo perſons who have the charge of things, as a ſervant of a chamber, &c. may be guilty of felony: And the leaſt removing of a thing in attempts of felony, is felony, though it be not carried off. 3 Inſt. 308. Raym. 275.

But goods muſt not be of a baſe nature; ſuch as dogs, &c. nor feræ naturæ, as deer, hares, &c. except they be made tame, when it will be felony to ſteal them. If any turkeys, geeſe, poultry, fiſh in a trunk, &c. are taken away, it is felony. 3 Inſt. 309, 310. Stealing of tame peacocks, is felony; ſo of herons, and young hawks in their neſts: it is otherwiſe of pheaſants, partridges, conies, &c. although they be ſo kept that they cannot eſcape; if they be not reclaimed, and known. Jenk. Cent. 204. As to cats, dogs, monkeys, and the like; though it be not felony to take them, treſpaſs lies for them. Jenk. ibid.

Felonies by ſtatute, Are very numerous, and as this work will not admit of a proper enumeration, we muſt refer to the Table of the quarto edition of the Statutes, where they are ſet forth in alphabetical order.

Feme Covert, is a married woman; who is likewiſe ſaid to be covert baron. See Baron and Feme.

Feme ſole, (Fr.) A woman alone, that is unmarried; and if ſhe marries, her debts become thoſe of the huſband, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 351. Feme Sole Merchant. See Baron and Feme, and London.

Fence, Is a hedge, ditch, or other incloſure of land for the better manurance and improvement of the ſame. And where a hedge, and ditch join together, in whoſe ground or ſide the hedge is, to the owner of that land belongs the keeping of the ſame hedge or fence, and the ditch adjoining to it on the other ſide, in repair and ſcoured. Par. Offic. 188. An action on the caſe or treſpaſs lies, for not repairing of fences, whereby cattle come into the ground of another, and do damage. 1 Salk. 335. Alſo it is preſentable in the Court-Baron, &c. Vide Approvement. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. and Incloſure.

Fence-Month, (menſis prohibitionis, or menſis vetitus) Is a month wherein female deer in foreſts, &c. do fawn, and therefore it is unlawful to hunt in foreſts during that time; which begins fifteen days before Midſummer, and ends fifteen days after it, being in all thirty days. Manw. part 2. cap. 13. Stat. 20 Car. 3. cap. 3. Some ancient foreſters call this month the defence-month, becauſe then the deer are to be defended from being diſturbed, and the interruptions of fear and danger; as there are certain defence-months for fiſh, particularly ſalmons, as appears by the Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 47, &c. Serjeant Fleetwood ſaith, that the fence-month hath been always kept with watch and ward, in every bailiwick throughout the whole foreſt, ſince the time of Canutus. Fleetwood's Foreſt Laws, p. 5.

Fengeld, (Sax.) A tax or impoſition, exacted for the repelling of enemies.——Pecunia vel tributum ad arcendos hoſtes erogatum. MS. Antiq.

Fens, (paludes) Are low marſhy grounds, or lakes for water; for the draining whereof in this kingdom ſeveral ſtatutes have been enacted. The ſtatutes 4 Jac. 1. c. 8. & 13. make proviſion for draining and ſecuring from inundation the drowned grounds and marſhes of Leſneſs and Fants in Kent; and the fens and low grounds in the iſle of Ely. The 15 Car. 2. cap. 17. appoints William, Earl of Bedford, and other adventurers, a corporation, for the draining of Bedford Level in Bedfordſhire, conſiſting of a governor, bailiffs, and conſervators, &c. who have power to lay and levy taxes within the great level of the fens; and alſo to erect works within the ſame, for carrying the water to the ſea, making ſatisfaction to the owners of lands for injury received; and throwing down any of the ſaid works, incurs treble damages, &c.

By 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 11. Deeping fens, &c. in Lincolnſhire, are to be drained from water; and Edward, Earl of Mancheſter, and ſeveral others are declared undertakers thereof, on certain truſts, with power to erect banks, bridges, drains, locks, ſluices, &c. for recovery of the ſaid fens; and aſſeſſees of lands held by the adventurers under the truſtees, may hold aſſemblies for making of by-laws, for the management of the works of draining; they may charge the owner of the lands by an acre tax, &c. and, on default of payment, ſell the defaulters lands, &c.

The 11 Geo. 2. c. 34. ordains that commiſſioners ſhall be appointed to put this act in execution, for effectually draining and preſerving of the fens in the iſle of Ely in Cambridgeſhire; who are authoriſed to make drains, dams, &c. and proper works thereon: and the ſaid commiſſioners may charge proprietors with a proportionable acre tax, viz. for Waterden Fen, at the rate of 5 s. and Redmoor, Cawdle Fen, and the Holts, at 2 s. an acre by the year, for four years; and afterwards at an yearly rate, not exceeding 1 s. 6 d. per acre; they may likewiſe borrow money for maintaining and effecting the works, by aſſigning over the duties: perſons obſtructing the draining to forfeit 100 l. and if any perſon ſhall burn any of the engines erected, he ſhall be impriſoned three years; and being convicted again of the like offence, to be guilty of felony. And for raiſing money, for draining and future preſervation of Deeping fens, a rate of 20 s. an acre is to be paid, by all the taxable land owners, according to agreement of the proprietors; levied by diſtreſs of goods, or ſale of defaulters lands; which may be alſo mortgaged to raiſe the money, &c. by 11 Geo. 2. c. 39.

By the Stat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 18. Commiſſioners are appointed for draining and preſerving certain fen lands in the ſeveral pariſhes of Maney, Upwell, Welney, Downham, Witcham, and in a certain extraparochial place in Byal Fen, within the iſle of Ely, and county of Cambridge, who may make an aſſeſſment of 1 s. 6 d. per acre yearly, on which they may borrow money, with like powers, authorities and directions as in Stat. 11 Geo. 2. cap. 34. See Stat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 11, 16, 19. as to fen lands in the pariſhes of Sutton, Mepal, Witcham, Chatteris, Doddington, Somerſham, Upwell Outwel, Demer, Welney, Whittleſey and Padley with Fenton in Ely, Cambridge and Huntingdon, with many others, which ſee in the Table to the 4to edition of Statutes at Large.

Feod or Feud, Is defined to be a right which a vaſſal hath in lands, or ſome immoveable thing of his lord's, to uſe the ſame, and take the profits thereof hereditarily; rendring unto the lord ſuch feodal duties and ſervices as belong to military tenure, &c. and the property of the ſoil always remaining to the lord. Spelm. of Tenures, cap. 1.

Feodal, (feodalis, vel feudalis) Of or belonging to the fee. Stat. 12 Car. 2. cap. 24.

Feodality, Fealty paid to the lord by his feodal tenant. Fecit feodalitatem ſuam, prout decet dicto domino. Cartular. Rading. MS.

Feodary, or Feudary, (feudatarius) An officer of the court of wards, appointed by the maſter of that court, by virtue of the ſtatutes 32 Hen. 8. cap. 26. whoſe buſineſs it was to be preſent with the eſcheator in every county at the finding of offices of lands, and to give in evidence for the King as well concerning the value as the tenure; and his office was alſo to ſurvey the lands of the ward, after the office found, and to rate it. He did likewiſe aſſign the King's widows their dowers; and receive all the rents of wards lands within his circuit, which he anſwered to the receiver of the court. This office ſeems to be wholly taken away by Statute 12 Car. 2. cap. 24.

Feodatary, Was the tenant who held his eſtate by feodal ſervice; and grantees, to whom lands in feud or fee were granted by a ſuperior lord, were ſometimes called homagers; and in ſome writings are termed vaſſals, feuds, and feodataries. See Feuds.

Feodum. See Feud.

Feodum Militis, A knight's fee: feodum laicum, a lay fee, or land held in fee of a lay lord. Kennet's Gloſſ. See Feuds.

Feoffment, (feoffamentum, from the Gothick word feudum, and ſignifies donationem feudi) Is a gift or grant of any manors, meſſuages, lands or tenements, to another in fee, to him and his heirs for ever, by the delivery of ſeiſin and poſſeſſion of the thing given or granted; and in every feoffment, the giver or grantor is called the feoffor, and he that receives by virtue thereof, is the feoffee. Littleton ſays, the proper difference between a feoffor and a donor, is, that the one gives in fee-ſimple, the other in fee-tail. Litt. lib. 1. cap. 6. Accomp. Conv. 1 Vol. 71. The deed of feoffment is our moſt antient conveyance of lands; and in records we often find fees given to knights under the phraſes of de veteri feoffamento, and de novo feoffamento; the firſt whereof were ſuch lands as were given or granted by King Henry I. And the others, ſuch as were granted after the death of the ſaid King, ſince the beginning of the reign of Henry II. At Common law the uſual conveyance was by feoffment, to which livery and ſeiſin was neceſſary, the poſſeſſion being thereby given to the feoffee; but if livery and ſeiſin could not be made, by reaſon there was a tenant in poſſeſſion, the reverſion was granted, and the particular tenant attorned. Co. Lit, 9. 49. And a feoffment is ſaid, in ſome reſpects, to excel the conveyance by fine and recovery; it clearing all diſſeiſins, abatements, intruſions, and other wrongful eſtates, which no other conveyance doth: and for that it is ſo ſolemnly and publicly made, it has been of all other conveyances the moſt obſerved. Weſt. Symb. 235. Plowd. 554.

This head will be beſt illuſtrated by conſidering,

I. Of what things a feoffment may be made.
II. Who may make a feoffment, and how it is to be made.
III. Of the different kinds of livery, with their effects and operations.

I. Of what things a feoffment may be made.

A feoffment may be of a meſſuage, land, meadow, paſture, or other corporal thing; and of a moiety, third, or fourth part of it; that lies in livery.

So a feoffment may be made of lands, in which a man has no fixed eſtate; as, if he has twelve acres to be annually aſſigned in ſuch a meadow; and livery in any acre, which he has at the time of the feoffment, is ſufficient. Co. Lit. 4. a. 48. b. 2 Rol. 10. l. 40 ad 50.

So, if a feoffment be of fifty acres towards the north in ſuch a moor, which contains 100 acres, livery in any of them is ſufficient. 2 Rol. 11. l. 5. Dy. 372. b.

So, if two manors be divided alternis vicibus between parceners, either may make a feoffment of her manor; and the deed ought to comprehend both, and ſhe ſhall make livery in one ſecundum formam chartæ this year, and in the other the next year. Co. L. 48. b.

But a feoffment cannot be made of a thing of which livery cannot be given; as, of incorporeal inheritances; rent, advowſon, common, &c. 2 Rol. 1. l. 20. Though it be an advowſon, &c. in groſs. Cont. 11 H. 6. 4. Acc. 2 Rol. 1. l. 21.

So a feoffment of lands, which are uncertain till a future act, is void; for livery does not operate in futuro: as, if A. agrees by indenture to convey 20 l. per annum in land to ſuch an uſe, and 20 s. per annum to ſuch an uſe, and makes a feoffment of all his lands to the uſes in the indenture; it will be void for all but that where livery was made, it not being aſcertained which ſhall be to one uſe, and which to the other. R. 1. Rol. 187.

In a deed of feoffment, there muſt be a good feoffor, that is, one able to grant the thing conveyed by the deed; a feoffee capable to take it; and a thing grantable, and granted in the manner the law requireth. Co. Lit. 42, 49, 190.

II. Who may make a feoffment, and how it is to be made.

If a perſon non compos makes a feoffment, and gives livery himſelf, this is allowed on all hands to be good to bind himſelf, ſo that he can by no proceſs or plea avoid the feoffment, and reſtore himſelf to the poſſeſſion; the ſame law of an ideot; and the reaſon is, becauſe the inveſtiture being made before the pares curiæ, their ſolemn atteſtation could not be defeated by the perſon himſelf, becauſe it is preſumed they are competent judges of the ability of the feoffor to make ſuch feoffment. 2 Rol. Abr. 2. Co. Lit. 247. 4 Co. 125. a. Show. Parl. Caſes 153. and ſee tit. Ideots and Lunaticks, and poſt.

But if an infant makes a feoffment, and makes a livery himſelf, this ſhall not bind him, but he himſelf may avoid it by writ of dum fuit infra ætatem; yet the feoffment of the infant is not void in itſelf, as well becauſe he is allowed to contract for his benefit, as that there ought to be ſome act of notoriety to reſtore the poſſeſſion to him equal to that which transferred it from him. 4 Co. 125. 2 Rol. Abr. 2. 8 Co. 42, 43. Whittingham's caſe.

But if an infant makes a feoffment, and a letter of attorney to make livery, that is void; ſo if a perſon non compos makes a ſurrender or releaſe, this is void in law; ſo if he makes a letter of attorney to give livery; but the heir at law after the death of the perſon of non ſane memory, or ideot, may avoid his feoffment; and ſo may the King upon an office found of his lunacy during his life. 8 Co. 45. Co. Lit. 247. a. 4 Co. 125. a. 2 Rol. Abr. 2. Show. Par. Caſes. 153.

There muſt be livery of ſeiſin in all feoffments, and gifts, &c, where a corporal inheritance or freehold doth paſs; and without livery, the deed is no feoffment, gift or demiſe. Lit. 59. 8 Rep. 82. But a freehold may paſs without livery by the ſtatute 27 H. 8. c. 10. By force of which ſtatute, a feoffment to the uſe of the feoffor, feoffee, &c. ſupplies the place of livery and ſeiſin. Wood's Inſt. 239.

But a feoffment may not be of ſuch things whereof livery and ſeiſin may not be made; for no deed of feoffment is good to paſs an eſtate without livery of ſeiſin; and if either of the parties die before livery, the feoffment is void. Plowd 214, 219. Though where a feme feoffor made a feoffment of lands with livery in view, and then married the feoffee before the livery was executed by actual entry; it was adjudged the livery might be executed after marriage, the feoffee having not only an authority to enter, but an intereſt paſſed by the livery in view, and the woman did all on her part to be done, 1 Vent. 186.

A man may either give or receive livery by letter of attorney; for ſince a contract is no more than the conſent of a man's mind to a thing, where that conſent or concurrence appears, it were unreaſonable to oblige each perſon to be preſent at the execution of the contract, ſince it may as well be performed by any other perſon delegated for that purpoſe by the parties to the contract. Co. Lit. 52. 2 Rol. Abr. 8.

But ſuch delegation or authority, to give or receive livery, muſt be by deed, that it may appear to the court, that the attorney had a commiſſion, to repreſent the parties ties that are to give or take the livery, and whether the authority was purſued. Co. Lit. 48. b. 52. a. 2 Rol. Palfreman and Grobie.

If a man be diſſeiſed, and makes a deed of feoffment, and a letter of attorney to enter and take poſſeſſion of the land, and afterwards to make livery, according to the form of the charter, it will be good a feoffment, though he was out of poſſeſſion at the time of the deed made: for the feoffment takes effect by the livery, and not by the deed. Co. Lit. 48, 52

A feoffment being a Common law conveyance, and executed by livery, makes a tranſmutation of eſtate; but a conveyance on the ſtatute of uſes, as a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, &c. makes only a tranſmutation of poſſeſſion, and not of eſtate. 2 Lev. 77. 1 Vent. 378. A feoffment to the uſe of A. for life, the remainder to B. If A. refuſes to take the eſtate, B. ſhall take preſently, becauſe the whole eſtate is out of the feoffor by livery; but if it had been by covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, he ſhould not have taken till after the death of A. but it would reſt in the covenantor, who ſhall have the uſe in the mean time. 2 Lev. 77. 1 Leon. Ca. 279. Before the Stat. Weſtm. 3. If a man had made feoffment in fee, without declaring any uſe, it ſhould have been to the uſe of the feoffee; though now by that ſtatute, where no conſideration or declaration of uſe is expreſſed, it ſhall go to the feoffor himſelf. 2 Leon. 15, 16. If I convey lands by feoffment, which I have on the part of the mother, to J. S. and his heirs, without conſideration; the uſe will be void, and the land ſhall return again to me and my heirs on the part of the mother; yet if I declare the uſe to me and my heirs, or upon ſuch feoffment reſerve a rent in like manner, it ſhall go to my heirs at the Common law, it being a new thing divided from the land. Hob. 31. Co. Lit. 13, 231. 1 Rep. 100. Dyer 134. Where a man makes a feoffment, without any conſideration; by that the eſtate and poſſeſſion paſſes, but not the uſe, which ſhall deſcend to his heir. 1 Leon. 182.

A feoffment in fee is made to the uſe of ſuch perſons, and for ſuch eſtates, as the feoffor ſhall appoint by his will, or to the uſe of the laſt will; by operation of law the uſe veſts in the feoffor, and he is ſeiſed of a qualified fee, viz. until he makes his will, and declares the uſes; and after the will is made, it is only directory, for nothing paſſes by it but all by the feoffment. 6 Rep. 18. Moor 567. A feoffment in fee, upon condition, &c. was inrolled, but no livery made; and it was adjudged no good feoffment, but the inrollment ſhall conclude the perſon to ſay that it was not his deed. Poph. 6. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 844. If a bargain and ſale of lands be not inrolled, and the bargainor deliver livery and ſeiſin of the lands ſecundum formam chartæ, &c. it has been held a good feoffment. 2 And. 68.

A feoffment in fee made upon condition not to alien, the condition is void; becauſe it is repugnant to the eſtate; but if livery is had, the feoffment will be good againſt the feoffor: and a bond with condition that the feoffee ſhall not alien, is ſaid to be good. Co. Lit. 206. Cro. Jac. 596. If a man makes a feoffment of lands on condition, that the feoffee ſhall give the lands to the feoffor, and his wife in ſpecial tail, remainder to the heirs of the feoffor; and he dies before ſuch gift is made, the feoffee ought to make it as near the intent of the condition as may be, viz. to the wife without impeachment of waſte, remainder to the heirs of the body of her huſband, on her body begotten, and remainder to the huſband's right heirs. In caſe the feoffor and his wife both die, the feoffee then ſhould make the eſtate to the iſſue, and heirs of the body of his father and mother begotten, remainder to the right heirs of the huſband or father. Co. Lit. 219, 220.

Tenant in tail makes a feoffment in fee; the inheritance of the tail is not given to the feoffee by the feoffment, nor is he thereby tenant in tail; for none ſhall be tenant in tail but he only who is comprehended in the gift made by the donor. But it gives away all the immediate eſtate the feoffor had. Plowd. 562. Hob. 335. If leſſee for life, and the reverſioner in fee, make a feoffment in fee by deed, each gives his eſtate; the leſſee his by livery, and the fee from him in remainder. 6 Rep. 15 Lill. Abr. 609. A feoffment was made habendum to the feoffee and his heirs, after the death of the feoffor, and livery was made; yet it was held to be a void feoffment, for an eſtate of freehold in lands cannot begin at a day to come: but where a leſſor made a leaſe for lives, and granted the reverſion to another for life, whoſe eſtate for life was to begin after the death of the ſurvivor of the other leſſees for life, this was adjudged a good eſtate in reverſion for life. Hob. 171. 1 *Nelſ. If the huſband alone make a feoffment of his wife's land, or of both their lands, his wife being on the land and diſagreeing to it; this will be good againſt all perſons but the wife: alſo ſo it is, if one jointenant make a deed of feoffment of the whole land his companion being then upon it: or if a man diſſeiſe me of my lands, and then enfeoff another thereof, whilſt I am upon the land, &c. *Perk. III. Of the different kinds of livery, with their effects and operations.

Livery may be by deed, and within view, or in law.

The livery in deed, is the actual tradition of the land, and is made either by the delivery of a branch of a tree, or a turf of the land, or ſome other thing, in the name of all the lands and tenements contained in the deed; and it may be made by words only, without the delivery of any thing; as if the feoffor being upon the land, or at the door of the houſe, ſays to the feoffee, I am content that you ſhould enjoy this land according to the deed, or Enter into this houſe or land, and enjoy it according to the deed; this is a good livery to paſs the freehold, becauſe, in all theſe caſes, the charter of feoffment makes the limitation of the eſtate, and then the words ſpoken by the feoffor on the land, are a ſufficient indicium to the people preſent, to determine in whom the freehold reſides during the extent of the limitation; beſides, the words, being relative to the charter of feoffment, plainly denote an intention to enfeoff. Co. Lit. 48. a. 9 Co. 137. b. Thorowgood's caſe. 6 Co. 26. Sharp's caſe. 2 Rol. Abr. 7. And ſee Cro. Jac. 80 which ſeems cont'

But if a man without any charter, being in his houſe, ſays, I here demiſe you this houſe, as long as I live, paying 20*l. per annum*, this paſſes no freehold, but only an eſtate at will, becauſe the word demiſe denotes only the extent of the limitation of the eſtate intended to be conveyed; but bare words of limitation, without ſome acts or words to diſcover the intention of the feoffor to deliver over the poſſeſſion, are not ſufficient to convey the freehold; for if a charter of feoffment be made to a man and his heirs, this, without ſome other act, or word to give the poſſeſſion, only paſſes an eſtate at will, becauſe the act of delivery is requiſite to the perfection of the charter; but beſides the charter of feoffment, there muſt be ſome act or words to deliver over the poſſeſſion, before the feoffee can enjoy it purſuant to the charter. 6 Co. 26. 2 Rol. Abr. 7. Co. Lit. 48. Cro. Eliz. 482. 9 Co. 138. Moor, pl. 632.

The livery within view, or the livery in law, is when the feoffor is not actually on the land, or in the houſe, but being in ſight of it ſays to the feoffee, I give you yonder houſe, or land, go and enter into the ſame, and take poſſeſſion of it accordingly; this ſort of livery ſeems to be made at firſt only at the court barons, which were antiently held ſub dio, (that is, in the open air) in ſome open part of the manor, from whence a general ſurvey or view might have been taken of the whole manor, and the pares curiæ eaſily diſtinguiſhed that part which was then to be transferred. Pollex. 47.

But this ſort of livery is not perfect to carry the freehold, till an actual entry made by the feoffee, becauſe the poſſeſſion is not actually delivered to him, but only a licence or power given him by the feoffor to take poſſeſſion of it; and therefore, if either the feoffor or feoffee die before livery, and entry made by the feoffee, the livery within the view becomes ineffectual and void; for if the feoffor dies before entry, the feoffee can't afterwards enter, becauſe then the land immediately deſcends upon his heir, and conſequently no perſon can take poſſeſſion of his land without an authority delegated from him who is the proprietor; nor can the heir of the feoffee enter, becauſe he is not the perſon to whom the feoffor intended to convey his land, nor had he an authority from the feoffor to take poſſeſſion; beſides, if the heir of the feoffee were admitted to take poſſeſſion after his father's death, he would come in as a purchaſer, whereas he was mentioned in the feoffment to take as the repreſentative of his anceſtor, which he cannot do ſince the eſtate never veſted in his anceſtor. Co. Lit. 48. b. 2 Rol. Abr. 3, 7. 1 Vent. 186. Moor 85. Pollex. 48.

The livery within view may be made of lands in another county than where the lands lie, becauſe the tranſlation of the feud was often made at the court-baron, in the preſence of pares curiæ; and theſe courts being held ſub dio, the pares could have a diſtinct view of every part of the manor; and therefore were proper to atteſt this ſort of inveſtiture, though the lands were in a different county, for notwithſtanding that, they might have been part of the ſame manor, for which the court was held. Co. Lit. 48. b.

This ceremony was firſt inſtituted, that the pares of the county might, upon any diſpute relating to the freehold, determine in whom it was lodged, and from thence be the better enabled to determine in whom the right was. Hence therefore it is, that if a man makes a feoffment, or leaſe for life, to commence in futuro, and makes livery immediately, the livery is void, and only an eſtate at will paſſes to the feoffee; for the deſign of the inſtitution would fail, if ſuch livery were effectual to paſs the freehold; for it would be no evidence, or notoriety of the change of the freehold, if after the livery made, the freehold ſtill remained in the feoffor; the uſe of the inveſtiture would rather create than prevent the uncertainty of the freehold, and in many caſes would put men to fruitleſs trouble and expence in purſuit of their right; for by that means, after a man had brought his præcipe againſt a perſon, whom he ſuppoſed to be tenant to the freehold, and had proceeded in it a conſiderable time, the writ might abate by the freehold's veſting in another, by virtue of a livery made before the purchaſe of the writ. Another reaſon why ſuch future intereſts cannot be allowed to paſs by any act of livery was, becauſe no man would be ſafe in his purchaſe, if the operation of livery might create an eſtate, to commence many years after the livery was made; and though they have allowed a future intereſt, to commence by way of leaſe, yet that had no ſuch ill effect in making purchaſes uncertain, becauſe anciently they were under the power of the freeholder, who by recovery might deſtroy them; and now, unleſs ſuch leaſes are made upon good conſiderations, they are fraudulent againſt a purchaſer; and it is not to be preſumed that leaſes at great diſtances ſhould be purchaſed for value. Cro. Eliz. 451. 2 Vent. 204. Co. Lit. 217. 5 Co. 94. b.

Hence, by the way, we may account why a freehold in reverſion or remainder cannot be granted in futuro, though there no livery is neceſſary to paſs it; as where A. is tenant for life, remainder to B. in fee; A. makes a leaſe for years to C. and afterwards grants the land to D. habend' from Mich. next enſuing, for life; this grant to D. was adjudged void, though C. attorned to it after Michaelmas, becauſe ſuch future grants create an uncertainty of the freehold, and the tenant of the freehold being the perſon who is to anſwer the ſtranger's præcipe, and was anſwerable to the lord for the ſervices, it were unreaſonable to permit him by any act of his own, to prevent or delay the proſecution of their right. Cro. Eliz. 451. 2 Vent. 204. Co. Lit. 217. 5 Co. 94. b. 2 Co. 55. Buckler's caſe. 2 And. 29. Moor 423. Cro. Eliz. 450, 585. Hob. 170, 171. 5 Co. 94. 1 Rol. Rep. 261. Fieri facias, Is a judicial writ, given by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. that lies where judgment is had for debt, or damages recovered in the King's courts; by which writ the ſheriff is commanded to levy the debt and damages of the goods and chattels of the defendant, &c. Old Nat. Br. 152.

This writ though mentioned in the ſtatute W. 2. 18 is a writ of execution at common law, and is called a fieri facias, becauſe the words of the writ directed to the ſheriff are Quod fieri facias de bonis & catallis, &c. and from theſe words the writ takes its denomination. Co. Lit. 290. b.

The property of goods is veſted by the delivery of the fi. fa. and an extent afterwards for the King comes too late, and that on the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries; per Holt. Comb. 123. Trin. 1 W. & M. in B. R. Lechmere v. Thoroughgood.

This writ is to be ſued out within a year and a day after judgment; or the judgment muſt be revived by ſcire facias: but if a fieri facias ſued in time, be not executed, a ſecond fieri facias, or elegit may be ſued out; and it is ſaid ſome years after, without a ſcire facias, provided continuances are entered from the firſt fi. fa. which it is alſo held may be entered after the ſecond fi. fa. taken out, unleſs a rule is made that proceedings ſhall ſtay, &c. Sid. 59. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 776. If a man recover debt againſt A. B. and levy part of it by fieri facias, and this writ is returned; yet he may take the body in execution by capias for the reſt of the debt. Rol. Abr. 904. The ſheriff on a fieri facias is to do his beſt endeavours to levy the money upon the goods and chattels of the defendant; and for that purpoſe to inquire after his goods, &c. And the plaintiff may inquire and ſearch if he can find any, and give notice thereof to the ſheriff, who ex officio is to take and ſell them if he can, or if not, by a writ of venditione exponas. 2 Shep. Abr. 111.

There may be a teſtatum fieri facias into another county, if the defendant hath not goods enough in the county where the action is laid to ſatisfy the execution; and the fieri facias for the ground of the teſtatum, may be returned of courſe by the attornies, as originals are. 2 Salk. 589. If all the money is not levied on a fieri facias, the writ muſt be returned before a ſecond execution can be iſſued; becauſe it is to be grounded on the firſt writ, by reciting that all the money was not levied. 1 Salk. 318.

Where the ſheriff ſells goods which he levied by fieri facias, and doth not pay the money, action of debt will lie againſt him; for the defendant is diſcharged as to the plaintiff, and the ſheriff is now become his debtor in law; and if the ſheriff die after he hath levied the debt, the like action will lie againſt his executors, as it is a duty when levied. March. Rep. 13. Cro. Car. 387.

If a ſheriff that hath ſeized goods by fieri facias is going out of his office, he muſt deliver them to the new ſheriff, and return his writ executed pro tanto; and he ought not to deliver them to the owner, by reaſon the writ of execution is warranted by a record, and therefore the diſcharge thereof muſt appear by record. Yelv. 44. Upon a fieri facias the ſheriff returned, that he had levied goods ad valentiam of the debt; the return being filed, a motion was made that he might bring in the money, which not being done an attachment was granted, and then the ſheriff appeared and prayed to amend the return, for that the goods were damaged by lying, and he could not get buyers; but it was adjudged, that the return ſhall not be altered, for he might have returned this at firſt by way of excuſe; and having returned that he had levied goods ad valentiam, he ſhall pay the money. Sid. 407.

The ſheriff cannot deliver the goods by him taken in execution to the plaintiff, in ſatisfaction of his debt; becauſe his authority is to ſell the goods. Lut. 589. 1 Lil. Abr. 611. And if a ſheriff ſells the goods taken by fieri facias at under price, the ſale is good, and the defendant can have no remedy; though where there appears to be covin between the ſheriff and the buyer, the owner ſhall have his action upon the caſe. Kelw. 64. 1 Salk. 28. On a fieri facias the ſheriff has power to take any thing, but wearing cloaths; and if the defendant hath two gowns, &c. it is ſaid he may ſell one. If the ſheriff executes a writ of fieri facias, he may afterwards return nulla bona, if there appear a prerogative writ; or, on better information, that the goods taken were not the defendant's. Comb. 356, 452.

By the ſeizure of the goods, the ſheriff hath a property in them; but goods of a ſtranger, &c. in the poſſeſſion of the defendant ſhall not be ſeized in execution; for the ſheriff at his peril muſt take notice whoſe goods they are: though, if the ſheriff inquires by a jury, where the property is lodged, and it is found that they are the defendant's goods, when they are not, this will indemnify the ſheriff. Dalt. Sher. 60. Wood's Inſt. 608.

The ſheriff cannot break open the door of an houſe to execute a fieri facias upon the goods of the owner or occupier; but a man's houſe ſhall be a protection for his own goods only; and not for the goods of another. 5 Rep. 91. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 775. If the defendant is a beneficed clergyman, and the ſheriff returns Quod eſt Clericus beneficiatus, &c. a writ ſhall go to the biſhop of the dioceſe to levy the debt de bonis Eccleſiaſticis, who thereupon ſends forth a ſequeſtration of the profits of the clerk's benefice, directed to the churchwardens, &c. But this writ of ſequeſtration muſt be renewed every term. 2 Inſt. 4, 472, 627.

By virtue of a fieri facias a term for years may be ſold, as well as any other goods, and without an inqueſt or jury: alſo corn growing may be ſold. 8 Rep. 96. 1 Rol. Abr. 892. And if the ſheriff on a fieri facias, &c. ſelleth a term for years, and after that the judgment is reverſed; the term ſhall not be reſtored, but the money for which it is ſold. 4 Rep. 141.

But where a term is delivered to the plaintiff upon an elegit, and then the elegit is reverſed, reſtitution ſhall be of the term. Cro. Jac. 246. When upon a fieri facias the ſheriff ſells a term, reciting it falſly, as to its commencement and ending, &c. the ſale is void, becauſe there is no ſuch term, yet if he recites it generally, and being of divers years yet to come, ſells all the intereſt which the defendant had in the land, the ſale will be good. 4 Rep. 74.

If an execution is ſued on a fi. fa. and the defendant dies before it is executed, it may be ſerved on the defendant's goods in the hands of his executor or adminiſtrator. Cro. Eliz. 181. Two fieri facias's are delivered the ſame day to the ſheriff againſt the ſame perſon; he is bound to execute that firſt, which was firſt delivered; and if he executes the laſt firſt, he muſt anſwer it to the party who brought the firſt, who may bring an action againſt him; but the execution ſhall ſtand good. 1 Salk. 330.

A man had a judgment for debt againſt another, and on a fi. fa. the ſheriff took his goods in execution, but the plaintiff ſuffered the goods to remain in the hands of the debtor, and would not let the ſheriff proceed any further: A. B. having alſo a judgment againſt this debtor, on a fieri facias, ſeized upon the ſame goods, and it was held good, for the former was a fraudulent execution. Fareſl. Rep. 37, 38.

On a writ of fieri facias againſt one partner, the ſheriff may take the goods of both; yet the vendee ſhall have only a moiety thereof in common with the other. Comb. 207. By the common law, goods were bound from the day of the teſte of the writ; but by Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſect. 16. they are bound only from the time of delivery thereof, &c. Ibid. See Godb. 147. Fifteenths, A tribute or impoſition of money, laid generally upon cities, burroughs, &c. through the whole realm; ſo called, becauſe it amounts to a fifteenth part of that which each city or town hath been anciently valued at, or a fifteenth of every man's perſonal eſtate according to a reaſonable valuation. And every town knew what was a fifteenth part, which was always the ſame; whereas a ſubſidy raiſed on every particular man's lands or goods, was adjudged uncertain; and in that regard the fifteenth ſeems to have been a rate formerly laid upon every town; according to the land, or circuit belonging to it. Camb. Brit. 171.

There are certain rates mentioned in Domeſday, for levying this tribute yearly; but ſince, though the rate be certain, it is not to be levied but by parliament. By 31 Ed. 3. c. 13. a fifteenth was granted, for pardons, &c. The 7 Ed. 6. c. 4. granted a ſubſidy and two fifteenths by the temporalty, &c. And in the 1, 5, &c. Eliz. and 1, 3, and 18 Jac. 1. Fifteenths and tenths were granted for maintaining the wars, &c.

Stat. 6 Geo. 2. 14. Allows the expreſſing numbers by figures in all writs, &c. pleadings, rules, orders and indictments, &c. in courts of juſtice, as have been commonly uſed in the ſaid courts, notwithſtanding any thing in the Stat. 4 Geo. 2. 26. See Falſe Latin.

Filacer or Filizer, (Filizarius, from the Lat. Filum) Is an officer of the court of Common Pleas, called by this name, as he files thoſe writs whereon he makes out proceſs. There are fourteen of theſe filizers in their ſeveral diviſions and counties, and they make forth all writs and proceſſes upon original writs, iſſuing out of Chancery, as well real, as perſonal and mixed, returnable in that court: and in actions merely perſonal, where the defendants are returned ſummoned, they make out pones or attachments; which being returned and executed, if the defendant appears not, they make forth a diſtringas, and ſo ad infinitum, or until he doth appear: if he be returned nihil, then proceſs of capias infinite, &c. They enter all appearances and ſpecial bails, upon any proceſs made by them: and make the firſt ſcire facias on ſpecial bails, writs of habeas corpus, diſtringas nuper vicecomitem vel ballivum, and all ſuperſedeas's upon ſpecial bail: in real actions, writs of view, of grand and petit cape, of Withernam, &c. Alſo writs of adjournment of a term, in caſe of public diſturbance, &c.

And until an order of court, 14 Jac. 1. they entered declarations, imparlances and pleas, and made out writs of execution, and divers other judicial writs, after appearance: but that order limited their proceedings to all matters before appearance, and the prothonotaries to all after. The filizers of the Common Pleas have been officers of that court before the Stat. 10 H. 6. c. 4. wherein they are mentioned: and in the King's Bench, of later times, there have been filizers, who make out proceſs upon original writs returnable in that court, on actions in general.

File, (Filacium) A thread, ſtring or wire, upon which writs, and other exhibits in courts and offices are faſtened or filed, for the more ſafe keeping and ready turning to the ſame. A file is a record of the court; and the filing of proceſs of a court, makes it a record of it. 1 Lil. 112. An original writ may be filed after judgment given in the cauſe, if ſued forth before; declarations, &c. are to be filed: and affidavits muſt be filed, ſome before read in court; and ſome preſently when read in court. Ibid. 113. Before filing a record removed by certiorari, the juſtices of B. R. may refuſe to receive it, if it appears to be for delay, &c. and remand it back for the expedition of juſtice: but if the certiorari be once filed, the proceedings below cannot be revived. 2 Hawk. 7. 207. An indictment, &c. cannot be amended after filed.

Fine, (Finis) Is a final agreement or conveyance upon record, for the ſettling and aſſuring of lands and tenements, acknowledged in the King's courts by the cogniſor to be the right of the cogniſee. Accomp. Convey. 1 Vol. 89.

This word hath divers uſes or ſignifications; but it is moſt commonly, amicabilis compoſitio & Finalis concordia, ex conſenſu & licentia domini regis vel ejus juſticiariorum, or a covenant made before juſtices, and entered of record for conveyance of lands, tenements, or any thing inheritable, to cut off all controverſies: Et Finis dicitur Finalis concordia quia finem litibus imponit. Glanv. lib. 8. c. 1. Bract. lib. 5.

A fine was anciently a determination of a real controverſy; but now it is generally a feigned action upon a writ of covenant, &c. and ſuppoſes a controverſy where in reality there is none, to ſecure the title that a man hath in his eſtate againſt all men; or to cut off intails, and with more certainty convey the title of lands, &c. either in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life, or years; whereupon alſo a rent may be reſerved. Weſt's Symb. par. 2.

Originally the final concord was inſtituted and allowed, in regard that by the law and ancient courſe of proceedings, no plaintiff could agree without licence of the court: and fines have been formerly had in perſonal actions; but time hath wrought other uſes of them, viz. to cut off intails, and paſs the inheritance of lands, though the ſame be not controverted, to whom the grantor thinks proper; and a fine may be levied on a writ of right, &c. in any real action, though not on an original in a perſonal action; and the common writ of covenant on which a fine is levied, is not a perſonal, but a real action.

A fine is called a Feoffment upon Record, and is of great antiquity; for we read of fines before the Conqueſt. 2 Inſt. 511. But it hath been held, that a fine is improperly called a feoffment of record; though it hath the effects of a feoffment, where he that levies it is ſeiſed of the freehold at the time of the fine levied. 1 Salk. 340.

According to Blackſtone it may with more accuracy be called an acknowledgment of a feoffment on record. Com. 2 V. 348.

Lands bought of divers perſons, by ſeveral purchaſers, may paſs in one fine, to ſave charges; but the writ of covenant muſt be brought by the vendees againſt all the vendors, and every vendor warrant againſt him and his heirs.

The nature of a fine being explained it remains to conſider,

I. Of the ſeveral ſorts and parts of a fine, and how fines operate.
II. Of what things a fine may be levied.
III. By whom, and to whom it may be levied.
IV. Before whom, and in what manner it may be levied,
V. Who may be barred by a fine, and who not.
VI. How fines may be reverſed.

I. Of the ſeveral ſorts and parts of a fine, and how fines operate.

As to fines there are various kinds; they are either with proclamations, or without: that with proclamations, is termed a fine according to the ſtatutes, 1 R. 3. c. 7. and 4 H. 7. c. 24. And ſuch a fine, every fine that is pleaded, is intended to be, if it be not ſhewn what fine it is: And theſe fines are the beſt ſort, and moſt uſed: If there be error in the proclamations, it ſhall be taken as a good fine at common law. 3 Rep. 86. A fine may ſtand, though the proclamations according to the ſtatute are irregular; for fines are matter of record, and remain in ſubſtance and form as they were before. Plowd. 265.

If tenant in tail levies a fine, and dies before all the proclamations are made, though the right of the eſtate tail deſcends upon the iſſue, immediately on the death of the anceſtor; yet if proclamations are made afterwards, ſuch right ſhall be barred by the fine, by the ſtatutes 4 H. 7. c. 24. and 32 H. 8. c. 36. 3 Rep. 84.

The fine without proclamations is called a fine at the Common Law, being levied in ſuch manner as was uſed before the Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 24. and is ſtill of the like force by the common law, to diſcontinue the eſtate of the cogniſor, if the fine be executed. A fine alſo with or without proclamations is either executed or executory: A fine executed is ſuch a fine as of its own force gives preſent poſſeſſion to the cogniſee, without any writ of ſeiſin to enter on the lands, &c. as a fine ſur cogniſance de droit come ceo; and in ſome reſpects a fine ſur Releaſe, &c. is ſaid to be executed. A fine executory doth not execute the poſſeſſion in the cogniſee, without entry or action, but requires a writ of ſeiſin; as the fine ſur conuzance de droit tantum, &c. unleſs the party be in poſſeſſion of the lands; for, if he be in poſſeſſion at the time of levying the fine, there need not be any ſuch writ, or any execution of the fine; and then the fine will enure by way of extinguiſhment of right, not altering the eſtate or poſſeſſion of the cogniſee, however it may better it. Weſt. Sect. 20. Fines are likewiſe ſingle or double; ſingle, where an eſtate is granted by the cogniſor to the cogniſee, and nothing is thereby rendered back again from the cogniſee to the cogniſor. The double fine is that which doth contain a grant or render back again from the cogniſee, of the land itſelf; or of ſome rent, common, or other thing out of it, and by which remainders are limited, &c. Weſt. Sect. 21, 30. And a fine is ſometimes called a double fine, when the lands lie in ſeveral counties.

But there is a more particular diviſion of fines; for,

Fines are further divided into four ſorts, viz. 1. A fine ſur cognizance de droit come ceo, que il ad de ſon done. 2. A fine ſur cognizance de droit tantum. 3. A fine ſur conceſſit. And 4. A fine ſur done grant & render.

1. The fine ſur cognizance de droit come ceo, &c. is a ſingle fine levied with proclamations, according to the Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 24. And it is the principal and ſureſt kind of fine, it being ſaid to be executed, becauſe it gives preſent poſſeſſion (at leaſt in law) to the cogniſee, ſo that he needs no writ of hab. fac. ſeiſinam, or other means for execution thereof; for it admits the poſſeſſion of the lands of which the fine is levied to paſs by the fine, ſo that the cogniſee may enter, and the eſtate is thereby in him, to ſuch uſes as are declared in the deed to lead the uſes thereof: but if it be not declared by deed to what uſe the fine was levied, ſuch fine ſhall be to the uſe of the cogniſor that levied the ſame. 2 Inſt. 513. If the cogniſee of a fine levied of lands, pay money unto the cogniſor at the time of the fine levied, and there is no uſe declared of the fine, the law will conſtrue the fine to the uſe of the cogniſee: and if there be no money paid by the cogniſee, nor any uſe declared, the fine ſhall enure to the cogniſor that levied it. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R. Where a fine is levied to the uſe of two perſons in tail, &c. in conſideration of marriage, though the deed to lead its uſes doth not mention any marriage had between them, yet it hath been adjudged, that the eſtate-tail is executed before marriage; for the fine doth carry the uſes, and they are perfected by the fine, notwithſtanding the conſideration is perfected afterwards; but without a fine, the marriage muſt be had, before any uſe could ariſe. 1 Leon. 138.

If a feme covert alone declares the uſes of a fine intended to be levied by huſband and wife of her land, and the huſband alone declares other uſes; it hath been held that both declarations of uſes are void, and the uſe ſhall follow the ownerſhip of the lands: But in another caſe it was determined that the uſes declared by the wife were void; and the uſes declared by the huſband, good only againſt himſelf, during the coverture. 2 Rep. 56. If huſband and wife levy a fine of the lands of the wife, and he alone declares the uſes, this ſhall bind the wife, if her diſſent doth not appear; becauſe otherwiſe it ſhall be intended that ſhe did conſent. Ibid. 59. Though there be a variance between a deed declaring uſes, and the fine levied; yet, if nothing appears to the contrary, ſuch fine by conſtruction of law ſhall be to the uſes declared in the deed, and which is evidence thereof: and where a fine varies from a former deſcription, it has been held that a new deed made after, will declare the uſes of the fine. 1 Ld. Raym. 289, 290. It is not abſolutely neceſſary, to inſert the word Uſe, in the declaration of uſes of fines; for any words which ſhew the intent of the parties will be ſufficient. Ibid.

A fine ſur conuzance de droit come ceo, &c. may not be levied to any perſon but one that is party to the writ of covenant; though a vouchee, after he hath entered into the warranty to the demandant, it is ſaid, may confeſs the action, or levy a fine to the demandant, for he is then ſuppoſed to be tenant of the land, though he is not a party to the writ; and yet a fine levied by the vouchee to a ſtranger, is void. No ſingle fine can be with a remainder over to another perſon not contained in it: But if A. levy a fine to B. Sur conuzance de droit come ceo, and B. by the ſame concord grants back the land again to A. for life, remainder to E. the wife of A. for her life, remainder to A. and his heirs; this will be a good fine. Plowd. 248, 249.

2. A fine ſur conuzance de droit tantum, is alſo a fine executory, and much of the nature of a fine ſur conceſſit; it is commonly made uſe of to paſs a reverſion, and then it is expreſſed by ſuch fine that the particular eſtate is in another, and that the cogniſor willeth that the cogniſee ſhall have the reverſion, or that the land ſhall remain to him after the particular eſtate is ſpent: ſometimes it is uſed by tenant for life, to make a releaſe (in nature of a ſurrender) to him in reverſion, but not by the word Surrender; for it is ſaid a particular tenant, as for life, &c. cannot ſurrender his term to him in reverſion by fine; but he may grant and releaſe to him by fine. Plowd. 268. Dyer 216. A fine upon a releaſe, &c. ſhall not be intended to be to any other uſe, but to him to whom it is levied. 3 Leon 61.

3. A fine ſur conceſſit is where the cogniſor is ſeiſed of the lands contained therein, and the cogniſee hath no freehold in it, but it paſſeth by the fine: this fine is uſed to grant away eſtate for life, or years, and it is executory, ſo that the cogniſees muſt enter or have a writ of hab. fac. ſeiſinam to obtain poſſeſſion; if the parties to whom the eſtate is limited, at the time of levying ſuch fine, be not in poſſeſſion of the thing granted.

4. A fine ſur done grant & render, is a double fine, being in a manner two fines, i. e. A fine ſur conuzance de droit come ceo, &c. and a fine ſur conceſſit, both formed into one; whereby the cogniſee, after a releaſe and warranty made to him by the cogniſor of the lands contained therein, doth grant and render back to the cogniſor the lands, &c. thereby often limiting remainders to perſons that are ſtrangers, and not named in the writ of covenant.

This fine is partly executed and partly executory; and, as to the firſt part of it, is altogether of the ſame nature with a fine ſur conuzance de droit come ceo; but as to the ſecond part containing a grant and render back, it is taken in law to be rather a private conveyance or charter between party and party, and not as a writ or judgment upon record: and this render is ſometimes of the whole eſtate, and ſometimes of a particular eſtate, with remainder or remainders over; or of the reverſion, and ſometimes with reſervations of rent and clauſe of diſtreſs, and grant thereof over by the ſame fine. 5 Rep. 38.

A. B. and C. D. levied a fine of lands, and the cogniſee by the ſame fine rendered back the land to A. B. in tail, reſerving a rent to himſelf, &c. the rent and reverſion ſhall paſs, though in one fine; and it ſhall enure as ſeveral fines. Cro. Eliz. 727.

It is ſaid, a grant and render of land, cannot be immediately in primo gradu to a perſon who is no party to the writ; but mediately, or in ſecundo gradu it may. 3 Rep. 514. Bro. 108. The fine with grant and render, differs from the fine ſur conuzance de droit come ceo, &c.

as that muſt be levied of the land in the original; but the grant and render may be of another thing than is expreſſed in the original: Though to make a good grant and render, the land rendered muſt paſs to the cogniſee by the fine; for he cannot render what he hath not. 3 Rep. 98, 510. Hughes's Abr. 936.

A man may not by this fine reſerve to himſelf a leſs eſtate by way of remainder than the fee: and the render of a rent (if any be) muſt be to one of the parties to the fine, and not to a ſtranger. Dyer 33, 69. 2 Rep. 39. To make a leaſe for years, &c. by fine with a render; the leſſee muſt acknowledge the land to be the right of the leſſor that is ſeiſed thereof, and then ſuch leſſor grants and renders the ſame back again to the leſſee, for a certain number of years, reſerving rent, &c. and this is a good fine: but if the leſſor be tenant in tail, then to bind him, he and the leſſee are to acknowledge the tenements the right of A. B. who is to render the ſame fine to leſſee for years, the remainder to the leſſor and his heirs, &c. 44 Ed. 3. 45. 2 Leon. 206.

A fine and render is a conveyance at Common law, and makes the cogniſor on the render back a new purchaſer; by which, lands ariſing on the part of the mother, may go to the heirs on the part of the father, &c. 1 Salk. 337. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 864.

Having ſhewn how each particular ſort of fine operates, it may be material to obſerve, that a fine may enure to a confirmation of a former eſtate, which was defeazable before. Vide 1 Sand. 261.

So a fine may enure by way of extinguiſhment; therefore, if tenant in tail makes a leaſe, or other eſtate, to A. and afterwards levies a fine to B. the leaſe, or other eſtate, ſhall be indefeazable; for his right during ſuch former eſtate was extinct by the fine. R, Jon. 60. Cro. Jac. 689. Vide Eſtates.

As to the parts of a fine.

There are in every fine five parts, viz. 1*ſt*. An original writ, uſually a writ of covenant. 2. The licentia concordandi, or King's licence, for which the King hath a fine called the King's Silver. 3. The concord itſelf, containing the agreement between the parties how the land, &c. ſhall paſs, being the foundation and ſubſtance of the fine; it begins, Et eſt concordia talis, etc. 4. The note of the fine, or, abſtract of the original contract. 5. The foot of the fine, which includes all, ſetting forth the day, year and place, and before what juſtices the concord was made, &c.

Of this there are indentures made forth in the office, which is called the ingroſſing of the fine; and it beginneth thus, Hæc eſt finalis, concordia facta in curia Domini Regis apud Weſtm. a die Paſchæ in quindecim dies anno, etc. 2 Inſt. 511, 517. It is ſaid, the concord being the compleat fine, it ſhall be adjudged a fine of that term in which the concord was made, and the writ of covenant returnable. 1 Salk. 341. A concord cannot be of any thing but what is contained in the writ of covenant: and the note of the fine remaining with the Chirographer, it hath been held, eſt principale recordum, 3 Leon. 234.

II. Of what things a fine may be levied.

A fine may be levied of any things whereof a præcipe quod reddat lies; as of manors, meſſuages, lands, rents, &c. or of any thing, whereof a præcipe quod faciat lies, as cuſtoms, ſervices, &c. or whereof a præcipe quod permittat, or præcipe quod teneat may be brought. 2 Inſt. 513.

As fines may be levied of things in poſſeſſion, ſo they may be levied of a remainder, or reverſion, or of a right in futuro. 3 Rep. 90.

So now, ſince the Stat. 32 H. 8. 7. it may be levied of rectories, vicarages, tithes, penſions, oblations, and all eccleſiaſtical inheritances made temporal. Of a chantry. Vide Weſt. Symb. 7. So it may be of a ſeigniory. Ibid. Of all ſervices; as, homage, fealty, &c. Weſt. Symb. 6. b. Of acquittal, and of every thing, for which a præcipe quod faciat lies. 2 Inſt. 513. So it may be levied of common of paſture. Vide Weſt. Symb. 6. b. Of a corody. Ibid. Of an office; as, of the cuſtody of a foreſt. Of a boilary. Of two pools and a fiſhery in the water of D. Of an annuity.

Fines may be had of all things in eſſe tempore finis, which are inheritable; but not of things uncertain; or of lands held in tail by the King's letters patent; of land reſtrained from ſale by act of parliament, or of lands in right of a man's wife, without the wife, &c. 5 Rep. 225. Weſt. Sect. 25.

And almoſt any kind of contract may be made and expreſſed by a fine, as by a deed; and therefore it may be ſo made that one of the parties ſhall have the land, and the other rent out of it; and that one ſhall have it for a time, and another for another time; alſo a leaſe for years, or a jointure for a wife, may be made; and a gift in tail, and a remainder over, may be limited and created thereby. 1 Rep. 76.

III. By whom and to whom a fine may be levied.

The King, and all perſons who may lawfully grant by deed, may levy a fine; but not infants, ideots, lunaticks, &c 7 Rep. 32. Civil corporations, as mayor and commonalty, &c. may levy a fine of land belonging to their body; but biſhops, deans and chapters, parſons, &c. are reſtrained from levying of fines to bind their ſucceſſors. All perſons that may be grantees, or that may take by contract, may take by fine; though in caſes of infants, feme coverts, perſons attainted, aliens, &c. who, it is ſaid, may take by fine, before the ingroſſing of the fine, there goes a writ to the juſtices of C. B. quod permittant finem levari. Lit. 669. Tenant in fee-ſimple, fee-tail general, or ſpecial, tenant in remainder or reverſion, may levy a fine of their eſtates; ſo may tenant for life, to hold to the cogniſee for life of tenant for life; but a perſon who is tenant, or hath an intereſt only for years, cannot levy a fine of his term to another. 3 Rep. 77. 5 Rep. 124.

A fine by a man non compos, though it ought not to be levied, binds for ever when it is levied. So a fine by a man attainted for treaſon, or felony, binds all but the King. Vide Weſt. Symb. 3. a. So a fine by an infant, or feme covert without her huſband, binds till it be avoided. Vide Comyn's Digeſt, tit. Baron and Feme. (P. 1). —Enfant, (B. 2.)

But a fine cannot be levied by a corporation aggregate; for it cannot act but by attorney, and it cannot make conuſance by attorney. So, if commiſſioners take a fine of an infant, etc. the court will grant an attachment againſt them; and upon examination and inſpection, the fine ſhall be vacated. R. Skin. 24.

Lands aſſured for dower, or term of life, or in tail, to any woman by means of her huſband, or his anceſtors, cannot be conveyed away from her by fine, etc. without her act; but if a woman and her huſband levy a fine of her jointure, ſhe is barred of the ſame; though if the jointure be made after coverture, when the wife hath an election to have her jointure, or dower on the huſband's death, it is ſaid this will be no bar of her dower in the reſidue of the land of the huſband. Dyer 358. Leon. 185.

No fine of the huſband alone, of the lands of the wife, ſhall hurt her, but that ſhe or her heirs, or ſuch as have right, may avoid it; but if ſhe joins with him, it ſhall bind her and her heirs. Women covert ought to be cautious in levying fines with their huſbands of their own lands, and if a married woman under age levies a fine of her lands, ſhe cannot reverſe it during her huſband's life, nor after his death, if ſhe be of full age when he dies; but if the huſband dies during her minority, ſhe may. Dyer 359. Wood's Inſt. 243. A married woman ought not to be admitted alone without her huſband to levy a fine; and if ſhe be received, the huſband may avoid the fine by entry; but if he do not, it is good to bar her and her heirs, except ſhe be an infant at the time of the fine levied; the huſband and wife together may diſpoſe of her land, etc. 12 Rep. 122. If baron and feme levy a fine, the feme within age, ſhe may be brought into court by habeas corpus; and if it be found by inſpection, that ſhe is under age, it hath been adjudged, where the baron and feme brought a writ of error, that as to both, quod finis revocetur. 1 Leon. 116, 117. 3 Salk. 168.

Huſband and wife, tenants in ſpecial tail, the huſband only levies a fine, this bars the iſſue in tail; but it remains in right to the wife as to herſelf, and to all the eſtates and remainders depending upon it, and all the conſequences of benefit to herſelf and others, ſo long as ſhe lives, as if the fine had not been levied. Hob. 257, 259.

If a huſband make a feoffment of the wife's land, upon condition, which is broken, and the feoffee levies a fine, and the huſband and wife die having iſſue, and five years paſs; the heir is barred to enter as heir to the father upon the condition, but he ſhall have five years after the death of his father, as heir to his mother. Plowd. 367. When the huſband and wife join in a fine of the wife's lands, all the eſtate paſſeth from her, and he is joined only for conformity; ſo that if the fine levied by huſband and wife in ſuch a caſe be reverſed, ſhe ſhall have reſtitution. 2 Rep. 77. A huſband and his wife covenanted to levy a fine of the lands of the wife, to the uſe of the heirs of the body of the huſband on the wife, remainder to the huſband in fee; both dying without iſſue; it was held that the heir of the wife had the title, becauſe the limitation to the heirs of the body of the huſband was merely void, there being no precedent eſtate of freehold for life, &c. to ſupport it as a remainder. 2 Salk. 675. 4 Mod. 253.

If a widow having an eſtate in dower accept of a fine, and by the ſame fine render back the land for 100 years, etc. this is a forfeiture of her eſtate within the Stat. 11 H. 7. 20. by which ſtatute ſhe may not make a greater eſtate than for her own life; if ſhe do, it is a preſent forfeiture. Cro. Jac. 689. If tenant for life grants a greater eſtate by fine than for his own life, it is a forfeiture: and if there be tenant for life, and remainder for life, and the tenant for life levy a fine to him in remainder and his heirs, both their eſtates are forfeited; the tenant for life by levying the fine, and the remainder-man for life by accepting it. 2 Lev. 209. Where a fine is levied by tenant for life, for a greater eſtate, the fine may be good; but it is a forfeiture of the eſtate of tenant for life, whereof he in remainder, etc. may take preſent advantage and enter: and when a perſon enters for a forfeiture, all eſtates are avoided. Dyer 111. Tho' if ſuch a tenant for life levy a fine ſur grant et releaſe to the cogniſee for the life of tenant for life; or by a fine grant a rent out of the land for a longer time, the fine is good, and there will be no forfeiture of the eſtate of tenant for life: ſo likewiſe if a fine be levied of lands by tenant for life to a ſtranger, who thereby acknowledges all his right to be in the tenant for life, and releaſes to him and his heirs. 27 Ed. 1. 1. 44 Ed. 3. 36.

If there be tenant in tail upon condition not to alien, or diſcontinue the lands, etc. if he doth, the donor to re-enter, and his iſſue levy a fine of the land; this is a forfeiture of the eſtate. 1 Leon. 292. An eſtate being ſettled on huſband and wife for life, remainder to firſt and other ſons in tail, with remainders over; after the birth of their eldeſt ſon, they by releaſe and fine, mortgaged the lands: on a bill exhibited againſt the ſon to redeem, etc. he pleaded the marriage ſettlement of his father and mother, whereby they were but tenants for life, and that his fine was a forfeiture of their eſtate; and ſo it was adjudged. Preced. Canc. 591. But it is ſaid where a wife by ſettlement has only a truſt for life, if ſhe joins with her huſband in a mortgage in fee and fine of the lands; this truſt is not forfeited, as it would be in caſe of a legal eſtate. 1 Peere Williams 147.

As to femes covert, the books which ſay, that a fine ſhall not bind a woman under coverture unleſs ſhe be examined, muſt not be underſtood as if it were in her power to reverſe the fine for want of her examination, but they are to be underſtood in this ſenſe, that the judge ought not to receive a fine from a feme covert without examining her, leſt it ſhould not proceed from her own freedom and choice; but if ſuch a fine be once admitted, and recorded without any examination, though the judge has omitted a very neceſſary part of his duty, yet the fine ſhall ſtand, and neither the feme nor her heirs ſhall be admitted to aver that ſhe was not examined; for that were to leſſen the credit of the judgment of the courts of juſtice, which is the higheſt evidence of the law. 2 New Abr. 527.

As to fines levied by an infant, tho' ſtrictly ſpeaking all contracts made by infants are in their own nature void, becauſe a contract is an act of the underſtanding, which, during their infancy, they are preſumed to want; yet civil ſocieties have ſo far ſupplied that defect, and taken care of them, as to allow them to contract for their benefit and advantage, with power to recede from and vacate it when it may prove prejudicial to them; now the method to ſet aſide ſuch a contract muſt be by matter of equal notoriety with the manner in which it was made; and therefore if an infant levies a fine, which is no more than his own agreement recorded as the judgment of the court, he muſt reverſe it by writ of error, and this muſt be brought during his minority, that the court of B. R. may by inſpection determine the age of the infant; but the judges by adjuncto may in ſuch caſes inform themſelves by witneſſes, church-books, &c. 2 New Abr. 526. Co. Lit. 380. b. Moor 76. 2 Rol. Abr. 15. Bro. tit. Error. Bro. tit. Fines, 74, 79. 2 Inſt. 482. 2 Bulſt. 320. 12 Co. 122.

With regard to ideots and lunaticks, it is neceſſary to diſtinguiſh between their acts done in pais, and thoſe ſolemnly acknowledged on record; tho' the law is clear, that in neither caſe are they admitted to diſable themſelves, for the inſecurity that may ariſe in contracts from counterfeit madneſs and folly, but their heirs and executors may avoid ſuch acts in pais by pleading the diſability; becauſe, if they can prove it, it muſt be preſumed real, ſince nobody can be thought to counterfeit it, when he can expect no benefit from it himſelf. 4 Co. 124. Co. Lit. 247. Bro. tit. Fait, 62. Cro. Eliz. 398, 622. F. N. B. 202.

But neither the lunatick himſelf, nor his heir, can vacate any act of his done in a court of record; and therefore if a perſon non compos acknowledges a fine, it ſhall ſtand againſt him and his heirs; for tho' the judge ought not to admit of a fine from a man under that diſability, yet when it is once received, it ſhall never be reverſed, becauſe the record and judgment of the court being the higheſt evidence in the law, preſumes the conuſor, at that time, capable of contracting; and therefore the credit of it is not to be conteſted, nor the record avoided by any averment againſt the truth of it. 4 Co. 124. 2 Inſt. 483. Bro. tit. Fines, 75. Co. Lit. 247.

IV. Before whom, and in what manner, a fine may be levied.

Fines are now levied in the court of Common Pleas at Weſtminſter, on account of the ſolemnity thereof, ordained by the Stat. 18 Ed. 1. ſt. 4. before which time they were ſometimes levied in the Exchequer, in the County-Courts, Courts Baron, &c. They may be acknowledged before the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, as well in, as out of court; and two of the juſtices of the ſame court, have power to take them in open court: alſo juſtices of aſſiſe may do it by the general words of their patent or commiſſion; but they do not uſually certify them without a ſpecial writ of dedimus poteſtatem. 2 Inſt. 512. Dyer 224. The King by patent or commiſſion, with a non obſtante, may give power to A and B. juſtices of aſſiſe in a circuit, when A. is not a judge of either of the benches, only a ſerjeant at law, &c. to take the cogniſance of all fines conjunctim et ſeparatim; and upon ſuch a commiſſion, the cogniſance of a fine taken by A. will be good, without any dedimus poteſtatem ſued out before, or after it. Jenk. Cent. 277.

Fines are alſo taken by commiſſioners in the country, impowered by dedimus poteſtatem; the writ of dedimus doth ſurmiſe, that the parties who are to acknowledge the fine are not able to travel to Weſtminſter for the doing thereof: theſe commiſſions, general and ſpecial, iſſue out of the Chancery. By the Common law all fines were levied in court; by the Stat. 15 Ed. 2. ſt. de fin. allows the dedimus poteſtatem to commiſſioners, who may be puniſhed for abuſes, and the fines taken before them ſet aſide: and it is ſaid an information may be brought by him in reverſion againſt commiſſioners, who take the caption of a fine, where a married woman, etc. is an infant. 3 Lev. 36.

In the levying of fines in court, a pleader ſhall ſay Sir juſtice conge d' accorder, etc. i. e. he deſires leave to accord or agree: and when the ſum for the King's fine is agreed, after proclamation and crying the peace, the pleader ſhall repeat the ſubſtance of the fine, etc. Stat. de Finibus, 18 Ed. 1. ſt. 4.

Touching the form of fines, it is to be conſidered upon what writ or action the concord is to be made: and there muſt firſt paſs a pair of indentures between the cogniſor and cogniſee, whereby the cogniſor covenants to paſs a fine to the cogniſee of ſuch things, by a time limited; and theſe indentures preceding the fine, are ſaid to lead the uſes of the fine: but by the Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. The uſes of a fine, etc. may be declared after the fine levied, and be good in law. Upon this the writ of covenant is brought by the cogniſee againſt the cogniſor, who then yields to paſs the fine before the judge; and ſo the acknowledgement being recorded, the cogniſor and his heirs are preſently concluded, and all perſons (ſtrangers not excepted) after five years paſt; and if the writ, whereon the fine is grounded, be not a writ of covenant, which is uſual, but of warrantia chartæ, or a writ of right, or of cuſtoms and ſervices, etc. then the writ is to be ſerved upon the party that is to acknowledge the fine; and he appearing doth it accordingly. Weſt. ſect 23. Dyer 179.

By ſtatute a final concord cannot be levied in the King's court, without original writ, etc. And when a fine is paſſed, it is to be in the preſence of the parties, who are to be of full age, good memory, etc. And if a feme covert be one, ſhe is to be privately examined if ſhe conſent freely; for if ſhe doth not, the fine cannot be levied. Stat. 18 Ed. 1. ſt. 4. A fine after the ingroſſing is to be openly read and proclaimed in the court of C. B. and a tranſcript to be ſent to the juſtices of aſſiſe, and another to the juſtices of the peace of the county where the land lieth, to be openly proclaimed there; which being certified, concludes all perſons; feme coverts, perſons under age, in priſon, etc. excepted; if they lay no claim by way of action or entry in five years: perſons out of the land, or non ſanæ memoriæ, etc. have that time after their imperfections are removed. 1 R. 3. c. 7. 4 H. 7. c. 24. And by ſubſequent acts, fines after ingroſſing are to be proclaimed in court the ſame term, and the three next terms, formerly four ſeveral days in each term; but of late only once in the term where ingroſſed, and once in each of the ſucceeding terms. 4 H. 7. c. 24. 31 Eliz. c. 2. The day and year of acknowledging a fine, and warrant of attorney for the ſuffering a recovery, are to be certified with the concord: and an office hath been erected for the inrolment of writs for fines, &c. the fees whereof are limited and appointed; likewiſe the Chirographer the firſt day of every term is to fix in the court of C. B. a table containing the fines paſſed in the term before in every county, &c. by 23 Eliz. c. 3.

V. Who may be barred by a fine, and who not.

The ſtatutes of 4 H. 7. c. 24. and 32 H. 8. c. 36. declare the force of fines how far they bar and take away the entry or action of parties, privies and ſtrangers, having right: privies in blood, as heirs of the cogniſor, are barred preſently by a fine; but ſtrangers to the fine, ſuch as are not parties nor privies, have five years to enter and claim their rights, &c. Plowd. 367, 375. Co. Lit. 372. See 4 Ann. c. 16.

Feme coverts have five years after the death of their huſbands, to avoid the fine of the huſband of the wife's lands; and alſo to claim their dower; and if they do not make their claim in that time by action or entry, they are barred by ſtatute. Dyer 72. 2 Rep. 93.

An infant ſhall have five years after he comes of age, although he was in his mother's womb at the time of the fine levied. Plowd. 359. And an infant is allowed time, during his minority, to reverſe his own fine and prevent the bar; and if not reverſed during that time, their fines will be good. Aſſ. pl. 53.

Strangers out of the realm at the time of the fine levied, ſhall have five years after their return to prevent the bar; and ſo if they were in England when the fine was levied, and within five years are ſent in the King's ſervice by his commandment. Plowd. 366. A perſon in Scotland or Ireland ſhall be ſaid to be out of the realm. 4 H. 7. c. 24.

Madmen, &c. ſhall have five years after the cure of their maladies, and though the infirmity happen after the fine levied, if before the laſt proclamation. Plowd. 367. Dyer. 3.

And they who have divers defects have five years after the laſt infirmity removed; but if the impediments are once wholly gone, and afterwards the party relapſes into the like again, the five years ſhall begin immediately after the firſt removal; and if the party dies, his heir ſhall not have a new five years. Plowd. 375. Dyer. 233.

If a feme covert dies during the coverture, being no party to the fine, &c. or if an infant being party to the fine, and having preſent right, dies in his infancy: if a perſon beyond ſea when the fine was levied, never return, &c. a perſon in priſon dies whilſt therein: or if one non compos, &c. dies ſuch, in all theſe caſes, their heirs are not limited to any time. 2 Inſt. 519, 520. Five years are given after a remainder falls; and five years after the forfeiture of tenant for life. Plowd. 374.

A future intereſt of another perſon, cannot be barred by fine and non-claim, until five years after it happens; as in caſe of a remainder or reverſion. 2 Rep. 93. Raym. 151. And where there is no preſent nor future right in land, etc. only a poſſibility at the time of levying the fine, a perſon may enter and claim when he pleaſes. 10 Rep. 49. Alſo when there is only right to a rent, &c. iſſuing out of lands, and not the land in the fine, the perſons that have it are not barred at all. 5 Rep. 124.

No fine bars any eſtate in poſſeſſion or reverſion, which is not deveſted, or put to a right. 9 Rep. 106. He that at the time of a fine levied had not any title to enter, ſhall not be immediately barred by the fine: but this is in caſe of an intereſt not turned to a right, where a man is not bound to claim; and not in the caſe of tenant in tail, barring his iſſue. 32 H. 8. c. 36.

When an eſtate is put to a right, and there comes a fine and non-claim, it is a perpetual bar. Carter 82, 162. A fine, grant and render was levied, and a ſcire facias brought and judgment given, and alſo writ of ſeiſin awarded, but not executed; and afterwards a ſecond fine was levied and executed, and five years paſſed; it was the opinion of the court that the ſecond fine barred the firſt. March's Rep. 194. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 864.

If a man attainted of treaſon or felony, levy a fine of his land, this, as to the King, and lord of whom the land is held, is void, and no bar to their title of forfeiture: but as to all others it is a good bar. 2 Shep. Abr. 241. One levied a fine, and then was outlawed for treaſon and died; the heir reverſed the outlawry, and it was held the wife ſhould have her dower, if ſhe bring her action within five years. Moor, c. 876. A fine is levied by leſſee for life, &c. who continues the poſſeſſion, and pays the rent; it ſhall not bind the leſſor, who ſhall have five years claim after the determination of the leſſee's eſtate, etc. 3 Rep. 77, 78. If one doth levy a fine of my land, while I am in poſſeſſion, this will not hurt me; nor where a ſtranger levies a fine of my lands let to a tenant, if the tenant pays me his rent duly: And if there is tenant in tail, or for life, remainder in tail, etc. And the firſt tenant in tail or for life, bargains and ſells the land by deed inrolled, and levies a fine to the bargainee, the remainders are not bound; for the law adjudges them always in poſſeſſion. 9 Rep. 106.

Leſſees who pretend title to the inheritance of the lands, cannot by fine bar the inheritance. 3 Rep. 77. But if a leaſe is made for years, and the leſſor before entry of the leſſee levies a fine with proclamations, and the leſſee doth not make his claim within five years, the leſſee is barred, and no relief can be had for him; for though the leſſee for years cannot levy a fine, yet he ſhall be barred by a fine levied by the tenant of the land, etc. 5 Rep. 124. If a perſon hath a remainder depending on an eſtate for years, and the termor is diſſeiſed, and a fine is levied and five years paſs, &c. the termor and reverſioner are barred: becauſe the termor might preſently have entered, and he in remainder had an aſſiſe. Weſt. Sect. 183. In caſe a perſon enters upon, and puts out a copyholder, and the diſſeiſor doth levy a fine of the lands, if the copyholder ſuffer five years to paſs after the diſſeiſin and fine, without making any claim, the intereſt of the copyholder and his lord are hereby barred for ever: And if a copyholder makes a feoffment in fee upon good conſideration, and the feoffee levies a fine with proclamations, and five years paſs, the lord is barred; but if a copyholder himſelf levies a fine, and five years do paſs, the lord is not barred, for the copyholder not having a freehold, the fine will be void. Wood's Inſt. 247, 248.

A fine of ceſtui que truſt ſhall bar and transfer a truſt, as it ſhould an eſtate at law, if it were on a good conſideration. Chan. Rep. 49. And fines of ceſtui que uſe are as good as if levied of immediate poſſeſſions, &c. 1 R. 3. c. 2. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 860.

Intereſts in eſtates which may be barred by fine, are either intereſts by Common law, or by cuſtom; as copyholds, &c. And if I have a fee-ſimple, and am diſſeiſed, and the diſſeiſor levies a fine with proclamations, and I do not claim within five years after, I and my heirs (allowance being made for impediments) are barred for ever. Plowd. 353. 3 Rep. 79. If a man purchaſe lands of another in fee, and after finding his title to be bad, and that a ſtranger hath right to the land, levies a fine thereof with intent to bar him; and he ſuffers five years to paſs without claim, &c. he is barred of his right for ever: And in theſe caſes none ſhall be relieved in equity. 3 Rep. Doct. & Stud. 83. 155.

A fine with proclamations levied by perſons of lands intailed to them or their anceſtors, &c. is a good bar againſt their heirs, claiming only by ſuch intail. 32 H. 8. c. 36. Where the anceſtor is barred by the fine, there for the moſt part the heir is barred alſo. 9 Rep. 105. Altho' the iſſue in tail be within age, out of the realm, etc. when a fine is had and the proclamations paſſed; the eſtate tail ſhall be barred. 3 Rep. 84. The tenant in tail, to him and the heirs male of his body, hath three ſons, the ſecond levies a fine in the life of the father, and the father dies; here the eldeſt is not barred. But if the elder die without iſſue, living the ſecond, it is a bar to the third. Hob. 333. Jenk. Cent. 96. Tenant in tail diſcontinues; the diſcontinuee levies a fine with proclamations, and five years paſs without claim in the life of tenant in tail: In this caſe the iſſue may have a formedon, and ſhall not be barred; for his father could not claim. It is otherwiſe where he is diſſeiſed, and the diſſeiſor levies ſuch fine; there the tenant in tail may claim, etc. Jenk. Cent. 192.

A tenant for life, and he that is next in remainder in tail join in a fine, it is a good bar to the iſſue in tail for ever, ſo long as that eſtate-tail ſhall continue. 10 Rep. 96. But tho' a fine bars the eſtate-tail and the iſſue in tail, yet it doth not remainders or reverſions; tho' recoveries bar them all.

And if one makes his title as heir by another, and not by him that levied the fine, he is not barred. Fines with proclamations bar ſtrangers, if they do not purſue their right within five years. 1 R. 3. c. 7. 4 H. 7. c. 24. Alſo he that is privy in blood only, and not in eſtate, is not within the ſtatutes to be barred by a fine: As if lands are given to a man and the heirs female of his body, and he hath a ſon and a daughter, and the ſon levies a fine, and dies without iſſue, this is no bar to the daughter; for notwithſtanding ſhe be heir to his blood, yet ſhe is not heir to the eſtate, nor need make her conveyance to it by him; but if her father had levied the fine, it would have been otherwiſe. Trin. 21 Jac. See Cro. Jac. 689.

A fine, etc. cannot deſtroy an executory eſtate, which depends upon contingencies, as it is uncertain whether there will ever be an eſtate in being for the fine to work upon; but a fine and recovery will bar an eſtate in remainder, as that is an eſtate veſted. 1 Lill. Abr. 617. Eſtates by ſtatute merchant, ſtatute ſtaple, and elegit, may be barred, if a fine is levied, and thoſe that have right ſuffer five years to paſs without claim, etc. 5 Rep. 124. If a fine be levied of lands in ancient demeſne, it doth not bar by the ſtatute of non-claim. Lut. 781.

As deans, biſhops, parſons, etc. are prohibited by ſtatutes to levy fines, and may not have a writ of right; they are not barred by five years non-claim, and their non-claim will not prejudice their ſucceſſors. Plowd. 238, 375.

By the ancient Common law, he that had right was to make his claim, etc. within a year and a day of the fine levied and the execution thereof, or he was barred for ever: But this bar is now gone; and if a fine without proclamations according to the Common law be now levied, he that hath right may make his claim or entry, etc. at any time to prevent the bar. Co. Lit. 254, 262. By ſtatute, a claim or entry to avoid the bar of a fine is to be made in five years: And no claim or entry ſhall avoid any fine with proclamations, unleſs an action be commenced within oue year after ſuch entry, and proſecuted with effect. 1 R. 3. c. 7. 4 Ann. c. 16.

Where a fine may be a bar as to ſome lands, and not as to other lands. See F. N. B. 98. A fine was levied, and five years paſſed without bringing a writ of error; and it was held a good bar within the Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 14. Cro. Jac. 333. But it has been adjudged that where five years paſs, that ſhall not hinder, where the fine is erroneous. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 838.

VI. How fines may be reverſed.

Fines may be reverſed for error, ſo as the writ of error be brought in twenty years, etc. and not afterwards, by Stat. 10 and 11 W. 3. c. 14.

As to erroneous fines, and the manner of reverſing them, it muſt be obſerved in the firſt place, that no perſon can bring a writ of error to reverſe a fine, or any judgment, that is not intitled to the land, etc. of which the fine was levied, for the courts of law will not turn out the preſent tenant, unleſs the demandant can make out a clear title, poſſeſſion always carrying with it the preſumption of a good title till the right owner appears; beſides, where the plaintiff in the writ of error cannot make out a title, he can receive no damage by the fine, which the writ of error always ſuppoſes to be done, tho' it ſhould be erroneous; and therefore it is no leſs than trifling with the courts of juſtice, to ſeek relief when he cannot make it appear that he has received any injury. 1 Roll. Abr. 747. Dyer 90. 3 Lev. 36.

But if there be ſeveral parties to an erroneous fine, they ſhall all join with the party that is to enjoy the land, tho' they themſelves cannot have any thing. 1 Roll. Abr. 747. Dyer 89.

Another rule to be obſerved is, that nothing can be aſſigned for error that contradicts the record; for the records of the courts of juſtice, being things of the greateſt credit, cannot be queſtioned but by matters of equal notoriety with themſelves; wherefore, tho' the matter aſſigned for error ſhould be proved by witneſſes of the beſt credit, yet the judges would not admit it. 1 Rol. Abr. 757.

Hence it is, that in a writ of error to reverſe a fine, the plaintiff cannot aſſign that the conuſor died before the teſte of the dedimus poteſtatem, becauſe that contradicts the record of the conuſance taken by the commiſſioners, which evidently ſhews, that the conuſor was then alive, becauſe they took his conuſance after they were armed with the commiſſion and the dedimus iſſued. Dyer 89. b. 1 Roll. Abr. 757. Cro. Eliz. 469.

But the plaintiff in error may ſay, that after the conuſance taken, and before the certificate thereof returned, the conuſor died; becauſe this is conſiſtent with the record. 1 Rol. Abr. 757.

If a leſſee for years, or a diſſeiſee, or one that hath right only to a reverſion or remainder, levy a fine to a ſtranger that hath nothing in the land, this fine will be void or voidable as to the ſtranger; and he that hath cauſe to except againſt it, may ſhew that the freehold and ſeiſin was in another at the time of the fine levied, and that partes finis nihil habuerunt tempore levationis finis, and by this avoid the fine, And yet a diſſeiſor, who hath a fee-ſimple by wrong in him, may levy a fine to a ſtranger that hath nothing in the land, like unto one that is rightfully ſeiſed of land in fee, etc. and it will be a good fine. Plowd. 353. 3 Rep. 87. If the cogniſor of a fine hath nothing in the land paſſed, at the time of the fine levied, the fine may be avoided: But where the cogniſor or cogniſee is ſeiſed of an eſtate of freehold, whether by right, or by wrong, the fine will be a good fine in point of eſtate. 41 E. 3. c. 14. 22 H. 6. c. 43.

Fines are not reverſible for raſure, interlineation, miſentry, &c. or any want of form; but it is otherwiſe if of ſubſtance. 23 Eliz. c. 3. A fine ſhall not be reverſed for ſmall variance, which will not hurt it; nor is there occaſion for a preciſe form in a tender upon a fine, becauſe it is only an amicable aſſurance upon record. 5 Rep. 38. If a fine be levied of lands in a wrong pariſh, tho' the pariſh in which they lie be not named, it will be a good fine, and not erroneous, being an amicable aſſurance: And a fine of a cloſe may be levied by a lieu conus in a town, without mentioning the town, vill, &c. Godb. 440. Cro. Jac. 574. 2 Mod. 47. If there be want of an original, or no writs of covenant for lands in every county; or if there is any notorious error, in the ſuing out a fine, or any fraud or deceit, &c. writ of error may be had to make void the fine. Co. Lit. 9. Cro. Eliz. 469. So if either of the parties dies before finiſhed, &c. And if the cogniſor of a fine die before the return of the writ of covenant, (tho' after the caption of the fine) it is ſaid it may be reverſed. 3 Salk. 168. If the King's ſilver is paid, before death of cogniſor, the fine may be finiſhed and good. See ſeveral caſes towards the end of this diviſion.

A writ of error may be brought in B. R. to reverſe a fine levied in C. B. and the tranſcript only, not the very record of the fine, is removed in theſe caſes: But if the court of B R. adjudge it erroneous; then a certiorari goes to the chirographer to certify the fine itſelf, and when it comes up it is cancelled. 1 Salk. 341. And where on a writ of error in B R. to reverſe a fine in C. B. the fine was affirmed; a writ of error coram vobis reſiden. hath been allowed to lie. Ibid. 357. The court of B. R. will not reverſe a fine without a ſci. fac. returned againſt the tertenant, becauſe the cogniſees are but nominal perſons. Ibid. 339. A fine may be ſet aſide, by pleading that neither of the parties had any thing in the eſtate, at the time of levying the fine, &c. But thoſe that are privy to the perſon that levied the fine, are eſtopped to plead this plea. 3 Rep. 88. In pleading a fine or recovery to uſes, the deed need not be ſet forth; but the pleader is to ſay, that the fine, &c. was levied to ſuch uſes, and produce the deeds in evidence to prove the uſes. 8 W. 3. B. R.

Fines may be avoided where they are obtained by fraud, covin or diſceit, tho' there be no error in the proceſs; and that may be done either by writ of diſceit or averment, ſetting forth the fraud or covin. Cro. Eliz. 471.

Thus if a fine be levied of land in ancient demeſne, the lord ſhall have a writ of diſceit againſt the conuſor and the tenant, and by that avoid the fine. F. N. B. 98. a. Moor. 6..

If a fine be levied to ſecret uſes to deceive a purchaſer, and the conuſee pleads the fine in bar, the purchaſer may aver the fraud in avoidance of the fine, by 27 Eliz. cap. 4. and ſuch averment is not contrary to the record, becauſe it admits the fine, but ſets it aſide for the covin and fraud in obtaining it. 3 Co. 8. a. Plowd. 49. a.

So if a fine be levied upon an uſurious contract, it may be avoided by averment, by 13 Eliz. cap. 8. becauſe ſuch fine being levied for ends the law has prohibited, the law will not encourage any evaſion out of the act, nor ſuffer ſuch uſurious contracts to be ſupported by the ſolemn acts of the courts of juſtice againſt the intention of the act. 3 Co. 80.

A fraudulent obtaining of a fine, or irregularity therein, cannot be relieved againſt in Chancery; but muſt be in the court where levied, though the officers may be examined and puniſhed, if they did it criminaliter. Preced. Canc. 150. And where one was perſonated on levying a fine, it was not ſet aſide in equity, but a reconveyance ordered of the land. Ibid. 151.

If either of the parties cogniſors die after the King's ſilver is entered, the fine ſhall be finiſhed, and be good. Cro. Eliz. 469.

A record of a fine may be amended, (if the King's ſilver is paid) where it is the miſpriſion of the clerk. 5 Rep. 43. A fine is perfect, when the King's ſilver is paid thereon. 1 And. 229.

Tho' one concord will ſerve for lands that lie in divers counties; yet there muſt be ſeveral writs of covenant. 3 Inſt. 21. Dyer 227. A concord of a fine may have an exception of part of the things mentioned therein: And if more acres are named, than a man hath in the place, or are intended to be paſſed; no more ſhall paſs by the fine than is agreed upon. 1 Leon. 81. 3 Bulſt. 317, 318. A fine as well as a deed may be covinous, and avoidable for this; where it is ſuffered by fraud to deceive a purchaſer, or creditor, &c. 3 Rep. 80 16 H. 7. c. 5

Fines levied before the juſtices in Wales; or in the counties Palatine of Cheſter, Durham, &c. have the ſame effect as fines levied before the juſtices of C. B. 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 22. 37 H. 8. c. 19. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 28. 5 Eliz. c. 27. &c. See Recovery. See alſo Com. Dig. 3 V. tit. Fine. 2 V. New Abr. 520 to 554. Black. Com. 2 V. 118, 341, 352-3, &c. 3 V 156. 4 V. 419, 422. and for Forms, 2 V. Appendix, xiv.

Sometimes a ſum of money paid for the income of lands, &c. let by leaſe, is called a fine. Fine alſo ſignifies an amends, or puniſhment for an offence committed; in which caſe a man is ſaid facere finem de tranſgreſſione cum rege, &c. See Poſt, fines for offences. In all caſes it is a final concluſion or end of differences.

Fine adnullando levato Tenemento quod fuit de antiquo Dominico, Is a writ directed to the juſtices of C. B. for diſannulling a fine levied of lands in antient demeſne, to the prejudice of the lord. Reg. Orig. 15.

Fines for Alienations, Were fines paid to the King by his tenant in chief, for licence to alien their lands according to the Stat. 1 Ed. 3. c. 12. But theſe are taken away by the Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24.

Fines for Offences, Fine, in this ſenſe, is amends, pecuniary puniſhment, or recompence for an offence committed againſt the King and his laws, or againſt the lord of a manor: In which caſe a man is ſaid finem facere de tranſgreſſione cum rege, etc. Reg. Jud. f. 25. a. Cowell.

It ſeems that originally all puniſhments were corporal; but that after the uſe of money, when the profits of the courts aroſe from the money paid out of the Civil cauſes, and the fines and confiſcations in criminal ones, the commutation of puniſhments was allowed of, and the corporal puniſhment which was only in terrorem, changed into the pecuniary, whereby they found their own advantage.

This begat the diſtinction between the greater and the leſſer offences; for in the crimina majora there was at leaſt a fine to the King, which was levied by a capiatur; but upon the leſſer offences there was only an amercement, which was affeered, and for which a diſtringas, or action of debt only lay. 2 New Abr. 502.

Under this head is to be conſidered,

I. Who may fine and amerce, and for what.
II. How fines, &c. may be mitigated and aggravated; as alſo how they may be recovered, and to whom they are payable.
III. What perſons are exempt from being fined.

I. Who may fine and amerce, and for what.

Where a ſtatute impoſes a fine at the will and pleaſure of the King, that is intended of his judges, who are to impoſe the fine. 4 Inſt. 71. Courts of record only can fine and impriſon a perſon, (except as aftermentioned): And ſuch a court may fine a man for an offence committed in court in their view, or by confeſſion of the party recorded in court. 1 Lill. Abr. 621. A man ſhall be fined and impriſoned for all contempts done to any court of record againſt the commandment of the King's writs, etc. 9 Rep. 60.

If a perſon is arreſted coming to the courts of juſtice to anſwer a writ, the offender doing it ſhall be fined for the contempt: But there has been a difference made where it is done by the plaintiff in the writ, and a ſtranger, who it is ſaid ſhall not be fined. 9 H. 6. c. 55. 1 Danv. 469.

If an officer of the court neglects his duty, and gives not due attendance; a clerk of the peace doth not draw an indictment well in matter of form, or return thereof, upon a certiorari to remove the indictment in B. R. if a ſheriff, &c. make an inſufficient return of a habeas corpus iſſuing out of B. R. &c. or if juſtices of peace proceed on an indictment after a certiorari iſſued to remove the indictment; the court may fine them. 1 Lil. 620. When a juror at the bar will not be ſworn, he may be fined. 7 H. 6. c. 12. And if one of the jury depart without giving his verdict; or any of the jury give their verdict to the court before they are all agreed, they may be fined. 8 Rep. 38. 40 Aſſ. 10.

Alſo the ſheriff in his torn, and the ſteward of a court-leet, have a diſcretionary power, either to award a fine, or amercement for contempt to the court; as for a ſuitor's refuſing to be ſworn, &c. and the ſteward of a court-leet may either amerce or fine an offender, upon a preſentment, &c. for an offence not capital, within his juriſdiction. Keilw. 66. Kitchin 43, 51.

It is ſaid, that ſome courts may impriſon, but not fine, as the conſtables at the petit ſeſſions. 11 Co. 44. 1 Rol. Rep. 74. 11 Co. 43. b. Alſo ſome courts cannot fine or impriſon, but amerce, as the county, hundred, &c. 11 Co. 43. b. But ſome courts can neither fine, impriſon, nor amerce; as eccleſiaſtical courts held before the ordinary, archdeacon, &c. or their commiſſaries, and ſuch who proceed according to the Canon, or Civil law. 11 Co. 44. a.

Every court of record may enjoin the people to keep ſilence under a pain, and impoſe reaſonable fines, not only on ſuch as ſhall be convicted before them of any crime, on a formal proſecution, but alſo on all ſuch as ſhall be guilty of any contempt in the face of the court; as by giving opprobrious language to the judge, or obſtinately refuſing to do their duty as officers of the court. 11 H. 6. 12. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 219. 8 Co. 38. 11 Co. 43. Cro. Eliz. 581. 1 Sid. 145.

If a dead body in priſon, or other place, whereon an inqueſt ought to be taken, be interred, or ſuffered to lie ſo long, that it putrify before the coroner hath viewed it, the gaoler, or townſhip ſhall be amerced. 1 Keb. 278. 2 Hawk. P. C. 48. If any homicide be committed, or dangerous wound given, whether with or without malice, or even by miſadventure, or ſelf-defence, in any town, or in the lanes or fields thereof, in the day-time, and the offender eſcape, the town ſhall be amerced; and if out of a town, the hundred ſhall be amerced. 3 Inſt. 53. 4 Inſt. 183. Cro. Car. 252. 3 Leon. 207. 2 Inſt. 315. Dyer 210.

Beſides fines impoſed for offences, it ſeems, that regularly there was a fine or amercement in all actions; for if the plaintiff or demandant did not prevail, it was thought reaſonable that he ſhould be puniſhed for his unjuſt vexation; and therefore there was judgment againſt him, quod ſit in miſericordia pro falſo clamore. 8 Co. 39. F. N. B. 75.

Hence when the plaintiff takes out a writ, the ſheriff, before the return of it, was formerly obliged to take pledges of proſecution, which, when fines and amercements were conſiderable, were real and reſponſible perſons, and anſwerable for thoſe amercements; but being now ſo very inconſiderable, that they are never levied, they are only formal pledges entered, viz. John Doe and Richard Roe. 1 Saund. 227. See tit. Bail.

In all actions, where the judgment is againſt the defendant, it was to be entered with a miſericordia, or a capiatur; and herein the difference is, that if it be an action of debt, or founded on a contract, the entry is ideo in miſericordia, without aſſeſſing any ſum in certain, which was afterwards affeered by the coroners in the proper county; but if it were in action of treſpaſs, the court ſet the fine, and levied it by a capiatur. 8 Co 60. 1 Rol. Abr. 212, 219. Cro. Eliz. 844. Cro. Jac. 255. Therefore,

In actions quare vi et armis, as treſpaſs, and the like; if judgment paſs againſt the defendant in a court of record, he ſhall be fined. 8 Rep. 59. But in actions which have not ſomething of force, or fraud, or deceit to the court; if the defendant comes the firſt day he is called, and tender the thing demanded to the plaintiff, he is not to be fined. 5 Rep. 49. 8 Rep. 59, 60, 99. 3 Aſſ. 9. 22 Aſſ. 82. 1 Danv. Abr. 471. 1 Vent. 116.

All capiatur fines are taken away by Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 12. In treſpaſs, aſſault and battery, &c. there can be no capiatur pro fine entered ſince this Stat. See Capiatur.

II. How fines, &c. may be mitigated and aggravated; as alſo how they may be recovered, and to whom they are payable.

A fine may be mitigated the ſame term it was ſet, being under the power of the court during that time; but not afterwards. T. Raym. 376. And fines aſſeſſed in court by judgment upon an information, cannot be afterwards mitigated. Cro. Car. 251. If a fine certain is impoſed by ſtatute on any conviction, the court cannot mitigate it; but if the party comes in before conviction, and ſubmits to the court, they may aſſeſs a leſs fine; for he is not convicted, and perhaps never might. 3 Salk. 33. The court of Exchequer may mitigate a fine certain, becauſe it is a court of equity, and they have a privy ſeal for it. Ibid.

If an exceſſive fine is impoſed at the ſeſſions, it may be mitigated at the King's Bench. 1 Vent. 336. A defendant being indicted for an aſſault, confeſſed it, and ſubmitted to a ſmall fine; and it was adjudged, that in ſuch a caſe he may produce affidavits to prove on the proſecutor, that it was ſon aſſault, and that in mitigation of the fine; though this cannot be done after he is found Guilty. 1 Salk. 55. If a perſon is found Guilty of a miſdemeanor upon indictment, and fined, he cannot move to mitigate the fine, unleſs he appear in perſon; but one abſent may ſubmit to a fine, if the clerk in court will undertake to pay it. 1 Vent. 209, 270. 1 Salk. 55. 2 Hawk. 446.

It is a common practice in the court of B. R. to give a defendant leave to ſpeak with the proſecutor, i. e. to make ſatisfaction for the coſts of the proſecution, and alſo for damages ſuſtained, that there may be an end of ſuits; the court at the ſame time ſhewing on that account an inclination to ſet a moderate fine on behalf of the King. Wood's Inſt. 653. And in caſes where coſts are not given by law, after a proſecutor has accepted coſts from the defendant, he cannot aggravate the fine; becauſe having no right to demand coſts, if he takes them, it ſhall be intended by way of ſatisfaction of the wrong. 2 H. P. C. 292.

All fines belong to the King, and the reaſon is, becauſe the courts of juſtice are ſupported at his charge; and where-ever the law puts the King to any charge for the ſupport and protection of his people, it provides money for that purpoſe. Bract. 129. When a perſon is fined to the King, notwithſtanding the body remains in priſon, it is ſaid the King ſhall be ſatisfied the fine out of the offender's eſtate. 4 Leon. c. 393.

As to the method of recovering fines.

By the Common law, the King, or Lord may, at their election, diſtrain, or bring an action of debt for a fine or amercement. Cro. Eliz. 581. Savil 93. Raſt. Ent. 151, 553, 606. 2 H. 4. 24. b. 10 H. 6. 7. Raym. 68. But with reſpect to fines, ſet in inferior courts, every avowry, or declaration of this kind ought expreſly to ſhew, that the offence was committed within the juriſdiction of the court, for if it were not, all the proceedings were coram non judice, and a court ſhall not be preſumed to have a juriſdiction where it doth not appear to have one. Hob. 129. Raſt. Ent. 553. Co. Ent. 572. Alſo it is adviſable to alledge, that the offence was committed, as well as preſented, and to ſhew the names of the preſentors and the affeerors in ſetting forth a preſentment or affeerment, and alſo to ſhew that proper notice was given of holding the court. But for this, vide Hawk. P. C. 59, 60.

Of common right, a diſtreſs is incident to every fine and amercement, in a torn or leet for offences within the juriſdiction thereof; but if the offence were only the neglect of a duty created by cuſtom, and of a private nature, it is clear, that there muſt be a cuſtom to warrant a diſtreſs, and perhaps ſuch cuſtom is alſo neceſſary, though the duty be of a public nature. 2 Hawk. P. C. 60.

Alſo the ſheriff, or lord mayor may for ſuch fines or amercements diſtrain the goods of the offender, even in the highway, or in land not holden of the lord, unleſs ſuch land be in the poſſeſſion of the crown. 1 Rol. Abr. 670. 2 Inſt. 104. But ſuch fines and amercements being for a perſonal offence, no ſtranger's beaſts can lawfully be diſtrained for them, though they have been levant and couchant upon the lands of the offender. Owen. 146. Noy 20.

A joint award of one fine againſt divers perſons is erroneous; it ought to be ſeveral againſt each defendant, for otherwiſe one who hath paid his part might be continued in priſon till the others have paid theirs, which would be in effect to puniſh for the offence of another. 2 Hawk. 446. Fines to the King are eſtreated into the Exchequer. See farther as to fines, Black. Com. 3 V. 259. 4 V. 372.

Fines le Roy, Are all fines to the King; and under this head are included fines for original writs. Originals on treſpaſs on the caſe, where the damages are laid above 40*l.* pay a fine, viz. from 40*l.* damages to 100 marks, 6*s.* 8*d.* from 100 marks to 100*l.* the fine is 10*s.* From 100*l.* to 200 marks, 13*s.* 4*d.* From 200 to 400 marks, 16*s.* 8*d.* From 400 marks to 200*l.* it is 1*l.* fine; and ſo for every 100 marks more, you pay 6*s.* 8*d.* and every 100*l.* further 10*s.* *Pract. Firmura. Will. de Creſſi gave to the monks of Blyth, a mill, cum libera firmura of the dam of it. Reg. de Blyth. This has been interpreted liberty to ſcour and repair the mill dam, and carry away the ſoil, &c. And Dr. Thornton Engliſhes it Free Firmage.

Fire-ordeal. See Ordeal, and Black. Com. 4 V. 336.

Fire-works. No perſon whatſoever ſhall make, ſell, &c. ſquibbs, rockets, ſerpents, &c. or caſes, moulds, &c. for making ſuch ſquibbs, and every ſuch offence ſhall be adjudged a common nuſance.

Perſons throwing or firing ſquibbs, &c. or ſuffering them, &c. to be thrown or fired from their houſes incur a penalty of 20*s.* Likewiſe perſons throwing, caſting or firing, or aiding or aſſiſting in the throwing, caſting or firing of any ſquibbs, rockets, ſerpents, or other fireworks, in or into any public ſtreet, houſe, ſhop, river, highway, road or paſſage, incur the like penalty of 20*s.* and on non-payment may be committed to the houſe of correction. Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 7.

N. B. This ſtatute doth not take from any perſon injured, by throwing of ſquibbs, &c. the remedy, at Common law, for the party may maintain a ſpecial action on the caſe, or treſpaſs, &c. for recovery of full damages.

Firſt-fruits, (Primitiæ) Are the profits after avoidance, of every ſpiritual living for the firſt year, according to the valuation thereof in the King's books. Theſe were given in ancient times to the Pope throughout all chriſtendom; and were firſt claimed by him in England of ſuch foreigners as he beſtowed benefices on here by way of proviſion; afterwards they were demanded of the clerks of all ſpiritual patrons, and at length of all other clerks on their admiſſion to benefices: but upon the throwing off the Pope's ſupremacy in the reign of Hen. 8. they were tranſlated to, and veſted in, the King, as appears by the Stat. 26 H. 8. c. 3 And for the ordering thereof, there was a court erected, 32 H. 8. but diſſolved Ann. 1. Mar.

Though by 1 Eliz. c. 4. theſe profits are reduced again to the crown, yet the court was never reſtored; for all matters formerly handled therein, were transferred to the Exchequer, within the ſurvey of which court they now remain.

By Stat. 26 H. 8. the Lord Chancellor, &c. is impowered to examine into the value of Firſt-fruits; and clergymen entering on their livings before the ſame are paid or compounded, are to forfeit double value. But the 1 Eliz. c. 4. ordains, that if an incumbent on a benefice do not live half a year, or is ouſted before the year expired, his executors are to pay only a fourth part of the Firſt-fruits; and if he lives the year, and then dies, or be ouſted in ſix months after, but half of the Firſt-fruits ſhall be paid.

And by this ſtatute livings not above 10*l. per Ann. &c.* are diſcharged from payment of theſe duties: as are alſo benefices under and not exceeding 50*l.* a year, by Stat. 5 Ann. c. 24. The 2 Ann. c. 11. ſettles upon a corporation the Firſt-fruits and tenths of all benefices for the maintenance of the poor clergy; which is called the corporation of the bounty of Q. Anne. See the act, relating to large waſtes in Yorkſhire incloſed, a ſixth part for the benefit of poor clergymen, whoſe livings do not exceed 40*l. per ann. Stat.* 12 Ann. c. 4. Fiſh and Fiſhing. No fiſherman ſhall uſe any net or engine, to deſtroy the fry of fiſh: and perſons uſing nets for that purpoſe, or taking ſalmon or trout out of ſeaſon, or any fiſh under certain lengths, are liable to forfeit 20*s.* and juſtices of peace, and lords of leets have power to put the acts in force. See 1 El. c. 17. 3 Jac. 1. c. 12. 30 Geo. 2. c. 21. & poſt. No perſon may faſten nets, &c. acroſs rivers to deſtroy fiſh, and diſturb paſſage of veſſels, on pain of 5*l. Stat.* 2 H. 6. c. 15. None ſhall fiſh in any pond or mote, &c. without the owner's licence, on pain of three months impriſonment. 31 H. 8. c. 2. And no perſon ſhall take any fiſh in any river, without the conſent of the owner, under the penalty of 10*s.* for the uſe of the poor, and treble damage to the party grieved, leviable by diſtreſs of goods; and for want of diſtreſs, the offender is to be committed to the houſe of correction for a month: alſo nets, angles, &c. of pochers may be ſeized, by the owners of rivers, or by any perſons by warrant from a juſtice of peace, &c. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 25. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23.

The Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 21. was made for the increaſe and preſervation of ſalmon in rivers in the counties of Southampton and Wilts; requiring that no ſalmon be taken between the 1ſt of Auguſt and 12th of November, or under ſize, &c. And by 1 Geo. 1. c. 18. Salmon taken in the river Severn, Dee, Wye, Were, Ouſe, &c. are to be 18 inches long at leaſt: or the perſons catching them ſhall forfeit 5*l.* and ſea fiſh ſold muſt be of the lengths following, viz. Bret and turbot 16 inches, brill and pearl 14, codlin, baſs and mallet 12, ſole and place 8, flounders 7, whiting 6 inches long, &c. on pain of forfeiting 20*s.* to the poor, and the fiſh. Vide the ſtatute. Perſons that import any fiſh, contrary to the 1 Geo. 1. c. 18. for better preventing freſh fiſh taken by foreigners being imported into this kingdom, &c. ſhall forfeit 100*l.* to be recovered in the courts at Weſtminſter, one moiety to informers, and the other to the poor; and maſters of ſmacks, hoys, boats, &c. in which the fiſh ſhall be imported, or brought on ſhore, forfeit 50*l.* Alſo ſelling the ſame in England, is liable to 20*l.* penalty. Stat. 9 Geo. c. 33.

By the ſtat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 49. contracts for the buying fiſh (except freſh ſalmon, or ſoles brought by land carriage, oyſters, or ſalt, or dryed fiſh) to be ſold by retail before the ſame are brought to market and expoſed to ſale, are declared void; and each party contracting ſhall forfeit 50*l.* And fiſhermen not ſelling their fiſh within eight days after their arrival on the coaſt between North Yarmouth and Dover, ſhall forfeit the cargo, veſſel and tackle, &c. And ſea fiſh under the dimenſions prohibited by the ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. may be expoſed to ſale, provided they are taken with a hook, and ſo not capable of being preſerved alive.

But ſee ſtat. 33 Geo. 2. c. 27. made to regulate the ſale of fiſh at the firſt hand in the fiſh markets in London and Weſtminſter; and to prevent ſaleſmen of fiſh buying fiſh to ſell again on their own account; and to allow bret and turbot, brill, and pearl, although under the reſpective dimenſions mentioned in 1 Geo. 1. c. 18. to be imported and ſold; and to puniſh perſons who ſhall take or ſell any ſpawn, brood, or fry of fiſh, unſizable fiſh, or fiſh out of ſeaſon, or ſmelts under the ſize of five inches.

By this act every maſter of a veſſel is to give a true account of the ſeveral ſorts of fiſh brought alive to the Nore in his veſſel, and if after ſuch arrival, he ſhall wilfully deſtroy or throw away any of the ſaid fiſh, not being unwholeſome or unmarketable, &c. he is liable to be committed to the houſe of correction, and kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding two months nor leſs than one. And ſee farther 2 Geo. 3. c. 15. for the better ſupplying the cities of London and Weſtminſter with fiſh, and to reduce the exorbitant price thereof; and to protect and encourage fiſhermen.

For the penalty inflicted on perſons ſtealing or deſtroying fiſh in fiſh-ponds, or of receiving ſtolen fiſh. See 5 Geo. 3. c. 14. ſect. 1, 2, 3, 4. The offender is to be tranſported for ſeven years.

There is a new act made for the encouragement of the white herring fiſhery, which vide 11 Geo. 3. c. 31.

And by 8 Geo. 3. c. 27. ſeveral acts for the encouragement of the whale fiſhery are continued, and further proviſions are made for the benefit of thoſe concerned in the whale fiſhery, and other directions given, &c. by 11 Geo. 3. c. 38.

Fiſhing, Right of, and property of fiſh. It has been held, that where the Lord of the manor hath the ſoil on both ſides the river, it is a good evidence that he hath the right of fiſhing, and it puts the proof upon him who claims liberiam piſcariam; but where a river ebbs and flows, and is an arm of the ſea, there it is common to all, and he who claims a privilege to himſelf muſt prove it; for if treſpaſs is brought for fiſhing there, the defendant may juſtify that the place where is brachium maris, in quo unuſquiſque ſubditus domini regis habet & habere debet liberam piſcariam:

In the Severn, the ſoil belongs to the owners of the land on each ſide; and the ſoil of the river Thames, is in the King, &c. but the fiſhing is common to all. 1 Mod. 105. He who is owner of the ſoil of a private river, hath ſeparalis piſcaria; and he that hath libera piſcaria, hath a property in the fiſh, and may bring a poſſeſſory action for them; but communis piſcaria is like the caſe of all other commons. 2 Salk. 637. Common of piſcary is a liberty of fiſhing in another man's water. Black. Com. 2 V. 34. A free fiſhery, or excluſive right of fiſhing in a public river, is a royal franchiſe: He that has a ſeveral fiſhery muſt be owner of the ſoil. In a free fiſhery, a man has property in the fiſh before they are caught: In a common of piſcary, not till afterwards. Black. Com. 39, 40. which vide. As to a free fiſhery no new franchiſe can at preſent be granted of it, by the expreſs proviſion of Magna Charta, c. 16. Black. Com. 2 V. 417. One that has a cloſe pond in which there are fiſh, may call them piſces ſuos in an indictment, &c. But he cannot call them as bona & catalla, if they be not in trunks. Mod. Ca. 183. There needs no privilege to make a fiſh pond; as there doth in caſe of a warren. Ibid.

Fiſhermen. There ſhall be a maſter, wardens and aſſiſtants of the Fiſhermen's Company in London, choſen yearly at the next court of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen after the tenth of June, who are conſtituted a court of aſſiſtants: and they ſhall meet once a month at their common hall, to regulate abuſes in fiſhery, regiſter the names, of fiſhermen, and mark their boats, &c. See Stat. 9 Ann c. 26. Fiſh and fiſhing, Herrings, &c.

Fiſhery. A Royal Fiſhery of England was eſtabliſhed in the reign of King Car. 2. and the members of it incorporated into a company. The crown hath power to direct 20*s.* out of every 100*l. South-Sea* ſtock, to be applied for improving the fiſhery of the kingdom, carried on to Greenland, and in other Northen ſeas. Stat. 9 Ann. c. 21. Fleet, (Sax. Fleot, i. e. Flota, a place of running-water, where the tide or float comes up) Is a famous priſon in London, ſo called from a river or ditch that was formerly there, on the ſide whereof it ſtood. To this priſon men are uſually committed for contempt to the King and his laws, particularly againſt the courts of juſtice; or for debt, when perſons are unable or unwilling to ſatisfy their creditors: there are large rules, and a warden belonging to the Fleet Priſon, &c. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 7. By a late ſtatute, the warden of the Fleet was diſabled to hold any office, for his notorious oppreſſions of the priſoners; and the King was impowered to grant the ſaid office to ſuch perſon as he ſhould think fit, &c. 2 Geo. 2. c. 32.

Fleet-Ditch. The Lord Mayor of London, &c. may fill up Fleet-Ditch, and make the ſoil level with the ſtreets; and the fee is veſted in the Mayor and commonalty. Stat. 6 Geo. 2. c. 22. And now, by virtue of the act for building Blackfryars Bridge the ditch is in part arched over, and ſo filled up to the foot of the bridge, that the ground is now level with Fleet-ſtreet.

Foiterers, By Blount are interpreted to be vagabonds. See Faitours.

Folc-lands, (Sax.) Copyhold lands ſo called in the time of the Saxons, as charter lands were called Boc-lands. Kitch. 174. Folkland was terra vulgi or popularis the land of the vulgar people, who had no certain eſtate therein, but held the ſame under the rents and ſervices accuſtomed or agreed, at the will only of their Lord the Thane; and it was therefore not put in writing, but accounted prædium ruſticum & ignobile. Spelm. of Feuds, cap. 5.

Folc-mote or Folkmote, (Sax.) Folgemot, i. e. Conventus populi) Is compounded of Folk, populus, and mote or gemote, convenire; and ſignified originally, as Somner in his Saxon Dictionary tells us, a general aſſembly of the people to conſider of, and order matters of the commonwealth: Omnes proceres regni et milites et liberi homines univerſi totius regni Britanniæ facere debent in pleno Folcmote Fidelitatem domino regii, etc. Leg. Edw. Confeſſ. cap. 35. And Sir Henry Spelman ſays, the folcmote was a ſort of annual parliament, or convention of the Biſhops, Thanes, aldermen and freemen, upon every May-day yearly; where the laymen were ſworn to defend one another, and to the King, and to preſerve the laws of the kingdom, and then conſulted of the common ſafety. But Dr. Brady infers from the laws of our Saxon Kings, that it was an inferior court, held before the King's Reeve or ſteward, every month to do Folk right, or compoſe ſmaller differences, from whence there lay appeal to the ſuperior courts. Brady's Gloſſ. p. 48. Squire ſeems to think the Folcmote, not diſtinct from the ſhiremote, or common general meeting of the county. See his Angl. Sax. Gov. 155. n.

Manwood mentions folkmote as a court holden in London, wherein all the folk and people of the city did complain of the Mayor and Aldermen, for miſgovernment within the ſaid city: and this word is ſtill in uſe among the Londoners; and denotes Celebrem ex tota civitate conventum. Stow's Survey.

According to Kennet, the folkmote was a common council of all the inhabitants of a city, town or borough, convened often by ſound of bell to the Mote Hall or Houſe; or it was applied to a larger congreſs of all the freemen within a county, called the Shire-mote, where formerly all knights and military tenants did fealty to the King, and elected the annual ſheriff on the firſt of October, till this popular election to avoid tumults and riots devolved to the King's nomination. Anno 1315. 3 Ed. 1.

After which the City Folkmote was ſwallowed up in a ſelect committee or Common Council; and the County Folkmote, in the Sheriff's Tourn and Aſſiſes. The word Folkmote was alſo uſed for any kind of popular or public meeting; as of all the tenants at the Court-Leet or Court-Baron, in which ſignification it was of a leſs extent. *Paroch. Force, (Vis) Is moſt commonly applied in pejorem partem, the evil part, and ſignifies any unlawful violence. It is defined by Weſt to be an offence, by which violence is uſed to things or perſons; and he divides it into ſimple and compound; ſimple force, is that which is ſo committed that it hath no other crime accompanying it; as if one by force do only enter into another man's poſſeſſion, without doing any other unlawful act: mixed or compound force, is when ſome other violence is committed with ſuch a fact, which of itſelf alone is criminal; as where any one by force enters into another man's houſe, and kills a man, or raviſhes a woman, &c. And he makes ſeveral other diviſions of this head. Weſt. Symbol. pa. 2. ſect. 65. Lord Coke ſays, there is alſo a force implied in law; as every treſpaſs, reſcous, or diſſeiſin, implieth it; and an actual force, with weapons, number of perſons, &c. where threatning is uſed to the terror of another. Co. Lit. 257. By law any perſon may enter a tavern; and a landlord may enter his tenant's houſe to view repairs, &c. But if he that enters a tavern, commits any force or violence: or he that enters to view repairs, breaketh the houſe, &c. it ſhall be intended that they entered for that purpoſe. 8 Rep. 146. All force is againſt the law; and it it is lawful to repel force by force: there is a maxim in our law, Quod alias bonum et juſtum eſt, ſi per vim vel fraudem petatur, malum et injuſtum eſt. 3 Rep. 78.

Forcible Entry and Detainer. The firſt is a violent actual entry into houſes or lands: and forcible detainer is a with-holding by violence, and with ſtrong hand, of the poſſeſſion of land, &c. whereby he who hath right of entry is barred or hindred. At common law, any one who had a right of entry into lands, &c. might regain poſſeſſion thereof by force; but this liberty being much abuſed, to the breach of the public peace, it was found neceſſary that it ſhould be reſtrained by ſtatute: at this day, he who is wrongfully diſpoſſeſſed of goods, may juſtify the retaking them by force. Lamb. 135. Cromp. 70. Keilw. 92. But ſee 3 Salk. 187.

By ſtatutes, none ſhall enter into any lands or tenements, but where entry is given by law, and in a peaceable manner, though they have title of entry, on pain of impriſonment, &c. And when a forcible entry is committed, juſtices of peace are impowered to view the place, and inquire of the force by a jury ſommoned by the ſheriff of the county; and cauſe the tenements to be ſeized and reſtored, and impriſon the offenders till they pay a fine. 5 R. 2. ſtat. 1. c. 8. 15 R. 2. c. 2. 8 H. 6. c. 9. ſ. 2.

If a juſtice of peace come to view a force in a houſe, and they refuſe to let him in; this of itſelf will make a forcible detainer in all caſes; but it muſt be upon complaint made. The juſtices of peace are not to inquire into the title of either party; and there ſhall be no reſtitution upon an indictment of forcible entry or detainer, where the defendant hath been in quiet poſſeſſion for three years together without interruption, next before the day of the indictment found, and his eſtate in the land not ended; which may be alledged in ſtay of reſtitution, and reſtitution is to be ſtayed till that be tried, if the other will traverſe the ſame, &c. Dalt. 312. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 11.

Indictment for forcible entry muſt be laid of liberum tenementum, &c. to have reſtitution by the ſtatute 15 R. 2. c. 2. 8 H. 6. c. 9, &c. Though by 21 Jac. 1. c. 15. Juſtices of peace may give like reſtitution of poſſeſſion to tenants for years, tenant by elegit, ſtatute ſtaple, &c. and copyholders, as to freeholders.

Before this ſtatute it was neceſſary to be laid of liberum tenementum, as mentioned above; and ſince that ſtatute it ought to ſay, what eſtate he has: for perhaps he is only tenant at will. Semb. 1 Salk. 260. R. 1 Sid. 102. See farther as to what ſhall be a good indictment, Com. Dig. 3 V. 369. (D. 4.)

It remains to conſider,

I. What ſhall be deemed a forcible entry and detainer under the foregoing ſtatutes.

II. What remedy is provided in ſuch caſes.

I. What ſhall be deemed a forcible entry and detainer under the foregoing ſtatutes.

When one or more perſons armed with unuſual weapons, violently enter into the houſe or land of another; or where they do not enter violently: if they forcibly put another out of his poſſeſſion; or if one enters another's houſe, without his conſent, although the door be open, &c. Theſe are forcible entries puniſhable by law. Co. Lit. 257. So when a tenant keeps poſſeſſion of the land at the end of his term againſt the landlord, it is a forcible detainer. Cro. Jac. 199. And if a leſſee takes a new leaſe of another perſon, whom he conceives to have better title, and at the end of the term keeps poſſeſſion againſt his own landlord, this is a forcible detainer. Ibid. Alſo perſons continuing in poſſeſſion of a defeazible eſtate, after the title is defeated, are puniſhable for forcible entry; for continuing in poſſeſſion afterwards, amounts in law to a new entry. Co. Lit. 256, 257. And an infant, or feme-covert may be guilty of forcible entry within the ſtatutes in reſpect of violence committed by them in perſon; but not for what is done by others at their command, their commands being void. Co. Lit. 357.

If a man have two houſes next adjoining, the one by a defeaſible title, and the other by a good title; and he uſes force in that he hath by the good title to keep perſons out of the other houſe, this is a forcible detainer. 2 Shep. Abr. 203. A man enters into the houſe of another by the windows, and then threatneth the party, and he for fear doth leave the houſe, it is a forcible entry: ſo if one enter a houſe when no perſon is therein, with armed men, &c. Moor Caſ. 185. If a perſon after peaceable entry, ſhall make uſe of arms to defend his poſſeſſion, &c. it will be forcible detainer: a man put another out of his houſe by force, if he then puts in one of his ſervants in a peaceable manner, who keeps out the party, &c. it will be a forcible entry, but not a detainer; but if himſelf remaineth there with force, this makes a forcible detainer. 2 Shep. 203. If I hear that perſons will come to my houſe to beat me, &c. and I take in force to defend myſelf, it is no forcible detainer: tho' where they are coming to take poſſeſſiion only, it is otherwiſe. Ibid. This muſt mean, where they have a right to take poſſeſſion, by law.

This offence may be committed of a rent, as well as of a houſe or land; as where one comes to diſtrain, and the tenant threatens to kill him, or forcibly makes reſiſtance, &c. Ibid. 201. But no man can be guilty of forcible entry, for entring with violence into lands or houſes in his own ſole poſſeſſion at the time of entry; as by breaking open doors, &c. of his houſe, detained from him by one who has the bare cuſtody of it: but jointenants, or tenants in common, may be guilty of forcible entry, and holding out their companions. 1 Hawk. P. C. 147. A perſon is not guilty of a forcible detainer, by barely refuſing to go out of a houſe, and continuing therein in deſpight of another. Ibid. 146. And no words alone can make a forcible entry, although violent and threatning, without force uſed by the party. 1 Lill. Abr. 514. 1 Hawk. 145.

II. What remedy is provided in ſuch caſes.

The remedy may be,

1. By action.

An action lies upon Stat. 15 R. 2. 2. againſt him who makes a forcible entry. So, upon Stat. 8 H. 6. 9. againſt him who makes a forcible entry, or detainer.

2. By juſtices of peace upon view.

By Stat. 15 R. 2. 2. A juſtice of peace may go to the place, &c. and if he find any hold forcibly, ſhall commit, &c. till, convicted by record of the juſtice, they make fine and ranſom. And therefore, any juſtice of the peace, upon view of the force, may make a record of it, and commit the offender. Dalt. c. 44. And this, without a writ directed to him to execute the ſtatutes. And, upon any information, without a complaint of the party. So every juſtice may take the ſheriff, and poſſe comitatus, to reſtrain; or he may break open a houſe to remove the force. Ibid. The record made by a juſtice upon view, ſhall be a conviction, and is not traverſable. Vide 8. Co. 121. Dalt. c. 44. And ought to be certified to B. R. or the next aſſiſes, or quarter-ſeſſions. And the party convicted ſhall be there fined. But the juſtice himſelf cannot fine. Ibid. Vide Sal. 353. And if a defect appears, in the conviction, to B. R. it ſhall be quaſhed. 1 Sid. 156.

The juſtices, on forcible detainer, may puniſh the force upon view, and fine and impriſon the offenders; but cannot meddle with the poſſeſſion. Sid. 156. Yet ſee poſt. And it hath been held, that in forcible entry and detainer, the jury are to find all or none; and not the detainer, without the forcible entry. 1 Vent. 25.

3. By inquiſition, according to 8 H. 6. c. 9. or by indictment.

An indictment may be for a forcible entry, or detainer, before juſtices of peace of the county where the land lies, at the quarter-ſeſſions. But an indictment for a forcible detainer, ought to ſhew, that the entry was peaceable. R. Cro. Jac. 151.

Indictments for forcible entry muſt ſet forth, that the entry was manu forti, to diſtinguiſh this offence from other treſpaſſes vi et armis; and there are many niceties to be obſerved in drawing the indictment, otherwiſe it will be quaſhed. Cro. Jac. 461. Dalt. 298. There muſt be certainty in this indictment; and no repugnancy, which is an incurable fault. An indictment of forcible entry was quaſhed, for that it did not ſet forth the eſtate of the party: ſo where the defendant hath not been in poſſeſſion peaceably three years before the indictment, without ſaying before the indictment found, &c. And force ſhall not be intended when the judgment is generally laid, for it muſt be always expreſſed. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 867, 869.

Indictment of forcible entry lies, not only for lands, but for tithes; alſo for rents: but not againſt a lord entering a common with force, for which the commoner may not indict him, becauſe it is his own land. Cro. Car. 201, 486.

In many caſes reſtitution may be made. By 8 H. 6. c. 9. A juſtice of peace, if on inquiry, &c. a forcible entry or detainer is found, ſhall put the party in poſſeſſion of the lands ſo entred or holden; and the juſtice ſhall make reſtitution, (after inquiſition found) to the party ouſted, by himſelf, or by his precept to the ſheriff. T. Ray. 85. Carth. 496. So reſtitution ſhall be made upon an indictment at the quarter-ſeſſions. H. P. C. 140.

An indictment of forcible entry may be removed from before juſtices of peace into the court of B. R. coram rege, which court may award reſtitution. 11 Rep. 65. And the juſtices before whom ſuch indictment was found, may, after traverſe tendered, certify or deliver the indictment into the King's Bench, and refer the proceeding thereupon to the juſtices of that court.

So juſtices of goal-delivery, upon an indictment before them. So re-reſtitution ſhall be, after an ill reſtitution awarded. Sav. 68. Cro. Jac. 151. So reſtitution ſhall be to a diſſeiſor ouſted by the force of the diſſeiſee. To a leſſee, tho' the leſſor, who was diſſeiſed, thereby oppoſes it. To a copyholder tho' his lord oppoſes it. Vide Dalt. c. 132. Cont, before the St. 21. Jac. 15. Dy. 142, a. in marg.

A copyholder cannot be diſſeiſed, becauſe he hath no freehold in his eſtate; but he may be expelled. And a copyhold tenant may be reſtored, where he is wrongfully expelled; but if the indictment be only of diſſeiſin, as he may not be diſſeiſed, there can be no reſtitution but at the prayer of him who hath the freehold. Yelv. 81. Cro. Jac, 41. Poſſeſſion of the termor is the poſſeſſion of him in reverſion: and when a leſſee for years is put out of poſſeſſion by force, reſtitution muſt be to him in reverſion, and not to the leſſee; and then his leſſee may re-enter. 1 Leon. 327. A termor may ſay that he was expelled, and his landlord in reverſion diſſeiſed; or rather that the tenant of the freehold is diſſeiſed, and he the leſſee for years expelled. 4 Mod. 248. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 869. If a diſſeiſee within three years makes a lawful claim, this is an interruption of the poſſeſſion of the diſſeiſor. H. P. C, 139. Though it has been adjudged, that it is not the title of the poſſeſſor, but the poſſeſſion for three years, which is material. Sid. 149. Since the Stat. 5 R. 2. ſt. 1. c. 8. if W. R. is ſeiſed of lands, and L. R. having good right to enter, doth accordingly enter manu forti, he may be indicted notwithſtanding his right, &c. 3 Salk. 170. For a forcible detainer only it is ſaid there is no reſtitution; the plaintiff never having been in poſſeſſion. 1 Vent. 23. Sid 97, 99.

No reſtitution ſhall be awarded to an advowſon, common, rent, &c. for it ſhall only be to land. Dalt. c. 44. Nor, where he, who uſed force has the poſſeſſion by operation of law: as if a diſſeiſee enters, and afterwards, by force, ouſts his diſſeiſor, the poſſeſſion ſhall not be reſtored; for it was re-veſted in the diſſeiſee by his entry. Dalt. c. 132. Nor, if a leſſor enters by force, upon the leſſee, for a forfeiture; nor to any other than him who was ouſted by force, as to his heir. Sal. 587. Or any abator, after the death of the anceſtor. Dalt. c. 132. Nor if the party tenders a traverſe to the inquiſition. 1 Sid. 287. Upon a certiorari delivered to remove an indictment, it ſhall be ſtayed. H. P. C. 141. Or, if the indictment appears inſufficient. H. P. C. 140. And in ſuch caſe reſtitution granted may be ſtayed before execution. H. P. C. 140. So reſtitution ſhall not be, after a conviction by a juſtice upon his view. 1 Vent. 308. Nor by juſtices of aſſiſe, gaol-delivery, or juſtices of peace; if the indictment was not found before them. H. P. C. 140. Dalt. c. 44, 131. So reſtitution ſhall not be, unleſs immediately; not four or five years afterwards. R. Carth. 496. Nor by Stat. 31 El. 11. If by plea it appears, that the party had poſſeſſion for three years before the inquiſition found. T. Ray. 85. Sal. 260. Tho' the plea does not ſhew, how he was poſſeſſed. T. Ray. 85. 1 Sid. 149.

A record of juſtices of peace of forcible entry, is not traverſable; but the entry and force, &c. may be traverſed in writing, and the juſtices may ſummon a jury for trial of the traverſe. 1 Salk. 353. The finding of the force being in nature of a preſentment by the jury, is traverſable; and if the juſtices of peace refuſe the traverſe, and grant reſtitution, on removing the indictment into B. R. there the traverſe may be tried; and on a verdict found for the party, &c. a re-reſtitution ſhall be granted. Sid. 287. 2 Salk. 588. If no force is found at a trial thereof before juſtices, reſtitution is not to be granted; nor ſhall it be had till the force is tried; nor ought the juſtices to make it in the abſence of the defendant, without calling him to anſwer. 1 Hawk. P. C. 154.

No other juſtices of peace but thoſe before whom the indictment was found, may either at ſeſſions, or out of it, award reſtitution; the ſame juſtices may do it in perſon, or make a precept to the ſheriff to do it, who may raiſe the power of the county to aſſiſt him in executing the ſame. 1 Hawk. 152. And the ſame juſtices of peace may alſo ſuperſede the reſtitution, before it is executed; on inſufficiency found in the indictment, &c. But no other juſtices, except of the court of B. R. A certiorari from B. R. is a ſuperſedeas to the reſtitution; and the juſtices of B. R. may ſet aſide the reſtitution after executed, if it be againſt law, or irregularly obtained, &c. 1 Salk. 154. If juſtices of peace exceed their authority, an information may be brought againſt them. A conviction for forcible entry, before a fine is ſet, may be quaſhed on motion; but after a fine is ſet, it may not; the defendant muſt bring writ of error. 2 Salk. 450.

If a plaintiff proceeds not criminally by indictment for forcible entry, but commences a civil action on the caſe, (which he may do on the ſtatute of 8 Hen. 6. c. 9.) the defendant is to plead Not guilty, or may plead any ſpecial matter, and traverſe the force; and the plaintiff in his replication muſt anſwer the ſpecial matter, and not the traverſe; and if it be found againſt the defendant, he is convicted of the force of courſe; whereupon the plaintiff ſhall recover treble damages and coſts. 3 Salk. 169.

A reverſioner cannot bring action of forcible entry, becauſe he cannot be expelled, though he may be diſſeiſed. Dyer. 141. And the words in the writ to maintain the action are, that the defendant expulit & diſſeiſivit, &c. yet it is ſaid that every diſſeiſin implies an expulſion in forcible entry. Cro. Jac. 31. And if in treſpaſs or aſſiſe upon the ſtatute of forcible entry 8 H. 6. c. 9. the defendant is condemned by non ſum informatus; he ſhall pay treble damages and treble coſts: adjudged, and affirmed in error. For the words of the ſtatute give them where the recovery is by verdict, or otherwiſe in due manner. Jenk. Cent. 197. Though forcible entry is puniſhable either by indictment or action; the action is ſeldom brought, but the indictment often. See Black. Com. 3 V. 179. 4 V. 147. But in many caſes it may be much more for the benefit of the party to bring the action.

Forcible Marriage, Of a woman of eſtate, is felony; for by the Stat. 3 H. 7. c. 2. it is enacted, "That if any "perſons ſhall take away any woman having lands or goods, "or that is heir apparent to her anceſtor, by force, and "againſt her will, and marry or defile her, the takers, pro-"curers, abettors, and receivers of the woman taken away "againſt her will, and knowing the ſame, ſhall be deemed "principal felons:" but as to procurers and acceſſaries, they are to be before the offence committed, to be excluded the benefit of clergy, by 39 Eliz. c. 9. The indictment on the Stat. 3 H. 7. c. 2. is expreſly to ſet forth, that the woman taken away had lands or goods, or was heir apparent, and alſo that ſhe was married or defiled, becauſe no other caſe is within the ſtatute; and it ought to alledge that the taking was for lucre; it is no excuſe that the woman at firſt was taken away with her conſent; for if ſhe afterwards refuſe to continue with the offender, and be forced againſt her will, ſhe may from that time properly be ſaid to be taken againſt her will; and it is not material whether a woman ſo taken away, be at laſt married or defiled with her own conſent or not, if ſhe were under the force at the time; the offender being in both caſes equally within the words of the act. 3 Inſt. 61. 1 H. P. C. 109, 110, 119.

Thoſe perſons who after the fact receive the offender, are but acceſſaries after the offence, according to the rules of the Common law; and thoſe that are only privy to the damage, but not parties to the forcible taking away, are not within the act. [illegible] H. P. C. 119. A man may be indicted for taking away a woman by force in another county; for the continuing of the force in any county amounts to a forcible taking there. Ibid. Taking away any woman child, under the age of ſixteen years and unmarried, out of the cuſtody and without the conſent of the father or guardian, &c. the offender ſhall ſuffer fine and impriſonment; and if the woman agrees to any contract of matrimony with ſuch perſon, ſhe ſhall forfeit her eſtate during her life, to the next of kin to whom the inheritance ſhould deſcend, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 8. See 3 Mod. Rep. 84, 169.

This is a force againſt the parents: and an information will lie for ſeducing a young man or woman from their parents, againſt their conſents, in order to marry them, &c. Cro. Car. 557. Raym. 473. See Marriage, and Black. Com. 4 V. 208.

Foreign, (Fr. foraign, Lat. forinſecus, extraneus) Strange or outlandiſh, of another country; and in our law, is uſed adjectively being joined with divers ſubſtantives in ſeveral ſenſes. Kitch. 126.

Foreign Attachment, Is an attachment of foreigners goods, found within a liberty or city, for the ſatisfaction of ſome citizen to whom the foreigner is indebted; or of money in the hands of another perſon, due to him againſt whom an action of debt is brought, &c. Sed qu. if now, any diſtinction is made, as to the goods or money attached being the property of a foreigner, or a citizen? For we apprehend the cuſtom now is to attach the property of the latter, as well as of the former. See Attachment.

Foreign Court. At Lemſter (anciently called Leominſter) there is the borough and the foreign court; which laſt is within the juriſdiction of the manor, but not within the liberty of the bailiff of the borough: ſo there is a foreign court of the honour of Glouceſter. Clauſ. 8 Ed. 2. Foreign bought and ſold is a cuſtom within the city of London, which being found prejudicial to the ſellers of cattle in Smithfield, it was enacted 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 19. that as well ſtrangers, as freemen, may buy and ſell any cattle there. See 25 Car. 2. c. 24. 1 Jac. 2. c. 17.

Foreign Kingdom, Is a kingdom under the dominion of a foreign prince; ſo that Ireland, or any other place, ſubject to the crown of England, cannot with us be called foreign; though to ſome purpoſes they are diſtinct from the realm of England. If two of the King's ſubjects fight in a foreign kingdom, and one of them is killed, it cannot be tried here by the Common law; but it may be tried and determined by the Conſtable and Marſhal, according to the Civil law; or the fact may be examined by the Privy Council, and tried by commiſſioners appointed by the King in any county of England, by ſtatute. 33 H. 8. 3 Inſt. 48. One Hutchinſon killed Mr. Colſon abroad in Portugal, for which he was tried there and acquitted, the exemplification of which acquittal he produced under the Great Seal of that kingdom; and the King being willing he ſhould be tried here referred it to the judges, who all agreed, that the party being already acquitted by the laws of Portugal, could not be tried again for the ſame fact here. 3 Keb. 785.

If a ſtranger of Holland, or any foreign kingdom, buys goods at London, and gives a note under his hand for payment, and then goes away privately into Holland; the ſeller may have a certificate from [illegible] Lord Mayor, on proof of ſale and delivery of the [illegible]: upon which the people of Holland will execute a legal proceſs on the party. 4 Inſt. 38. Alſo at the inſtance of an ambaſſador or conſul, ſuch a perſon of England, or any criminal againſt the laws here, may be ſent from a foreign kingdom hither. Where a bond is given, or contract made in a foreign kingdom, it may be tried in the King's Bench, and laid to be done in any place in England. Hob. 11. 2 Bulſt. 322. And an agreement made in France, on two French perſons marrying, touching the wife's fortune, has been decreed here to be executed, according to the laws of England; and that the huſband ſurviving ſhould have the whole; but relief was firſt given for a certain ſum, and the reſt to be governed by the cuſtom of Paris. Foreign Plea, Is a plea in objection to a judge, where he is refuſed as incompetent to try the matter in queſtion, becauſe it ariſes out of his juriſdiction. Kitch. 75. Stat. 4 Hen. 8. c. 2. And if a plea of iſſuable matter is alledged in a different county from that wherein the party is indicted or appealed, by the Common law, ſuch pleas can only be tried by juries returned from the counties wherein they are alledged. 2 Hawk. P. C. 404. But by the Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 14. All foreign pleas triable by the country, upon an indictment for petit treaſon, murder or felony, ſhall be forthwith tried without delay, before the ſame juſtices before whom the party ſhall be arraigned, and by the jurors of the ſame county where he is arraigned, notwithſtanding the matter of the pleas are alledged to be in any other county or counties: though as this ſtatute extends not to treaſon, nor appeals, it is ſaid a foreign iſſue therein muſt ſtill be tried by the jury of the county wherein alledged. 3 Inſt. 17. H. P. C. 255. In a foreign plea in a civil action the defendant ought to plead to that place where the plaintiff alledges the matter to be done in his declaration; and the defendant may plead a foreign plea where the matter is tranſitory, or not tranſitory; but in the laſt caſe he muſt ſwear to it. Sid. 234. 2 Nelſ. 871. When a foreign plea is pleaded, the court generally makes the defendant put it upon oath, that it is true; or will enter up judgment for want of a plea. See 5 Mod. 335. Foreign anſwer is ſuch an anſwer as is not triable in the county where made; and foreign matter is that matter which is done in another county, &c.

Foreign Service, Is that whereby a meſne lord holds of another, without the compaſs of his own fee: or that which the tenant performs either to his own lord, or to the lord paramount out of the fee. Kitch. 299. Of theſe ſervices, Bracton ſays thus: Item ſunt quædam ſervitia, quæ dicuntur forinſeca, quamvis ſunt in charta de feoffamento expreſſa & nominata; & que ideo dici poſſunt forinſeca, quia pertinent dominum regem, & non ad dominum capitalem, &c. Quandoque enim nominantur forinſeca, large ſumpto vocabulo, quoad ſervitium domini regis quandoque ſcutagium, quandoque ſervitium domini regis, & ideo forinſecum dici poteſt, quia fit & capitur foris, ſive extra ſervitium quod fit domino capitali. Bract. lib. 2. c. 16. Forejudger, (forejudicatio) A judgment whereby a perſon is deprived or put by the thing in queſtion. Bract. lib. 4. To be forejudged the court, is when an officer or attorney of any court is expelled the ſame for ſome offence; or for not appearing to an action, on a bill filed againſt him, &c. And in the latter caſe, he is not to be admitted to practiſe in the court, till he appears. 2 Hen. 4. c. 8. If an attorney privileged in C. B. is ſued, after a bill filed againſt him, the plaintiff's attorney delivers it to one of the criers of the court, who calls the attorney defendant by his name, and ſolemnly proclaims aloud, that if he does not appear to ſuch a bill, he will be forejudged: and when the crier hath ſo called ſuch an attorney, the bill is delivered to the ſecondary, who gives a rule for him to appear, or he will ſtand forejudged: after which this bill is to be carried to the prothonotary's office, and there filed and entered; and if the attorney appears not in four days, then the bill is entered upon a roll of that term, and carried to the clerk of the warrants and inrolments; and he thereupon ſtrikes ſuch attorney out of the roll of attornies, when he ſtands unprivileged, and may be arreſted as any other perſon, &c. Practiſ. Solic. 322. Attorn. Compan. 182, 183.

But an attorney forejudged, may be reſtored, on clearing himſelf from his contumacy in not appearing when he was called, and on making ſatisfaction to the plaintiff; and then a judge will make an order to the clerk of the warrants, to replace him in the proper roll of attornies: and there are inſtances of reſtoring attornies forejudged, upon payment of a ſmall fine. Ibid. Raſtal 96.

Foreſchoke, (derelictum) Is of the ſame meaning with forſaken in modern language; in one of our ſtatutes, it is ſpecially uſed in lands or tenements ſeiſed by a lord, for want of ſervices performed by the tenant, and quietly held by ſuch lord beyond a year and a day; now the tenant, who ſeeing his land taken into the hands of the lord, and poſſeſſed ſo long, and not purſuing the courſe appointed by law to recover it, doth in preſumption of law diſavow or forſake all the right he hath to the ſame; and then ſuch lands ſhall be called foreſchoke. Stat. 10 Ed. 2. c. 1.

Foreſt, (foreſta, ſaltus) Signifies a great or vaſt wood; locus ſylveſtris & ſaltuoſus. Our law writers define it thus, Foreſta eſt locus ubi feræ inhabitant vel includuntur; others ſay it is called Foreſta, quaſi ferarum ſtatio, vel tuta manſio ferarum. Manwood, in his Foreſt Laws, gives this particular definition of it: A foreſt is a certain territory or circuit of woody grounds and paſtures, known in its bounds and privilege, for the peaceable being and abiding of wild beaſts, and fowls of foreſt, chaſe and warren, to be under the King's protection for his princely delight; repleniſhed with beaſts of venary or chaſe, and great coverts of vert for ſuccour of the ſaid beaſts; for preſervation whereof there are particular laws, privileges and officers belonging thereunto. Manw. part 2. c. 1.

Foreſts are of that antiquity in England, that (except the New Foreſt in Hampſhire, erected by William called The Conqueror, and Hampton Court, erected by King Hen. 8. ſee 31 H. 8. c. 5.) it is ſaid there is no record or hiſtory doth make any certain mention of their erections and beginnings; though they are mentioned by ſeveral writers; and in divers of our laws and ſtatutes. 4 Inſt. 319. Our ancient hiſtorians tell us, that New Foreſt was raiſed by the deſtruction of twenty-two pariſh churches, and many villages, chapels and manors, for the ſpace of thirty miles together; which was attended with divers judgments on the poſterity of King Will. 1. who erected it; for William Rufus was there ſhot with an arrow, and before him Richard, the brother of Hen. 1. was there killed; and Henry, nephew to Robert, the eldeſt ſon of the Conqueror, did hang by the hair of the head in the boughs of the foreſt like unto Abſalom. Blount.

Beſides the New Foreſt, there are ſixty-eight other foreſts in England; thirteen chaſes, and more than ſeven hundred parks: the four principal foreſts are New Foreſt on the Sea, Shirewood Foreſt on the Trent, Dean Foreſt on the Severn, and Windſor Foreſt on the Thames. The way of making a foreſt is thus: Certain commiſſioners are appointed under the Great Seal of England, who view the ground intended for a foreſt, and fence it round with metes and bounds; which being returned into the Chancery, the King cauſes it to be proclaimed throughout the county where the land lieth, that it is a foreſt, and to be governed by the laws of the foreſt, and prohibits all perſons from hunting there without his leave; and then he appointeth officers fit for the preſervation of the vert and veniſon, and ſo it becomes a foreſt on record. Manw. c. 2. Though the King may erect a foreſt on his own ground and waſtes; he may not do it in the ground of other perſons, without their conſent; and agreements with them for that purpoſe ought to be confirmed by parliament. 4 Inſt. 300.

Proof of a foreſt appears by matter of record; as by the eyres of the juſtices of the foreſts, and other courts, and officers of foreſts, &c. and not by the name in grants. 12 Rep. 22. As parks are incloſed with wall, pale, etc. ſo foreſts, and chaſes are incloſed by metes and bounds; ſuch as rivers, highways, hills, viz. which are an incloſure in law; and without which there cannot be a foreſt. 4 Inſt. 317. And in the eye of the law, the boundaries of a foreſt go round about it as it were a brick wall, directly in a right line the one from the other, and they are known either by matter of record, or preſcription. Ibid. Bounds of foreſt may be aſcertained by commiſſion from the Lord Chancellor; and commiſſioners, ſheriffs, officers of foreſts, &c. are impowered to make inqueſts thereof. Stat. 16 and 17 Car. 1. c. 16. Alſo the boundaries of foreſts are reckoned a part of the foreſt; for if any perſon kill or hunt any of the King's deer in any highway, river, or other incluſive boundary of a foreſt, he is as great an offender as if he had killed or hunted deer within the foreſt itſelf. 4 Inſt. 318.

By the grant of a foreſt, the game of the foreſt do paſs; and beaſts of the foreſt are the hart, hind, buck, doe, boar, wolf, fox, hare, etc. The ſeaſons for hunting whereof are as follow, viz. that of the hart and buck begins at the feaſt of St. John Baptiſt, and ends at Holy-rood day; of the hind and doe, begins at Holy-rood, and continues till Candlemas; of the boar, from Chriſtmas to Candlemas; of the fox, begins at Chriſtmas, and continues till Lady-day; of the hare, at Michaelmas, and laſts till Candlemas. Dyer 169. 4 Inſt. 316.

Not only game, &c. are incident to a foreſt, but alſo a foreſt hath divers ſpecial properties. 1. A foreſt truly and ſtrictly taken, cannot be in the hands of any but the King; for none but the King hath power to grant commiſſion to any one to be a juſtice in eyre of the foreſt: but if the King grants a foreſt to a ſubject, and granteth further that upon requeſt made in Chancery, he and his heirs ſhall have juſtices of the foreſt, then the ſubject hath a foreſt in law. 4 Inſt. 314. Cro. Jac. 155. The ſecond property of a foreſt is the courts; as the juſtice-ſeat, the ſwainmote, and court of attachment. The third property is the officers belonging to it; as firſt, the juſtices of the foreſt, the warden or warder, the verderors, foreſters, agiſters, regarders, keepers, bailiffs, beadles, &c.

Though as to the courts, the moſt eſpecial court of a foreſt is the ſwainmote, which is no leſs incident to it than a court of piepowder to a fair: and, if this fail, there is nothing remaining of the foreſt, but it is turned into the nature of a chaſe. Manw. c. 21. Crompt. Jur. 146.

There is but one Chief Juſtice of the foreſts on this ſide Trent, and he is named Juſticiarius Itinerans Foreſtarum, &c. citra Trentam; and there is another, Capitali Juſticiarius; and he is Juſticiarius Itinerans omnium Foreſtarum ultra Trentam, &c. who is a perſon of greater dignity, than knowledge in the laws of the foreſt; and therefore when juſtice ſeats are held, there are aſſociated to him ſuch as the King ſhall appoint, who, together with him determine omnia placita foreſtæ, &c. 4 Inſt. 315.

A juſtice in eyre cannot grant licence to ſell any timber; unleſs it be ſedente curia, or after a writ of ad quod dammum: and it hath been reſolved by all the judges, that though juſtices in eyre, and the King's officers within his foreſts, have charge of veniſon, and of vert or green hue, for the maintenance of the King's game, and all manner of trees for covert, browſe and pannage; yet when timber of the foreſt is ſold, it muſt be cut and taken by power under the Great Seal, or the Exchequer Seal by view of the Foreſters, that it may not be had in places inconvenient for the game: and the juſtice in eyre, or any of the King's officers in the foreſt, cannot ſell or diſpoſe of any wood within the foreſt without commiſſion; ſo that the Exchequer and the officers of the foreſt have diviſum imperium, the one for the profit of the King, the other for his pleaſure. 3d Vol. Read. on Stat. p. 304, 305.

Alſo no officer of the foreſt can claim windfalls, or dotard trees, for their perquiſites, becauſe they were once parcel of the King's inheritance; but they ought to be ſold by commiſſion, for the King's beſt benefit. Ibid. If any officers cut down wood, not neceſſary for browſe, &c. they forfeit their offices. 9 Rep. 50. The lord of a foreſt may by his officers enter into any man's wood within the regard of the foreſt, and cut down browſewood for the deer in winter. 2 Par. Game Law, p. 46.

A preſcription for a perſon to take and cut down timber trees in a foreſt, without view of the foreſter, it is ſaid may be good: but of this quære, without allowance of a former eyre, &c. If a man hath a wood in a foreſt, and hath no ſuch preſcription, the law will allow him to fell it, ſo as he doth not prejudice the game, but leave ſufficient vert; but it ought to be by writ of ad quod damnum, &c. 4 Inſt. Cro. Jac. 155. And every perſon in his own wood in a foreſt may take houſe-bote and hay-bote, by view of the foreſter; and ſo may freeholders by preſcription, copyholders by cuſtom, &c. 1 Ed. 3. c. 2. The wood taken by view of the foreſter, ought to be preſented at the next court of attachment, that it was by view, and may appear of record.

Fences, &c. in foreſts and chaſes, muſt be with low hedges, and they may be deſtroyed, though of forty years continuance, if they were not before. Cro. Jac. 156. He whoſe wood is in danger of being ſpoiled, for want of repairing fences by another, ought to requeſt the party to make good the hedges; and if he refuſe, then he muſt do it himſelf, and have action on the caſe againſt the other that ſhould have done it. 1 Jones 277.

A perſon may have action at Common law for a treſpaſs in a foreſt, as to wood, &c. to recover his right. Sid. 296.

The court of the juſtice in eyre may proceed upon the preſentments or verdicts in the ſwainmote, &c. And preſentments and convictions of the court of attachment and ſwainmote, muſt be delivered to the Lord Chief Juſtice in Eyre, at the next court of juſtice-ſeat, &c. where judgment is to be given; and the plea of the foreſt runs thus: Præſentatio per foreſtarios, & convictio per viridarios, &c. The court of attachment or woodmote in foreſts, is kept every forty days; at which the foreſters being in the attachment de viridi et venatione, and the preſentments thereof, and the verderors to receive the ſame, and inroll them; but this court can only inquire, not convict. 4 Inſt. 289. The court of ſwainmote is holden before the verderors as judges, by the ſteward of the ſwainmote, thrice in the year: the freeholders within the foreſt are to appear at this court, to make inqueſts and juries; and this court may inquire de ſuperoneratione foreſtariorum et aliorum miniſtrorum foreſtæ, et de eorum oppreſſionibus populo noſtro illatis: it may inquire of offences, and convict alſo, but not give judgment, which muſt be at the juſtice-ſeat. Ibid.

The court of the Chief Juſtice in Eyre, or Juſtice-Seat, is a court of record, and hath authority to hear and determine all treſpaſſes, pleas, and cauſes of the foreſt, &c. within the foreſt, as well concerning vert and veniſon, as other cauſes whatſoever; and this court cannot be kept oftener than every third year. As before other Juſtices in Eyre, it muſt be ſummoned forty days at leaſt before the ſitting thereof; and one writ of ſummons is to be directed to the ſheriff of the county, and another writ cuſtodi foreſtæ, Domini Regis vel ejus locum tenenti, &c. Which writ of ſummons conſiſts of two parts: Firſt, to ſummon all the officers of the fore[illegible] and that they bring with them all records, &c. Secon[illegible]ll perſons who claim any liberties or franchiſes within the foreſt, and to ſhew how they claim the ſame: if there be erroneous judgment at the juſtice-ſeat, the record may be removed by writ of error into B. R. 4 Inſt. 291.

The Court of Regard, or Survey of Dogs, is holden likewiſe every third year, for expeditation, or lawing of dogs, by cutting off to the ſkin three claws of the fore feet, to prevent their running at or killing of deer. By ſtatute, three courts of ſwainmote are to be held for foreſts in the year; one fifteen days before Michaelmas, another about Martinmas, and the third fifteen days before Midſummer: and preſentments of treſpaſſes of green hue, and hunting in foreſts, muſt be made at the next ſwainmote by foreſters, &c. Alſo no officer of the foreſt ſhall ſurcharge the foreſt, on pain of impriſonment by the juſtices of the foreſt. Charta de Foreſta, 9 H. 3. c. 1. Ordinatio de Foreſta, 34 Ed. 1. Juſtices of foreſts, &c. may make deputies. 32 H. 8. c. 35.

The Chief Warden of the foreſt is a great officer, next to the juſtices of the foreſt, to bail and diſcharge offenders; but he is no judicial officer; and the conſtable of the caſtle where a foreſt is, by the foreſt law is Chief Warden of the foreſt, as of Windſor Caſtle, etc.

A Verderor is a judicial officer of the foreſt, and choſen in full county, by the King's writ: his office is to obſerve and keep the aſſiſes or laws of the foreſts, and view, receive, and inroll the attachments and preſentments of all treſpaſſes of the foreſt, of vert and veniſon, and to do equal right and juſtice to the people: the Verderors are the chief judges of the ſwainmote court; although the Chief Warden, or his deputy, uſually ſits there. 4 Inſt. 292.

The Regarder is to make regard of the foreſt, and to view and inquire of offences, concealments, defaults of foreſters, etc. Before any juſtice-ſeat is holden, the Regarders of the foreſt muſt make their regard, and go thro' and view the whole foreſt, etc. They are miniſterial officers, conſtituted by letters patent of the King, or choſen by writ to the ſheriff. 4 Inſt. 291.

A Foreſter is in legal underſtanding a ſworn officer miniſterial of the foreſt, and is to watch over the vert and veniſon, and to make attachments and true preſentments of all manner of treſpaſſes done within the foreſt: a Foreſter is alſo taken for a Woodward: this officer is made by letters patent, and it is ſaid the office may be granted in fee, or for life. 4 Inſt. 293. Every Foreſter, when he is called at a court of juſtice-ſeat, ought upon his knees to deliver his horn to the Chief Juſtice in Eyre; ſo every Woodward ought to preſent his hatchet to my Lord.

A Riding Foreſter is to lead the King in his hunting. 1 Jones 277. The officer of Foreſter, etc. though it be a fee-ſimple, cannot be granted or aſſigned over without the King's licence. 4 Inſt. 316. If a foreſter by patent for life, is made juſtice of the ſame foreſt pro hac vice, the foreſterſhip is become void; for theſe offices are incompatible, as the foreſter is under the correction of the juſtice, and he cannot judge himſelf. 4 Inſt. 313.

An Agiſter's office is to attend upon the King's woods and lands in a foreſt, receive and take in cattle, etc. by agiſtment, that is to depaſture within the foreſt, or to feed upon the pannage, etc. And this officer is conſtituted by letters patent. 4 Inſt. 293. Perſons inhabiting in the foreſt may have common of herbage for beaſts commonable within the foreſt; but by the foreſt law, ſheep are not commonable there, becauſe they bite ſo cloſe that they deſtroy the vert; and yet it has been held, that ſheep may be commonable in foreſts by preſcription. 3 Bulſt. 213.

There may be a preſcription for common in a foreſt at all times of the year; though it was formerly the opinion of our judges, that the fence-month ſhould be excepted. 3 Lev. 127. A foreſt may be diſafforeſted and laid open; but right of common ſhall remain. Poph. 93. He that hath a grant of the herbage or pannage of a park, foreſt, etc. cannot take any herbage or pannage, but of the ſurpluſage over and above a competent and ſufficient paſture and feeding for the game; and if there be no ſurpluſage, he that hath the herbage and pannage cannot put in any beaſts; if he doth, they may be driven out. 3 Vol. Read. on Stat. 305. None may gather nuts in the foreſt without warrant.

A Ranger of a foreſt is one whoſe buſineſs is to rechaſe the wild beaſts from the purlieus into the foreſt, and to preſent offences within the purlieu, and the foreſt, etc. And though he is not properly an officer in the foreſt, yet he is a conſiderable officer of, and belonging to it.

The Beadle is a foreſt officer, that warns all the courts of the foreſt, and executes proceſs, makes all proclamations, etc. 4 Inſt. 313.

There are alſo Keepers or Bailiffs of walks in foreſts and chaſes, who are ſubordinate to the Verderors, etc. And theſe officers cannot be ſworn on any inqueſts, or juries out of the foreſt. If any man hunts beaſts within a foreſt, although they are not beaſts of the foreſt, they are puniſhable by the foreſt laws; becauſe all hunting there, without warrant is unlawful. 4 Inſt. 314. If a deer be hunted in a foreſt, and afterwards by hunting it is driven out of the foreſt, and the Foreſter follows the chaſe, and the owner of the ground where driven kills the deer there; yet the Foreſter may enter into the lands and retake the deer: for property in the deer is in this caſe by purſuit. 2 Leon. 201. He that hath any manner of licence to hunt in a foreſt, chaſe, park, etc. muſt take heed that he do not abuſe his licence, or exceed his authority; for if he do, he ſhall be accounted a treſpaſſer ab initio, and be puniſhed for that fact as if he had no licence at all. Manw. 280, 288.

Every lord of parliament, ſent for by the King, may, in coming and returning, kill a deer or two in the King's foreſt or chaſe through which he paſſes; but it muſt not be done privily, without the view of the Foreſter, if preſent; or, if abſent, by cauſing one to blow a horn, becauſe otherwiſe he may be a treſpaſſer, and ſeem to ſteal the deer. Chart. Foreſt. c. 11. 4 Inſt. 308.

Lex Foreſtæ is a private law, and muſt be pleaded. 2 Leon. 209. But it hath been obſerved, that the laws of the foreſt are eſtabliſhed by act of parliament, and for the moſt part contained in Charta de Foreſta, 9 H. 3. ſtat. 2. c. 2. and 34 Ed. 1. ſtat. 5. c. 1. By the law of the foreſt, receivers of treſpaſſers in hunting or killing of deer, knowing them to be ſuch, or any of the King's veniſon, are principal treſpaſſers; though the treſpaſs was not done to their uſe or benefit, as the Common law requires; by which the ſubſequent agreement amounts to a commandment: but if the receipt be out of the bounds of the foreſt, they cannot be puniſhed by the laws of the foreſt, being not within the foreſt juriſdiction, which is local. 4 Inſt. 317.

If a treſpaſs be done in a foreſt, and the treſpaſſer dies, it ſhall be puniſhed after his death in the life-time of the heir, contrary to the Common law. Hue and cry may be made by the foreſt law for treſpaſs, as to veniſon; though it cannot be purſued but only within the bounds of the foreſt. 4 Inſt. 294. And not purſuing hue and cry in the foreſt, a townſhip, etc. may be fined and amerced. In every treſpaſs and offence of the foreſt in vert or veniſon, the puniſhment is, to be impriſoned, ranſomed, and bound to the good behaviour of the foreſt, which muſt be executed by a judicial ſentence by the Lord Chief Juſtice in Eyre of the foreſt.

If any foreſter find any perſon hunting without warrant, he is to arreſt his body, and carry him to priſon, from whence he ſhall not be delivered without ſpecial warrant from the King, or his juſtices of the foreſt, etc. But by 1 Ed. 3. c. 8. Perſons are bailable if not taken in the manner, as with a bow ready to ſhoot, carrying away deer killed, or ſmeered with blood, etc. Though if one be not thus taken, he may be attached by his goods. 4 Inſt. 289.

The Warden of the foreſt ſhall let ſuch to mainpriſe until the eyre of the foreſt; or a writ may be had out of the Chancery to oblige him to do it; and if he refuſe to deliver the party, a writ ſhall go to the ſheriff to attach the warden, &c. who ſhall pay treble damages to the party grieved, and be committed to priſon, &c. Stat. 1 Ed. 3. c. 8. No officer of the foreſt may take or impriſon any perſon without due indictment, or per main ouvre, with his hand at the work; nor ſhall conſtrain any to make obligation againſt the aſſiſe of the foreſt, on pain to pay double damages, and to be ranſomed at the King's will. 7 R. 2. c. 4.

A Foreſter ſhall not be queſtioned for killing a treſpaſſer, who (after the peace cried unto him) will not yield himſelf; ſo as it be not done out of ſome former malice. 21 Ed. 1. But if treſpaſſers in a foreſt, &c. kill a man who oppoſes them, although they bore no malice to the perſon killed, it is murder; becauſe they were upon an unlawful act, and therefore malice is implied. Rol. Abr. 548. And if murder be committed by ſuch treſpaſſers, all are principals. Kel. Rep. 87. If a man comes into a foreſt in the night-time, the Foreſter cannot juſtify beating him before he makes reſiſtance; but if he reſiſts, he may juſtify the battery. Perſons may be fined for concealing the killing of deer by others; and ſo for carrying a gun, with an intent to kill the deer; and he that ſteals veniſon in the foreſt, and carries it off on horſeback, the horſe ſhall be forfeited, unleſs it be a ſtranger's ignorant of the fact. 2 Par. Game Law 34, 35.

Where heath is burnt in a foreſt, the offenders may be fined: and if any man cuts down buſhes and thorns, and carries them away in a cart, he is fineable, and the cart and horſes ſhall be ſeized by the foreſt laws. Ibid. 36, 46. But a man may preſcribe to cut wood, &c. And every freeman within the foreſt may on his own ground make a mill-dyke, or arable land, without incloſing ſuch arable; but if it be a nuſance to others, it is puniſhable. Chart. Foreſt. c. 11. 12 Rep. 22. And if any having woods in his own ground, within any foreſt, or chaſe, ſhall cut the ſame by the King's licence, &c. he may keep them ſeveral and incloſed, for ſeven years after felling. 22 E. 4. 7.

By Charta de Foreſta, 9 H. 3. ſtat. 2. c. 2. No man ſhall loſe life or member for killing the King's deer in a foreſt, &c. but ſhall be fined; and if he have nothing to pay the fine, he ſhall be impriſoned a year and a day; and then be delivered, if he can give good ſecurity not to offend for the future; and if not, he ſhall abjure the realm: before this ſtatute, it was felony to hunt the King's deer. 2 Rol. 120. To hunt in a foreſt, park, &c. in the night, diſguiſed, if denied or concealed, upon examination before a juſtice of peace, it is felony: but if confeſſed, it is only fineable. 1 H. 7. c. 7.

By the 9 Geo. 1. c. 22. If any perſons armed and diſguiſed, ſhall appear in any foreſt, chaſe, &c. where deer are kept, and hunt, wound, kill or ſteal any deer; or if any perſons ſhall procure any one to join with them in any ſuch unlawful act; or ſhall reſcue ſuch an offender, &c. they ſhall be guilty of felony. And the Norman Kings puniſhed thoſe who hunted and killed deer in foreſts with great ſeverity, inflicting their puniſhments in various ways; as by hanging, forfeiture of goods, and loſs of limbs, gelding, and putting out of eyes, &c. W. 1. H. 1. R. 1. &c.

Felony committed within a foreſt is inquired of before the judges of the Common law, and not by the juſtices of the foreſt.

Foreſtal, (Foreſtallamentum, from the Sax. fore, i. e. via & ſtal) Is to intercept on the highway. Spelman ſays, it is viæ obſtructio, vel itineris interceptio; with whom agrees Coke on Lit. fol 161. And, according to Fleta, foreſtalling ſignificat obſtructionem viæ vel impedimentum tranſitus et fugæ averiorum, &c. lib. 1. c. 24. In our law, foreſtalling is the buying or bargaining for any corn, cattle or other merchandiſe, by the way as they come to fairs or markets to be ſold, before they are brought thither; to the intent to ſell the ſame again, at a higher and dearer price.

All endeavours to inhance the common price of any victuals or merchandiſe, and practices which have an apparent tendency thereto, whether by ſpreading falſe rumours, or buying things in a market before the accuſtomed hour, or by buying and ſelling again the ſame thing in the ſame market, &c. are highly criminal by the Common law; and all ſuch offences anciently came under the general appellation of foreſtalling. 3 Inſt. 195, 196. And ſo jealous is the Common law of practices of this nature, which are a general inconvenience and prejudice to the people, and very oppreſſive to the poorer ſort, that it will not ſuffer corn to be ſold in the ſheaf before thraſhed; for by ſuch ſale the market is in effect foreſtalled. 3 Inſt. 197. H. P. C. 152. By the Common law, perſons guilty of foreſtalling, upon an indictment found, are liable to a fine and impriſonment, anſwerable to the heinouſneſs of their offence. 1 Hawk. 235.

By the 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. Any buying or contracting for merchandiſe, victuals, or other thing whatſoever in the way, coming by land or water to any fair or market, or to any port, &c. to be ſold, or cauſing the ſame to be bought, or diſſuading people by word, letter, meſſuage, or otherwiſe, from bringing ſuch things to market, or perſuading them to inhance the price after they are brought thither, is foreſtalling: and the party guilty of any offence of foreſtalling, &c. upon conviction at the quarter-ſeſſions, by two witneſſes, on bill, information, preſentment, &c. ſhall, for the firſt offence, loſe the goods ſo bought, or the value of them, and ſuffer two months impriſonment; for the ſecond offence, he ſhall forfeit double the value, and be impriſoned ſix months; and for the third offence, he ſhall loſe all his goods, be ſet upon the pillory, and be impriſoned at the King's Pleaſure. Stat. ibid. The forfeitures are to the King's uſe only, if there are no informers; otherwiſe a moiety goes to the King, and a moiety to the informer.

As theſe offences are frequent, throughout the kingdom, but particularly ſo, with reſpect to corn, and cattle, ſold in the London markets, and as there is ſo much encouragement, to any one, who thinks proper to proceed on this moſt uſeful of all laws, and, as carrying this act into execution, would be attended with the bleſſings of all the poor, it is matter of aſtoniſhment that it is not more frequently enforced!

No information for any of the ſaid offences againſt the ſaid ſtatute can be good, without ſhewing in certain the quantity of the thing, for which the penalty is ſuppoſed to be incurred, not only becauſe otherwiſe the judgment to be given on ſuch an information can never be pleaded in bar of any other, and that it cannot appear that both of them were brought for the ſame thing; but alſo, becauſe it cannot appear to the court what forfeiture the defendant ought to incur, unleſs the extent of the offence be ſpecially ſet forth. 1 Hawk. 238. But nothing in the act abovementioned ſhall extend to the buying of any ſuch thing, (otherwiſe than by foreſtalling) by any fiſhmonger, butcher, or poulterer, as concerns their trade, who ſhall ſell the ſame again upon reaſonable prices by retail, nor to the buying of wine, or other dead victuals, by any innholder, or victualler, to retail the ſame in his houſe; nor to the buying of any dried or ſalted fiſh (not foreſtalled), and ſold for reaſonable prices; nor to the buying of any corn, fiſh, butter, or cheeſe, by perſons duly licenſed, and not foreſtalling. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. ſect. 7.

Neither ſhall it extend to wines, oils, ſugars, ſpices, currants, nor other foreign victuals, fiſh and ſalt only excepted. 13 El. c. 25. ſect. 21. And by the 15 Car. 2. c. 7. Alſo it hath been reſolved, that ſuch victual only, as is neceſſary for the food of man, is within the aforeſaid ſtatute of 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. and therefore that apples and cherries, and ſuch like fruit are not; but that ſalt is a victual within the meaning of it. 1 Hawk. 237.

By 31 El. c. 5. which ordains that informations for offences againſt penal ſtatutes, muſt be laid in the proper county, it is provided, that nevertheleſs an information on the ſaid ſtatute of 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. againſt foreſtalling, ingroſſing, or regrating, where the penalty ſhall appear to be 20*l.* or above, may be laid out of the proper county, and in any other county, at the pleaſure of the informer. Forfeiture, (Foriſfactura, from the Fr. Forfait) Signifies the effect or penalty of tranſgreſſing ſome law.

It may be ſaid in the firſt place, that this puniſhment, being a pillar of ſociety, agreeably to the genius of the whole edifice, is erected on the great principle of ſociety itſelf, namely, to make the natural and ſocial affections a controul upon irregular and ſelfiſh paſſions. In the next, that nothing is a puniſhment, which does not affect a right ſtrictly ſo called, to make the innocent ſuffer for the guilty, and to inflict that on the guilty, which in its conſequences, may affect the innocent, are very different and unequal conſiderations. ‘ Every thing, ſays Puffendorf (L. 8. c. 3. ſect. 30.) which cauſes a ſorrow or loſs, is not properly puniſhment. It is a misfortune to be reduced to poverty by a crime, which cauſed the magiſtrate to ſet a large fine upon the father of a family; but not a puniſhment. How many are there, who come into the world without the expectation of a patrimony. How many, who loſe all they have by war, fire, or ſhipwreck.’ Now, ſince the children have no right but from the father, if he holds the property till his death, or through him, there is no injury done, when he is juſtly deprived of that wealth, which was acquired under the protection of ſociety, to be tranſmitted to his poſterity in ſtated rules of deſcent by poſitive inſtitution; and of thoſe honours, which are the rewards of good conduct, the pledges of future faith. Theſe benefits may be conſidered as the gifts of civil government; but life and liberty are the gifts of nature, and ſhould never be taken away becauſe of the parents offence: nor ſhould a ſubject be made incapable of employments, without ſome crime committed by himſelf. Such ſeverities are unwiſe, as well as unequitable. A difference, therefore, muſt be obſerved between the natural rights and common liberties, which are annexed to the perſon of every ſubject, and the peculiar diſtinctions of ſociety, as riches and honours, which are merely contingent; and if hoped for in the courſe of ſucceſſion, depend on the conduct of thoſe anceſtors, from whom we would derive them. And it is not to be ſaid, men are puniſhed, when theſe latter advantages, which themſelves neither acquired nor merited, having, by reaſon of the ‘ civil qualification of their blood,’ (as a great lawyer (Lord Chief Juſtice Hale) of our own has expreſſed it) been brought into view by the deſert of one anceſtor, are intercepted by the crimes of another.

If it be thought, that what is here ſaid is built on a miſtake, and that the right of inheriting is conferred by the law of nature, anterior to ſociety; it may ſeem proper to ſhew the contrary with as much clearneſs and brevity, as the matter will admit; the rather, becauſe the greateſt writers on the natural law are extremely perplexed upon it, and have found it difficult to free their reaſonings from ambiguity of words, mutual cavils, and the prejudices ariſing from civil policy. The law of nature is uſed in two ſenſes; either as conſiſting of certain regulations abſolutely neceſſary for ſupporting the purpoſes of nature, and conſtitution of things, previous to all civil compact; or, as made up of thoſe concluſions of natural reaſon, which ſocieties have generally and uniformly thought fit to eſtabliſh into laws by voluntary conſent. The firſt is the only ſtrict and genuine deſcription of the law of nature; and, taking it in that light, it may be ſaid, that the right of inheriting is founded by ſociety on the beſt principles of natural reaſon, but is not a right of nature. To illuſtrate the propoſition particularly, let theſe things be conſidered: 1. That the end of property is ſubſtance, by which end nature has bounded our pretenſions to it, however ſociety may inlarge them. Hence, in a ſtate of nature, we cannot aſſume more than we uſe, nor hold it longer than we live, and are capable of uſing it. And in this no alteration ariſes from circumſtances of improvement. It is enough, that the thing improved becomes more advantageous to ourſelves, and that we pay to nature the acknowledgment of induſtry for the liberal profuſion of her gifts. 2. That the manner of acquiring property, in a ſtate of nature, is by occupancy; an act of the body, not of the mind, which laſt expreſſed in any other way (until civil laws had marked out for words or writing a ſettled operation) would give a title to property too precarious and diſputable. 3. That in the transferring of property, the conſent expreſſed gives a right to the alienee againſt the alienor; and occupancy confirms that right againſt every one elſe. But in the caſe of deſcent, where is the expreſſion of conſent in the alienor? It will be ſaid, That the affection and relation of the deceaſed will create a preſumption of conſent. This is carrying the matter very far, to ſay, that the law of nature, in a ſtate of nature, transfers property by preſumption, in like manner as a civil law in a ſtate of ſociety. Where is the occupancy to compleat the transfer? That title may accrue to ſome other more diligent than the heir, unleſs we will ſuppoſe nature ſo careful as to keep poſſeſſion for him. In a word, it is not more rational to ſay, that tranſmiſſion by deſcent is that act of poſitive and civil law, which prevents the property of the deceaſed from reverting, as it would do in a ſtate of nature, to the common ſtock? But it may be objected, that this manner of arguing ſets the principles of nature at variance with one another: She expects from every man the nouriſhment of his children, till they are able to ſupport themſelves. If he ſhould die before that period, will ſhe not aſſiſt him to compleat his views by transferring his property to them? The anſwer is obvious. Upon the principles here mentioned, nature points out another way. If he foreſees the event of his death probable, he may make [The writers on the law of nature ſpeak of the right of making donations mortis cauſa (a thing known in the civil law,) as a right, which might ſubſiſt in a ſtate of nature] conditional gifts and alienations to his friends, whilſt he lives, for the ſupport of his unaſſiſted children. If, through chance or inadvertence, he neglect it, the law of benevolence, that fundamental principle, requires ſuch, as are neareſt in blood and affection to the deceaſed, to take upon themſelves this care: Nay, lays it, in a ſtate of uncorrupt nature, upon the conſciences of thoſe, under whoſe notice the orphans may fall; ſo that nature has not left this compaſſionate caſe unconſidered, unprovided. Yet, ſuppoſe that property deſcends by the natural law; if the children are grown up, and are poſſeſſed of what is ſufficient for their uſe, before the father's death, they ſtand in no need of this ſucceſſion; and by that principle, which confines property to ſubſiſtence, and a capacity of uſing, they are even barred from accepting it. If they are weak and unable to maintain themſelves, though the property deſcend, they cannot occupy; that is, in the language of the law of nature, acquire it, or complete that transfer of it, which the deſcent to tenders them. How then are the children better provided for in this than in the other way, reaſoning upon the matter as in a ſtate of nature.

We may carry it ſtill further, and ſhew, that if the right of inheriting be not conſidered as a right conferred by ſociety, the greateſt abſurdities muſt be charged upon the civil laws of all countries.

1. If the right of inheriting is a natural right, as ariſing from the principle of affection and relation, not poſitive inſtitution, then it cannot be confined to a man's children, but, in failure of iſſue, muſt extend to all his kindred, in their ſeveral degrees. Now that is no law to regulate men, either in a ſtate of nature or ſociety, which does not extend to particular caſes; and nature will not ſuppoſe a right of inheriting, without any rule to go by in the application and conferring of it. That rule can be but one; yet civil laws have purſued a thouſand different ways, contrary to the law of nature, according to this reaſoning. 2. If the right of inheritance came in by the law of nature, we may, for argument ſake, imagine the deſcent carried on through ſeveral generations. In conſequence, preſcription, (either for a certain time, as by the Roman or our Statute Law, or for time immemorial, as by the Common law) muſt give a right; otherwiſe antient and obſcure pretences of wrongful poſſeſſion might be ſet up, in order to diveſt the preſent owner, and to diſturb the public tranquility. But then the law of nature would be deſtructive of itſelf: For, is it not contrary to natural principles, that a juſt right ſhall be barred by any length of time, and the accident of not demanding it. Or, omitting that conſideration, can preſcription determine the matter, without civil judicatures to whom it may be pleaded. Has nature decided of the legal preſumption eſtabliſhed in civil laws ariſing from long continuance; or has it declared how many years ſhall limit or bar a right, any more than in what order inheritances ſhall deſcend. If it has, civil laws would do well to follow its proviſions, inſtead of differing from one another and themſelves. Nor let it be ſaid, that diſputes about prior occupancy are expoſed equally to the objection of diſturbing the public tranquility, as diſputes about inheritances; both becauſe thoſe of the firſt kind lying within the ocular obſervation of many, and taking their riſe upon the ſpot to be occupied, muſt be of eaſier and ſimpler determination, depending leſs on legal preſumptions and artificial reaſoning; and becauſe, without the principle of prior occupancy, there could be no ſuch thing in a ſtate of nature, as the acquiſition of property at all. And therefore any diſputes, which might be ſuppoſed to ariſe from it, are to be conſidered as a neceſſary evil, whilſt that ſtate remains. But the right of inheriting is not a manner of acquiring property necſſary for the ſubſiſtence of mankind and to ſupport the purpoſes of nature. 3. Laws have always diſtinguiſhed between jura ſanguinis and jura hæreditaria; conſidering the one as inſtituted by nature; the other by civil compact. The Roman law ſays Hæres eſt nomen juris, Filius nomen naturæ; and caſes might be cited out of it, which were affected by this maxim. In the law of England, the ſame diſtinction is clearly made. If a man attainted be murdered by a ſtranger, the ſon ſhall not have the appeal, becauſe it is given to the heir: yet, if he is murdered by the ſon, the crime is petty treaſon, becauſe the relation of a ſon remains. If a man is attainted, and have a charter of pardon from the king, ſo as to be capable of being returned upon a jury between his ſon and another, the challenge, on account of conſanguinity, continues, notwithſtanding the corruption of blood is not taken away by the pardon. Now, if the right of inheriting be a right of nature, the name of an heir cannot be ſeparated from that of a ſon, but they muſt ſtand and fall together, becauſe jura ſanguinis nullo jure civili dirimi poſſunt. But againſt this reaſoning we have the authority of two ſyſtems of civil law, which are the accumulated wiſdom of many ages, and the nobleſt efforts of hûman reaſon ſince the creation of the world.

The right of inheriting being proved of civil inſtitutions it may naturally occur to one, who turns his thoughts upon this ſubject, that it is an inſtitution contrived only for the benefit of a man's children; and, therefore, ought not to be obſtructed by the demerit of the Father.

But, if without being thought guilty of refinement, we may reſort to the firſt elements of ſociety for the reaſons on which the right of inheriting, or the power of tranſmitting property, ſtands; (for thoſe are convertible terms, the one reſerving to him to whom the property deſcends, and the other, to him from whom it comes;) they ſeem to be two, and neither of them has any relation to the children: One, that when thoſe things in which a man had gained property for his ſubſiſtence, ceaſed to be his in the courſe of nature, the neareſt relation ſhould inherit and take poſſeſſion, leſt the eagerneſs to contend about ſucceeding to them, might turn the ſtate of ſociety into a ſtate of war. And hence the rules of deſcent have been extended in ſo many countries, to take in the remoteſt kindred of the firſt occupant or purchaſer. The other, that, when every individual gave up natural rights, as the protection of ſociety was due to him, for ſubmitting his own revenge to public juſtice, ſo this power of tranſmitting property was conferred upon him as one recompence, for purſuing his private advantage in many reſpects, where nature interferes not, ſubordinately to the good of ſociety; and to make the advantages, ſo acquired, more permanent than in a natural ſtate, by extending the enjoyment to repreſentatives, as it were, beyond the bounds of nature. How juſt therefore is it, that he, who has not only ceaſed to purſue that good, but taken meaſures to deſtroy it, infringing the original contract, ſhould forfeit the protection, and loſe the recompence he gained by it! And if the courſe of deſcent, though in its effect, and perhaps ſecondary view, beneficial to the children, owe its inſtitution to reaſons, which ſolely regard ſociety, why may not reaſons of the ſame public and general utility account for the interruption of it?

In ſupport of the notion here advanced, and the uſe made of it, one may obſerve the difficulties which muſt attend any endeavor to explain the grounds of this great inſtitution, upon the other more obvious and common notion. Now it is a conſequence, that if the main cauſe of providing a courſe of deſcent for property was the benefit of the children, the firſt makers of laws concerning it muſt have had a particular attention to them, not merely as the deſcendants and neareſt relations of their father, but as left in the weak ſtate of infancy and orphanage. But then the manner of this proviſion is in no ſort proportioned to the cauſe of it; for in ſome reſpects, it does too much, and in others too little: too much, as the right of inheriting becomes the mere favour and gratuity of law, to children, who are not in that weak ſtate, at the time of the father's death, and therefore not comprehended within the reaſon and foundation of the right: too little, for if their benefit be the principal cauſe of this eſtabliſhment, then the equal partition of the father's property ſhould take place between all the children; and thoſe civil laws, which transfer the whole inheritance by deſcent to the eldeſt, ought to give proportionable ſhares of it to the reſt, in caſe the father has neglected it. But as a further evidence, that the complete and principal reaſons of this eſtabliſhment muſt not be drawn from this ſubordinate effect and ſecondary purpoſe of it, but from the foundations of ſociety, let it be conſidered, that of itſelf, and unattended by other proviſions in favor of infants, this right of inheriting is equally ineffectual to their ſervice in a ſtate of ſociety, has it has been (p. 16. 17.) ſhown to be in a ſtate of nature. And it is ſomewhat extraordinary in reaſoning, to aſſign that as the final cauſe or main end of any inſtitution, which the inſtitution itſelf is apparently not fitted to attain. It is alſo more unneceſſary, becauſe in a ſtate of nature, antecedent to civil policy, it is impoſſible to ſuppoſe any other means of providing for them, than either ſuch as may ariſe from the exerciſe of rights which nature has annexed to themſelves, or ſuch as may be contrived by the tender affection of the parent, or the diſintereſted care of the benevolent. In a ſtate of ſociety, the means are various; infants are not only of private, but of public concern. And ſurely the invention of thoſe great maſters of policy, the ancient lawgivers of moſt countries, failed them unaccountably in this inſtance, if the great cauſe of eſtabliſhing deſcents was the protection and benefit of infants; ſince the ſame end might have been anſwered far better in other ways, without conferring any rights of inheritance at all, or making any alteration in the natural and original condition of property. The ſupreme power of each ſtate might have taken all children out of the hands of their parents, maintained and educated them in a ſtate of equality under the public care; and then, without expoſing them to the danger of that enervate indolence, or vicious activity, too often owing to hereditary wealth, might have drawn them out, according to their age, capacity, and improvements, into the civil or military ſervice, more uſefully and more honourably for themſelves and their country. This plan is ſo obvious, as well as grateful to the imagination, that it has been touched upon by many writers, and is beautifully purſued in theory to its utmoſt extent, by the framers of imaginary commonwealths, Plato and Sir Thomas More. But the legiſlators of real ſtate ſaw the abſolute neceſſity of eſtabliſhing inheritances for the general order and welfare of ſociety; and at the ſame time knew the plan juſt mentioned (at leaſt as to the full execution of it) to be impracticable, without allowing that community of goods, of which viſionary legiſlators are fond; but which neither the paſſions of men, nor the circumſtances of ſociety could bear.

To theſe arguments it may be added, that the courſe of deſcent is alike obſtructed by one ſort of alienation as another; and if the benefit of the children was the only or chief ſource of legal deſcents, it will follow, that there ought to be no ſuch thing as a power of alienating, in any manner, veſted in the father; a conſequence, which, it will readily be allowed, ſhould be guarded againſt: both as it would deſtroy the mutual and neceſſary dependance of families, and introduce perpetuities ſo dangerous to that circulation of property, which animates all ſocial induſtry. Hence it is that a man's poſterity are not only indebted to the laws of that country which gave them birth, for a capacity of inheriting, but, by the ſame laws, are commonly left in the power of the father, as to their receiving actual benefit from that capacity. In England, a tenant in fee-ſimple may charge, waſte, or ſell his eſtate, and convey it away for ever from his heirs, he may deviſe it by will; and, unleſs in caſes of fraud, the law will not interpoſe to make it void. A tenant in tail is maſter of his eſtate, if he purſues the methods of conveyance proper to it. In theſe inſtances it may ſeem very hard, that any man ſhould diſpoſe of his fortune from his poſterity; and yet the law having put them out of the father's power, as to every grant, which they receive from the kindneſs of another, and the honeſt fruits of perſonal merit, it wiſely forbears to break in upon that law of nature, which allows a freedom of alienation; and expects no more from a father, than that he conduct the child thro' the weakneſs of infancy to a condition of ſupporting himſelf by his own labour and attention. Shall it then be in his breaſt to aliene in the forms of law, as intereſt or humour leads him? and ſhall not his attempts to diſſolve ſociety be equitably conſtrued, for reaſons of public uſefulneſs, a virtual intention of exerting his utmoſt power to alienate thoſe benefits, which might have been derived thro' his chanel from the favour of ſociety? Is it fit or reaſonable, that he only ſhould have advantage in the privilege ſo freely indulged to him; and that they, who indulge it, ſhould receive none from that equity, by which it is framed and ſupported?

Indeed the alienation by forfeiture is more extenſive than any other allowed in the law of England,, becauſe it is attended with the loſs of honours, which cannot otherwiſe be aliened; and the corruption of blood ſtops the courſe of regular deſcent, as to eſtates, over which the criminal could have no power, becauſe he never enjoyed them.

As to honours they have ſo far been thought alienable in former times, as that a man might reſtore them to that fountain, from which they flowed. But tho' they are not alienable, like moſt inheritances, ſince that would be to debaſe and proſtitute them, yet they ſeem peculiarly the proper object of forfeiture: for, being in a ſtricter ſenſe than other kinds of property, the gift and creation of ſociety, the terms, on which they are given, muſt be intirely ſubject to its power. And is it not natural and politic, that a diſtinction beſtowed only for the praiſe of them, who do well, ſhould be forfeitable on the commiſſion of crimes, for a terror to evil-doers?

As to the corruption of blood, it will be eaſily underſtood, when the meaning and reaſon of it are expreſſed in common language, free from legal terms of art. The propoſition to be explained is no more than this; that if a man is not capable of tranſmitting property acquired by himſelf, to an heir, it ſeems a neceſſary conſequence in reaſon, which is the ground of law, that he ſhall not be capable of receiving from an anceſtor, either to enjoy, or to tranſmit. And the propoſition may be made out by a very ſhort deduction. The methods of acquiring property can only be divided under the two general heads of purchaſe and deſcent: the one referring to him, who takes the property in the firſt inſtance by his own or another man's act; the other to him who takes the property by act and operation of law. 1. Whoever acquires property by purchaſe, muſt do it in one of theſe ways; by prior occupancy, by emption, or by gift. Theſe are the natural ways of acquiring property, and muſt ſubſiſt in a ſtate of nature, anterior to civil ſociety. Here the caſes are infinitely complicated and various, and the rules of evidence will vary, according to the nature and circumſtances of every caſe. And whoever claims, under this title of property, claims in his own perſonal right, without deriving from anceſtors. Therefore the ſon of an attainted perſon is equally favoured in whatever he takes by purchaſe; and in the remedy he purſues for this right; as any other ſubject of the ſtate. 2. Acquiſition by deſcent is not natural, but merely poſitive, (as has been ſhewn,) and founded on the policy of civil laws. Here the caſes cannot be complex, becauſe the rule of evidence is ſingle, and will not admit either of reſtraint, or extention in applying it. For whoever claims, under the title of deſcent as heir ought ſtrictly to deduce his pedigree thro' anceſtors from the firſt purchaſer or acquirer. And that is the reaſonable rule of evidence in deſcent. Yet becauſe ſuch evidence may often be difficult, a more favourable rule has been introduced in England, that it ſhould only be neceſſary for a claimant by deſcent to prove himſelf heir to the perſon laſt ſeiſed. This is taken to be ſufficient preſumptive evidence of relation to the firſt purchaſer; the law expects this ſhould be exactly proved, and does not require the evidence to be carried further. The conſequences following from hence, in point of reaſon, are undeniable. 1. That when he who was laſt ſeiſed of the inheritance, has committed treaſon, and the law has ſaid, that he ſhall no longer enjoy it himſelf, nor tranſmit it to an heir, of courſe no ſuch title can be made by any one who claims as heir within that rule of evidence. 2. If the claimant cannot make title where the offender was ſeiſed, becauſe the vinculum of deſcent is deſtroyed; neither can he make title where the offender was not ſeiſed, if that offender be an anceſtor, who forms the vinculum between the claimant and the anceſtor, who was ſeiſed. What then is the general reaſon of law upon this caſe? The offending anceſtor is by act of law diſabled from inheriting or tranſmitting property to heirs. Shall then the law, which is only to be moved by conſiderations that affect the whole, be moved, in this inſtance, by perſonal compaſſion to his family; and make an effort of itſelf, inconſiſtently with its own ſolemn act, to ſupply that connecting link in the chain of deſcent, which has been ſtruck out of it, for the traitor's infamy, and the public benefit?

After this it may be objected, that "the expectation of inheriting, in which the children are educated, confers a right on the principles of conſcience, which ſpeaks the dictates of the law of nature. It is ever thought a cruelty, that fathers ſhould alienate from their children by waſteful expence or gifts to ſtrangers. The Roman law for this reaſon provided querela teſtamenti in officioſi; and ſome local cuſtoms in England gave the writ de rationabili parte bonorum. Why then ſhould ſociety make theſe alienations the conſequence of an act, which has no immediate referrence to alienating;

“ eſpecially when it is the buſineſs of laws to prevent the ill conſequences naturally ariſing from mens actions, inſtead of adding to them by implication and conſtruction.” The objection ſeems founded on good reaſon, and yet muſt give way to better. If we conſider the kind of expectation here ſpoken of, it will be found to ariſe only from the ordinary courſe of families and legal deſcents, and not given in ſuch a manner and with ſuch circumſtances as to confer a right, on any principles of law or conſcience. Whether therefore we take the right of inheriting as conferred by civil ſociety, or for argument ſake by nature, the expectation ariſing from it is the ſame; ſince it muſt be conſidered in the firſt caſe as beſtowed originally on condition, in the ſecond, as qualified by civil inſtitution, like many other rights of nature. And if thoſe who form the expectation will regard that as abſolute, which depends on the performance of expreſs conditions, the inattention muſt be imputed to themſelves and not to the law of their country. To waſte a fortune which would have made an honourable ſupport for a man's family, is deſervedly eſteemed cruel and againſt conſcience. Why is it not prevented by the care of legiſlators? Becauſe no complete proviſion could be made againſt that evil, which would not be attended with more general inconvenience; and the compliance with the contrary duty is derived from the manners and the heart, grounded upon principles, and enforced by ſanctions of an higher order than belong to civil laws. If the greateſt good of every community be the object of laws contrived for it, as unqueſtionably it ought to be, every leſſer intereſt muſt yield; it being only the property of divine government to reconcile all private with public good in the final reſult of its diſpenſations. Hence it is, that though laws prevent conſequences injurious to particulars where they can conſiſtently with ſocial good, yet in matters which concern the exiſtence of the ſociety or government, conſequences injurious to particulars muſt not only be ſuffered to take place, but even ſought for and indulged, if they have a tendency to prevent conſequences injurious to government itſelf. On this reaſon ſtand thoſe ſevere laws which have been made in ſeveral ſtates againſt neutrality in times of common danger. It is agreeable to the policy and original compact of government to blend and involve the intereſt of every member with its own; on which account the fortunes of private men in all countries muſt depend upon public revolutions. Were it in any reſpect the aim of civil laws to make particulars independent of the ſocial good, as it would be a very ſingular ſtrain of policy, ſo it would proceed upon a principle more contrary to the law of nature than thoſe who are fond of that law would deſire to ſee charged upon their doctrine. Beſides, nothing is more natural, on the principles laid down in this eſſay, than the conſtruction which civil laws have put on treaſons againſt government, that when a man endeavours the diſſolution of it, he means to diſclaim all thoſe benefits and rights which it has either made him capable to enjoy, or the inſtrument to convey: Nothing is more neceſſary, than to try whether thoſe attachments which are connected with our paſſions and affections will prevail, when thoſe which are founded only in reaſon and convenience have no power. Sic legibus comparatum eſt (ſays Tully) ut filiorum caritas amiciores reddat parentes republicæ. Thus ſociety, by making the loſs of the rights it confers upon every man, a penalty for the greateſt crime, which can be committed againſt his country, intereſts every relation and dependant in keeping him firm in the general tranquility and welfare; at the ſame time, it gives him an occaſion of reflecting, that when he attempts it, he muſt break thro' every private as well as public tye; which enhances his crime, whilſt it is an aggravation of his puniſhment. Nay more, he may hope to eſcape from the juſtice of his country with his own life, if that alone were to be forfeited; but the diſtreſs of his family will purſue him in his ſecureſt thoughts, and abate the ardour of reſolution. Many inſtances occur in hiſtory and daily experience of men, not aſhamed to commit baſe and ſelfiſh enormities, who have retained a tenderneſs for their poſterity by the ſtrong and generous inſtinct of nature. The ſtory of Licinius Macer, who was father to Calvus the great orator, is very remarkable, as related by a Roman annaliſt. Having gone thro' the office of prætor, and governed a province, he was accuſed, upon returning home, of extortion and abuſes of his power. The very morning of his trial he ſtrangled himſelf, after having ſent word to Cicero, who was preparing to plead againſt him, that, being determined to put an end to his life before ſentence (tho' the penalty did not extend to taking it away) the proſecution could not go on, and his fortune would be ſaved to the benefit of his ſon.

Upon the whole then, where is the wrong? It is agreeable to juſtice to beſtow rights upon condition. It is the wiſdom of governments to lay hold on human partialities. Conſiderations on the law of forfeiture, &c. p. 11, &c.

Forfeitures may be either in civil or in criminal caſes. With reſpect to the firſt. A man that hath an eſtate for life or years, may forfeit it many ways, as well as by treaſon or felony, and ſuch means as are before mentioned: as by alienation; by claiming a greater eſtate than he hath, or affirming the reverſion to be in a ſtranger, &c. If tenant for life, in dower, by the curteſy, or after poſſibility of iſſue extinct, or leſſee for years, tenant by ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or elegit, of lands or tenements that lie in livery, ſhall make any abſolute or conditional feoffment in fee, gift in tail, leaſe for any other life than his own, &c. or levy a fine ſur conuſance de droit come ceo, &c. or ſuffer a common recovery thereof: or being impleaded in a writ of right brought againſt him, join the miſe upon the meer right, or admit the reverſion to be in another; or in a quid juris clamat, claim the fee-ſimple; or if leſſee for years being ouſted, bring an aſſiſe ut de libero tenemento, &c. By either of theſe things, there will be a forfeiture of eſtate. Plowd. 15. 1 Rep. 15. 8 Rep. 144. Co. Lit. 251. Dyer 152, 324. 1 Bulſt. 219.

But where the land granted by tenant for life, or years, is not well conveyed; or the thing doth not lie in livery, as a rent, common, or the like; he will not forfeit his eſtate: and therefore if a feoffment, gift in tail, or leaſe for another's life, made by the tenant for life, is not good, for want of words in making it, or due execution in the livery and ſeiſin, this ſhall not produce a forfeiture. 2 Rep. 55.

When tenant in tail makes leaſes, not warranted by the ſtatute; a copyholder commits waſte, refuſes to pay his rent, or do ſuit of court; and where an eſtate is granted upon condition, on non-performance thereof, &c. they will make a forfeiture. 1 Rep. 15.

Entry for a forfeiture ought to be by him, who is next in reverſion, or remainder after the eſtate forfeited. As, if tenant for life or years commits a forfeiture, he who has the immediate reverſion, or remainder, ought to enter; tho' he has the fee, or only an eſtate-tail. 1 Rol. 857. l. 45, 50, 858. l. 5.

It ſhall be a diſpenſation of the forfeiture, if he in reverſion, or remainder be a party to the eſtate made, and accept it: as, if a huſband, ſeiſed in right of his wife for life, leaſes to him in reverſion for his own life. 1 Rol. 856. l. 10.

A feoffment by a huſband, or by huſband and wife, of an eſtate for life, of which the huſband is ſeiſed in right of his wife, or jointly with his wife, binds only during coverture. 1 Rol. 851. l. 45, 50. Vide Com. Dig. title Baron and Feme, (K.—R.)

Alſo offices may be forfeited by neglect of duty, &c. See Fine.

As to forfeitures in criminal caſes, it is to be ſeen,

I. For what crimes ſuch forfeitures are inflicted, and blood corrupted.
II. To what time they bear relation.
III. When forfeitures may be ſeized.

I. For what crimes ſuch forfeitures are inflicted, and blood corrupted.

Forfeitures are in criminal matters, where a perſon is attainted of treaſon, felony, &c. And as all eſtates are ſaid to be derived from the crown; ſo all forfeitures and eſcheats of land belong to the King, unleſs granted away. Finch. 132, 164. Alſo where land comes to the crown, as forfeited by attainder of treaſon, all meſne tenures of common perſons are extinct; but if the King grant it out, the former tenure ſhall be revived, for which a petition of right lies. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 254. In treaſon, all lands of inheritance, whereof the offender was ſeiſed in his own right, were forfeited by the common law; and rights of entry, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 448. And the inheritance of things not lying in tenure, as of rent-charges, commons, &c. ſhall be forfeited in high treaſon: but no right of action whatſoever to lands of inheritance is forfeited, either by the common or ſtatute law. Ibid. 449.

All lands, tenements, &c. are forfeited in treaſon by ſtat. 26 H. 8. c. 13. And the King ſhall be adjudged in poſſeſſion of lands and goods forfeited for treaſon on the attainder of the offender, without any office found, ſaving the right of others. 33 H. 8. c. 20. Lands and hereditaments in fee-ſimple and fee-tail, are forfeited in high treaſon: but lands in tail could not be forfeited only for the life of tenant in tail, till the ſtatute 26 H. 8. c. 13. by which ſtatute, they may be forfeited. Where tenant for life, &c. is attainted, the King ſhall have the profits of the lands during the life of ſuch tenant only. 2 Inſt. 37.

There ſhall be no forfeiture of lands for treaſon of dead perſons, not attainted in their lives. Stat. 34 Ed. 3. c. 12. 3 Inſt. 12. Though the chief juſtice of B. R. as ſovereign coroner may view the body of a perſon killed in rebellion, and make a record thereof, whereby he ſhall forfeit lands and goods. Wood's Inſt. 654. And a man may be attainted by act of parliament.

After the deceaſe of the Pretender, no attainder for treaſon in Scotland ſhall make any forfeiture, to diſinherit the heir, &c. Stat. 7 Ann. c. 21.

Upon outlawry in treaſon or felony, the offender ſhall forfeit as much as if he had appeared, and judgment had been given againſt him ſo long as the outlawry is in force. 3 Inſt. 52, 212.

For petit treaſon, murder, burglary, robbery, and all felonies for which the offenders ſhall ſuffer death, they ſhall forfeit all their lands in fee-ſimple, goods and chattels. Co. Lit. 391. 1 Lill. Abr. 628.

But Gavelkind land in Kent is not forfeited by committing of felony; and by a felony only, intailed lands are not forfeit. S. P. C. 3. 26.

Land that one hath in truſt; or goods and chattels in right of another, or to another's uſe, &c. will not be liable to forfeiture. Tho' leaſes for years, in a man's own, or his wife's right: eſtates in jointenancy, &c. and all ſtatutes, bonds, and debts due thereby, and upon contracts, &c. ſhall be forfeited. Co. Lit. 42, 151. Staund. 188.

A married man guilty of felony, forfeits his wife's term; and if a wife kill her huſband, the huſband's goods are forfeited. Jenk. Cent. 65. In manſlaughter, the offender forfeits goods and chattels: and in chance-medley and ſe defendendo, goods and chattels; but the offenders may have their pardon of courſe. Co. Lit. 319.

Thoſe that are hanged by Martial Law in time of war, forfeit no lands. Co. Lit. 13. And for robbery or piracy, &c. on the ſea, if tried in the Court of Admiralty by the Civil Law, and not by jury, there is no forfeiture: but if a perſon be attainted before commiſſioners by virtue of the ſtat. 28 Hen. 8. c. 18. there works a forfeiture. 1 Lil. Abr.

The King ſhall have goods of felons, and year, day and waſte in their lands, &c. which afterwards go to the Lord of the manor of whom held. Magna Charta, c. 22. and 17 Ed. 2. c. 14. And the profits of lands whereof a perſon attainted of felony is ſeiſed of an eſtate of inheritance in right of his wife; or of an eſtate for life only in his own right, are forfeited to the King, and nothing is forfeited to the Lord. 3 Inſt. 19. Fitz. Aſſ. 166. By the conviction of a felon, his goods and chattels are forfeited; but by attainder, his lands and tenements. Co. Lit. 291.

Goods of perſons that fly for a felony, are forfeited to the Lord of the franchiſe, when the flight is found of record. 2 Inſt. 281. A felo de ſe forfeits all his goods and chattels. 3 Inſt. 55. For miſpriſion of treaſon the forfeiture is goods and chattels, and profits of lands during life. 3 Inſt. 392. In a præmunire, lands in fee-ſimple are forfeited, with goods and chattels. Co. Lit. 129. For petit larceny the offender forfeits his goods. Co. Lit. 391. And for ſtanding mute where perſons are adjudged to penance, in caſes of felony, there is a forfeiture of goods and chattels; and ſo for challenging above 35 jurors, &c. 3 Inſt. 227.

It is clearly agreed, that by an attainder of treaſon or felony, the blood of the offender is ſo far ſtained and corrupted, that the party loſes all the nobility, or gentility he might have had before, and becomes ignoble. Co. Lit. 8, 41. 3 Inſt. 211. Staundf. P. C. 195.

Alſo it is clearly agreed, that he can neither inherit as heir to any anceſtor, nor have an heir. Co. Lit. 8. a 391. b. 392. Staundf. P. C. 165. Bro. Nobility 21. Cro. 66.

If a man be attainted, and after pardoned by charter, the children born before ſuch pardon ſhall not inherit; but if they fail, the children born after ſuch pardon may inherit him; for the pardon makes him capable of new relations as well as of new purchaſes, tho' all the old legal benefits and relations are loſt. Noy 170. Co. Lit. 8. a. 3 Inſt. 233.

Before the ſtatute of 1 E. 6. cap. 12. the wife not only loſt her dower at Common law, but alſo her dower ad oſtium eccleſiæ, or ex aſſenſu patris, or by ſpecial cuſtom (except that of gavelkind,) by the huſband's attainder of treaſon, or capital felony, whether committed before or after marriage. Co. Lit. 31. b. 37. a. 41. a. F. N. B. 150. Perk. ſect. 308. Bro. tit. Dower 82. Plow. 261.

But the wife forfeited lands given jointly to her huſband and her, whether by way of frank-marriage or otherwiſe, but only for the year, day, and waſte. Co. Lit. 37. 3 Inſt. 216.

It is enacted by 1 E. 6. cap. 12. par. 17. That albeit any perſon ſhall be attainted of any treaſon or felony whatſoever; yet notwithſtanding every woman, that ſhall fortune to be the wife of the perſon ſo attainted, ſhall be endowable and enabled to demand, have, and enjoy her dower, in like manner and form as tho' her huſband had not been attainted, &c. But this is repealed as to treaſon by 5 & 6. E. 6. cap. 11. par. 9.

If the huſband ſeiſed of lands in fee, makes a feoffment, and then commits treaſon, and is attainted of it, the wife ſhall not recover dower againſt the feoffee. Bendl. 56. Dyer 140. Co. Lit. 111. a. So if the huſband is attainted of treaſon, and afterwards pardoned, yet the wife ſhall not recover dower; but of lands purchaſed by the huſband after the pardon, the wife ſhall be endowed. 3 Leon. 3. Perk. ſect. 391.

If a huſband having levied a fine with proclamation, is erroneouſly attainted of treaſon, and the five years paſs after his death, and then the outlawry is reverſed, the fine and nonclaim are no bar till five years are paſſed after the reverſal, becauſe the wife could not ſue for her dower while the attainder ſtood in force, neither could ſhe any way reverſe it. 3 Inſt. 216. Moor 639. pl. 879.

After the making of the ſtatute 1 E. 6. cap. 12. it ſeems to have been doubted, whether the wife ſhould not loſe her dower in caſe of any new felony made by act of parliament;

liament; therefore where ſeveral offences have been made felony ſince, care has been taken to provide for the wife's dower. 2 New Abr. 584. See 12 Vin. Abr. tit. Forfeiture. And ſee Attainder, and 2 Hawk. tit. Treaſon.

Beſides theſe forfeitures for crimes attended with corruption of blood, &c. there are forfeitures in leſſer offences. Drawing a weapon upon a judge, or ſtriking another in the King's Courts, incurs forfeiture of the profits of lands for life, and of goods: and it is the ſame forfeiture for reſcuing a priſoner in, or before any of thoſe courts committed by the juſtices. Cro. Jac. 367. 3 Inſt. 141. If a woman after a rape, conſent to the raviſher, ſhe ſhall loſe her dower after the death of her huſband, &c. Stat. 6. R. 2. c. 6. And if any maiden or woman child above twelve, and under ſixteen years of age, ſhall agree to be taken away and deflowered, or contract with any man for marriage againſt the will and without the conſent of her father; or, if he be dead, her mother or guardian appointed by her father's will, ſhe ſhall forfeit her land of inheritance for her life. 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 8.

Artificers going out of the kingdom and teaching their trades to foreigners, are liable to forfeit their lands, &c. by Stat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 27. Forfeitures likewiſe are incurred by ſeveral penal ſtatutes.

II. As to the time to which forfeitures ſhall relate.

The forfeiture in caſe of felony ſhall relate to the time mentioned in the indictment when the felony was committed, as to the avoiding of eſtates and charges after; but for the meſne profits of the land, it ſhall relate only to the judgment. Co. Lit. 390. But it is otherwiſe, if he be attainted upon an appeal, by verdict or confeſſion. Vide infra. So, if he be attainted by outlawry upon an indictment. Co. Lit. 390. b. 13. a. R. 30 H. 6. 5. a. So, if a man be convict in a Præmunire. Dub. Cro. Car. 173. Jon. 217. So, if a man be a fugitive beyond ſea, it relates to the time of his flight. R. Cro. Jac. 82. So, if a man be felo de ſe, the forfeiture relates to the fact. 1 Lev. 8. And is veſted in the King before inquiſition found. R. 1 Lev. 8. R. Cro. Jac. 82. But the forfeiture of goods and chattels relates to the time of the conviction. S. P. C. 192. a. Co. Lit. 391. So, upon preſentment of the coroner, of a fugam fecit, the forfeiture relates to the day of the preſentment. S. P. C. 192. a. So, if it be found by verdict that he fled, to the time of the verdict. S. P. C. 192. a. To the time of the indictment, or acquittal. 5 Co. 109. b. So the forfeiture, as to the meſne profits of lands, relates only to the conviction. Co. Lit. 390. b. So the forfeiture by outlawry upon an appeal; for the time of the offence is not mentioned in the count. Co. Lit. 390. b. 13. a.

III. When forfeitures may be ſeiſed.

Goods or lands of one arreſted for felony, ſhall not be ſeized before he is convict or attaint of the felony; on pain of forfeiting double value. 1 R. 3. c. 3. Goods of a felon, &c. cannot be ſeiſed before forfeited; though they may be inventoried, and a charge made thereof before indictment. Wood's Inſt. 659. In treaſon or felony, the delinquent may ſell his goods, be they chattels real, or perſonal, bona fide, before conviction, for his maintenance in priſon; for the King hath no intereſt in the forfeiture till conviction. And where goods of a felon are pawned before he is attainted, the King ſhall not have the forfeiture of the goods till the money is paid to him to whom they were pawned. 3 Inſt. 17. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 874, 875.

After conviction by judgment, or outlawry, for high treaſon, &c. a commiſſion goes to perſons named by the King, or the Attorney General, to inquire, what lands and tenements the offender had at the time of the treaſon committed, and the value; and that they ſeiſe them into the King's hands. And the inquiſition taken thereon ſhall be returned to the Court of Exchequer, and filed in the office of the King's remembrancer. Lut. 997. So after conviction for felony, a ſcire facias ſhall go againſt the vill, or any other, who has the goods in his cuſtody. S. P. C. 194. But if any one has title to the goods or lands found by inquiſition to be the goods or lands of the offender, he may make his claim, by pleading his title. Lut. 998. To which the Attorney general ſhall demur, or reply. Vide Com. Dig. tit. Prærogative, (D. 83, 84.)

A copyholder ſurrenders to the uſe of his will, the deviſee is convicted of felony and hanged before admittance, the lands are not forfeited to the Lord but deſcend to the heir of the ſurrenderor. Wilſon par. 2. fo. 13.

Forfeiture differs from confiſcation, in that forfeiture is more general; whereas confiſcation is particularly applied to ſuch as are forfeit to the King's Exchequer, and confiſcate goods aae ſaid to be ſuch as no body doth claim. Staundf. P. C. 186.

There is a full forfeiture, plena forisfactura, otherwiſe called plena wita, which is a forfeiture of life and member, and all that man hath. Leg. H. 1. c 88. And there is mention in ſome ſtatutes, of forfeiture at the King's will, of body, lands, and goods, &c. 4 Inſt. 66. The King's will now means, according to ancient law, uſage and cuſtom.

Forfeited Eſtates. There are ſeveral ſtatutes appointing commiſſioners of forfeited eſtates, on rebellions in this kingdom and Ireland: by 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 3. all lands and tenements, &c. of perſons attainted or convicted of treaſon or rebellion in Ireland, were veſted in ſeveral commiſſioners and truſtees for ſale thereof. The 1 Geo. 1. c. 50. appointed commiſſioners to inquire of forfeited eſtates in England and Scotland, on the rebellion at Preſton, &c. And the eſtates of perſons attainted of treaſon were veſted in his Majeſty for public uſes; but afterwards in truſtees, to be ſold for the uſe of the public; and purchaſers to be Proteſtants. See 1 Geo. 1. c. 50. 4 Geo. 1. c. 8. 5, 7 & 8 Geo. 1. 5 Geo. 2. c. 23.

Forgabel, (Forgabulum) A ſmall reſerved rent in money, or quit-rent:——Ita quod ego Henricus M. vel Hæredes mei nihil juris de tenemento, &c. exceptis vi. denar. de Forgabulo annuatim percipiendis ad Paſcha pro omnibus ſervitiis. Ex Cartular. Abbat. de Rading. MS. f. 88.

Forge, (Forgia) A ſmith's Forge, to melt and work iron.——Henricus Rex conceſſiſſe, &c. et unam Forgiam Ferrariam ita liberam. Chart. Hen. 2.

Forgery, (From the Fr. Forger, i. e. accudere, fabricare, to beat on an anvil, forge or form) Its ſignification in law is, where a perſon fraudulently makes and publiſhes falſe writings, to the prejudice of another man's right; or it ſignifies the writ that lies againſt him who commits ſuch an offence, the penalty whereof is declared in the Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 14.

And forgery is either at Common law, or by ſtatute, puniſhable by indictment, information, &c. But there can be no forgery where none can be prejudiced by it but the perſon doing it. 1 Salk. 375.

Forgery by the Common law extends to falſe and fraudulent making or altering of a deed or writing, whether it be matter of record, or any other writing, deed, or will. 3 Inſt. 169. 1 Rol. Abr. 65. Not only where one makes a falſe deed; but where a fraudulent alteration is made of a true deed, in a material part of it, as by making a leaſe of the manor of Dale, and it appears to be a leaſe of the manor of Sale, by changing the letter D. into an S. or by altering a bond, &c. for 500*l.* expreſſed in figures, to 5000 l. by adding a new cypher, theſe are forgery: ſo it is, if a man finding another's name at the bottom of a letter, at a conſiderable diſtance from the other writing, cauſes the letter to be cut off, and a general releaſe to be written above the name, &c.

Alſo a writing may be ſaid to be forged, where one being directed to draw up a will for a ſick perſon, doth inſert ſome legacies therein falſly of his own head; though there be no forgery of the hand or ſeal; for the crime of forgery conſiſts as well in endeavouring to give an appearance of truth to a meer falſity, as in counterfeiting a man's hand, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 182, 183. 3 Inſt. 170. But a perſon cannot regularly be guilty of forgery, by an act of omiſſion; as by omitting a legacy out of a will, which he is directed to draw for another: though it has been held, that if the omiſſion of a bequeſt to one cauſe a material alteration in the limitation of an eſtate to another; as if the deviſor directs a gift for life to one man, and the remainder to another in fee, and the writer omit the eſtate for life, ſo that he in remainder hath a preſent eſtate upon the death of the deviſor, not intended to paſs, this is forgery. Noy 118. Moor 760. Suppoſing it wilfully done, and not by a mere miſtake.

If one write a will without any direction, and bring it to the teſtator, who is not of perfect memory, and he ſigns it, this doth not amount to forgery. Ibid. If a feoffment be made of land, and livery and ſeiſin is not indorſed when the deed is delivered, and afterwards on ſelling the land for a valuable conſideration to another, livery is indorſed upon the firſt deed; this hath been adjudged forgery both in the feoffer and feoffee; becauſe it was done to deceive an honeſt purchaſer. Moor 665. And when a perſon knowingly falſifies the date of a ſecond conveyance, which he had no power to make, in order to deceive a purchaſer, &c. he is ſaid to be guilty of forgery. 3 Inſt. 169. 1 Hawk. 182.

It ſeems to be no way material, whether a forged inſtrument be made in ſuch manner, that if it were in truth ſuch as it is counterfeited for, it would be of validity or not. 1 Sid. 142. The counterfeiting writings of an inferior nature, as letters and ſuch like, is not properly forgery; but the deceit is puniſhable. 1 Hawk. 184.

By ſtat. 1 H. 5. c. 3. a forger or publiſher of falſe deeds, was to pay damages, fine and ranſom. And by 5 Eliz. c. 14. If any perſon alone, or with others, ſhall falſly forge or make, or cauſe to be forged and made, or aſſent to the forging of any deed or writing ſealed, court-roll or will in writing, to the intent that the freehold or inheritance of lands may be defeated or charged; or ſhall pronounce, publiſh, or ſhew forth in evidence any ſuch forged writing, as true, knowing of the forgery; and ſhall be convicted thereof upon an action founded on this ſtatute, or otherwiſe by bill, &c. in the King's Bench or Exchequer, he ſhall pay double coſts and damages to the party grieved, and be ſet on the pillory, and have both his ears cut off, and his noſtrils ſlit, and ſhall forfeit to the King the iſſues and profits of his lands and tenements during life, ſuffer perpetual impriſonment, &c. And if any one ſhall forge or falſly make any deed or writing, containing a leaſe for years of lands (not copyhold) or an annuity in fee, for life or years, or any obligation, acquittance, releaſe, or other diſcharge of any debt or perſonal demand, or publiſh or give in evidence the ſame knowingly; he ſhall pay to the party injured double coſts and damages, and ſhall be likewiſe ſet on the pillory, and loſe one of his ears, and be impriſoned for a year. And if any perſon ſhall be guilty of a ſecond offence, it ſhall be adjudged felony, without benefit of clergy.

Where there is a penalty in an obligation, &c. the party grieved by a forged releaſe thereof, ſhall recover double the penalty as damages, and not of the debt appearing in the condition. 3 Inſt. 172. As to publiſhing a deed, knowing the ſame to be forged, it has been reſolved, that if a perſon is informed by another that a deed is forged, if he afterwards publiſhes it as true, he is within the danger of the ſtatute. Ibid. 171. The King may pardon the corporal puniſhment of forgery which tends to common example; but the plaintiff cannot releaſe it: if the plaintiff releaſe or diſcharge the judgment or execution, &c. it ſhall only diſcharge the coſts and damages; and the judges ſhall proceed to judgment upon the reſidue of the pains, and award execution upon the ſame. 5 Rep. 50. 5 Eliz. c. 12.

A perſon convicted of forgery, and adjudged to the pillory, &c. whereby he becomes infamous, is not allowed to be a witneſs; but it is a good exception to his evidence. Hawk. P. C. 432. And one convicted of this crime, may be challenged on a jury, ſo as to be incapable to ſerve as a juror; and it hath been holden, that exceptions to perſons ſound guilty of perjury or forgery, as well as felony, &c. are not ſalved by a pardon. 2 Hawk. 417. The court of B. R. will not ordinarily, at the prayer of the dependant, grant a certiorari for a removal of an indictment of forgery, &c. 1 Sid. 54.

By a late act, forging or counterſeiting any deed, will, bond, bill of exchange, note or acquittance for money, or any indorſement or aſſignment of a bill, &c. with intent to defraud any perſon, or publiſhing ſuch falſe deed, &c. to be true, knowingly, the offenders ſhall be guilty of felony, and ſuffer death as felons; but not to work corruption of blood, &c. Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 25. Vide 7 Geo. 2. c. 22.

As to forging of Exchequer and Bank Bills, Lottery Tickets, Letters of Attorney to transfer ſtock, &c. But for the ſeveral ſpecies of this offence, See title Forgery under title Felonies in the table to the quarto edition of the Statutes, or the octavo Index. Forinſecus, Outward, or on the outſide. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Forinſecum Manerium, The manor as to that part of it which lies without the town, and not included within the liberties of it.——Summa reddituum aſſiſorum de Manerio Forinſeco Banbury, &c. Paroch. Antiq. 351.

Forinſecum Servitium, The payment of extraordinary aid, oppoſed to intrinſecum ſervitium, which was the common and ordinary duties, within the Lord's court. Kennet's Gloſſ. See Foreign Service.

Foriſbannitus, Signifies baniſhed: Expulſus à Scotia Foriſbannitus ab Anglia, &c. Mat. Pariſ. Ann. 1245.

Foriſfamiliari, When a ſon accepts of his father's part of lands, in the life-time of the father, and is contented with it; he is ſaid to be foriſfamiliari, and cannot claim any more. Blount.

Forland, (Forlandum) Lands extending further or lying before the reſt; alſo a promontory. Mon. Angl. Tom. 2. fol. 332.

Forler-land, Was land in the biſhoprick of Hereford granted or leaſed dum epiſcopus in epiſcopatu ſteterit, ſo as the ſucceſſor might have the ſame for his preſent revenue: this cuſtom has been long ſince diſuſed, and the land thus formerly granted is now let by leaſe as other lands, tho' it ſtill retains the name by which it was anciently known. Butterfield's Surv. 56.

Form, Is required in law proceedings, otherwiſe the law would be no art; but it ought not to be uſed to enſnare or intrap. Hob. 232. Matters of form in pleas that go to the action, may be helped on a general demurrer; as when a plea is only in abatement. 2 Ld. Raym. 1015. The formal part of the law or method of proceeding, cannot be altered but by parliament: for, if once thoſe outlets were demoliſhed, there would be an inlet to all manner of innovation in the body of the law itſelf. Black. Com. 1 V. 142.

Forma Pauperis, Is where any perſon has juſt cauſe of ſuit, and is ſo poor, that he cannot bear the uſual charges of ſuing at law, or in equity: in this caſe, upon his making oath that he is not worth 5 l. except the matter in queſtion, his debts being paid, and bringing a certificate from ſome barriſter, that he hath cauſe of ſuit, the judge admits him to ſue in forma pauperis, i. e. without paying any fees to counſellor, attorney or clerk: this had beginning from the ſtat. 11 H. 7. c. 12. by which it is enacted, that poor perſons having cauſe of action or ſuits, ſhall have original writs, counſel and attornies, aſſigned them gratis.

On proceeding in Chancery, affidavit is firſt made that the plaintiff is not worth 5 l. in lands, tenements, goods or chattels, his wearing apparel, and the matters of the ſuit excepted; and then a petition is drawn up and preſented to the Lord Chancellor or Maſter of the Rolls, praying to be admitted in forma pauperis, and to have counſel, &c. aſſigned him, who are neither to take fees, nor make any contract or agreement for recompence, on pain of puniſhment; and no counſellor or attorney aſſigned ſhall refuſe to proceed, without ſhewing good cauſe to the Lord Chancellor, &c. Pract. Sol. 24. If it be made appear, that any pauper has ſold or contracted for the benefit of his ſuit, while depending in court, ſuch cauſe ſhall be thenceforth wholly diſmiſſed. Paupers are not to be admitted to remove cauſes out of inferior courts. 1 Mod. 268. If a cauſe goes againſt a pauper, or a plaintiff in forma pauperis be nonſuit; he ſhall not pay coſts to the defendant, but ſhall ſuffer ſuch puniſhment in his perſon as the court ſhall award. 23 H. 8. c. 15. 1 Lil. Abr. 634. 2 Sid. 261. Paupers uſing delays, to vex their adverſaries; or being proved to be vexatious perſons, and having many frivolous ſuits depending, will be diſpaupered by the court; for the law doth not aſſiſt them to do injury to others. 1 Lil. 633. See Black. Com. 3 V. 400.

Formedon, (Breve de forma donationis) Is a writ that lieth for him who hath right to lands or tenements by virtue of any intail, growing from the ſtat. of Weſtm. 2. c. 2. It is a writ of right for recovery of land; and is of three kinds, viz. in deſcender, remainder and reverter.

Formedon in deſcender lieth where tenant in tail enfeoffs a ſtranger, or is diſſeiſed and dieth, the heir ſhall have this writ to recover the land.

Formedon in remainder lies where one gives land in tail, and for default of iſſue the remainder to another in tail, &c. If the tenant in tail die without iſſue, and a ſtranger abates and enters into the land, he in remainder ſhall have this writ.

Formedon in the reverter lieth where land is intailed to certain perſons and their iſſue, with remainder over for want of iſſue, and on the remainders failing to revert to the donor and his heirs; now if tenant in tail dies without leaving any iſſue, and likewiſe he in remainder, then the donor or his heirs to whom the reverſion comes, ſhall have this writ for recovery of the eſtate, in caſe it be aliened, &c. Reg. Orig. 238, 242. F. N. B. 111.

Formedon in deſcender is the higheſt writ a tenant in tail can have: and where tenant in tail aliens, or is diſſeiſed of his eſtate, or if a recovery is had againſt him by default, and he die, his heir ſhall have a formedon, it being the only remedy the heir may have for the poſſeſſion of his anceſtor; but if he be ouſted of his own poſſeſſion, as if he be ſeiſed, and put out, he ſhall have his writ of aſſiſe.

There is a writ of formedon in deſcender, where partition of lands held in tail, being made among parceners, &c. and one alieneth her part, her heir ſhall have this writ; and by the death of one ſiſter without iſſue, the partition is made void, and the other ſhall have the whole land as heir in tail. New Nat. Br. 476, 477.

Alſo there is a writ of formedon inſimul tenuit, that lies for a coparcener againſt a ſtranger upon the poſſeſſion of the anceſtor; which may be brought without naming the other coparcener who hath her part in poſſeſſion. Ibid. 481. This writ may be likewiſe had by one heir in Gavelkind, &c. of lands intailed; and where the lands are held without partition.

A demandant in a writ of formedon, ought to make his deſcent by all who held the eſtate: otherwiſe the writ will abate; and the demandant ſhould always be made couſin and heir, or ſon and heir to him who was laſt ſeiſed of the tail; but the ſureſt way is to make every man named in the writ ſon and heir in the writ; and it is not material whether they were ſeiſed or not, although they are named heir.

In a formedon in deſcender, the demandant is to ſet forth his pedigree in the declaration: in formedon in remainder, that the tenant in tail is dead without iſſue: but in a formedon in reverter the donor, &c. need not ſhew the pedigree of the iſſue, nor who was laſt ſeiſed, becauſe he is ſuppoſed to be a ſtranger to them. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 880. Where a fee-ſimple is demanded in a formedon in reverter, the taking of the profits ought to be alledged in the donor, and donee: if an eſtate tail is demanded, it muſt be alledged in the donee only. 1 Lutw. 96.

There are ſeveral pleas both in bar and in abatement, which the tenant may plead to this action; ſuch as non-tenure, which is a plea in abatement, and by which the tenant ſhews, that he is not tenant of the freehold, or of ſome part thereof, at the time of the writ brought, or at any time ſince; which is called the pleading non-tenure generally. Booth 28.

Special non-tenure is where the tenant ſhews what intereſt and eſtate he hath in the land demanded, as that he is tenant for years, in ward, by ſtatute-merchant, elegit, or the like; and therefore the plea of ſpecial non-tenure muſt always ſhew who is tenant. Booth 29. See 1 Brownl. 153.

At Common law, non-tenure of parcel of an intire thing, as a manor, &c. abated the whole writ; but now by the 25 E. 3. cap. 16. it is enacted, "That by the exception of non-tenure of parcel, no writ ſhall be abated, but only for that parcel whereof the non-tenure was alledged." Booth 29. 1 Mod. 181.

If the tenant pleads non-tenure of the whole, he need not ſhew who is tenant: but in a plea of non-tenure of parcel, he muſt ſhew who is tenant, and this even before the ſtatute; for the Common law would not ſuffer a writ, good in part, to be wholly deſtroyed, except the tenant ſhewed the demandant how he might have a better. 1 Mod. 181. The tenant cannot, after a general imparlance, plead non-tenure of part, though he may plead non-tenure of the whole. 3 Lev. 55.

The writ of formedon is now rarely brought and the trying titles by ejectione firmæ ſupplies it's place, in an eaſier manner. See Booth of real actions. And Black. Com. 3 V. 191.

By Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. Formedons muſt be brought within twenty years after the cauſe of action accrued.

Formella, A certain weight of about ſeventy pounds, mentioned in the Statute of weights and meaſures. 51 H. 3.

Fornagium, Furnagium, (Fr. Fournage) Signifies the fee taken by a lord of his tenant, bound to bake in the lord's common oven, or for a permiſſion to uſe their own; this was uſual in the northern parts of England. Plac. Parl. 18 Ed. 1.

Fornication, (Fornicatio, from the Fornices in Rome, where lewd women proſtituted themſelves for money) Is whoredom, or the act of incontinency in ſingle perſons; for if either party is married, it is adultery. The Stat. 1 H. 7. c 4. mentions this crime; which by an act made anno 1650. during the times of uſurpation, was puniſhed with three months impriſonment for the firſt offence; and the ſecond offence it is ſaid was made felony. Scobel's Collect. The ſpiritual court hath cogniſance of this offence: And formerly courts-leet had power to inquire of and puniſh fornication and adultery; in which courts the King had a fine aſſeſſed on the offenders, as appears by the book of Domeſday. 2 Inſt. 488. See Black. Com. 4 V. 64.

Forpriſe, (Forpriſum) An exception or reſervation, in which ſenſe it is uſed in the Stat. 14 Ed. 1. This word is frequently inſerted in leaſes and conveyances, wherein excepted and forpriſed is an uſual expreſſion. In another ſignification it is taken for any exaction; according to Thorn. anno 1285.

Forſes, (Catatudæ) Water-falls, ſo called in Weſtmoreland. Camb. Britan.

Forſpeaker, An attorney or advocate in a cauſe. Blount.

Fortia, Power, dominion or juriſdiction: And we read of infortiare Placitum, by judges aſſembled. Leg. H. 1. c. 29.

Fortiori, à fortiori or multo fortiori, Is an argument often uſed by Littleton, to this purpoſe: If it be ſo in a feoffment paſſing a new right, much more is it for the reſtitution of an ancient right, &c. Co. Lit. 253, 260.

Fortilice and Fortility, (Fortelleſcum) Signifies a fortified place, bulwark or caſtle; as it is ſaid within the towns and fortilities of Berwick and Carliſle, anno 11 H. 7. c. 18.

Fortlet, (Fr.) A place or fort of ſome ſtrength; or rather a little fort. Old Nat. Br. 45.

Forts and Caſtles, The Stat. 13 Car. 2. c. 6. extends to forts and other places of ſtrength within the realm; the ſole prerogative as well of erecting, as manning, and governing of which belongs to the King, in his capacity of general of the kingdom. 2 Inſt. 30. Black. Com. 1 V. 263.

Fortuna, Is that which is called in our law treaſure trove, i. e. Theſaurum ducente fortuna invenire—Inquirendum eſt per 12 Jurator, pro Rege, &c. quod fideliter præſentabunt omnes fortunas, abjurationes, &c.

Fortune-tellers. Perſons pretending to tell fortunes, &c. are to be puniſhed with a year's impriſonment, and ſtanding four times in the pillory. Stat. 9. Geo. 2. c. 5.

Fortunium, A tournament or fighting with ſpears; or an appeal to fortune therein. Mat. Pariſ. Anno 1241.

Forty-days-Court. The court of attachment or woodmote, held before the verderors of the foreſt once in every forty days, to inquire concerning all offenders againſt vert and veniſon. Black. Com. 3 V. 71. See Foreſt.

Foſſa, A ditch full of water; wherein women committing felony were drowned: It has been likewiſe uſed for a grave, in ancient writings. See Furca.

Foſſatum, (Lat.) Is a ditch, or place fenced round with a ditch or trench; alſo it is taken for the obligations of citizens to repair the city ditches. Foſſatura ſignifies the ſame with foſſatum: And the work or ſervice done by tenants, &c. for repairing and maintenance of ditches is called foſſatorum operatio; and the contribution for it foſſagium. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Foſſeway, (From foſſus, digged) Was anciently one of the four principal highways in England, leading through the kingdom, which had its name from its being ſuppoſed to be dug and made paſſable by the Romans, and having a ditch upon one ſide. Cowel

Foſterlean, (Sax.) Nuptial gift, which we call a jointure or ſtipend for the maintenance of the wife.—Poſtea ſciendum eſt cui foſterlean pertineat, vadiet hoc brigdunia & Plegient amici ſui.

Fother or Fodder, (From the Teuton. Fuder) Is a weight of lead containing eight pigs, and every pig one and twenty ſtone and a half; ſo that it is about a tun or common cart load: Among the plumbers in London it is nineteen hundred and a half; and at the mines it is two and twenty hundred weight and a half. Skene.

Fovea, A place for burial of the dead. Statut. Eccl. Paulin. London. MS. 29.

Foundation, The founding and building of a college or hoſpital is called foundatio, quaſi foundatio, or fundamenti locatio. Co. lib. 10. The King only can found a college; but there may be a college in reputation, founded by others. Dyer 267. If it cannot appear by inquiſition, who it was that founded a church or college, it ſhall be intended it was the King; who has power to found a new church, &c. Moor 282. The King may found and erect an hoſpital, and give a name to the houſe, upon the inheritance of another, or licence another perſon to do it upon his own lands; and the words, fundo, creo, &c. are not neceſſary in every foundation, either of a college or hoſpital made by the King; but it is ſufficient if there be words equivalent: The incorporation of a college or hoſpital is the very foundation; but he who endows it with land is the founder; and to the erection of an hoſpital nothing more is requiſite but the incorporation and foundation. 10 Rep. Caſe of Sutton's Hoſp.

Perſons ſeiſed of eſtates in fee-ſimple, may erect and found hoſpitals for the poor, by deed inrolled in Chancery, &c. which ſhall be incorporated, and ſubject to ſuch viſitors as the founder ſhall appoint, &c. Stat. 39 Eliz. c. 5. Where a corporation is named, it is ſaid the name of the founder is parcel of the corporation. 2 Nelſ. 886. Though the foundation of a thing may alter the law, as to that particular thing; yet it ſhall not work a general prejudice. 1 Lil. Abr. 634. By 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 37. The crown may grant licence to alien in mortmain. By 9 Geo. 2. c. 36. Gifts in mortmain by will, &c. are reſtrained, but there are exceptions with reſpect to univerſities and royal Colleges. See College. 1 Black. Com. 1 V. 480.

Founder of Metal, (From the Fr. Foundre, to melt or pour) Is he that melts metal, and makes any thing of it by pouring or caſting it into a mould. 17 R. 2. c. 1. Whence is bell-founder, a fount of letter, &c.

Fourcher, (Fr. Fourchir) Signifies a putting off, or delaying of an action; and has been compared to ſtammering, by which the ſpeech is drawn out to a more than ordinary length of time, as by fourching a ſuit is prolonged, which might be brought to a determination in a ſhorter ſpace: The device is commonly uſed when an action or ſuit is brought againſt two perſons, who being jointly concerned, are not to anſwer till both parties appear; and is where the appearance or eſſoin of one will excuſe the other's default, and they agree between themſelves that one ſhall appear or be eſſoined one day, and for want of the other's appearing, have day over to make his appearance with the other party; and at that day allowed the other party doth appear, but he that appeared before doth not, in hopes to have another day by adjournment of the party who then made his appearance. Terms de Ley.

This is called fourcher; and in the ſtatute of Weſt. 1. c. 42. it is termed fourcher by eſſoin; where are words to this effect, viz. coparceners, jointenants, &c. may not fourch by eſſoin, to eſſoin ſeverally; but ſhall have only one eſſoin, as one ſole tenant. And anno 6 Ed. 1. c. 10. it is uſed in like manner: The defendants ſhall be put to anſwer without fourching, &c. 23 Hen. 6. c. 2. 2 Inſt. 250. Fourcher in the Latin is written furcare; becauſe it is two-fold.

Fraction. The law makes no fraction of a day; if any offence be committed, in caſe of murder, &c. the year and day ſhall be computed from the beginning of the day on which the wound was given, &c. and not from the preciſe minute or hour. 2 Hawk. 163. See Co. Lit. 255.

As to murder, this relates to the queſtion, whether the party died within a year and a day after the ſtroke, &c. But as to an appeal of death, it may be ſued within a year and a day after the completion of the felony, by the death of the party. Stat. Glouc. 6 Ed. 1. c. 9. Black. Com. 4 V. 311.

An act of record will not admit any diviſion of a day, but is ſaid to be done the firſt inſtant of the day, Arg. and judgment accordingly. Paſch. 23 Eliz. Mo. 137.

In preſumption of law, when a thing is to be done upon one day, all that day is allowed to do it in, for the avoiding of fractions in time, which the law admits not of, but in caſe of neceſſity. Per Rol. Ch. J. Sti. 119. Trin. 24 Car. B. R.

Inſurance for H.'s life; H. died on the laſt day; per Holt Ch. J. the law makes no fraction in a day; yet, in this caſe, he dying after the commencement, and before the end of the laſt day, the inſurer is liable, becauſe the inſurance is for a year, and the year is not complete till the day be over; yet, if A. be born on the 3d day of September, and on the ſecond day of September, twenty-one years afterwards, he makes his will, this is a good will, for the law will make no fraction of a day, and by conſequence he was of age. 2 Salk. 625. Trin. 11 W. 3. *B. Fractitium, Is made uſe of for arable land.—Pratum de Mura & tres Acr. terræ de fractitio. Mon. Angl. Tom. 2. 873.

Fractura navium, Wreck of ſhipping at ſea.

Frampole Fences, Are ſuch fences as the tenants in the manor of Writtle in Eſſex, ſet up againſt the lord's demeſnes; and they are intitled to the wood growing on thoſe fences, and as many poles as they can reach from the top of the ditch with the helve of an axe, towards the reparation of their fences. It is thought the word frampole comes from the Sax. frempul, profitable; or that it is a corruption of francpole, becauſe the poles are free for the tenants to take: But Chief Juſtice Brampton, whilſt he was ſteward of the court of the manor of Writtle, acknowledged that he could not find out the reaſon why thoſe fences were called frampole; ſo that we are at a loſs to know the truth of this name etymologically.

Franchilanus, (Fr. Franchi, i. e. free) A freeman—Sciatis me dediſſe, cum villanis, & franchilanos, & cum tenuris eorum, &c. Chart. H. 4. And we find Francus homo uſed for a freeman in Domeſday.

Franchiſe, (Fr.) Is taken as a privilege or exemption from ordinary juriſdiction; as for a corporation to hold pleas to ſuch a value, &c. And ſometimes it is an immunity from tribute, when it is either perſonal or real, that is belonging to a perſon immediately; or by means of this or that place whereof he is a chief or member. Cromp. Juriſd. 141.

There is alſo a franchiſe royal; which ſeems to be that where the King's writ runs not 21 H. 6. c. 4. But franchiſe royal is ſaid by ſome authors to be where the King grants to one and his heirs, that they ſhall be quit of toll, &c. Bract. lib. 2. c. 5.

A franchiſe in general is a royal privilege in the hands of a ſubject; and may be veſted in bodies politic or corporate, either aggregate or ſole, or in many perſons that are not corporations, (as in borough towns, &c.) or in a ſingle perſon.

Franchiſes are of different kinds; ſuch as the principality of Wales, Counties Palatine, Counties, Hundreds, Ports of the ſea, &c. Then there is a franchiſe or liberty of having a leet, manor or lordſhip, as well as a liberty to make a corporation, and to have cogniſance of pleas; and baliwicks of liberties, the liberty of a foreſt, chaſe, &c. Fairs and markets, felons goods, goods of fugitives, outlaws. deodands, treaſure trove, waifs, eſtrays, wrecks, &c. All theſe come under franchiſes and liberties. F. N. B. 230. 2 Inſt. 221.

All franchiſes and liberties are derived from the crown, and ſome are held by charter; but ſome lie in preſcription and uſage, without the help of any charter. Finch. 164. And uſage may uphold franchiſes, which may be claimed by preſcription, without record either of creation, allowance or confirmation; and wreck of the ſea, waifs, ſtrays, fairs and markets, and the like, are gained by uſage, and may become due without any matter of record. 2 Inſt. 281. 9 Rep. 27. But goods of felons and outlaws, and ſuch like, grow due by charter, and cannot be claimed by uſage, &c. Ibid.

It hath been adjudged, that grants of franchiſes, made before the time of memory, ought to have allowance within the time of memory, in the King's Bench, or before the barons of the Exchequer, or by ſome confirmation on record; and it is ſaid they are not records pleadable, if they have not the aid of ſome matter of record within time of memory; and ſuch ancient grants, after ſuch allowance, ſhall be conſtrued as the law was when they were made, and not as it hath been ſince altered: But franchiſes granted within time of memory are pleadable without any allowance or confirmation; and if they have been allowed or confirmed as aforeſaid, the franchiſes may be claimed by force thereof, without ſhewing the charter. 9 Rep. 27, 28. 2 Inſt. 281, 494.

There have been formerly ſeveral ancient prerogatives derived from the crown; beſides the franchiſes aforementioned; as power to pardon felony, make juſtices of aſſiſe, and of the peace, &c. Though by the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 24. they were reſumed and reunited to the crown; and the King cannot grant power to another to make ſtrangers born, denizens here, becauſe ſuch power is by law inſeparably annexed to his perſon. 7 Rep. 25.

By ſeveral ancient ſtatutes, the church ſhall have all her liberties and franchiſes inviolable: And the Lords ſpiritual and temporal ſhall enjoy their liberties, &c. and the King may not deprive them of any of them. 9 H. 3. c. 1. 14 Ed. 3. 2 H. 4. c. 1.

By the ſtatute of Magna Charta, 9 H. 3. c. 37. The franchiſes and liberties of the city of London, and all other cities, towns, &c. are confirmed. All writs, proceſſes, &c. in franchiſes, are to be made in the King's name; and ſtewards, bailiffs, and other miniſters of liberties, ſhall attend the juſtices of aſſiſe, and make due execution of proceſs, &c. 27 H. 8. c. 24.

Some franchiſes, as York, Briſtol, &c. have return of writs, to whom mandates are directed from the courts above, to execute writs and proceſs: And a mayor or bailiff of a town, may have liberty to keep courts, and hold pleas in a certain place, according to the courſe of the Common law; and power to draw cauſes out of the King's courts, by an excluſive juriſdiction: But the cauſes here may be removed to the ſuperior courts. Co. Lit. 114. 4 Inſt. 87, 224.

Sheriffs of counties, within which is any franchiſe, the lord whereof is intitled to a return of writs, ſhall, on his requeſt, appoint one or more deputies, to reſide at ſome place near, there to receive all writs in the ſheriff's name, and under his ſeal to iſſue warrants for their due execution; and the Lord Chancellor is to ſettle the charges to be paid any ſuch deputy, &c. by 13 Geo. 2. c. 18.

A franchiſe hath no relation to the county wherein it lies; as has been generally held; for it is not neceſſary to ſet forth the county when any thing is ſhewed to be done within a liberty or franchiſe. Trin. 23 Car. B. R.

If a franchiſe fails to adminiſter juſtice within the ſame, the franchiſe ſhall not be allowed; but on any ſuch failure, the court of B. R. may compel the owners of the franchiſe, &c. to do juſtice; for this court ought to ſee juſtice equally diſtributed to all perſons. 1 Lill. Abr. 635.

Franchiſes may be forfeited and ſeiſed where they are abuſed, for miſ-uſer, or non-uſer; and when there are many points, a miſ-uſer of any one will make a forfeiture of the whole on a quo warranto brought. Kitch. 65. And where franchiſes come to the crown again from whence derived, by forfeiture, &c. they are extinguiſhed; but in ſome caſes it is ſaid they are not. For contempt of the King's writ, in a county palatine, &c. the liberties may be ſeiſed, and the offenders fined; and the temporalities of a biſhop, have been adjudged to be ſeiſed until he ſatisfied the King for ſuch a contempt, on information exhibited, &c. Cro. Car. 253. The biſhop of Durham pretending he had ſuch a franchiſe, that the King's writ was not to come there, and becauſe one brought it thither he impriſoned him; this being proved upon an information brought againſt him, it was adjudged he ſhould pay a fine to the King, and loſe his liberties. 2 Shep. Abr. 250.

Wherever the King is party to a ſuit, as in all informations and indictments, the proceſs ought to be executed by the ſheriff, and not the bailiff of any franchiſe, whether it have the clauſe non omittas, &c. or not; for the King's prerogative ſhall be preferred to any franchiſe. 2 Hawk. 284. A ſheriff upon a non omittas, or on a capias utlagatum, or quo minus, may enter and make arreſts in a franchiſe. 1 Lill. 635. An arreſt by the ſheriff within a franchiſe on a common writ, is ſaid to be good, tho' the officer be ſubject to an action at the ſuit of the lord of the franchiſe, &c. If a perſon claims franchiſes which he ought not to have, it is an uſurpation upon the King; and not ſhewing his title, the King ſhall take from him his franchiſe. Poph. 180. 1 Bulſt. 54. The King's Bench will not grant an information on private uſurpation of franchiſes, but the proper remedy is to apply to the Attorney General; i. e. to proceed by quo warranto. Ibbotſon's caſe. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly 261. See Quo Warranto.

Francigenæ, Was the general appellation of all foreigners. Vide Englecery.

Franclaine, Is uſed to denote a freeman or gentleman, in our ancient authors. Forteſcue.

Frank, A French gold coin, worth about a French ſhilling; but in computation was twenty ſols, which is a livre, and ten pence in our money.

Frankalmoign, (Libera Eleemoſyna) Is a tenure by ſpiritual ſervice, where an eccleſiaſtical corporation, ſole or aggregate, holdeth land to them and their ſucceſſors, of ſome lord and his heirs in free and perpetual alms: And perpetual ſuppoſes it to be a fee-ſimple; tho' it may paſs without the word ſucceſſors. Litt. 133. Co. Lit. 94. A lay perſon cannot hold in free alms: And when a grant is in frankalmoign, no mention is to be made of all manner of ſervice; for it is free from any temporal ſervice, and is of the higheſt nature, becauſe it is a tenure by ſpiritual ſervice. Lit. 137. None can hold in frankalmoign but by preſcription, or by force of ſome grant made before the ſtatutes of Mortmain, 7 Ed. 1. c. 36, and 18 Ed. 1. c. 1. ſo that the tenure cannot at this day be created, to hold of a founder and his heirs in free alms: But the King is not reſtrained by the ſtatutes; nor a ſubject licenſed or diſpenſed with by the King, to make ſuch a grant, &c. Co. Lit. 98, 99. And if an eccleſiaſtical perſon holds lands by fealty and certain rent, the lord may at this time confirm his eſtate, to hold him and his ſucceſſors in frankalmoign; for the former ſervices are extinct, and nothing is reſerved but that he ſhould hold of him, which he did before; whereby this change and alteration is not within the Stat. 18 Ed. 1. of quia emptores terrarum. Litt. 540. Co. Lit. 99, 306.

Tenure in frankalmoign is incident to the inheritable blood of the donor or founder; except in caſe of the King, who may grant this tenure to hold of him and his ſucceſſors. Lit. 135. And the reaſon why a grant in frankalmoign, ſince the Stat. 18 Ed. 1. quia emptores is void, except in the caſe of the King, &c. is becauſe none can hold land by this tenure, but of the donor; whereas the ſtatute injoins, that it be held of the Chief Lord, by the ſame ſervice by which the feoffor held it; though the King may grant away any eſtate, and reſerve the tenure to himſelf. Co. Lit. 99, 223.

If any perſon that holds lands or tenements in frankalmoign, make any failure in doing ſuch divine ſervice as they ought, the lord may make complaint of it to the ordinary or viſitor; which is the King, if he be founder; or a ſubject where he was appointed viſitor upon the foundation; and the ordinary, &c. may puniſh the negligence, according to the eccleſiaſtical laws. Litt. 136. Co. Lit. 96. Alſo for neglect in performing divine ſervice in certain, the lord may diſtrain: But frankalmoign is ſaid to be held by ſervice uncertain; and where the tenure is tied to certain ſervices, as to read prayers every Friday, &c. this is not frankalmoign, but tenure by divine ſervice; it is lands given in alms, but not in free alms. Britton, c. 66. The tenure by frankalmoign is an ancient tenure, chiefly to be met with in grants to religious houſes, biſhops, deans, colleges, &c. and is become out of uſe.

Frank-Chaſe, Is a liberty of free chaſe; by which all perſons that have lands within the compaſs thereof, are prohibited to cut down any wood, &c. without the view of the foreſter, though it be in their own demeſnes. Cromp. Juriſ. 187.

Franked-Letters. See the Stat. 4. Geo. 3. c. 24. Previous to that ſtatute, the annual amount of franked letters gradually increaſed from 23,600*l.* in the year 1715 to 170,700*l.* in the year 1763. Com. Journ. 28 Mar. 1764. Black. Com. 1 V. 322.

Frank-Fee, Is where freehold lands are held exempted from all ſervices, but not from homage. In the regiſter of writs, we find that is frank-free, which a man holds at the Common law, to him and his heirs; and not by ſuch ſervice, as is required in ancient demeſne, according to the cuſtom of the manor: And that the lands in the hand of King Edward the Confeſſor, at the making of the book of Domeſday, were ancient demeſne, and all the reſt frank-fee; wherewith Fitzherbert agrees. Reg. Orig. 12. F. N. B. 161. And the author of the Terms of the Law defines a free-fee to be a tenure pleadable at the Common law; and not in ancient demeſne. Feudum Francum eſt, pro quo nullum ſervitium præſtatur domino. Fachineus, lib. 7. c 39.

Frank-Ferm, Was when lands or tenements were changed in the nature of the fee by feoffment, &c. out of knight ſervice, for certain yearly ſervices. Britton, c. 66. See Fee farm.

Frank Law, (Libera Lex) Is applied to the benefit of the free and Common law of the land. You may find what it is by the contrary, from Crompton in his Juſtice of Peace; where he ſays, he that for any offence loſeth his frank-law, falls into theſe miſchiefs, viz. He may never be impannelled upon any jury or aſſiſe; or be permitted to give any teſtimony: If he hath any thing to do in the King's courts, he muſt not attend them in perſon, but appoint his attorney therein for him: And his lands ſhall be eſtreated, and his body committed to priſon, &c. Cromp. Juriſd. 156. Lib. Aſſiſ. 59. See Conſpiracy.

Frank-Marriage, (Liberum Maritagium) Is where a man ſeiſed of land in fee-ſimple, gives it to another with his daughter, ſiſter, &c. in marriage; to hold to them and their heirs: And it is a tenure in ſpecial tail, growing from theſe words in the gift, i. e. Sciant, &c. me A. B. dediſſe & conceſſiſſe, &c. T. B. filio meo & Annæ uxori ejus, filiæ, &c. in liberum maritagium unum meſſuagium, &c. Litt. 17. Weſt. Symb. par. 1. lib. 2. ſect. 303. The effect of which words is, That they ſhall have the land to them and the heirs of their bodies; and ſhall do no ſervices to the donor, except fealty, until the fourth degree. Glanvil, lib. 7. c. 18. And Fleta gives this reaſon why the heirs do no ſervice until the fourth degree: Ne donatores vel eorum hæredes per homagii receptionem a reverſione repellantur. And why in the fourth deſcent and downward, they ſhall do ſervices to the donor; quia in quarto gradu vehementer præſumitur, quod terra eſt pro defectu hæredum donatorum reverſura. Fleta, lib. 3. c. 11. All this appears in Bracton, lib. 2. c. 7. where it is ſaid, that lands in frank-marriage are quieta et libera ab omni ſeculari ſervitio, etc. uſque ad tertium hæredem, et uſque ad quartum gradum.

Alſo Bracton divides marriage into liberum maritagium and maritagium ſervitio obligatum; which laſt was where lands were given in marriage, with a reſervation of the ſervices to the donor, which the donee and his heirs were bound to perform for ever; but neither he, or the next two heirs, were obliged to do homage, which was to be done when it came to the fourth degree, and then, and not before, were required to be performed both ſervices and homage. Bract. lib. 2. Lands given by one man to another with a wife in frank-marriage, amounts by implication to a gift in tail; which in this caſe may be created without the words heirs or body. Litt. 17. Wood's Inſt. 120. A gift in frank-marriage might be made as well after as before marriage: And ſuch a gift was a fee-ſimple before the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. but ſince, it is uſually a fee-tail: Theſe gifts were common in former times, whereon queſtions in law did ariſe; but are now diſuſed. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 888.

Frank-pledge, (Franci plegium, from the French Franc, i. e. Liber, and pledge, fidejuſſor) Signifies a pledge or ſurety for the behaviour of freemen; it being the ancient cuſtom of this kingdom, borrowed from the Lombards, that for the preſervation of the public peace, every freeborn man at the age of fourteen, (religious perſons, clerks, etc. excepted) ſhould give ſecurity for his truth towards the King and his ſubjects, or be committed to priſon; whereupon a certain number of neighbours, uſually became bound one for another, to ſee each man of their pledge forth-coming at all times, or to anſwer the tranſgreſſion done by any gone away: And whenever any one offended, it was forthwith inquired in what pledge he was, and then thoſe of that pledge either produced the offender within one and thirty days, or ſatisfied for his offence. This was called frank-pledge; and this cuſtom was ſo kept, that the ſheriffs at every county-court, did from time to time take the oaths of young perſons as they grew to fourteen years of age, and ſee that they were ſettled in one decennary or other; whereby this branch of the ſheriff's authority was called viſus franci plegii, or view of frank-pledge. At this day no man ordinarily giveth other ſecurity for the keeping of the peace, than his own oath; ſo that none anſwereth for the tranſgreſſion of another, but every perſon for himſelf. 4 Inſt. 78. Living under frank-pledge has been termed living under law, etc. See the ſtatute of view of frank-pledge, 18 Ed. 2. And court-leet, decennier, deciner, etc. and Black. Com. 1 V. 113. 4 V. 249, 270.

Frank-Tenement, A poſſeſſion of freehold lands and tenements. See Freehold.

Fraſſetum, A corruption of fraxinetum, is taken for a wood or woody ground, where aſhes grow. Co. Lit. 4.

Frateria, A fraternity, brotherhood or ſociety of religious perſons, who were bound to pray for the good health and life, etc. of their living brethren, and the ſouls of thoſe that were dead: in the ſtatutes of the cathedral church of St. Paul in London, collected by Ralph Baldock. Dean, 1295, there is one chapter de frateria beneficiorum eccleſiæ S. Pauli, &c.

Fraternities, Of places in reſpect to a trade or myſtery. Vide Corporation.

Frater nutricius, Uſed in ancient deeds for a baſtard brother. Malmſb.

Fratres conjurati, Are ſworn brothers or companions; ſometimes thoſe were ſo called who were ſworn to defend the King againſt his enemies. Hoveden, p. 445. Leg. W: 1.——Præcipimus ut omnes liberi homines ſint fratres conjurati ad monarchiam noſtram ad regnum noſtrum contra inimicos pro poſſe ſuo defendendum. Leg. Ed. 1. c. 35.

Fratres pyes, Were certain friars, wearing black and white garments; of whom mention is made by Walſingham, p. 124.

Fratriagium, Is a younger brother's inheritance; and whatever the ſons or brothers poſſeſs of the eſtate of the father, they enjoy it rationi fratriagii, and are to do homage to the elder brother for it, who is bound to do homage for the whole to the ſuperior lord. Bract. lib. 2. c. 35.

Fraud, (Fraus) Is deceit in grants and conveyances of lands, and bargains and ſales of goods, &c. to the damage of another perſon. N. B. 98. Under this head may be conſidered,

I. What acts are fraudulent at Common law, and in equity.
II. What acts are fraudulent by ſtatute.

I. What acts are fraudulent at Common law, and in equity.

It may be laid down as a general rule, that without the expreſs proviſion of any act of parliament, all deceitful practices in defrauding or endeavouring to defraud another of his known right, by means of ſome artful device, contrary to the plain rules of common honeſty, are condemned by the Common law, and puniſhable according to the heinouſneſs of the offence. Co. Lit. 3. b. Dyer 295. Such as cauſing an illiterate perſon to execute a deed to his prejudice, by reading of it over to him in words different from thoſe in which it was written, &c. 1 Sid. 312, 431.

Alſo it is a rule, that a wrongful manner of executing a thing ſhall avoid a matter that might have been executed lawfully. Co. Lit. 35. 41 Aſſ. 28. 44 Aſſ. 29. 1 Rol. Abr. 420, 549. Co. Lit. 357. Poph. 64, 100.

As to frauds in contracts and dealings, the Common law ſubjects the wrong-doer, in ſeveral inſtances, to an action on the caſe; as a perſon having the poſſeſſion of goods ſells them to another, affirming them to be his own, when in truth they are not, an action on the caſe lies. 1 Rol. Abr. 90. Cro. Jac. 474. But if A. poſſeſſed of term for years, offers to ſell it to B. and ſays, that a ſtranger would have given him twenty pounds for this term, by which means B. buys it, tho' in truth A. was never offered twenty pounds, no action on the caſe lies, tho' B. is hereby deceived in the value. 1 Rol. Abr. 91, 101. 1 Sid. 146. Yelv. 20. S. P.

Contra, if on a treaty for the purchaſe of a houſe, the defendant affirms the rent to be more than it is, whereby the plaintiff is induced to give more than the houſe is worth. 1 Salk. 211. 1 Lev. 102. 1 Sid. 146. 1 Keb. 510, 518, 522. S. P. adjudged. And ſee Kel. 24, 81. 1 Show. 50, 51.

All frauds and deceits, for which there is no remedy by the ordinary courſe of law, are properly cogniſable in equity; and it is admitted, that matters of fraud were one of the chief branches to which the juriſdiction of Chancery was originally confined.. 4 Inſt. 84. It would be endleſs to enumerate the ſeveral caſes, wherein relief has been given againſt frauds: but the following inſtances are too material to be omitted.

A. being tenant in tail, remainder to his brother B. in tail, A. not knowing of the intail, makes a ſettlement on his wife for life for her jointure, without levying a fine, or ſuffering a recovery, which B. who knew of the intail ingroſſes, but does not mention any thing of the intail, becauſe, as he confeſſed in his anſwer, if he had ſpoke any thing of it, his brother, by a recovery, might have cut off the remainder, and barred him; and altho' after A.'s death, B. recovered in ejectment againſt the widow by force of the intail; yet ſhe was relieved in Chancery, and a perpetual injunction granted for this fraud in B. in concealing the intail, which if it had been diſcloſed, the ſettlement might have been made good by a recovery.. Preced. Chanc. 35. Raw v. Potts. 2 Vern. 239. S. C. and affirmed in the Houſe of Lords.

So where a mother being abſolute owner of a term, the ſame being limited to her in tail, is preſent at a treaty for her ſon's marriage, and hears her ſon declare, that the term was to come to him at his mother's death, and is a witneſs to the deed, whereby the reverſion of the term is ſettled on the iſſue of the marriage after the mother's death, and ſhe was compelled in equity to make good the ſettlement. 2 Vern. 150.

If A. has a prior incumbrance on an eſtate, and is a witneſs to a ſubſequent mortgage, but does not diſcloſe his own incumbrance; this is ſuch a fraud in him, for which his incumbrance ſhall be poſtponed. 2 Vern. 151. Clare and Earl of Bedford, cited to have been decreed. And ſee 2 Vern. 554, Ibbotſon v. Rhodes.

So if A. having a mortgage on a leaſehold eſtate, lends the mortgage deed to the mortgagor, with an intent to borrow more money; that is ſuch a fraud in the mortgagee, for which his mortgage ſhall be poſtponed to the ſubſequent incumbrance. 2 Vern. 726. Peter and Ruſſel. Abr. Eq. 321. S. C

If a copyholder, by his will intending to give the greateſt part of his eſtate to his godſon, and the other part to his wife, is perſuaded by the wife to nominate her to the whole, on a promiſe that ſhe would give the godſon the part deſigned for him; it will be decreed againſt the wife on the point of fraud, though there was no memorandum thereof in writing purſuant to the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. Preced. Canc. 3. Devoniſh and Baines. And ſee ſimilar caſe as to father, elder ſon, and younger children, Preced. Chanc. 4. Chamberlain's caſe.

So where the defendant, on a treaty of marriage for his daughter with the plaintiff, ſigned a writing compriſing the terms of the agreement, and afterward deſigning to elude the force thereof, and get looſe from his agreement, ordered his daughter to put on a good humour, and get the plaintiff to deliver up that writing, and then marry him, which ſhe accordingly did, and the defendant ſtood by at the corner of a ſtreet to ſee them go by to be married; and the plaintiff was relieved on the point of fraud. Abr. Eq. 20. Halpeny and Mallet. 2 Vern. 373. S. C.

If a ſecurity be obtained from a perſon by fraud and practice, upon a pretence of a demand that is fictitious, it will be relieved againſt in equity. 2 Vern. 123. And vide 2 Vern. 632. Green v. Wood.

There are likewiſe ſeveral inſtances, where a parol agreement intended to be reduced into writing, but prevented by fraud, has been decreed in equity, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries; as where upon a marriage treaty, inſtructions were given by the huſband to draw a ſettlement, which he privately countermanded, and afterwards drew in the woman by perſuaſions and aſſurances of ſuch ſettlement to marry him; and it was decreed, that he ſhould make good the ſettlement. Abr. Eq. 19. and ſee tit. Agreement.

So where a parol agreement was concerning the lending of money on a mortgage, and the covenants propoſed were an abſolute deed from the mortgagor, and a deed of defeaſance from the mortgagee, and after the mortgageee had got the deed of conveyance, he refuſed to execute the defeaſance; and it was decreed againſt him on the point of fraud. Abr. Eq. 20. See Action on the Caſe, Deceit.

II. As to frauds by ſtatute.

Fraudulent aſſurances of lands or goods to deceive creditors, ſhall be void; and the creditors ſhall have execution thereof. 50 E. 3. c. 6. By the Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5. All fraudulent conveyances made of lands, goods or chattels, tels, to ſet aſide or avoid debts, as to creditors, ſhall be void; and by 27 Eliz. c. 4. Conveyances and aſſurances of land made to defraud purchaſers, as to ſuch purchaſers they are declared void: and perſons juſtifying or putting ſuch grants, etc. in uſe as good, and bona fide made, ſhall forfeit a year's value of the lands, and the whole value of goods and chattels, and be alſo impriſoned: where lands are conveyed with clauſe of revocation, etc. and afterwards ſold for valuable conſideration, the firſt conveyance ſhall be void againſt the purchaſer; but this is not to extend to mortgages made bona fide.

If a man ſeiſed of land in fee, make a feoffment of it to divers uſes, with remainders over, etc. and with power of revocation by writing under hand and ſeal; here if he for good conſideration doth enter into a recogniſance, the land ſhall be charged with the ſame: ſo if A. reſerves to himſelf power to revoke by the aſſent of B. and then bargains to another. Bridg. 22. Lane 22. And where one hath made an eſtate with the power of revocation; and after with intent to deceive a purchaſer he makes a feoffment, etc. to a ſtranger to extinguiſh the power, and then ſells the land for a valuable conſideration; in this caſe both the conveyances ſhall be fraudulent as to the purchaſer. 2 Rep. 83.

The ſtatute of frauds, 29 Car. 2. c. 3. requires that contracts and agreements, leaſes and deviſes of lands, etc. ſhall be put in writing. And deviſes of lands, rents. etc. are deemed fraudulent and void, againſt creditors upon bonds, or other ſpecialties. 3 and 4 W. and M. c. 14. Alſo judgments againſt purchaſers of lands for a valuable conſideration, ſhall be deemed judgments only from the ſigning, etc. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. The Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5. makes a fraudulent deed or grant of goods, etc. void againſt creditors, but not againſt the party himſelf, his executors or adminiſtrators, for againſt them it remains good: and a conveyance, if made of lands by fraud, is not void by the ſtatute againſt all perſons; but only againſt thoſe who afterwards come to the land upon valuable conſideration. Cro. Eliz. 445. Cro. Jac. 271.

Grants and conveyances are to be on good conſideration, and bona fide, or they will be fraudulent; and a grant bona fide is made without any truſt, etc. A grant upon good conſideration, except it be alſo bona fide, is not within the proviſo of the act 13 Eliz. c. 5. 3 Rep. 81. A valuable conſideration is money, marriage, etc. and not natural affection, etc. A man made a leaſe for twenty-one years, in truſt for his daughter till marriage; and if ſhe married with his conſent, then to her during the term; this, till marriage, has been held fraudulent as to a purchaſer: but after marriage it is good, becauſe marriage is an advancement to the daughter, and taking effect made it upon valuable conſideration, which a marriage is always taken to be, and the huſband was drawn in by this conveyance to marry her. 1 Sid. 133.

It has been adjudged, that if a father makes a feoffment to another, for the advancement of daughters, or his younger ſons, or for payment of his debts; and afterwards infeoffs his eldeſt ſon or heir, that is not fraud or colluſion within the ſtatute, for he is bound in law to make proviſion for his children: but where there is a grandfather, father, and two ſons, and the grandfather (living the father) conveys his land to either of the ſons, this is out of the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 1. becauſe it is not a common thing ſo to do, and the father ought to have the immediate care of his children; though if he is dead, then it belongeth to the grandfather. 6 Rep. 76. If a man levy a fine to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to his ſon in tail, and after ſells the fee-ſimple to another, he as a purchaſer ſhall avoid this conveyance upon the Stat. 27 Eliz. c. 4. becauſe it was voluntary, and therefore fraudulent; ſo it had been if he had ſettled the remainder on his wife, unleſs there had been a conſideration on precedent marriage. Sid. 133. 3 Salk. 174.

But it was ruled by Hale Chief Juſtice, that a deed may be voluntary, and not fraudulent; as where a father having an extravagant ſon, ſettles his land ſo that he may not ſpend all; this is good, if there is no conſideration of money. 1 Mod. 119. Although every voluntary conveyance is prima facie deemed fraudulent againſt purchaſers, yet ſome circumſtances may alter the caſe: an infant promiſed, on his marriage, to ſettle his eſtate when he came of age, upon himſelf and his iſſue; and this was held a ſufficient conſideration, though an infant by law is not compellable to fulfil ſuch promiſe. 2 Lev. 147. A perſon, in conſideration that his ſon is to marry the daughter of A. B. covenants to ſtand ſeiſed of lands to the uſe of his ſon for life; and after to other ſons in reverſion or remainder: the uſes thus limited in remainder, ſhall be fraudulent as to any purchaſer of the land, tho' the firſt be upon good conſideration. And although the conſideration of marrriage is good; if there be a power to revoke annexed to the deed, it will be void as to purchaſers. Lane 22.

If a man after marriage, make a voluntary conveyance of land for a jointure, or maintenance of his wife, and afterwards ſell the land for money, to one that hath no notice of it; in this caſe the conveyance, made to the uſe of the wife, ſhall be ſaid to be fraudulent: and yet if a perſon upon a marriage, before the marriage, and in conſideration thereof, or after marriage, in conſideration of a portion given or money paid, convey his land to the uſe of his wife, etc. it will not be a fraudulent deed. Cro. Jac. 158. A feme covert joins with her huſband in the alienation of her jointure, and hath a new deed of ſettlement of other lands dated the ſame day in lieu thereof, without articles or agreement precedent to this ſecond ſettlement; this is not fraudulent againſt a purchaſer, though the lands in the new ſettlement are more in value than thoſe in the firſt; for the old ſettlement being deſtroyed, and a new one made on the ſame day, it ſhall be preſumed that there was an agreement for it. 2 Lev. 70, 71.

The huſband who married a wife an inheritrix, promiſed, that if ſhe would join with him in a ſale of her land, and let him have the money to pay his debts, that he would leave her 400*l.* at his death; about ſix months after the lands were ſold, he gave bond to a ſtranger to leave his wife the 400*l.* And it was adjudged, that this was not fraudulent quoad creditors, but good againſt them. 2 Lev. 148. A perſon makes a voluntary conveyance, and then mortgages the ſame land, and the firſt deed is upon a trial found fraudulent; then he to whom the deed was made exhibited his bill in equity to redeem the mortgage; and it was held, that though the firſt deed was fraudulent quoad the mortgage money, yet it was good to paſs the equity of redemption. Chanc. Rep. 59.

Where a leaſe is made with a proviſo that if the leſſor pays 10*s.* the leaſe ſhall be void; becauſe 10*s.* is not the value of the leaſe and land, but only limited as a power of revocation, it is fraudulent as to a purchaſer. Cro. Jac. 455. And if a man makes an aſſignment of his leaſe, and yet keeps poſſeſſion of the lands, the deed of aſſignment will be adjudged fraudulent. In Chancery it has been decreed, that if a man conveys his land to friends in truſt, to the uſe of his children, etc. to defraud a purchaſer, the truſt ſhall go in equity to the purchaſer; alſo it ſhall be liable for debts, to ſatisfy the ſame. Tothil. 43, 44. A huſband aſſigned a term of his wife's, in truſt for his wife; and it was held fraudulent againſt purchaſers. Chan. Rep. 225.

By the Common law, an eſtate made by fraud, ſhall be avoided only by him who hath a former right, title, intereſt, debt or demand. 3 Rep. 83. If one indebted do really ſell lands, though to avoid payment of debts; if the vendee be not privy to the intent, the ſale to him is good: for as to the vendee, there is no fraud in the caſe. Mich. 24 Car. B. R. A man gives his goods to his ſon, they are nevertheleſs liable as to his creditors; but if he gives them to one of his creditors, without any truſt or covin, it ſhall not be fraudulent to make him liable to other creditors. 3 Salk. 174.

If a man is indicted, and give away his goods to prevent a forfeiture, the King ſhall have them upon an attainder or conviction; though it is otherwiſe if he ſell them for a good conſideration to one who had no notice of the indictment. Ibid. If tenant for life commit a forfeiture, and he in the reverſion enters, this ſhall be as a fraudulent conveyance with reſpect to creditors. Vent. 257. Fraudulent gifts, or grants of goods to defraud the lord of his heriot, ſhall be void; and the value of the goods forfeited. 13 Eliz. 5. Gifts made in ſecret are liable to ſuſpicion of fraud: a general gift of all a man's goods may be reaſonably ſuſpected to be fraudulent, even tho' there be a true debt owing to the party to whom made. 3 Rep. 80, 81. And the ſeveral marks or badges of fraud, in a gift or grant of goods are, if it be general, without exception of ſome things of neceſſity; if the donor ſtill poſſeſſes and uſes the goods; if the deed be ſecretly made, if there be a truſt between the parties; or if it be made pending the action. 3 Rep. 80, &c.

And where a perſon is party to a fraud, all that follows by reaſon of that fraud ſhall be ſaid to be done by him. Cro. Jac. 469. But when fraud is not expreſly averred, it ſhall not be preſumed; nor ſhall the court adjudge it to be ſo, till the matter is found by a jury. 10 Rep. 56. A poor man was drawn in to ſell an eſtate, at a great under-value; but no fraud appearing, though the purchaſe was not a fair bargain, the ſeller could not be relieved in equity, to ſet it aſide. Preced. Canc. 206. The Chancery may decree a conveyance to be fraudulent, meerly for being voluntary, and without any trial at law; yet it has been inſiſted, that fraud or not, was triable only by a jury. Ibid. 14, 15.

A will, as well as a deed, ſhall be ſet aſide in Chancery for fraud and circumvention. Ibid. 123. Fraudulent conveyances to multiply votes at election of knights of the ſhire, ſhall be taken againſt the perſons making them as free and abſolute; and all ſecurities for redeeming and reſtoring, &c. to be void. Stat. 10 Ann. c. 23. A preſentation to a benefice; or adminiſtration of goods, obtained by fraud, are void; and ſo is ſale of goods by fraud, although in open market, &c. Where a fraudulent deed or conveyance is aſſigned upon a valuable conſideration, the fraud is purged thereby. 1 Ld. Raym. 88.

Groſs frauds are puniſhable by way of indictment or information; ſuch as playing with falſe dice, cauſing an illiterate perſon to execute a deed to his prejudice, levying a fine in another's name, &c. and that for theſe and ſuch like offences the party may be puniſhed not only with fine and impriſonment, but alſo with ſuch farther infamous puniſhment, as the judges in their diſcretion ſhall think proper. Cro. Jac. 497. 2 Rol. Abr. 78. 2 Rol. Rep. 107. 1 Keb. 849. 6 Mod. 42. 1 Sid. 312, 431. Noy 99, 103. Moor 630. Cro. Eliz. 531. 1 Mod. 46. 2 Jon. 64. 6 Mod. 105. 1 Salk. 379.

By the 33 H. 8. cap. 1. it is enacted, "That if any perſon or perſons ſhall falſly and deceitfully obtain or get into his or their hands or poſſeſſion, any money, goods, chattels, jewels, or other things of any other perſon or perſons, by colour and means of any privy falſe token, or counterfeit letter, made in another man's name, to a ſpecial friend or acquaintance, for the obtaining of money, &c. from ſuch perſon, and ſhall be thereof convicted; every ſuch offender ſhall ſuffer ſuch puniſhment by impriſonment, ſetting upon the pillory, or otherwiſe, as ſhall be appointed by thoſe before whom he ſhall be ſo convict." And by 30 Geo. 2. c. 24. (commonly called the ſtatute of falſe pretences) the obtaining goods, &c. by falſe pretences, may be puniſhed with tranſportation.

Fraus Legis. If a perſon having no manner of title to a houſe, procure an affidavit of the ſervice of a declaration in ejectment, and thereupon gets judgment; and by virtue of a writ of hab. fac. poſſeſſionem turns the owner out of poſſeſſion of the houſe, and ſeizes and converts the goods therein to his own uſe, he may be puniſhed as a felon; becauſe he uſed the proceſs of the law with a felonious purpoſe, in fraudem legis. Raym. 276. Sid. 254.

Fraxinetum, A wood of aſh trees. Domeſday.

Fredum, Was a compoſition made by a criminal, to be freed from proſecution, of which the third part was paid into the Exchequer. This is fully explained in Robertſon's Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 300, &c. Formerly compoſitions were paid for crimes in general, particularly for murder. The magiſtrate was to determine the compoſition, and protect the offender againſt the violence of reſentment. For that protection the offender paid a ſum of money, which was called fredum. See Monteſquieu de l'Eſprit des Loix, l. 30. c. 20, &c. See Delatura.

Fredwit, A liberty to hold courts, and take up amerciaments, &c. Cowel.

Free-Bench, (francus bancus, i. e. ſedes libera) Is that eſtate in copyhold lands which the wife hath on the death of her huſband for her dower, according to the cuſtom of the manor: but it is ſaid the wife ought to be eſpouſed a virgin; and is to hold the land only ſo long as ſhe lives ſole and continent. Kitch. 102. Of this free-bench ſeveral manors have ſeveral cuſtoms; and Fitzhertbert calls it a cuſtom, whereby in certain cities the wife ſhall have the whole lands of the huſband for her dower, &c. F. N. B. 150. In the manors of Eaſt and Weſt Embourne in the county of Berks, and the manor of Torre in Devonſhire, and other parts of the Weſt of England, there is a cuſtom, that when a copyhold tenant dies, his widow ſhall have her free-bench in all his cuſtomary lands, dum ſola & caſta fuerit; but if ſhe commits incontinency, ſhe forfeits her eſtate: yet nevertheleſs, on her coming into the court of the manor, riding backwards on a black ram, with his tail in her hand, and ſaying the words following, the ſteward is bound by the cuſtom to re-admit her to her free-bench; the words are theſe,

Here I am,
Riding upon a black ram,
Like a whore as I am:
And for my crincum crancum,
I have loſt my bincum bancum;
And for my tail's game,
Have done this wordly ſhame;
Therefore pray Mr. Steward, let me have my land again.
Cowel.

This is a kind of penance among jocular tenures and cuſtoms, to purge the offence. See Black. Com. 2 V. 122.

Free-booter, Signifies a perſon who fights without pay, in hopes of getting ſome booty.

Freebord, (francbordus) Is ground claimed in ſome places more or leſs, beyond, or without the fence: it is ſaid to contain two foot and a half, in Mon. Angl. Tom. 2. p. 141.

Free-borough-men, Were ſuch great men as did not engage like the frank-pledge men for their decennier. See Friburgh.

Free-Chapel, (libera capella) A chapel ſo called, becauſe it is exempt from the juriſdiction of the dioceſan. Thoſe chapels are properly free chapels which are of the King's foundation, and by him exempted from the ordinary's viſitation; alſo chapels founded within a pariſh for the ſervice of God, by the devotion and liberality of pious men, over and above the mother-church, and endowed with maintenance by the founders, which were free for the inhabitants of the pariſh to come to, were therefore called free-chapels. Reg. Orig. 40, 41. The free-chapel of St. Martin le Grand is mentioned in the Stat. 3 Ed. 4. c. 4. as are others likewiſe by ancient ſtatutes: but theſe chapels were given to the King, with the chantries, &c. 1 Ed. 6. c. 14.

Freehold, (liberum tenementum) Is that land or tenement which a man holds in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or for term of life. Bract. lib. 2. c. 9. And is deſcribed to be of two ſorts: freehold in deed, and freehold in law; the firſt being the real poſſeſſion of lands, &c. in fee, or for life; the other, the right a perſon hath to ſuch lands or tenements, before his entry or ſeizure. Freehold is alſo extended to offices, which a man holds either in fee, or during life: and, in the regiſter of writs it is ſaid, that he who holds land upon an execution of a ſtatute merchant until he is ſatisfied the debt, tenet ut liberum tenementum ſibi & aſſignatis ſuis, and the ſame of a tenant by elegit; but ſuch tenants are not freeholders, only as freeholders for their time, till they have received the profits of the land to the value of their debt. Reg. Judic. 68, 73. A leaſe for ninety-nine years, &c. determinable upon a life or lives, is not a leaſe for life to make a freehold, but a leaſe for years, or chattel determinable upon life or lives; and an eſtate for one thouſand years is not a freehold, or of ſo high a nature as an eſtate for life. Co. Lit. 6. He that hath an eſtate for the term of his own life, or the life of another, hath a freehold, and no other of a leſs eſtate; though they of a greater eſtate have a freehold, as tenant in fee, &c. Lit. 57.

When a man pleads liberum tenementum generally, it ſhall be intended that he hath an eſtate in fee; and not a bare eſtate for life. Cro. Eliz. 87. An eſtate of freehold cannot by the Common law commence in futuro; but it muſt take preſently in poſſeſſion, reverſion, or remainder. 5 Rep. 94. See Black. Com. 2 V. 144, 165. A man made a deed of gift to his ſon and his heirs, of lands after his death, and no livery was made; now if there had been livery, it had been void, becauſe a freehold cannot commence in futuro: and it has been held, that it ſhall not enure as a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, by reaſon of the word give; by which was intended a tranſmutation of the eſtate, and not to paſs it by way of uſe. March Rep. 50, 51. Whatſoever is part of, or fixed to, the freehold goes to the heir; and glaſs windows, wainſcot, &c. affixed to the houſe are parcel of the houſe, and cannot be removed by tenants. 4 Rep. 63, 64. But it hath been adjudged, that if things for trade, &c. are fixed to the freehold by the leſſee, he may take them down and remove them, ſo as he do it before the end of the term, and he do not thereby injure the freehold. 1 Salk. 368.

Any thing fixed to the freehold may not be taken in diſtreſs for rent or in execution, &c. It is not felony at Common law, only treſpaſs, to ſteal or take any thing annexed to the freehold; ſuch as lead on a church, or houſe, corn or graſs growing on the ground, apples on a tree, &c. Though if they are ſevered from the freehold, whether by the owner or a thief; if he ſever them at one time, and take them away at another, it is larceny to take them. 12 Aſſ. 32. 1 Hawk. 93. To ſteal lead on houſes, &c. is made felony, by a late ſtatute. 4 Geo. 2. c. 32.

The ſtatute of Magna Charta, c. 29. ordains, "that no perſon ſhall be diſſeiſed of his freehold, &c. but by judgment of his peers, or according to the law of the land;" which doth not only relate to common diſſeiſins, but the King may not otherwiſe ſeize into his hands the freehold of the ſubject. Wood's Inſt. 614. None ſhall diſtrain any freeholders to anſwer for their freeholds, or any thing touching the ſame, without the King's writ. Stat. 52 H. 3. c. 22. Nor ſhall any perſon be compelled to anſwer for his freehold, before any lord of a manor, &c. 15 R. 2. c. 12. Freehold eſtates, of certain values, are required by ſtatutes to qualify jurors; electors of knights of the ſhire in parliament, &c. See the reſpective titles.

Freeholders, Are ſuch as hold any freehold eſtate. By the ancient laws of Scotland, freeholders were called milites; and freehold, in this kingdom, hath been ſometimes taken in oppoſition to villenage, it being lands in the hands of the gentry and better ſort of tenants, by certain tenure, who were always freeholders, contrary to what was in the poſſeſſion of the inferior people, held at the will of the lord. Lambard.

Freeman, (liber homo) Is one diſtinguiſhed from a ſlave, that is born or made free; and theſe have divers privileges beyond others. The diſtinction of a freeman from a vaſſal under the feudal policy liber homo was commonly oppoſed to vaſſus or vaſſallus; the former denoting an allodial proprietor; the latter, one who held of a ſuperior.

Theſe free men were under an obligation to ſerve the ſtate, and this duty was conſidered ſo ſacred, that freemen were prohibited from entering into holy orders, unleſs they had obtained the conſent of the ſovereign. Robert. Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 216. See London.

The title of freeman is alſo given to any one, admitted to the freedom of a corporate town, or of any other corporate body, conſiſting, among other members, of thoſe called freemen.

Freight, (Fr. fret) Signifies the money paid for carriage of goods by ſea; or, in a larger ſenſe, it is taken for the cargo, or burthen of the ſhip. Ships are freighted either by the ton, or by the great; and in reſpect of time, the freight is agreed for, at ſo much per month, or at a certain ſum for the whole voyage. If a ſhip freighted by the great, happens to be caſt away, the freight is loſt; but if a merchant agrees by the ton, or at ſo much for every piece of commodities, and by any accident the ſhip is caſt away, if part of the goods is ſaved, it is ſaid ſhe ought to be anſwered her freight pro rata: and when a ſhip is inſured and ſuch a misfortune happens, the inſured commonly transfer thoſe goods over to the aſſurers, towards a ſatisfaction of what they make good. Lex Mercat. or Merchants Comp n. 79.

If freight is agreed for the lading and unlading of cattle at ſuch a port, and ſome die before the ſhip arrives there, the whole freight ſhall be paid for the living and the dead; but if the agreement be for tranſporting them, freight ſhall be only paid for the living: it is the ſame of ſlaves. Ibid. 85. The lading of a ſhip in conſtruction of law, is bound for the freight; the freight being in point of payment preferred before any other debts to which the goods ſo laden are liable, though ſuch debts as to time were precedent to the freight. Hil. 27 Car. 2. B. R. If part of the lading be on ſhip-board, and through ſome misfortune happening to the merchant, he has not his full lading aboard at the time agreed, the maſter ſhall have freight by way of damage, for the time thoſe goods were on board; and is at his liberty to contract with another, leſt he loſe his ſeaſon and voyage: and where a ſhip is not ready to take in, or the merchant not ready to lade his goods aboard, the parties are not only ſo at liberty, but the perſon damnified may bring an action againſt the other and recover his damages ſuſtained. Leg. Rhod.

If the freighter of a ſhip ſhall lade on board prohibited goods, or unlawful merchandize, whereby the ſhip is detained, or the voyage impeded; he ſhall anſwer the freight agreed for. Style 220. And when goods are laden aboard, and the ſhip hath broke ground, the merchant may not afterwards unlade them; for if he then changes his mind, and reſolves not to venture, but will unlade again, by the marine law the freight becomes due. If a maſter freights out his ſhip, and afterwards ſecretly takes in goods unknown to the firſt laders, by the law marine he forfeits his freight: and if a maſter of a ſhip ſhall put into any other port than what the ſhip was freighted to, he ſhall anſwer damages to the merchant; unleſs he is forced in by ſtorm, enemies, or pirates; and in that caſe he is obliged to ſail to the port agreed at his own expence. Leg. Oleron. A ſhip is freighted out and in, there ſhall be no freight due till the voyage is performed; ſo that if the ſhip be caſt away, coming home, the freight outwards, as well as inwards, are both gone. 1 Brownl. 21. See Charter-party.

French, King William I. called The Conqueror, being a native of Normandy in France, cauſed the laws of this realm, in his time, to be written and pleaded in the French language. 3 Rep. 17. But by the Stat. 37 Ed. 3. 15. All pleas that are pleaded in any of the King's courts, ſhall be pleaded in the Engliſh tongue; though appeals were ſtill to be arraigned, and the plea of the defendant read in French in the ſame manner as anciently. 2 *Hawk. Freſh Diſſeiſin, (friſca diſſeiſina, from the Fr. fraiz, i. e. recens & diſſeiſir, viz, poſſeſſione ejicere) Signifies that diſſeiſin, which a man might formerly ſeek to defeat of himſelf, and by his own power, without reſorting to the King, or the law; as where it was not above fifteen days old, or of ſome other ſhort continuance. Britton, c. 5. Of this, Bracton writes at large, concluding it to be arbitrary. Lib. 4. c. 5.

Freſh Fine, Is that which was levied within a year paſt: it is mentioned in the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 45.

Freſh Force, (friſca fortia) Is a force newly done in any city, borough, &c. And if a perſon be diſſeiſed of any lands or tenements within ſuch a city, or borough, he who hath a right to the land, by the uſage and cuſtom of the ſaid city, &c. may bring his aſſiſe, or bill of freſh force, within forty days after the force committed; and recover the lands. F. N. B. 7. Old Nat. Br. 4. This remedy may be alſo had where any man is deforced of any lands, after the death of his anceſtor, to whom he is heir; or after the death of tenant for life, or in tail, in dower, &c. within forty days after the title accrued; and in a bill of freſh force, the plaintiff or demandant ſhall make proteſtation to ſue in the nature of what writ he will, as aſſiſe of mortdanceſtor, of novel diſſeiſin, intruſion, &c. New Nat. Br. 15. The aſſiſe or bill of freſh force is ſued out without any writ from the Chancery; but after the forty days, there is to be a writ out of Chancery, directed to the mayor, &c.

But ejectments are now in uſe for recovering the poſſeſſion of lands, &c.

Freſh Suit, or Purſuit, (Recens inſecutio) Is ſuch a preſent and earneſt following of an offender, where a robbery is committed, as never ceaſes from the time of the offence done or diſcovered, until he be apprehended. Vide poſt. And the benefit of a purſuit of a felon is, that the party purſuing ſhall have his goods reſtored to him; which otherwiſe are forfeited to the King. Staundf. Pl. Cor. lib. 3. cap. 10. and 12. When an offender is thus apprehended, and indicted, upon which he is convicted, the party robbed ſhall have reſtitution of his goods; and though the party robbed do not apprehend the thief preſently, but that it be ſome time after the robbery, if the party did what in him lay to take the offender; and notwithſtanding in ſuch caſe he happen to be apprehended by ſome other perſon, it ſhall be adjudged freſh purſuit. Terms de Ley. It has been anciently holden, that to make a freſh ſuit, the party ought to make hue and cry with all convenient ſpeed, and to have taken the offender himſelf, &c. But at this day, if the party hath been guilty of no groſs negligence, but hath uſed all reaſonable care in inquiring after, purſuing, and apprehending the felon, he ſhall be allowed to have made ſufficient freſh ſuit. 2 Hawk. P. C. 169. Alſo it is ſaid, that the judging of freſh ſuit is in the diſcretion of the court, though it ought to be found by the jury; and the juſtices may, if they think fit, award reſtitution without making any inquiſition concerning the ſame. Ibid. 169, 171.

Where a gaoler immediately purſues a felon, or other priſoner, eſcaping from priſon, it is freſh ſuit, to excuſe the gaoler: and if a lord follow his diſtreſs into another's ground, on its being driven off the premiſſes, this is called freſh ſuit; ſo where a tenant purſues his cattle, that eſcape or ſtray into another man's lands, &c. Freſh ſuit may be either within the view, or without; as to which the law makes ſome difference: and it has been ſaid, that freſh ſuit may continue for ſeven years. 3 Rep. S. P. C.

Frettum and Frectum, The freight of a ſhip, or freight money.—Acquietari facietis frettum navium, &c. Clauſ. 17 Joh. m. 16.

Friburgh, alias Frithburgh, (frideburgum, from the Sax. frid. i. e. pax, & borge, fidejuſſor) Is the ſame with frank-pledge; the one being in the time of the Saxons, and the other ſince the Conqueſt: of theſe friburghs, Bracton treats, lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 10. And they are particularly deſcribed in the laws of King Edward, ſet out by Lambard, fol. 143. Fleta likewiſe writes on this ſubject, lib. 1. cap. 47. And Spelman makes a difference between friborg and frithborg; ſaying the firſt ſignifies libera ſecuritas, and the other pacis ſecuritas. Although friburghs or frighburghers were anciently required as principal pledges or ſureties for their neighbours, for the keeping of the peace; yet as to great perſons, they were a ſufficient aſſurance for themſelves, and their menial ſervants. Skene.

Fridſtoll and Frithſtow, (Sax. frid, pax, & ſtol, ſedes) A ſeat, chair, or place of peace. In the charter of immunities granted to the church of St. Peter in York by Hen. 1. and confirmed anno 5 H. 7. Fridſtoll is expounded cathedra pacis & quietudinis, &c. And there were many ſuch in England; but the moſt famous was at Beverley, which had this inſcription: hæc ſedes lapidea freedſtoll dicitur, i. e. pacis cathedra, ad quam reus fugiendo perveniens, omnimodam habet ſecuritatem. Camd.

Friendleſs Man, Was the old Saxon word for him whom we call an outlaw; and it is for this reaſon, becauſe he was, upon his expulſion from the King's protection, denied all help of friends, after certain days: nam foriſfecit amicos. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 12. See Friendwite.

Gage, (Fr. Lat. Vadium) Signifies as much as to pawn or pledge. Glanv. lib. 10. c. 6. And gage deliverance is where he that hath taken a diſtreſs being ſued, hath not delivered the cattle, etc. that were diſtrained; then he ſhall not only avow the diſtreſs; but gager deliverance, i. e. put in ſurety or pledges that he will deliver them. F. N. B. 67, 94. This gage deliverance is had on ſuing out replevins, upon the plaintiff's praying the ſame: and it is ſaid the parties are to be at iſſue, or there is to be a demurrer in law, before gage deliverance is allowed; and if a man claim any property in the goods, or the beaſts are dead in the pound. the party ſhall not gage, etc. Kitch. 145.

Gager del Ley, In old writings. See Wage and Wager of Law.

Gainage, (Gainagium, i. e. Plauſtri apparatus, Fr. Gaignage, viz. Lucrum) The gain or profit of tilled or planted land, raiſed by cultivating it; and the draught, plough, and furniture for carrying on the work of tillage, by the baſer kind of ſoke-men or villeins. Gainage was only applied to arable land, when they that had it in occupation, had nothing thereof but the profit raiſed by it from their own labour, towards their ſuſtenance, nor any other title but at the Lord's will: and gainer is uſed for a ſoke-man, that hath ſuch land in occupation. Bract. lib. 1. c. 9. Old Nat. Br. 117. The word gain is mentioned by Weſt. Symb. par. 2. ſect. 3. Where he ſays land in demeſne, but not in gain, etc. And in the ſtat. 51 H. 3. there are theſe words; "no man ſhall be diſtrained by his beaſts, that gain the land." By the ſtatute of Magna Charta, c. 14. Gainage is meant no more than the plough-tackle, or implements of huſbandry, without any reſpect to gain or profit; where it is ſaid of the knight and freeholder, he ſhall be amerced ſalvo contenemento ſuo; the merchant or trader, ſalvo merchandiſa ſua; and the villeins or countrymen, ſalvo gainagio ſuo. etc. In which caſes it was, that the merchant and huſbandman ſhould not be hindered, to the detriment of the public, or be undone by arbitrary fines; and the villein had his wainage, to the end that the plow might not ſtand ſtill; for which reaſon the huſbandmen at this day are allowed a like privilege by law, that their beaſts of the plough are not in many caſes liable to diſtreſs. See Wainage.

Gainery, (Fr. Gaignerie) Tillage, or the profit ariſing from it, or of the beaſts imployed therein. Stat. Weſt. 1. c. 6 and 17.

Game, (Aucupia, from Auceps, Aucupis, i. e. Avium captio) Birds or prey got by fowling and hunting: and deſtroying the game is an offence by ſtatute The Common law allows the hunting of foxes, and other ravenous beaſts of prey, in the ground of another perſon; tho' a man may not dig and break the ground to unearth them, without licence; if he doth, the owner of the ground may maintain an action of treſpaſs for it. 2 Roll. 538. Cro. Jac. 321. An action was brought againſt a perſon for entering another man's warren: the defendant pleaded that there was a pheaſant on his land, and his hawk purſued it into the plaintiff's ground; it was reſolved that this doth not amount to a ſufficient juſtification, for in this caſe he can only follow his hawk, and not take the game. Popb. 162. Tho' it is ſaid to be otherwiſe where the ſoil of the plaintiff is not a warren. 2 Rol. Abr. 567. If a man in hunting ſtarts a hare upon his own ground, and follows and kills it on the ground of another, yet ſtill the hare is his own, becauſe of the freſh ſuit; but if a man ſtarts a hare upon another perſon's ground, and hunts and kills it there, he is ſubject to an action, though it is ſeldom brought, being frivolous. Cro. Car. 553.

By the Common law, a property in thoſe living creatures, which by reaſon of their ſwiftneſs or fierceneſs were not naturally under the power of man, was gained by the mere caption or ſeizure of them; but as by this toleration perſons of quality and diſtinction were deprived of their recreations and amuſements, it was thought neceſſary to make laws for preſerving the game from idle and indigent people, who by their loſs of time and pains in ſuch purſuits were much impoveriſhed. 2 New Abr. 615.

Upon this ſubject we ſhall make ſome extracts from a very judicious and learned author, viz. Blackſtone. The qualifications for killing game, as they are uſually called, or more properly the exemptions from the penalties inflicted by the ſtatute law, are, 1. The having a freehold eſtate of 100 l. per Annum; there being fifty times the property required to enable a man to kill a partridge, as to vote for a knight of the ſhire: 2. A leaſehold for ninety-nine years of 150 l. per Annum: 3. Being the ſon and heir apparent of an eſquire, (a very looſe and vague deſcription) or perſon of ſuperior degree: 4. Being the owner or keeper of a foreſt, park, chaſe, or warren. For unqualified perſons tranſgreſſing theſe laws, by killing game, keeping engines for that purpoſe, or even having game in their cuſtody, or for perſons (however qualified) that kill game or have it in poſſeſſion, at unſeaſonable times of the year, there are various penalties aſſigned, corporal and pecuniary, by different ſtatutes; on any of which, but only on one at a time, the juſtices may convict in a ſummary way, or proſecutions may be carried on at the aſſizes. By ſtat. 28 Geo. 2. c. 12. No perſon, however qualified to kill, may make merchandize of this valuable privilege, by ſelling, or expoſing to ſale, any game, on pain of like forfeiture as if he had no qualification. Com. 4 V. 175.

The ſame author (id. 408, 409) treating of the alterations in our laws, and mentioning franchiſes granted of chaſe and free warren, as well to preſerve the breed of animals, as to indulge the ſubject; adds——From a ſimilar principle to which, tho' the foreſt laws are now mitigated, and by degrees grown intirely obſolete, yet from this root has ſprung a baſtard ſlip, known by the name of the Game Law, now arrived to, and wantoning in, its higheſt vigour: both founded upon the ſame unreaſonable notion of permanent property in wild creatures; and both productive of the ſame tyranny to the Commons: but with this difference; that the foreſt laws eſtabliſhed only one mighty hunter throughout the land, the game laws have raiſed a little Nimrod in every manor. And in one reſpect the antient law was much leſs unreaſonable than the modern; for the King's grantee of a chaſe or free-warren might kill game in every part of his franchiſe; but now, though a freeholder of leſs than 100 l. a year is forbidden to kill partridge upon his own eſtate, yet nobody elſe (not even the Lord of the manor, unleſs he hath a grant of free-warren) can do it without committing a treſpaſs, and ſubjecting himſelf to an action.

The ſeveral ſtatutes concerning the game.

No perſon ſhall take pheaſants or partridges with engines in another man's ground, without licence, on pain of 10 l. ſtat. 11 H. 7. c. 13. If any perſon ſhall take or kill any pheaſants or partridges, with any net in the night-time, they ſhall forfeit 20 s. for every pheaſant, and 10 s. for every partridge taken; and hunting with ſpaniels in ſtanding corn, incurs a forfeiture of 40 s. 23 Eliz. c. 10. Thoſe who kill any pheaſant, partridge, duck, heron, hare, or other game, are liable to a forfeiture of 20 s. for every fowl and hare; and ſelling, or buying to ſell again, any hare, pheaſant, &c. the forfeiture is 10 s. for each hare, &c. 1 Jac. 1. c. 17. Alſo pheaſants or partridges are not to be taken between the firſt of July and the laſt of Auguſt, on pain of imprisonment for a month, unleſs the offenders pay 20 s. for every pheaſant, &c. killed: and conſtables, having a juſtice of peace's warrant, may ſearch for game and nets, in the poſſeſſion of perſons not qualified by law to kill game, or to keep ſuch nets. 7 Jac. 1. c. 11. Conſtables, by warrant of a juſtice of peace, are to ſearch houſes of ſuſpected perſons for game: and if any game be found upon them, and they do not give a good account how they came by the ſame, they ſhall forfeit for every hare, pheaſant, or partridge, not under 5 s. nor exceeding 20 s. And inferior tradeſmen, hunting, &c. are ſubject to the penalties of the act, and may likewiſe be ſued for treſpaſs: if officers of the army or ſoldiers kill game without leave, they forfeit 5 l. an officer, and 10 s. a ſoldier. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23. higlers, chapmen, carriers, inn-keepers, victuallers, &c. having in their cuſtody, hare, pheaſant, partridge, heath-game, &c. (except ſent by ſome perſon qualified to kill game) ſhall forfeit for every hare and fowl 5 l. to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of their goods, being proved by one witneſs, before a juſtice; and for want of diſtreſs ſhall be committed to the houſe of correction for three months: one moiety of the forfeiture to the informer, and the other to the poor. And ſelling game, or offering the ſame to ſale, incurs the like penalty; wherein hare, and other game found in a ſhop, &c. is adjudged an expoſing to ſale: killing hares in the night is liable to the ſame penalties: and if any perſons ſhall drive wild fowls with nets, between the firſt day of July and the firſt of September, they ſhall forfeit 5 s. for every fowl. 5 Ann. c. 14. 9 Ann. c. 25. And penalties for killing and deſtroying game, are recoverable not only before juſtices of peace by the ſeveral ſtatutes;

but alſo by action of debt, bill, plaint or information, in any of his Majeſty's courts at Weſtminſter; and the plaintiff, if he recovers, ſhall likewiſe have double coſts. 8 G. 1. c. 19. If any perſon ſhall keep a gun not qualified, he ſhall forfeit 10 l. And perſons being qualified may take guns from thoſe that are not, and break them. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 25. 33 H. 8. c. 6.

One juſtice of peace, upon examination and proof of the offence, may commit the offender till he hath paid the forſeiture of 10 l. And perſons not qualified by law, keeping dogs, nets, or other engines to kill game, being convicted thereof before a juſtice of peace, ſhall forfeit 5 l. or be ſent to the houſe of correction for three months; and the dogs, game, &c. ſhall be taken from them, by the ſtat. 5 Ann.

No certiorari ſhall be allowed to remove any conviction or other proceeding on the ſtat. 5 Ann. &c. into any court at Weſtminſter, unleſs the party convicted become bound to the party proſecuting with ſufficient ſureties, in the ſum of 50 l. to pay the proſecutor his coſts and charges, &c. after the conviction confirmed, or a procedendo granted. Ibid. On a certiorari to remove a conviction before a juſtice, &c. for carrying a gun, not being qualified; it appeared upon the return to be taken before a certain juſtice of peace, without adding necnon ad diverſas felonias & tranſgreſſiones audiend. aſſign', &c. and it was ruled that this was a good exception upon a certiorari to remove an indictment taken at the ſeſſions; but not upon a conviction of this nature, becauſe the court can take notice that the ſtatutes give the juſtices authority in theſe caſes. 1 Vent. 33. Sid. 419.

A perſon was convicted before a juſtice of peace upon the ſtatute, for keeping a gun, not having 100 l. per Ann. and the conviction being removed into B. R. was quaſhed, for not ſaying when the defendant had not 100 l. a year; for it might be he had ſuch eſtate at the time when he kept the gun, tho' not at the conviction, and the offence and time ought to be certainly alledged. 3 Mod. 280. The defendant not having 100 l. per Ann. did uſe a gun in February, and was brought before a juſtice of peace in March following, and then by him convicted; and it was held, that as by the ſtatute no time was limited when the offender ſhould be carried before a juſtice to be examined, it therefore ought to be Inſtanter; which not being done, the conviction was quaſhed. If a perſon hunt upon the ground of another, ſuch other perſon cannot juſtify killing of his dogs, as appears by 2 Roll. Abr. 567. But it was otherwiſe adjudged Mich. 33 Car. 2. in C. B. Cro. Jac. 44. and ſee 3 Lev. 28. See ſtat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 22. See likewiſe 24 Geo. 2. c. 34. for the better preſervation of the game in Scotland. By the ſtat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 2. All ſuits and actions brought by virtue of ſtat. 8 Geo. 1. c. 19. for the recovery of any pecuniary penalty, or ſum of money, for offences committed againſt any law for the better preſervation of the game, ſhall be brought before the end of the ſecond term after the offence committed.

By 28 Geo. 2. c. 12. perſons ſelling, or expoſing to ſale, any game, are liable to the penalties inflicted by 5 Ann. c. 14. on higlers, &c. offering game to ſale: and game found in the houſe or poſſeſſion of a poulterer, ſaleſman, fiſhmonger, cook, or paſtrycook, is deemed expoſing thereof to ſale.

By 2 Geo. 3. c. 19. After the 1 June 1762, no perſon may take, kill, buy or ſell, or have in his cuſtody, any partridge, between 12 February and 1 September, or pheaſant, between 1 February and 1 October, or heath fowl, between 1 January and 20 Auguſt, or grouſe, between 1 December and 25 July, in any year; pheaſants taken in their proper ſeaſon and kept in mews, or breeding places, excepted: and perſons offending in any of the caſes aforeſaid, forfeit 5 l. per bird, to the proſecutor, to be recovered with full coſts, in any of the courts at Weſtminſter. By this act, likewiſe the whole of the pecuniary penalties under the 8 Geo. 1. c. 19. may be ſued for, and recovered to the ſole uſe of the proſecutor with double coſts; and no part thereof to go to the uſe of the poor of the pariſh.

By 5 Geo. 3. c. 14. After the 1 June 1765, perſous convicted, within ſix months after the offence, of ſtealing or deſtroying fiſh in fiſh-ponds, &c. or aiding or aſſiſting therein; or knowingly receiving or buying ſuch fiſh; are to be tranſported for ſeven years. Any offender making a diſcovery of, and convicting his accomplices, is intitled to pardon. Perſons convicted of taking or deſtroying, &c. Fiſh in rivers or other waters, forfeit to the owner of the fiſhery 5 l. On complaint of the offence, juſtice to iſſue his warrant for apprehending the offender; and the penalty to be paid down upon conviction; otherwiſe the offender to be committed to the houſe of correction for ſix months; or an action may be brought for the penalty in any of the courts at Weſtminſter, within ſix months after the offence. None liable to forfeit for taking fiſh in any river, &c. wherein they have a right.

Perſons convicted of entring warrens, in the night-time, and taking or killing conies there, or aiding or aſſiſting therein, may be puniſhed by tranſportation, or by whipping, fine or impriſonment. Perſons convicted on this act, not liable to be convicted under any former act. This act does not extend to the deſtroying conies in the day-time, on the ſea and river banks in the county of Lincoln, &c. No ſatisfaction to be made for damages occaſioned by entry, unleſs they exceed 1 s.

It may not be improper to mention an act made in the preſent reign, and not yet repealed, viz. 10 Geo. 3. c. 19. for preſervation of the game, which ſhews the importance of the object. It is thereby enacted, that if any perſon kill any hare, &c. between ſun-ſetting and ſun-riſing, or uſe any gun, &c. for deſtroying game, ſhall for the firſt offence be impriſoned for any time not exceeding ſix, nor leſs than three months. If guilty of a ſecond offence, after conviction of a firſt, to be impriſoned for any time not exceeding twelve months, nor leſs than ſix, and ſhall alſo within three days from the time of his commitment either for the firſt, or for any other offence, be once publicly whipped.

Offenders on a Sunday uſing a gun or engine for deſtroying game to forfeit on conviction twenty pounds. For want of diſtreſs the offendet to be committed for any time not exceeding ſix, nor leſs than three calendar months.

Perſons thinking themſelves aggrieved may appeal to the quarter ſeſſions, and the determinations of the juſtices there to be final. See farther Burn's Juſtice, title Game.

Game-keepers, Are thoſe who have the care of keeping and preſerving of the game, being appointed thereto by Lords of manors, etc. Lords of manors, or other royalties, not under the degree of an eſquire, may, by writing under hand and ſeal, authoriſe one or more game-keepers; who may ſeize guns, dogs, nets, and other engines, made uſe of to kill the game by ſuch perſons as are prohibited, for the uſe of the Lord of the manor, or otherwiſe deſtroy them. 22 and 23 Car. 2. c. 25.

Any Lord or Lady of a manor or lordſhip, may impower his or her game-keeper within their reſpective royalties, to kill hare, pheaſant, partridges, etc. But if the game-keeper, under colour of the ſaid power, ſhall kill, and afterwards ſell or diſpoſe thereof to any perſon whatſoever, without the conſent of the Lord or Lady of ſuch manor, upon conviction thereof, he ſhall be committed to the houſe of correction for three months, there to be kept to hard labour. 5 Ann. c. 14.

By the ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 25. no Lord or Lady of a manor ſhall make, conſtitute or appoint, above one perſon to be game-keeper within any one manor; with power to kill game; the name of which game-keeper ſo appointed, is to be entered with the clerk of the peace of the county wherein the manor lies: and if any other game-keeper ſhall preſume to kill any hare, pheaſant, partridge, &c. Or if any game-keeper ſhall ſell any hare, pheaſant, &c. he ſhall for every offence incur ſuch forfeitures as are inflicted by the act 5 Ann. c. 14.

And by 3 Geo. 1. c. 11. no Lord of a manor is to make or appoint any perſon to be a game-keeper, with power to take and kill hare, pheaſant, partridge, or other game, unleſs ſuch perſon be qualified by law ſo to do, or be truly and properly a ſervant to the ſaid Lord, or immediately employed to take and kill game for the ſole uſe or benefit of the ſaid Lord: and any perſon not qualified, or not employed as aforeſaid, who, under pretence of any qualification from any Lord of a manor, ſhall take or kill any hare, &c. or keep or uſe any dogs to kill and deſtroy the game, ſhall for every ſuch offence incur ſuch forfeitures, pains, and penalties, as are inflicted by the acts 5 Ann. c 14. 9 Ann. c. 25. By this laſt ſtatute, no game-keeper can qualify any perſon to kill game, or to keep guns, dogs, &c.

Where game-keepers ought to have a juſtice of peace's warrant, to take away guns from unqualified perſons, ſee Comberb. 305.

Appointment of a game-keeper by a Lord of a manor.

TO all people to whom theſe preſents ſhall come, I T. Lord A. Lord of the manor of B. in the county of, &c. have (by virtue of ſeveral acts of parliament lately made for the preſervation of the game) nominated, authoriſed and appointed, and by theſe preſents do nominate, authoriſe and appoint E. Gaming, or Games unlawful, (Ludos vanos) The playing at tables, dice, cards, &c. King Ed. 3. in the 39th year of his reign, injoined the exerciſe of ſhooting and of artillery, and forbad the caſting of the bar, the hand and foot balls, cock-fighting, & alios ludos vanos; but no effect did follow from it, till they were ſome of them forbidden by act of parliament. 11 Rep. 87. Anno 28 Hen. 8. Proclamation was made againſt all unlawful games, and commiſſions awarded into all the counties of England, for the execution thereof; ſo that in all places, tables, dice, cards and bowls, were taken and burnt. Stow's Annals 527. And by the ſtatute 33 H. 8. c. 9. Juſtices of peace, and head officers in corporations, are impowered to enter houſes ſuſpected of unlawful games; and to arreſt and impriſon the gameſters, till they give ſecurity not to play for the future: alſo the perſons keeping unlawful gaming houſes, may be committed by a juſtice, until they find ſureties not to keep ſuch houſes; who ſhall forfeit 40*s.* and the gameſters 6*s.* 8*d.* a time: and if the King licenſe the keeping of gaming-houſes, it is againſt law, and void.

No artificer, apprentice, labourer, or ſervant, ſhall play at tables, tennis, dice, cards, bowls, &c. out of Chriſtmas time, on pain of 20*s.* for every offence; and at Chriſtmas, they are to play in their maſter's houſe, or preſence: but any nobleman, or gentleman, having 100 l. per Annum eſtate, may licenſe his ſervants or family to play within the precincts of his houſe, or garden, at cards, dice, tables, or other games, as well among themſelves, as others repairing thither. Stat. Ibid. This act is to be proclaimed once a quarter, in every market-town, by the reſpective mayors, &c. and at every aſſiſes and ſeſſions. A perſon was convicted of keeping a cock-pit; and the court reſolved it to be an unlawful game, within the ſtat. 33 Hen. 8. c. 9. and fined him 40*s.* a day. Keb. 510. But to play at dice, &c. is not unlawful in itſelf, though prohibited by ſtatutes to certain perſons, and to be uſed in certain places. 2 Ventr. 175.

If any perſon, of what degree ſoever, ſhall by fraud, deceit, or unlawful device, in playing at cards, dice, tables, bowls, cock-fighting, horſe-races, foot-races, or other games or paſtimes, or bearing a ſhare in the ſtakes, betting, &c. win any money or valuable thing, he ſhall forfeit treble the value, one moiety to the crown, and the other to the party grieved, proſecution being in ſix months; in default whereof, the laſt mentioned moiety is to go to ſuch other perſon as will proſecute within one year, &c. 16 Car. 2. cap. 7. See the ſtat.

By the ſtatute of 9 Ann. cap. 14. all notes, bills, bonds judgments, mortgages, or other ſecurities, given for money won by playing at cards, dice, tables, tennis, bowls, or other games; or by betting on the ſides of ſuch as play at any of thoſe games, or for repayment of any money knowingly lent for ſuch gaming or betting, ſhall be void: And where lands are granted by ſuch mortgages or ſecurities, they ſhall go to the next perſon, who ought to have the ſame as if the grantor were actually dead, and the grants had been made to the perſon ſo intitled after the death of the perſon ſo incumbering the ſame. If any perſon playing at cards, dice, or other game, or betting, ſhall loſe the value of 10*l. at one time*, to one or more perſons, and ſhall pay the money, he may recover the money loſt by action of debt, within three months afterwards; and if the loſer do not ſue, any other perſon may do it, and recover the ſame, and treble the value with coſts, one moiety to the proſecutor, and the other to the poor: And the perſon proſecuted ſhall anſwer upon oath, on preferring a bill to diſcover what ſums he hath won.

Perſons by fraud or ill practice, in playing at cards, dice, or by bearing a ſhare in the ſtakes, etc. or by betting, winning any ſum above 10*l.* ſhall forfeit five times the value of the thing won, and ſuffer ſuch infamy and corporal puniſhment, as in caſes of wilful perjury, being convicted thereof on indictment or information; and the penalty ſhall be recovered by action, by ſuch perſon as will ſue for the ſame. And if any one ſhall aſſault and beat, or challenge to fight any other perſon, on account of money won by gaming, upon conviction thereof, he ſhall forfeit all his goods, and ſuffer impriſonment for two years. Stat. 9 Ann. c. 14.

Alſo by this ſtatute, any two or more juſtices of peace, may cauſe ſuch perſons to be brought before them as they ſuſpect to have no viſible eſtates, &c. to maintain them; and if they do not make it appear that the principal part of their expences is got by other means than gaming, the juſtices ſhall require ſecurities for their good behaviour for a twelvemonth; and in default of ſuch ſecurity, commit them to priſon until they find it: And playing or betting during the time, to the value of 20*s.* ſhall be deemed a breach of good behaviour, and a forfeiture of their recogniſances. Ibid.

Where it ſhall be proved before any juſtice of peace, that any perſon hath uſed unlawful games contrary to the Statute 33 Hen. 8. c. 9. the juſtice may commit ſuch offender to priſon, till he enter into a recogniſance that he ſhall not from thenceforth, at any time to come, play at any unlawful game. Statute 2 Geo. 2. cap. 28. For better preventing exceſſive and deceitful gaming; the ace of hearts, faron, baſſet, and hazard, are declared to be lotteries by cards or dice; and perſons ſetting up theſe games are liable to the penalty of 200*l.* And every perſon who ſhall be an adventurer, or play or ſtake therein, forfeits 50*l.* Likewiſe the ſale of any houſe, plate, &c. in the way of lottery by cards, &c. is adjudged void, and the things to be forfeited to any perſon that will ſue for the ſame. 12 Geo. 2. cap. 28. The game of paſſage, and all other games with one or more dice, or any thing in that nature, having figures or numbers thereon, (backgammon and games now played with thoſe tables only excepted) ſhall be deemed games or lotteries by dice, within the 12 Geo. 2. c. 28. And ſuch as keep any office or table for the ſaid game, &c. or play thereat, are ſubject to the penalties in that act. 13 Geo. 2. cap. 19.

By the Stat. 18 Geo. 2. cap. 34. Playing at, or keeping any houſe or place for playing at the game of roulet, otherwiſe roly-poly, or any other game with cards or dice already prohibited, incurs the penalties in Statute 12 Geo. 2. cap. 28. Perſons loſing 10*l.* and paying the ſame, may ſue the winner, and recover the ſame with coſts: And on a bill in equity the court may decree the ſame to be paid. The perſons who have juriſdiction to determine informations on the ſtatutes againſt gaming, may ſummon witneſſes, who, on refuſing to appear and give evidence, ſhall forfeit 50 l. No privilege of parliament ſhall be allowed on proſecution for keeping a gaming-houſe.

Perſons loſing 10 l. at one time, or 20 l. in twenty-four hours, may be indicted and fined five times the value. See the 25 Geo. 2. c. 36. concerning the manner of proſecuting perſons for keeping gaming-houſes, &c. See 1 Salk. 344-5. 5 Mod. 13. Mod. Caſ. 128.

Common gaming-houſes are a common nuſance in the eye of the law; not only becauſe they are great temptations to idleneſs, but as they draw together great numbers of diſorderly perſons to the diſturbance of the neighbourhood. 1 Hawk. P. C. 198.

Noy had a writ on the Stat. 33 Hen. 8. c. 9. to remove bowling-alleys, &c. which were pulled down, as common nuſances. 3 Keb. 465.

Cricket, adjudged a game within the 9th of Ann. c. 14. Wilſon, par. 1. 220. So as to a foot-race, but it muſt appear that a perſon was playing at ſuch a game, or elſe a wager laid on his ſide, is not a betting within the ſtatute. Ibid. par. 2. 36. A horſe-race is a game within the Stat. Ib. 309.

Gang-days. (Dies Luſtrationis) And gang-weeks are mentioned in the laws of King Athelſtan. See Rogation Week.

Gaol, (Gaola, Fr. Geole, i. e. Caveola, a cage for birds) Is uſed metaphorically for a priſon. It is a ſtrong place or houſe for keeping of debtors, &c. and wherein a man is reſtrained of his liberty to anſwer an offence done againſt the laws: And every county hath two gaols, one for debtors, which may be any houſe where the ſheriff pleaſes; the other for the peace and matters of the crown, which is the county gaol. Mod. Juſt. 230.

Under this head we may conſider according to the diviſion in the New Abr.

I. By what authority gaols may be erected, and at whoſe charge they are to be repaired.

II. To what place, and at whoſe charge, offenders are to be committed, and how they are to be maintained.

III. Of the offence of breaking gaol.

I. By what authority gaols may be erected, and at whoſe charge they are to be repaired.

Gaols are of ſuch univerſal concern to the public, that none can be erected by any leſs authority than an act of parliament. 2 Inſt. 705. All priſons and gaols belong to the King, although the ſubject may have the cuſtody or keeping of them. 2 Inſt. 100. It is ſaid, that none can claim a priſon as a franchiſe, unleſs they have alſo a gaol-delivery; and that therefore the Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter, though they have the cuſtody of the Gatehouſe priſon, yet as they have no gaol-delivery, they muſt ſend a kalendar of the priſoners to Newgate. 1 Salk. 343. Fareſl. 31. per. Holt Ch. J.

By the 14 Ed. 3. cap. 10. it is enacted, That the ſheriffs ſhall have the cuſtody of the gaols as before, and ſhall put in under-keepers for whom they will anſwer. This ſtatute is confirmed by 19 H. 7. cap. 10.

Although divers lords of liberties have the cuſtody of priſons, and ſome in fee, yet the priſon itſelf is the King's pro bono publico, and therefore it is to be repaired at the common charge. 2 Inſt. 589. If a gaol be out of repair, inſufficient, &c. the juſtices of peace in the quarter-ſeſſions may agree with workmen for rebuilding or repairing it; and, by warrant under their hands and ſeals, order the ſum agreed upon to be levied upon the ſeveral hundreds and diviſions in the county, by a proportionate rate. 11 & 12 W. 3. cap. 19. See 12 Geo. 2. c. 19.

II. To what place, and at whoſe charge offenders are to be committed, and how they are to be maintained.

Juſtices of peace may not commit felons, and other criminals to the counters in London, or other priſons but the common gaols, for legally they cannot impriſon any where but in the common gaol. Co. Lit. 9, 119. But the houſe of correction, and the counters of the ſheriffs of London, are the common priſons for offenders for the breach of the peace, &c.

By the 5 H. 4. cap. 10. it is enacted, "That none ſhall be impriſoned by any juſtice of the peace, but only in the common gaol, ſaving to lords and others, who have gaols, their franchiſe in this caſe".—This ſtatute is only declaratory of the Common law. 2 Inſt. 43.

But the court of King's Bench may commit to any priſon in the kingdom which they ſhall think moſt proper, and the offender ſo committed or condemned to impriſonment cannot be removed or bailed by any other court. Moor 666. pl. 913. 1 Sid. 145.

But by 31 Car. 2. c. 2. ſect. 12. No ſubject ſhall be ſent to foreign priſons.

And as priſoners ought to be committed at firſt to the proper priſon, ſo ought they not to be removed from thence, except in ſome ſpecial caſes.

To which purpoſe, by the ſaid ſtat. 31 Car. 2. c. 2. ſect. 9. it is enacted, "That if any ſubject of this realm ſhall be committed to any priſon, or in cuſtody of any officer, for any criminal or ſuppoſed criminal matter, he ſhall not be removed into the cuſtody of any other, unleſs it be by a habeas corpus, or other legal writ; or where the priſoner is delivered to the conſtable, &c. to be carried to ſome common gaol; or where any perſon is ſent by order of any judge of aſſiſe, or juſtice of the peace, to any common work-houſe, or houſe of correction; or where the priſoner is removed from one priſon to another within the ſame county, in order to a trial or diſcharge by due courſe of law; or in caſe of ſudden fire or infection, or other neceſſity; upon pain that he who makes out, ſigns, or counterſigns, or obeys, or executes ſuch warrant, ſhall forfeit to the party grieved one hundred pounds for the firſt offence, two hundred pounds for the ſecond, &c." See 19 Car. 2. cap. 4. for impowering juſtices of the peace to remove priſoners in caſe of infection.

By 11 & 12 Wil. 3. c. 10. All murderers and felons ſhall be impriſoned in the common gaol, and the ſheriffs ſhall have the keeping of the gaol.

As to the charge of conveying priſoners.

Offenders committed to priſon, are to bear the charges of their conveying to gaol; or, on refuſal, their goods ſhall be ſold for that purpoſe, by virtue of a juſtice of peace's warrant; and if they have no goods, a tax is to be made by conſtables, &c. on the inhabitants of the pariſh where the offenders were apprehended. 3 Jac. 1. cap. 10. And by 27 Geo. 2. c. 3. The expence of conveying poor offenders to gaol, or the houſe of correction, ſhall be paid by the treaſurer of the county, except in Middleſex.

For the relief of priſoners in gaols, juſtices of peace in ſeſſions have power to tax every pariſh in the county, not exceeding 8 d. per week, leviable by conſtables, and diſtributed by collectors, &c. 14 Eliz. cap. 5.

Alſo by 19 Car. 2. c. 4. Further proviſions are made for the relief of poor priſoners, and ſetting them to work. And by 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 20. It is enacted, "That "all ſheriffs, gaolers, &c. ſhall permit their priſoners to "ſend for neceſſary food where they pleaſe; nor demand "any greater fee for their commitment or diſcharge than "what is allowable." Alſo it is thereby directed, that an inquiry be made into all charities given for the benefit of poor priſoners. Laſtly, by 2 Geo. 2. c. 22. Chief juſtices, &c. are to examine into gifts for priſoners: And tables of ſuch gifts are to be hung up in the gaols, and regiſtered by the clerks of the peace.

III. As to breaking of priſon.

This offence, by the Common law, was no leſs than felony; and this whether the party were committed in a criminal, or civil caſe, or whether he were actually within the walls of the priſon, or only in the ſtocks, or in the cuſtody of any perſon who had lawfully arreſted him, or whether he were in the King's priſon, or one belonging to a lord, or franchiſe. 2 Inſt. 589. Staundf. P. C. 31. Cro. Car. 210.

But now, by the ſtatute 1 Ed. 2. ſtat. 2. "None from henceforth that breaketh priſon ſhall have judgment of life, or member, for breaking of priſon only, except the cauſe for which he was taken and impriſoned did require ſuch judgment, if he had been convict thereupon according to the law and cuſtom of the realm; albeit in times paſt it hath been uſed otherwiſe."

Any place whatſoever, wherein a perſon under a lawful arreſt for a ſuppoſed capital offence is reſtrained from his liberty, whether in the ſtocks or ſtreet, or in the common gaol, or the houſe of a conſtable, or private perſon, or the priſon of the ordinary, is a priſon within the ſtatute. 2 Inſt. 589. Dyer. 99. pl. 60. Crom. 38. Cro. Car. 210. Hale's P. C. 107.

That there muſt be an actual breaking, for the words felonice fregit priſonam, which are neceſſary in every indictment for this offence, cannot be ſatisfied without ſome actual force or violence; and therefore if the priſoner, without the uſe of any violent means, go out of the priſon doors, which he finds open by the negligence or conſent of the gaoler, or if he eſcape through a breach made by others without his privity, he is guilty of a miſdemeanor only, and not of felony. 2 Inſt. 589. Hale's P. C. 108. Staundſ. P. C. 31.

Nor will the breaking of priſon, which is neceſſitated by any accident, happening without any default of the priſoner, as where the priſon is fired by lightning, or otherwiſe, without his privity, and breaks out to ſave his life, come within the ſtatute. Plowd. 136. 2 Inſt. 590. Hale's P. C. 108. Nor is it felony to break a priſon, unleſs the priſoner eſcape. Keilw. 87. a.

If the impriſonment be for any offence made capital by a ſubſequent ſtatute, the breach of priſon is as much within the act of 1 Ed. 2. Stat. 2. as if the offence had always been felony; but if the offence, for which a man is committed, were but a treſpaſs at the time when he breaks the priſon, and afterwards become felony by a ſubſequent matter; as where one committed for having dangerouſly wounded a man, who afterwards dies, breaks the priſon before he dies, the fiction of law, (which to many purpoſes makes the offence a felony ab initio) ſhall not be carried ſo far as to make the priſon-breach alſo a felony, which, at the time when it was committed, was but a miſdemeanor. Hale's P. C. 108. 2 Inſt. 591. Plowd. 258.

Alſo it ſeems the better opinion, that if the offence, for which the party was committed, be in truth but a treſpaſs, the calling it felony in the mittimus, will not make the breaking of the gaol amount to felony; and that on the other ſide, if the offence were in truth a capital one, the calling it a treſpaſs in the mittimus will not bring it within the ſtatute; for the cauſe of impriſonment is what the ſtatute regards, and that is the offence, which can neither be leſſened, nor increaſed by a miſtake in the mittimus. But for this, ſee 2 Hawk. P. C. 126-7.

The offence of breaking priſon is but felony, whatſoever the crime were for which the party was committed, unleſs his intent were to favour the eſcape of others who were committed for treaſon, for that will make him a principal in the treaſon. 2 Hawk. P. C. 127.

He that breaks priſon may be proceeded againſt for ſuch crime before he be convicted of the crime for which he is committed, becauſe the breach of priſon is a diſtinct independent offence; but the ſheriff's return of a breach of priſon is not a ſufficient ground to arraign a man without an indictment. 2 Hawk. P. C. 127-8.

It is not ſufficient to indict a man generally, for having feloniouſly broken priſon; but the caſe muſt be ſet forth ſpecially, that it may appear he was lawfully in priſon, and for a capital offence. Hale's P. C. 109. 2 Inſt. 591. See Priſon, Marſhalſea.

Gaoler, Is the maſter of a priſon; one that hath the cuſtody of the place where priſoners are kept. Sheriffs muſt make ſuch gaolers for which they will anſwer: But if there is a default in the gaoler, action lies againſt him for an eſcape, &c. 2 Inſt 592. In common caſes, the ſheriff, or gaoler, is chargeable at the diſcretion of the party; though the ſheriff is moſt uſually charged. Wood's Inſt. 76. He who hath the cuſtody of the gaol wrongfully, or of right, ſhall be charged with the eſcape of priſoners; and if he that hath the actual poſſeſſion be not ſufficient, reſpondeat ſuperior. Ibid. A gaoler kills an unruly priſoner, it is no felony; but if it be by hard uſage, it is felony and murder. 3 Inſt. 52. And if a gaoler barbarouſly miſuſe priſoners, he may be fined and diſcharged. Raym. 216.

By the 14 Ed. 3. cap. 10. "If any keeper of a priſon or under-keeper, by too great dureſs of impriſonment, and by pain, make any priſoner that he hath in his ward to become an appellor againſt his will, he is guilty of felony."

By the 4 Ed. 3. c. 10. It is enacted, that the ſheriffs and gaolers ſhall receive, and ſafely keep in priſon, from henceforth ſuch thieves and felons, by the delivery of the conſtables and townſhips, without taking any thing for the receipt; and the juſtices to deliver the gaol, ſhall have power to hear their complaints, that will complain againſt the ſheriffs and gaolers in ſuch caſe, and moreover to puniſh the ſheriffs and gaolers, if they be found guilty. By the 23 H. 6. cap. 10. a gaoler upon commitment may take 4*d*.

By the 3 H. 7. c. 3. The ſheriff and every other perſon, having authority or power of keeping of gaol, or of priſoners for felony, ſhall certify the names of all priſoners in his cuſtody to the juſtices of gaol-delivery. And by Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 20. It is enacted, That the rates of fees, and government of priſons be ſigned by the Lord, Chief Juſtices, &c. and hung up in every gaol, fairly written.

And farther, that felons and priſoners for debt, ſhall not be lodged together. No fees ſhall be taken by gaolers of priſoners, but ſuch as are allowed by law, and the judges, &c. are to ſettle the ſame; alſo the judges may determine petitions againſt extortions of gaolers, bailiffs, &c. Stat. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 22. See 28 Geo. 2. c. 13. And 30 Geo. 2. c. 18.

If any perſon aſſault a gaoler, for keeping a priſoner in ſafe cuſtody, he may be fined and impriſoned. 1 Hawk. 58, 59. Where a gaol is broken by thieves, the gaoler is anſwerable; not if it be broken by enemies. 3 Inſt. 52.

It ſeems clearly agreed, that a gaoler by ſuffering voluntary eſcapes, by abuſing his priſoners, by extorting unreaſonable fees from them, or by detaining them in gaol, after they have been legally diſcharged, and paid their juſt fees, forfeits his office; for that in the grant of every office it is implied, that the grantee execute it faithfully and diligently. Co. Lit. 233. 9 Co. 5. 3 Mod. 143.

By 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 27. The marſhal and warden taking any reward to connive at priſoners eſcape, forfeits 500*l*. and his ſaid office, and be for ever after incapable of executing any ſuch office.

It hath been reſolved, that a forfeiture by a gaoler who hath but a particular intereſt, as of him who hath cuſtody of a gaol for life, or years, does not affect him in remainder, or reverſion, who hath the inheritance, but that upon ſuch forfeiture his title ſhall accrue, and not go to the King. Popb. 119. 2 Lev. 71. Raym. 216. 3 Lev. 288.

But by the 8 & 9. W. 3. c. 27. It is enacted, That the office of marſhal of the King's Bench, and warden of the Fleet, ſhall be executed by thoſe who have the inheritance of the ſaid priſons, or their deputies, &c.

By the 3 Geo. 1. cap. 15. None ſhall purchaſe the office of gaoler, or any other office pertaining to the high ſheriff, under pain of 500*l*. And a gaoler in fact, is as much puniſhable for a miſdemeanor in his office, as if he were a a rightful gaoler. 2 Hawk. 134.

Gaol-delivery. The adminiſtration of juſtice being originally in the crown, in former times our Kings in perſon rode through the realm once in ſeven years, to judge of and determine crimes and offences; afterwards juſtices in eyre were appointed; and ſince juſtices of aſſiſe and gaol-delivery, &c. A commiſſion of a gaol-delivery is a patent in nature of a letter from the King to certain perſons, appointing them his juſtices, or two, or three, of them, and authoriſing them to deliver his gaol, at ſuch a place, of the priſoners in it; for which purpoſe, it commands them to meet at ſuch a place, at the time they themſelves ſhall appoint; and informs them, that for the ſame purpoſe the King hath commanded his ſheriff of the ſame county to bring all the priſoners of the gaol, and their attachments before them, at the day appointed. Cromp. Juriſd. 125. 4 Inſt. 168.

Juſtices of gaol-delivery are impowered by the Common law to proceed upon indictments of felony, treſpaſs, &c. and to order execution or reprieve: And they have power to diſcharge ſuch priſoners, as upon their trials ſhall be acquitted; alſo all ſuch againſt whom, upon proclamation made, no evidence appears to indict them; which juſtices of oyer and terminer, &c. may not do. 2 Hawk. 24, 25. But theſe juſtices have nothing to do with any perſon not in cuſtody of the priſon, except in ſome ſpecial caſes; as if ſome of the accomplices to a felony be in ſuch priſon, and ſome of them out of it, the juſtices may receive an appeal againſt thoſe who are out of the priſon, as well as thoſe who are in it; which appeal, after the trial of ſuch priſoners, ſhall be removed into B. R. and proceſs iſſue from thence againſt the reſt. Fitz. Coron. 77. S. P. C. 64. Such juſtices have no more to do with one let to mainpriſe, than if he were at large; for ſuch perſon cannot be ſaid to be a priſoner, ſince it is not in the power of his ſureties to detain him in their cuſtody: And where any perſon is bailed, there he is in the cuſtody of his ſureties, and they may detain him where they pleaſe. 2 H. P. C. 25. Though per Holt Ch. J. If a perſon be let to bail, yet he is in law in priſon, and his bail are his keepers; and therefore the juſtices of gaol-delivery may take an indictment againſt him, as well as if he was actually in gaol. And they may take indictments not only of felony, but alſo of high treaſon, if the offenders are in priſon, and try and give judgment upon them, like unto commiſſioners of oyer and terminer; though it has been formerly held otherwiſe. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 35. Juſtices of gaol-delivery may puniſh thoſe who unduly bail priſoners; as being guilty of a negligent eſcape. S. P. C. 77. 25 Ed. 3. 39. They are alſo to puniſh ſheriffs and gaolers, refuſing to take felons into their cuſtody from conſtables, &c. 4 Ed. 3. 10. and have authority to puniſh many particular offences by ſtatute.

The granting a new commiſſion of gaol-delivery, or of the peace, in a town corporate, ſhall not avoid the former commiſſion, 2 & 3 Ph. & Mar. c. 18. Juſtices of gaol-delivery may act in their counties. 12 Geo. 2. c. 27.

Garb, (Garba, from the Fr. Garbe, alias Gerbe, i. e. faſcis) Signifies a bundle or ſheaf of corn. Chart. Foreſt. cap. 7. And in ſome places it is taken for an handful, viz. Garba aceris fit ex triginta peciis. Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 12. Garba ſagittarum is a ſheaf of arrows containing twenty-four. Skene.

Garble, Is to ſever the droſs and duſt from ſpice, drugs, &c. Garbling is the purifying and cleanſing the good from the bad; and may come from the Italian Garbo, i. e. Finery or neatneſs; and thence probably we ſay, when we ſee a man in a neat habit, that he is in a handſome Garb. Cowel.

Garbler of Spices, An officer of antiquity in the city of London, who may enter into any ſhop, warehouſe, &c. to view and ſearch drugs and ſpices, and garble and make clean the ſame, or ſee that it be done. 21 Jac. 1. c. 19. And all drugs, &c. are to be cleanſed and garbled before ſold, on pain of forfeiture, or the value. Stat. Ibid. But ſee Stat. 6 Ann. cap. 16.

Garcio, (Fr. Garcon) A groom or ſervant. Pla. Cor. 21 Ed. 1. Garcio ſtolæ, groom of the ſtole to the King: And in the Iriſh language, (according to Toland) garſon is an appellative for any menial ſervant. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Garciones, Are thoſe ſervants who follow the camp. ——— Habeat garcionem ſuo ſervitio ſemper attendentem. Ingulph. 886. And the word garciones hath been applied to the baggage of an army; ſo called a garcionibus ſive militum famulis. Walſing. 242. See Dict. de Trevoux.

Gardebrache, (Fr. Gardebrace) An armour or vambrace for the arm. Chart. K. Hen. 5.

Gardens. Robbing of gardens of fruit growing therein, puniſhable criminally by whipping, ſmall fines, impriſonment, and ſatisfaction to the party wronged, according to the nature of the offence. See 43 Eliz. c. 7. 15 Car. 2. c. 2. 23 Geo. 2. c. 26. 31 Geo. 2. c. 35. and 6 Geo. 3. c. 36, 48.

Garderobe, (Garderoba) A cloſet or ſmall apartment, for hanging up clothes, being the ſame with wardrobe. See 2 Inſt. 255.

Gardia, Is a word uſed by the feudiſts for cuſtodia. Lib. Feud. 1.

Gare, A coarſe wool, full of ſtaring hairs, ſuch as grow about the ſhanks of ſheep. 31 Ed. 3. cap. 8.

Garlanda, A chaplet, coronet, or garland. Mat. Pariſ.

Garnestura, Victuals, arms, and other implements of war, neceſſary for the defence of a town or caſtle. Mat. Pariſ. Ann. 1250.

Garnish, To garniſh the heir, ſignifies in law to warn the heir. Stat. 27 Eliz. cap. 3.

Garnishment, (Fr. Garnement, from Garnir, i. e. inſtruere) In a legal ſenſe intends a warning given to one for his appearance, for the better furniſhing of the cauſe and court. For example; one is ſued for the detinue of certain writings delivered; and the defendant alledging that they were delivered to him by the plaintiff, and another perſon, upon condition, prays that the other perſon may be warned to plead with the plaintiff, whether the condition be performed or not; in this petition he is ſaid to pray garniſhment; which may be interpreted either a warning of that other, or a furniſhing the court with all parties to the action, whereby it may thoroughly determine the cauſe; and until he appears and joins, the defendant is as it were out of the court. Cromp. Juriſ. 211. F. N. B. 106. A writ of ſcire facias is to go forth againſt the other perſon to appear and plead with the plaintiff; and when he comes and thus pleads, it is called enterpleader: If the garniſhee be returned ſcire feci, and make default, judgment will be had to recover the writings, and for their delivery, againſt the defendant; and if the garniſhee appears and pleads, if the plaintiff recovers, he ſhall have damages. Raſt. 213. 1 Brownl. 147.

Garniſhment is generally uſed for a warning; as garniſher le court is to warn the court; and reaſonable garniſhment, is where a perſon hath reaſonable warning. Kitch. 6. In the Stat. 27 Eliz. cap. 3. we read, upon a garniſhment or two nihils returned, &c. And further, ſome contracts are naked, ſans garnement, and ſome furniſhed, &c.

Garnishee, Is a third perſon or party in whoſe hands money is attached within the liberties of the city of London, by proceſs out of the ſheriff's court; ſo called, becauſe he hath had garniſhment or warning, not to pay the money to the defendant, but to appear and anſwer to the plaintiff creditor's ſuit. Vide Attachment.

Garnisture, A furniſhing or providing. Pat. 17 Ed. 3. Vide Garneſtura.

Garsummune, Gerſuma, or Gerſoma, A fine or amerciament. Domeſday, Spelm. Gloſſ.

Garter. (Garterium, Fr. Jartier, i. e. Periſcelis, Faſcia poplitaria) Signifies in divers ſtatutes, and elſewhere, a ſpecial garter, being the enſign of a noble order of knights, inſtituted by King Ed. 3. anno dom. 1344. called Knights of the Garter: It is alſo taken for the principal King at arms, among our Engliſh heralds, attending upon the Knights thereof; created by King Hen. 5. and mentioned in the Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 33.

The firſt dignity after that of nobility, is that of a Knight of the Order of Saint George, or of the Garter. Indeed many ſovereign Princes have been proud of the order, and conſidered themſelves as highly honoured by our Sovereign's conferring it on them.

Garth, A little backſide or cloſe in the North of England; being an ancient Britiſh word, as gardd in that language is garden, and pronounced and writ garth; alſo a dam or wear, &c.

Garthman. As there are fiſhgarths or wears for catching of fiſh, ſo there are garthmen; for by ſtatute it is ordained, that no fiſher nor garthman ſhall uſe any nets or engines to deſtroy the fry of fiſh, &c. 17 R. 2. cap. 9. And this word is ſuppoſed to be derived from the Scottiſh gart, which ſignifieth inforced, or compelled; and fiſh are forced by the wear to paſs in at a loop where they are taken.

Gaſtaldus, A governor of the country, whoſe office was only temporary, and who had juriſdiction over the common people. Blount.

Gate, At the end of the names of places, ſignifies a way or path, from the Sax. geat, i. e. porta, The cuſtody of the gates of the city of London, is granted to the Lord Mayor, &c. by Chart. King Hen. 4.

Gabel, (Sax. gafel) Tribute, toll, cuſtom or yearly revenue; of which we had in old time ſeveral kinds. See Gabel.

Gavelet, (gaveletum) Is an ancient and ſpecial kind of ceſſavit uſed in Kent, where the cuſtom of gavelkind continues, whereby a tenant, if he with-holds his rents and ſervices due to the lord, ſhall forfeit his land: it was intended where no diſtreſs could be found on the premiſſes, ſo that the lord might ſeize the land itſelf in the nature of a diſtreſs, and keep it a year and a day; within which time, if the tenant came and paid his rent, he was admitted to his tenement to hold it as before; but if not, the lord might enter and enjoy the ſame. 10 H. 3. 10 Ed. 2. The lord was to ſeek by the award of his court, from three weeks to three weeks, to find ſome diſtreſs upon the land or tenement, until the fourth court; and if in that time he could find none, at the fourth court it was awarded that the tenement ſhould be ſeiſed as a diſtreſs, and kept in the lord's hands a year and a day without manuring; and if the tenant did not in that time redeem it, by paying the rent and making amends to the lord, the lord having pronounced his proceſs by witneſſes at the next county court, was awarded by his court to enter and manure the tenement as his own: and if the tenant would afterwards have it again, he was to make agreement with the lord. Fitz. Ceſſ. 60. Terms de Ley.

Gaveletum is as much as to ſay to ceaſe, or to let to pay the rent; and conſuetudo de gavelet was not a rent or ſervice, but a rent or ſervice with-held, denied or detained, cauſing the forfeiture of the tenement.

Gavelet in London, (breve de gaveleto in London, pro redditu ibidem, quia tenementa fuerunt indiſtringibilia) Is a writ uſed in the buſtings of London; and the ſtatute of gavelet, 10 Ed. 2. gives this writ to lords of rents in the city of London, as well as in Kent: here the parties, tenant and demandant, appear by ſcire facias, to ſhew cauſe why the one ſhould not have his tenement again on payment of his rent, or the other recover the lands, on default thereof. Practic. Solic. 419.

Gavelgeld, Is applied to the payment of tribute or toll. Mon. Ang. tom. 3.

Gavelkind, Is ſaid by Lambard to be compounded of three Saxon words, gyfe, eal, kyn, omnibus cognatione proximis data. Verſtegan calls it gavelkind, quaſi give all kind, that is to each child his part: and Taylor, in his hiſtory of gavelkind, derives it from the Britiſh gavel, i. e. a hold or tenure, and cenned, generatio aut familia; and ſo gavel cenedh might ſignify tenura generationis. But, whatever is the etymology, it ſignifies a tenure or cuſtom, annexed and belonging to lands in Kent, whereby the lands of the father are equally divided at his death among all his ſons; or the land of the brother among all the brethren, if he have no iſſue of his own. Lit. 210. In the time of our Saxon anceſtors, the inheritance of lands did not deſcend to the eldeſt ſon as now, but to all alike; from whence came the cuſtom of gavelkind: and the reaſon why this cuſtom was retained in Kent, is, according to ſome, becauſe the Kentiſh men were not conquered by the Normans in the time of William I. For Stigand, then Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who commanded the forces in the country, ordered every man to march with boughs in their hands, and meeting William, they acquainted him with their reſolution of ſtanding or falling in defence of the laws of their country, and he imagining himſelf to be encompaſſed in a wood, granted that they and their poſterity ſhould enjoy their rights, liberties and laws; ſome of which, particularly this of gavelkind, continues to this day. Blount.

All the lands in England, were of the nature of gavelkind before the Conqueſt, and deſcended to all the iſſue equally; but after the Conqueſt (as it is called) when knight-ſervice was introduced, the deſcent was reſtrained to the eldeſt ſon for the preſervation of the tenure. Lamb. 167. 3 Salk. 129. In the reign of Hen. 6. there were not above thirty or forty perſons in all Kent that held by any other tenure than this of gavelkind; which was afterwards altered upon the petition of divers Kentiſh gentlemen, in much of the land of that county, ſo as to be deſcendible to the eldeſt ſon, according to the courſe of the Common law, by the Stat. 31 H. 8. cap. 3. Though the cuſtom to deviſe gavelkind land, and the other qualities and cuſtoms remain. Co. Lit. 140. By the Stat. 34 & 35 Hen. 8. cap. 26. ſect. 128. All gavelkind lands in Wales were made deſcendible to the heir, according to the Common law; whereby it appears, that the tenure of gavelkind was likewiſe in that principality.

By the cuſtomary tenure called gavelkind, which is an ancient ſocage tenure, the lands are dividable between the heirs male who ſhall inherit as ſiſters do at Common law; and when one brother dies without iſſue, all the other brothers are to inherit. Co. Lit. 140. But a father having gavelkind lands, had three ſons, one of whom died in the life-time of his father, leaving iſſue a daughter; and it was held that the daughter ſhall inherit the part of her father jure repræſentationis, and yet ſhe is not within the words of the cuſtom of dividing the land between the heirs male, for ſhe is the daughter of a male, and heir by repreſentation. 1 Salk. 243. The heir at the age of fifteen years, it is ſaid, may give and ſell his lands in gavelkind, and ſhall inherit. Co. Lit. 111. The cuſtom of gavelkind is not altered, though a fine be levied of the lands at Common law; becauſe it is a cuſtom that runs with the land. 6 Ed. 6.

Land in gavelkind was deviſed to the huſband and wife for life, remainder to the next heir male of their bodies, &c. They had three ſons, and it was adjudged that the eldeſt ſon ſhould not have the whole. Dyer 133. A donee in tail, of gavelkind lands, had iſſue four ſons; and it was held, that all ſhould inherit: but if a leaſe for life is made of gavelkind, remainder to the right heirs of A. B. who hath iſſue four ſons, in this caſe the eldeſt ſon ſhall inherit the remainder, becauſe, in caſe of purchaſe, there can be but one right heir. 1 Rep. 103. If gavelkind lands come to the crown, and are regranted to hold in capite, &c. the land ſhall deſcend to all the heirs male as gavelkind. 4 & 5 Mar. 2. Nelſ. Abr. 895.

A wife ſhall be endowed of gavelkind land, of a moiety of the land whereof her huſband died ſeiſed, during her widowhood. Co. Lit. 111. And it has been adjudged, that the widow cannot have election to demand her thirds or dower at Common law, ſo as to avoid the cuſtom, by which ſhe ſhall loſe her dower, if ſhe marry a ſecond huſband. Moor 260. But ſee 1 Leon. 62.

The huſband ſhall be tenant by the curteſy of half the gavelkind lands of the wife, during the time he continues unmarried, without having any iſſue by his wife; but if he marry, he ſhall forfeit his tenancy by the curteſy. Co. Lit. 111. If the huſband had iſſue by his wife, and ſhe die, he ſhall be tenant by the curteſy of the whole land; and though he marry, he ſhall not forfeit his tenancy. Mich. 21 Car. B. R. 1 Lil. Abr. 649.

It was formerly ſuppoſed that although a father was attainted of treaſon or felony, the heir of gavelkind land ſhould inherit, for the cuſtom, as ſaid, was, the father to the bough and the ſon to the plough. Doct. & Stud. c. 10. But, it is now held, that, in matters of treaſon, which ſtrike at the foundations of policy and government, even gavelkind lands are forfeitable, and always were. Conſiderations on the law of Forfeitures, &c. 52.

A rent in fee granted out of gavelkind lands, ſhall deſcend in gavelkind to all the heirs male, as the lands would have done; it being of the ſame nature with the land itſelf. 2 Lev. 138. 1 Mod. 97.

All lands in Kent ſhall be taken to be gavelkind, except thoſe which are diſgavelled by particular ſtatutes. 1 Mod. 98. It is a doubt now, if any one eſtate in the county of Kent, can be proved to be diſgavelled. Vide 31 H. 8. c. 3. If lands are alledged to be in Kent, it ſhall be intended that they are gavelkind; if the contrary doth not appear. 2 Sid. 153. By Hale Ch. J. gavelkind law, is the law of Kent, and is never pleaded, but preſumed: and it has been held, that the ſuperior courts may take notice of gavelkind generally without pleading: tho' not of the ſpecial cuſtom of deviſing it, &c. which ought to be pleaded ſpecially. Gaugetum, A gauge or gauging, done by the gauger; and the true Engliſh gauge is mentioned. Rot. Parl. 35 Ed. 1.

Gauger, (gaugeator, Fr. ganchir, i. e. in gyrum torquere) Signifies an officer appointed by the King, to examine all tuns, pipes, hogſheads, barrels and tercians of wine, oil, honey, &c. and to give them a mark of allowance, as containing lawful meaſure, before they are ſold in any place: and becauſe his mark is a circle made with an iron inſtrument for that purpoſe, it ſeems to have its name from thence. Of this officer and his office, we have many ſtatutes; as by 27 Ed. 3. cap. 8. all wines, &c. imported, are to be gauged by the King's gaugers, or their deputies. By 31 Ed. 3. c. 5. Selling wine, before gauged, incurs forfeiture of the value And by 23 Hen. 6. cap. 16. the gauge-penny is to be paid gaugers, on gauging wines. The 31 Eliz. c. 8. ordains, that beer, &c. imported, ſhall be gauged by the Maſter and Wardens of the Cooper's Company. See 12 Car. 2. c. 4.

Veſſels brought from beyond ſea, and uſed for utterance of ale and beer, ſhall be gauged, 31 Eliz. c. 8. General Iſſue, Is a plea to the fact of Not Guilty, in criminal caſes, in order to trial, by the country, or by peers, &c. H. P. C. 254. In civil ſuits, there are various pleas, which are general iſſues, according to the ſpecies of the action, as in treſpaſs, Not Guilty, in caſe on promiſes, non aſſumpſit, &c.

Generatio. When an old abbey, or religious houſe, had ſpread itſelf into many colonies, or depending cells, that iſſue or offſpring of the mother monaſtery was called generatio, quaſi proles & ſuboles matricis domus. Annal. Waverl. 1232.

Generale. The ſingle commons, or ordinary proviſion of the religious, were termed generale, as their general allowance, diſtinguiſhed from their pietantiæ, or pittances; which on extraordinary occaſions were thrown in as over commons. In the obſervances of the Cluniac monks, they are deſcribed thus: Generale appellamus quod ſingulis in ſingulis datur ſcutellis: pietantia quod in una ſcutella duobus. They are alſo deſcribed amongſt other cuſtoms. *Cartular. Gentleman, (generoſus) Is compounded of two languages, from the Fr. gentil, i. e. honeſtus, vel honeſto loco natus, and the Sax. mon, a man; as if you would ſay a man well born. The Italians call thoſe gentil homini whom we ſtyle gentleman; the French likewiſe diſtingniſh ſuch by the name of gentilhomme: and the Spaniards keep up to the meaning of the word, calling him hidalgo or hijo d'alga, who is the ſon of a man of account; ſo that gentlemen are ſuch whom their blood or race doth make known.

Under the denomination of gentlemen, are compriſed all above yeomen; whereby noblemen are truly called gentlemen. Smith de Rep. Angl. lib. 1. cap. 20, 21. A gentleman is generally defined to be one, who, without any title, bears a coat of arms, or whoſe anceſtors have been freemen; and by the coat that a gentleman giveth, he is known to be, or not to be, deſcended from thoſe of his name, that lived many hundred years ſince.

Cicero, in his Topicks, ſpeaks thus on the ſubject; gentiles ſunt, qui inter ſe eodem ſunt nomine ab ingenuis oriundi, quorum majorum nemo ſervitutem ſurvivit, qui capite non ſunt diminuti. There is ſaid to be a gentleman by office, and in reputation, as well as thoſe that are born ſuch. 2 Inſt. 668. And we read that J. Kingſton was made a gentleman by King R. 2. Pat. 13 R. 2. par. 1. Gentilis homo for a gentleman, was adjudged a good addition. Hill. 27 Ed. 3. But the addition of eſquire, or gentleman, was rare before 1 Hen. 5. tho' that of knight is very antient. 2 Inſt. 595, 667.

Gentlewoman, (generoſa) Is a good addition for the eſtate and degree of a woman, as generoſus is for that of a man; and if a gentlewoman be named ſpinſter in any original writ, appeal, &c. it hath been held that ſhe may abate and quaſh the ſame. 2 Inſt. 668. Sed qu. If ſpinſter is not a good addition, for an unmarried woman, ſuppoſed to be a virgin, as ſingle woman is, for one who being unmarried hath had a baſtard?

Gentility, (gentilitas) Is loſt by attainder of treaſon, or felony, by which perſons become baſe and ignoble, &c.

Genu, Is a generation.——Succeſſit Ethelbaldo Offa quinto Genu. Malmſb. lib. 1. c. 4.

Genus, (Lat.) The general ſtock, extraction, &c. as the word office in law is the genus, or general; but the ſheriff, &c. is the ſpecies of it, or particular. 2 Lill. Abr. 528.

Genus, among metaphyſicians and logicians, denotes a number of beings, which agree in certain general properties, common to them all; ſo that a genus is, in fact, only an abſtract idea, expreſſed by ſome general name or term; or rather a general name or term, to ſignify what is called an abſtract idea.

Gift, (donum) Is a conveyance, which paſſeth either lands or goods. And a gift is of a larger extent than a grant, being applied to things moveable and immoveable; yet as to things immoveable, when ſtrictly taken, it is applicable only to lands and tenements given in tail; but gifts and grants are ſaid to be alike in nature and often confounded. Wood's Inſt. 260. A gift may be by deed, in word, or in law: all goods and chattels perſonal may be given without deed, except in ſome ſpecial caſes; and a free gift is good without a conſideration. Perk. 57. But a general gift of all one's goods, without any exception, though by deed, is liable to ſuſpicion as fraudulent, to deceive creditors; for by giving all a man's goods, there ſeems to be a ſecret truſt and confidence implied, that the donee ſhall deal favourably with the donor, in reſpect to his circumſtances. 3 Rep. 80. Therefore whenever any gift ſhall be made, in ſatisfaction of a debt, it is good to make it in a public manner before neighbours, that the goods and chattels be appraiſed to the full value, and the gift expreſly made in ſatisfaction of the debt; and that on the gift, the donee take poſſeſſion of them, &c. Hob. 230.

If a man intending to give a jewel to another, ſay to him, Here I give you my ring with the ruby in it, &c. and with his own hand delivers it to the party, this will be a good gift; notwithſtanding the ring bear any other jewel, being delivered by the party himſelf, to the perſon to whom given. Bac. Max. 87. And if a perſon give a horſe to another, being preſent, and bid him take the horſe, though he call the man by a wrong name, it will be a good gift; but it would be otherwiſe if the horſe were delivered for the uſe of another perſon, being abſent: there a miſtake of the name would alter the caſe. Ibid. A gift muſt be certain; therefore to give or grant another his horſes or cows, that may be ſpared, will be void; though if one give to A. B. his horſe, or his cow, he may take which he will. Bro. Done 90.

By the Stat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. "No leaſes, eſtates or intereſts either of freehold, or terms of years, or any uncertain intereſt, not being copyhold or cuſtomary intereſt, of, in, to or out of, any meſſuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, ſhall at any time be aſſigned, granted or ſurrendered, unleſs it be by deed or note in writing, ſigned by the party ſo aſſigning, granting or ſurrendering the ſame, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, or by act and operation of law."

As to gifts in law when a man is married to a woman, all her goods and chattels by gift in law become the huſband's; but then he is liable for her debts: ſo if a man is made executor, the law gives him all the goods and chattels of the teſtator, ſubject to his debts. 1 Inſt. 351. With reſpect to an executor, it is a point of great conſequence: therefore ſee, what the learned Blackſtone ſays on the ſubject.

In his Commentaries, 2 V. 514. he thus lays down the doctrine as to executors, "When all the debts and particular legacies are diſcharged, the ſurplus or reſiduum muſt be paid to the reſiduary legatee, if any be appointed by the will; and, if there be none, it was long a ſettled notion that it devolved to the executor's own uſe, by virtue of his executorſhip. Perkins 525. But, whatever ground there might have been formerly for this opinion, it ſeems now to be underſtood [Prec. Chanc. 323. 1 P. Wms. 7. 544. 2 P. Wms. 338. 3 P. Wms. 43. 194. Stra. 559.] with this reſtriction; that, altho' where the executor has no legacy at all the reſiduum ſhall in general be his own, yet where-ever there is ſufficient on the face of a will, (by means of a competent legacy or otherwiſe) to imply that the teſtator intended his executor ſhould not have the reſidue, the undeviſed ſurplus of the eſtate ſhall go to the next of kin, the executor then ſtanding upon exactly the ſame footing as an adminiſtrator: concerning whom indeed there formerly was much debate, [Godolph. p. 2. c. 32] whether or no he could be compelled to make any diſtribution of the inteſtate's eſtate." But that queſtion is now at an end, by virtue of the ſtatute of diſtribution. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10.

If a perſon make a ſuit of clothes for another, and put it upon him to uſe and wear, this will be a gift or grant in law of the apparel made. Co. Lit. 351. This muſt mean if there was not any employment, and if the taylor, therefore, meant to give the cloaths: But I ſhould ſuppoſe, as the preſumption, without any proof, would be ſtrongly in favor of the maker that he was employed, if he ſued for the value, the wearer would be required to give ſome proof of a gift.

A man by deed did give and grant, bargain and ſell, alien, enfeoff and confirm to his daughter certain lands: but no conſideration of money was mentioned, nor was the deed inrolled; there was likewiſe no conſideration of natural affection expreſſed, (other than what was implied in naming the grantee his daughter) and there was no livery indorſed, or any found to have been made; nor was the daughter in poſſeſſion at the time of the deed made: and in B. R. it was adjudged by the court that the deed was good, and carried the eſtate to the daughter by way of covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, etc. 1 Mod. Rep. 157.

The words give and grant, in deeds of gift, etc. of things which lie in grant, will amount unto a grant, a feoffment, a gift, releaſe, confirmation or ſurrender, at the election of the party, and may be pleaded as a gift, or grant, releaſe, etc. at his election. Co. Lit. 301. And words ſhall be marſhalled ſo in gifts and grants, that where they cannot take effect according to the letter, the law will make ſuch conſtruction as that the gift by poſſibility may take effect: benigne ſunt interpretationes chartarum propter ſimplicitatem laicorum, ut res, etc. Co. Lit. 183. If a perſon gives or grants land, and does not ſay in what pariſh or county it lies; yet if there be any other thing to deſcribe it, as lately belonging to ſuch a perſon, etc. or other circumſtantial matter, it may be averred where the land lieth, and ſo the gift be good. Bro. Grant 53. 9 Rep. 47. All corporeal and immoveable things that lie in livery, ſuch as manors, meſſuages, cottages, lands, woods, and the like, may be given and granted in fee, for life, or years at firſt; and be aſſignable over after, from man to man in infinitum. 1 Roll. Abr. 44. And where a man gives and grants wood to another on his lands, or 20*s.* for it to be received out of the ſame lands, etc. here the wood paſſes by the gift preſently, with power to chooſe to have the money. Rol. Abr. 47. A deed of gift of lands or goods may be made upon condition; and on a gift or ſale of goods, the delivery of 6 d. or a ſpoon, etc. is a good ſeiſin of the whole. Wood's Inſt. 234. God and Religion, Offences againſt. Apoſtacy is an offence againſt God and religion. It was formerly the object only of the Eccleſiaſtical courts, which corrected the offender pro ſalute animæ. But now, by Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 32. If any perſon educated in, or having made profeſſion of, the Chriſtian religion, ſhall by writing, printing, teaching, or adviſed ſpeaking, deny the Chriſtian religion to be true, or the Holy Scriptures to be of divine authority, he ſhall upon the firſt offence be rendered incapable to hold any office or place of truſt; and for the ſecond, be rendered incapable of bringing any action, being guardian, executor, legatee, or purchaſer of lands, and ſhall ſuffer three years impriſonment without bail. To give room however for repentance, if within four months after the firſt conviction, the delinquent will in open court publickly renounce his error, he is diſcharged for that once, from all diſabilities.

Hereſy is another offence. See Stat. 1 Eliz. c. 1. The offender ſubject only to eccleſiaſtical cenſure, by 29 Car. 2. c. 9. See Black. Com. 4 V. 42 to 65. as to Reviling of the ordinances, Nonconformity, Blaſphemy, Swearing and Curſing, Witchcraft, Religious Impoſtors, Simony, Sabbath-breaking, Drunkenneſs and Lewdneſs, and thoſe ſeveral titles.

Golda, A mine, according to Blount. Conceſſionem quam idem Thomas fecit de terris ſuis et terris tenentium ſuorum à goldis mundandis per ſe et ſuos ſecundum conſuetudinem, &c. Mon. Ang. tom. 2. pag. 610.

Gold and Silver Lace and Thread. Perſons that ſell orrice lace, mixed with other metal or materials than gold, ſilver, ſilk and vellum, ſhall forfeit 2 s. 6 d. for every ounce: and there ſhall be allowed at leaſt ſix ounces of gold and ſilver prepared and reduced into plate, to cover four ounces of ſilk, except large twiſt, frize, &c. And laying the ſame on greater proportions of the ſilk, or in any other manner than directed, incurs the like forfeiture of 2 s. 6 d. the ounce. Copper, and lace inferior to ſilver, is to be ſpun upon thread, yarn or incle, and not on ſilk; but this does not extend to Tinſel apparel, uſed in theatres. No gold or ſilver lace, thread, fringe or wire, &c. may be imported, on pain of being forfeited and burnt, and 100 l. penalty. Statute 15 Geo. 2. c. 20.

Importation and making up of gold and ſilver lace, embroidery, brocade, &c. prohibited, 22 Geo. 2. c. 36. See Wire-Drawers, Embroidery.

Goldſmiths. Gold and ſilver manufactures are to be aſſayed by the warden of the Goldſmiths company in London, and marked; and gold is to be of a certain touch. 28 Ed. 1. cap. 20. Goldſmiths muſt have their own marks on plate, after the ſurveyors have made their aſſay; and falſe metal ſhall be ſeized and forfeited to the King. 37 E. 3. 7. Work of ſilver made by Goldſmiths, &c. is to be as fine as Sterling, except the ſolder neceſſary; and marking other work, incurs a forfeiture of double value. 2 H. 6. c. 14.

Goldſmiths, ſhall not take above 1 s. the ounce of gold, beſide the faſhion, more than the buyer may be allowed for it at the King's exchange: and if the work of any goldſmith be marked and allowed by the maſter and wardens of the myſtery, and afterwards found faulty; the wardens and corporation ſhall forfeit the value of the thing ſo ſold or exchanged. 18 Eliz. c. 5.

Molten ſilver is not to be tranſported by goldſmiths before it is marked at Goldſmiths Hall, and a certificate made thereof on oath; and officers of the cuſtoms may ſeize ſilver ſhipped otherwiſe. 6 & 7 W. 3. c. 17. The cities of York, Exeter, Briſtol, Cheſter, Norwich, and town of Newcaſtle, are appointed places for aſſaying and marking wrought plate of goldſmiths, &c. 12 W. 3. 4. 1 Ann. c. 9.

A duty is granted on ſilver plate of 6 d. per ounce; and goldſmiths are to make entries thereof with the weight, on pain of 100 l. &c. And goldſmiths muſt work their plate according to the old ſtandard; which is to be touched, aſſayed and marked before expoſed to ſale. Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 11.

Gold plate made by goldſmiths ſhall contain 22 carrats of fine gold: and ſilver plate 11 ounces and two pennyweight of ſilver, in every pound troy, or they forfeit 10 l. And no goldſmith ſhall ſell any ſuch plate, until marked with the firſt letters of the maker's chriſtian and ſurname, the marks of the city of London, being the leopard's head, lion paſſant, &c. and thoſe made uſe of by the aſſayers at York, Exeter, &c. All perſons making plate, are to enter their marks, names and places of abode in the aſſay-office; they are likewiſe to ſend with the plate required to be marked, a particular account thereof, in order to be entered, &c. or forfeit 5 l.

The Aſſayers determine what ſolder is neceſſary about plate, and judge of the workmanſhip, and for good cauſe may refuſe to aſſay it; and if any parcel be diſcovered of a coarſer allay than the ſtandard, it may be broke and defaced; alſo the fees for aſſaying and marking are particularly limited, &c. 12 Geo. 2. c. 26.

Goldwit, or Goldwich, Perhaps a golden mulct; in the records of the Tower, there is mention of conſuetudo vocata Goldwith vel Goldwich.

Goliardus, Is a jeſter or buffoon, mentioned in Matt. Pariſ. 1229.

Good Abearing, (Bonus Geſtus) Signifies an exact carriage or behaviour of a ſubject towards the King and the people; whereunto ſome perſons upon their miſbehaviour are bound; and he that is bound to this, is ſaid to be more ſtrictly bound than to the peace; becauſe where the peace is not broken, the ſurety de bono geſtu may be forfeited by the number of a man's company, or by their weapons. Lamb Eiren. lib. 2. c. 2. 34 Ed. 3. c. 1.

Good Behaviour, Surety for the good behaviour is ſurety for the peace, and differs very little from good abearing. A juſtice of peace may demand it ex officio, according to his diſcretion, when he ſees cauſe; or at the requeſt of any other under the King's protection: his warrant alſo is to be iſſued when he is commanded to do it by writ of ſupplicavit out of Chancery or B. R.

But a juſtice of peace may not bind any perſon to his good behaviour, upon a general accuſation made againſt the party. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R. He that demands ſecurity for the peace, muſt make oath before the juſtice, of blows given, or that he ſtands in fear of his life, or ſome bodily hurt; or that he fears the party will burn his houſe, &c. and that he doth not demand the peace of him for any malice or revenge, but for his own ſafety; whereupon the juſtice grants his warrant to bring the party before him, and then ſecurity is to be given by recogniſance for the good behaviour; or on default thereof, the party ſhall be committed to gaol. Co. Lit. 293. 4 Inſt. 180.

It may be granted againſt any perſons whatſoever, under the degree of nobility, againſt whom complaint is to be made in the Court of Chancery, or in B. R. and they may be bound there to keep the peace. Dalt 267, 268. The warrant of the juſtice to keep the peace, is to be granted againſt infants, and feme-coverts, who ought to find ſecurity by their friends, and not be bound themſelves; it may be had againſt the huſband, at the requeſt of the wife, and againſt the wife, at the requeſt of the huſband; againſt a lunatick, that hath ſometimes lucid intervals; (but not a non compos, or againſt, or for one attainted of felony, &c.) againſt any perſon affronting a judge, juſtice of the peace, &c. and in a word againſt all perſons that are ſuſpected to break the peace, or that do break it by affrays, aſſaults, battery, wounding, fighting, quarrelling, threatning to beat another, or to burn his houſe, rioters, &c. and in all caſes, where there may be danger in future. Dalt. 263, 264. 4 Inſt. 180. Alſo one may be bound to his good behaviour for a ſcandalous way of living, for keeping bawdy-houſes, or haunting them, gaming-houſes, &c. and ſo may common drunkards, whoremongers, and common whores, night-walkers, and thoſe that live idly, cheats, libellers, etc. Dalt. 292, 293. A woman who is a common ſcold may be bound to good behaviour.

Surety for good behaviour may be required of ſcandalous, turbulent, ſuſpicious perſons, as of forcible entries, or obſcene writers, or recuſants, but not in reſpect of bare words; unleſs they tend to a breach of the peace, or ſcandal of the government. Hawk. Pl. C. c. 61. 9. See Pl. 1, 2, 3. 4.

The ſtatute 34 Ed. 3. c. 1. relates only to miſbehaviours againſt the publick peace, ſo that it ought not to be demanded for private defamation of another, but for words only, which tend to the breach of the peace, or terrifying others, or unto ſedition, etc. 4 Inſt. 181. 1 Lill. Abr. 650, 651.

Sureties of good behaviour may be required of perſons convicted of diſturbing divine ſervice, 1 M. ſt. 2. c. 3. ſect. 6. Or offending againſt game laws, 5 El. c. 21. ſect. 2, 3. 22 and 23 Car. 2. c. 25. ſect. 4. Or entertaining outlawed felons, 43 Eliz. c. 13. ſect. 5. Or perſons infected with the plague going abroad, tho' no ſore on them, 1 Jac. 1. c. 31. ſect. 7. Or unlawfully hunting in parks, 3 Jac. 1. c. 13. ſect. 2. Or convicted a ſecond time of drunkenneſs, 4 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſect. 3. 21 Jac. 1. c. 7. ſect. 3. Or refuſing to take the oaths of ſupremacy and allegiance, 1 W. and M. ſt. 1. c. 8. ſect. 9. Or of felons after pardon, 5 W. and M. c. 13. ſect. 2. Of perſons unlawfully gaming, 9 Ann. c. 14. ſect. 6. Or committing diſorders in dock-yards, 1 Geo. 1. c. 25. ſect. 2. Or deſtroying timber, 1 Geo. 1. c. 48. ſect. 3. Or forcing through turnpikes, 8 Geo. 2. c. 20. ſect. 11. Or pretending to witchcraft. 9 Geo. 2. c. 5. ſect. 4. Or aſſiſting in running goods, 9 Geo. 2. c. 35. ſect. 19.

When ſecurity for the peace is given to the King by recogniſance in the penal ſum, if the peace is afterwards broken by any act of the party, or by his procuring another to break it, etc. it is a forfeiture of the recogniſance, which being brought to the next ſeſſions of the peace by the juſtice, the juſtices in ſeſſions are to certify the recogniſance, with the cauſe of forfeiture, into B. R. or the Exchequer, &c. from whence proceſs ſhall go out againſt the offender. Dalt. 277, 296.

A recognizance for good behaviour ſhall not only be forfeited for ſuch actual breaches of the peace, for which a recognizance for the peace may be forfeited; but alſo for ſome others, for which ſuch a recognizance cannot be forfeited, as for going armed with great numbers to the terror of the people, or ſpeaking words tending to ſedition. And alſo for all ſuch actual miſbehaviour, which is intended to be prevented by ſuch a recognizance, but not for barely giving cauſe of ſuſpicion of what perhaps may never actually happen. Hawk. P. C. c. 62. pl. 6.

It is ſaid ſuch a recognizance may not be diſcharged by releaſe of the party himſelf; becauſe the cogniſor is bound to the King, and to keep the peace in general; though by the death of the King, or of the principal cogniſor, (not of the ſureties) it is diſcharged of courſe. Rol. Rep. 199.

Note; The King cannot diſcharge recognizance taken for ſurety of the peace before it is broken, but after it is broken he may. Hil. 1 & 2 W. & M. C. B. 2 Vent. 131. cites 11 H. 7. 12. and in Marg. Co. Lit. 238. Vaugh. 334.

Juſtices of peace, under colour of their authority, uſe to require the good behaviour of every one at their pleaſure; and if they refuſed, then to commit them to priſon: But if they have not good cauſe to require ſureties for good behaviour, and the party refuſing to give it is committed to priſon, falſe impriſonment lies; for the ſtatute which gives the juſtice that authority, is principally againſt vagabonds. 1 Lil. 651. See Black. Com. 4 V. 248, 253.

Good Conſideration. A good conſideration is ſuch as that of blood, or of natural love and affection, when a man grants an eſtate to a near relation; being founded in motives of generoſity, prudence and natural duty: a valuable conſideration is ſuch as money, marriage or the like, which the law eſteems an equivalent given for the grant; (3 Rep. 83.) and is therefore founded in motives of juſtice. Deeds made upon good conſideration only, are conſidered as merely voluntary, and are frequently ſet aſide in favour of creditors, and bona fide purchaſers. Black. Com. 2 V. 297.

Goole, (Fr. Goulet) A breach in a ſea bank or wall; or a paſſage worn by the flux and reflux of the ſea. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 11.

Gorce, (From the Fr. Gort.) A wear: by ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 4. it is ordained, that all Gorces, mills, wears, &c. levied and ſet up, whereby the King's ſhips and boats are diſturbed and cannot paſs in any river, ſhall be utterly pulled down, without being renewed. Sir Edward Coke derives this word from Gurges, a deep pit of water, and calls it a Gors, or Gulf; but this ſeems to be a miſtake, for in Domeſday it is called Gourt and Gort, the French word for a wear. *Co. Government. According to the great Monteſquieu (as well as moſt other writers) there are three kinds of government; 1. The Republican, 2. The Monarchal, 3. The Deſpotic. The firſt is that where the people in a body, or only a part of the people have the ſovereign power: The ſecond, where one alone governs, but by fixed and eſtabliſhed laws. But in the deſpotic, one alone, without law, and without rule, directs every thing by his own will and caprice. L'Eſprit des Loix, Liv. 2. c. 1. fo. 10. Quarto Edition 1767. With reſpect to the feudal policy, how it limited government, ſee Robertſon's Hiſt. Emp. Cha. V. 1 V. 16, &c. &c.

In the firſt year of King William and Queen Mary, an act was made for impowering his Majeſty to apprehend and detain ſuch perſons as he ſhould find juſt cauſe to ſuſpect were conſpiring againſt the government: by virtue of which, thoſe who were ſuſpected of treaſonable practices, were taken up and impriſoned, without bail or mainpriſe, for ſix months, &c. Stat. 1 W. & M. c. 2. A like act of parliament, to continue a ſhort time, paſſed in the reign of Queen Anne, 6 Ann. c. 15. And his Majeſty, King George the firſt, was impowered by ſtatute, to ſecure and detain ſuſpected perſons, in the time of the late rebellion; and all actions, ſuits and proſecutions, by reaſon of any thing done to ſuppreſs the ſame, and for the ſervice of the government, were made void. Stat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 8, 39. and others. Monteſquieu, ſpeaking of liberty, and alluding to the Engliſh, ſays, I muſt own, that the practice of the freeſt nation that ever exiſted, induces me to think that there are caſes in which a veil ſhould be drawn for a moment over liberty, as it was cuſtomary to veil the ſtatues of the Gods. L'Eſprit des Loix, Liv. 12. c. 19. 1 V. 273. Quarto Edition 1767.

Grand Days, Are thoſe days in the Terms which are ſolemnly kept in the Inns of Court and Chancery, i. e. Candlemas Day in Hilary term, Aſcenſion Day in Eaſter term, St. John the Baptiſt Day in Trinity term, and All Saints Day in Michaelmas term; which days are Dies non Juridici, or no days in court.

Grand Diſtreſs, Is a writ ſo called, not for the quantity of it, for it is very ſhort, but for its quality; for the extent thereof is very great, being to all the goods and chattels of the party diſtrained within the county: it lies in two caſes, either when the tenant or defendant is attached, and appears not, but makes default; or where the tenant hath once appeared, and after makes default, then this writ is had by the Common Law in lieu of a Petit Cape. Grand Jury, Is the jury that find bills of indictment before juſtices of peace, and gaol delivery, or of Oyer and Terminer, &c. They ought only to hear witneſſes for the King; and to find a bill on probable evidence; becauſe it is but an accuſation, and the party is to be put upon his trial afterwards. But if the bill be againſt A. for murder, and the grand jury, on the evidence before them, be ſatiſfied it was ſe defendendo, &c. and ſo return it ſpecially; the court may remand them to conſider better thereof, or hear the evidence at the bar, and accordingly direct the grand jury. 2 *Hale's Hiſt. Grange, (Grangia) A houſe or farm where corn is laid up in barns, granaries, &c. and provided with ſtables for horſes, ſtalls for oxen, and other things neceſſary for huſbandry. This definition is agreeable to Spelman's. According to Mr. Warton, Grange is ſtrictly and properly the farm of a monaſtery, where the religious repoſited their corn. Grangia, Lat. from Granum. But, in Lincolnſhire, and other northern counties, they call every lone houſe, or farm, which ſtands ſolitary, a grange. Cited by Johnſon and Stevens, in their Shakeſpear, appendix, notes on Othello.

Dr. Johnſon in dictionary derives the word from grange, french, and defines it, a farm: generally, a farm with a houſe, at a diſtance from neighbours.

Grangearius, Is the perſon who has the care of ſuch a place, for corn and huſbandry: and there was anciently a granger, or grange-keeper belonging to religious houſes, who was to look after their granges, or farms in their own hands. Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 8. *Cartular. Grant, (Conceſſio) Signifies, in the Common law, a conveyance in writing of incorporeal things not lying in livery and which cannot paſs by word only; as of reverſions, advowſons in groſs, tithes, rents, ſervices, common in groſs, &c. It has alſo been taken generally, for every gift and grant of any thing whatſoever. Co. Lit. 172. 3 Rep. 63. And grants are made by ſuch perſons as cannot give but by deed: he that granteth is termed the grantor, he to whom the grant is made is the grantee: Weſt. Symb. See 234.

Under this head may be conſidered,

I. What things and intereſts may be granted, by what deſcription, and how grants ſhall be conſtrued.

II. Who may make grants, and who may take by grant.

I. What things and intereſts may be granted, by what deſcription, and how grants ſhall be conſtrued.

A man cannot grant that which he hath not, or more than he hath: though he may covenant to purchaſe an eſtate, and levy a fine to uſes, which will be good. Bac. Max. 58. A perſon may grant a reverſion, as well as a poſſeſſion; but the law will not allow grants of titles only, or imperfect intereſts, or of ſuch intereſts as are merely future. Ibid. A bare poſſibility of an intereſt, which is uncertain; a right of entry, or thing in action, cauſe of ſuit, &c. may not be granted over to a ſtranger. Perk. Sect. 65. 2 Inſt. 214. 4 Rep. 66.

It was formerly held, that by a grant of all a man's goods and chattels, bonds would paſs; now it is held the contrary, that the words Goods and Chattels do not extends to bonds, deeds or ſpecialties, being things in action, unleſs in ſpecial caſes. 8 Rep. 33. Co. Lit. 152. See 2 Geo. 2. cap. 25. In grants there muſt be a foundation of intereſt, or they will not be binding: If a perſon grants a rent-charge out of lands, when he hath nothing in the land, the grant will be void. Perk. 15. Though it is ſaid, if a man grant an annual rent out of land, wherein he hath no kind of intereſt, yet it may be good to charge the perſon of the grantor. Owen Rep. 3. A man may grant an annuity for him, and his heirs, to commence after his death, and it ſhall charge the heir. Bac. Max. 58. And after the grant of an annuity, &c. is determined, debt lies for the arrears; and the perſon of the tertenant will be charged. 7 Rep. 39. If a common perſon grants a rent, or other thing that lies in grant, without limitation of any eſtate, by the delivery of the deed, a freehold paſſes: but if the King make ſuch a grant of a rent, &c. it is void for uncertainty. Danv. Rep. 45. a.

A grant to a man, with a blank for his chriſtian name, is void, except to an officer known by his office, when it muſt be averred: and it is the ſame where the grantee's chriſtian name is miſtaken. Cro. Eliz. 328. Sed qu. may it not be made good by averment?

Grants may be void by incertainty, impoſſibility, being againſt law, on a wrong title, to defraud creditors, &c. Co. Lit. 183. Such things as lie in grant, may not be granted or held without deed: and if any thing not grantable, is granted with other things, the grant will be void for all. 2 Shep. Abr. 269, 271, 273. Truſts and confidences are perſonal things, and may not be granted over to others in moſt caſes; as offices of truſt, and the like: but all kinds of chattels real and perſonal, are grantable. Perk. Sect. 99. Plowd. 141, 379.

If one grant any thing that lies in livery, or grant, and that is in eſſe at the time of the grant, in fee, or for life, and the eſtate is to begin at a day to come; this for the moſt part will be void: but a leaſe or grant for years, may be good in futuro; and may be to one for term of years, or years determinable on lives, and after to another, to begin at the end of that eſtate. 5 Rep. 1. Dyer 58. Where a man hath a reverſion after an eſtate for life of land, and he grants a rent out of it; the grant is good, and will faſten upon the land after the eſtate of the tenant for life is ended: and if a perſon grant rents, &c. and a ſtranger take them at that time; in this caſe the grant will be good, for one may not be out of poſſeſſion of theſe things but at his pleaſure. Perk. 92, 98. If a man grants that to one, that he hath granted before to another, for the like term, &c. the ſecond grant will be void. Dyer 23. Perk. Sect. 102. Grants are uſually made by theſe words, viz. Have Given, Granted and Confirmed, &c. And words in Grants ſhall be conſtrued according to a reaſonable ſenſe, and not be ſtrained to what is unlikely. Hob. 304. Alſo it hath been adjudged, that grants ſhall be expounded according to the ſubſtance of the deed, not the ſtrict grammatical ſenſe; and agreeable to the intention of the parties. Co. Lit. 146, 313.

To every good grant the following things are requiſite: 1. That there be a perſon able to grant. 2. A perſon capable of the thing granted. 3. That there be a thing grantable. 4. That it be granted in ſuch manner as the law requires. 5. That there be an agreement to, and acceptance of the thing granted, by him to whom made. And 6. There ought to be an attornment where needful. Co. Lit. 73. But grants and conveyances are good without attornment of tenants, notice being given them of the grants, by ſtat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 9. Grants are taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the grantor in favour of the grantee: the grantee himſelf is to take by the grant immediately, and not a ſtranger, or any in futuro; and if a grant be made to a man and his heirs, he may aſſign at his pleaſure, though the word Aſſigns be not expreſſed. Lit. 1. Saund. 322. The uſe of any thing being granted, all is granted neceſſary to enjoy ſuch uſe: and in the grant of a thing, what is requiſite for the obtaining thereof is included. Co. Lit. 56. So that if timber trees are granted, the grantee may come upon the grantor's ground to cut and carry them away. 2 Inſt. 309. Plowd. 15.

Where the principal thing is granted, the incident ſhall paſs; but the principal will not paſs by the grant of the incident. Co. Lit. 152. A lord of a manor cannot grant the ſame, and reſerve the Court Baron, it being inſeparably incident. Ibid. 313. A grant of a manor, without the word cum pertinentiis, will paſs all things belonging to the manor: the grant of a farm will alſo paſs all lands belonging to it; but a grant of a meſſuage paſſes only the houſe, outhouſes and gardens. Owen's Rep. 51. Tot. il. maner de A. may be taken in the ſingular, or plural number; and daſhes and abreviations in grants ſhall be ſo taken that the grant be not void. 9 Rep. 48. When lands are granted by deed, the houſes which ſtand thereon will paſs; houſes and mills paſs by the grant of all lands, becauſe that is the moſt durable thing on which they are built. 4 Rep. 86. 2 And. 123. By grant of all the lands, the woods will paſs: and if a man grant all his trees in a certain place, this paſſeth the ſoil; though an exception of wood extends to the trees only, not the ſoil. 1 Rol. Rep. 33. Dyer 19. 5 Rep. 11.

Trees in boxes will not paſs by the grant of the land, &c. as they are ſeparate from the freehold. Mod. Caſes 170. A man grants all his wood that ſhall grow in time to come; it is a void grant, not being in eſſe. 3 Leon. 37. A grant de veſtura terræ paſſeth not the freehold; therefore the grantee hath no authority to dig in it by virtue of ſuch a grant. Ow. 37. By the grant of lands in the poſſeſſion of another, it is good if ſuch other be in poſſeſſion, let the poſſeſſion be by right, or wrong. 1 Rol. Rep. 23. If a grant is general, and the lands granted reſtrained to a certain Vill, the grantee ſhall have no lands out of the Vill. 2 Rep. 33. It has been held, that where a grant is made of lands and tenements in D. copyhold lands will not paſs; for they cannot paſs otherwiſe than by ſurrender. Owen 37.

Where lands are certainly deſcribed in a grant, with a recital as granted to A. B. &c. though they were not thus granted, it has been adjudged, that the grant was good. 10 Rep. 110. If a firſt deſcription of lands in a grant is falſe, notwithſtanding the ſecond be true, nothing will paſs by it; though if the firſt be true, and the ſecond falſe, the grant may be good, 3 Rep. 10. The word grant, where it is placed among other words of demiſe, &c. ſhall not enure to paſs a property in the thing demiſed; but the grantee ſhall have it by way of demiſe. Dyer 56.

Of grants ſome charge the grantor with ſomething he was not charged with before; others diſcharge the grantee of ſomething wherewith he was before charged, or chargeable. If a man grant to me a rent-charge; and after I grant to him, that he ſhall not be ſued for this rent; this is good to bar me of bringing an action, tho' I may ſtill diſtrain for the rent: And if one grants to his leſſee for life or years, that he ſhall not be impeached for waſte; it will be a good diſcharge, and may be pleaded. 7 H. 6. 43. Bro. Grant 175. Keilw. 88. See 1 Rep. 147. 10 Rep. 48. and tit. Condition.

II. Who may make grants, and who may take by grant.

Any natural perſon, or corporate body, (not prohibited by law, as infants, feme coverts, monks, &c.) may make a grant of lands, and be a grantor; and an infant, or woman covert, may be a grantee. Perk. 3, 4, 43, &c. Though the infant at his full age may diſagree to the grant, and the huſband diſagree to the grant to his wife. Ibid.

But herein the law diſtinguiſhes between ſuch grants as are void, and only voidable; the firſt of which are all ſuch gifts, grants or deeds, made by an infant, which do not take effect by delivery of his hand; as if an infant give a horſe, and no delivery of the horſe with his hand, and the donee take the horſe by force of the gift, the infant ſhall have an action of treſpaſs, for the grant was merely void. Perk. ſect. 12, 19. But if an infant enters into an obligation, makes a feoffment, levies a fine, or ſuffers a recovery, theſe are not void, only voidable. Ibid. 13.

A grant by a feme covert is void, for no act of her's can transfer that intereſt which the inter-marriage has veſted in the huſband. See 2 New Abr. 648. Perk. ſect. 6. See Infant and Baron and Feme.

Grants made by perſons non ſanæ memoriæ, are good againſt themſelves; but they are voidable by their heirs, &c. A man that is born dumb, or dumb and deaf, if he have underſtanding, by making ſigns, he may grant his land to another; not one who is born deaf, dumb, and blind alſo. Co. Lit. 2. A perſon attainted of treaſon, or felony, may make a deed of gift, or grant, and be good againſt all perſons, except the King, and the lord of whom the lands are held; and for relief in priſon, they may be good againſt them likewiſe. Co. Lit. 2. Perk. ſect. 26, 31. See Capacity.

The grants of perſons under dureſs are void, that is, if they were made under an apprehenſion of ſome bodily hurt, or if the grantor were impriſoned without cauſe, and the grantee refuſed to releaſe or diſcharge him, unleſs he made ſuch grant. 2 Inſt. 483. See Dureſs.

But menacing to burn houſes, or ſpoil or carry away the party's goods, are not ſufficient to avoid the grant; for if he ſhould ſuffer what he is threatened, he may ſue and recover damages in proportion to the injury done him. 4 Inſt. 485. Perk. Sect. 18.

If there be father and ſon of the ſame name, and the father grants an annuity by his name, without any addition, it ſhall be intended the grant of the father; and if the ſon being of the ſame name with his father grant an annuity without any addition; yet the grant is good, for he cannot deny his deed. Perk. ſect. 37.

There are but few (if any) perſons excluded from being grantees, therefore a man attainted of felony, murder, or treaſon, may be a grantee; ſo of the King's villein, an alien, one outlawed in a perſonal action, or a baſtard, may be grantees. Perk. ſect. 48. A baſtard who is known to be the ſon of ſuch a one, may purchaſe, or be a grantee by ſuch reputed name; for all ſurnames were originally acquired by reputation. Co. Lit. 3. 2 Rol. Abr. 43, 4.

A feme covert may be a grantee, therefore if a rent-charge be granted to a feme covert, and the deed is delivered to her without the privity of her huſband, and the huſband dies before any diſagreement made by him, and before any day of payment, the grant is good, and ſhall not be avoided, by ſaying, that the huſband did not agree, &c. but the diſagreement of the huſband ought to be ſhewn. Perk. ſect. 43.

Although aggregate corporations are inviſible, and exiſt only in ſuppoſition of law, yet they are capable of taking by grant, for the benefit of the members of the corporation. Co. Lit. 9. 1 Saund. 344.

Grants of the King. The King's grant is good for himſelf and ſucceſſors, tho' his ſucceſſors are not named. Yelv. 13. Before the ſtatute de prærogativa Regis, dowers, advowſons, and other things, have paſſed by the general grant of the King; but by that ſtatute they are to be granted in expreſs words. 1 Rep. 50. The King may not grant away an eſtate tail in the crown, &c. And the law takes care to preſerve the inheritance of the King for the benefit of the ſucceſſor. 2 And. 154. Style 263. See Jenk. Cent. 307. A grant may not be made by the King which tends to a monopoly, againſt the intereſt and liberty of the ſubject: Nor can the King make a grant non obſtante any ſtatute made, or to be made; if he doth, any ſubſequent ſtatute prohibiting what is granted, will be a revocation of the grant. 11 Rep. 87. Dyer 52. Where the King is reſtrained by the Common law to make a grant, if he makes a grant non obſtante the Common law, it will not make the grant good: but when he may lawfully make a grant, and the law requires he ſhould be fully appriſed of what he grants, and not be deceived, a non obſtante ſupplies it, and makes the grant good: If the words are not ſufficient to paſs the thing granted, a non obſtante will not help. 4 Rep. 35. Nelſ. Abr. 904.

If a grant is made by the King, and a former grant is in being of the ſame thing, if it be not recited, the grant will be void: And reciting a void grant, when there is another good, may make the King's grant void. Dyer 77. Cro. Car. 143. But there may be a non obſtante to a former grant. If the King is deceived in his grant, as where it contains more than was intended to be granted; or if there be any deceit in the conſideration, &c. ſuch grant of the King is void. 5 Rep. 94. Moor 293. And the King's grants may be void, by reaſon of incertainty; as if debts and duties are granted, without ſaying in particular what duties, &c. 12 Rep. 46. But where there is a particular certainty preceding, they ſhall not be deſtroyed by any incertainty or miſtake which follows. And there is a diſtinction where a miſtake of title is prejudicial to the King, and when it is in ſome deſcription of the thing which is ſupplemental only, and not material or iſſuable. 1 Mod. 195. The King grants the manor of D. which he has by the attainder of a certain perſon, &c. and in fact the King hath it not ſo; this grant is void. 10 Rep. 109.

If the King grants a meſſuage of the value of 5 l. a year to A. B. and it be of the yearly value of 10 l. the value being in the ſame ſentence with the grant, will make it void: Though if it be mentioned in another ſentence it may be good. Jenk. Cent. 261. The grant of the King to a corporation, that they ſhall not be impleaded for lands, nor for any cauſe ariſing there, elſewhere than before themſelves, &c. This doth not bind the King where he is party: And the King by his grant cannot exclude himſelf from proſecuting pleas of the crown; for it concerns the public government. Keilw. 88. Dyer 376. Jenk. Cent. 190.

The King's grantee ſhall not forfeit for non-payment of rent, where the rent has been anſwered before proceſs iſſued. 21 Jac. 1. c. 25. Grants of felons goods how to be inrolled. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 22. ſect. 1. The crown reſtrained from granting lands, except for thirty-one years, &c. 1 Ann. ſtat. 1. c. 7. ſect. 5. Forfeited eſtates excepted. 1 Ann. ſtat. 1. c. 7. ſect. 8.

The King cannot grant a thing intruſted to him in reſpect of his ſovereignty: As, the lapſe of a church, before, or after it becomes void. 2 Rol. 187. l. 32, 35. Nor purveyance, butlerage, priſage, &c. 2 Rol. 187. l. 35. Nor, the power to make a diſpenſation of a ſtatute. 7 Co. 36. b. So he cannot grant the lands, or goods, of a recuſant convict, before the commiſſion returned. 2 Rol. 184. l. 20. Nor, the lands or goods of one attainted of treaſon, before his attainder. Dyer 108. a. Vide poſt.

So the King cannot grant the proſecution, or execution of any penal ſtatute to another; for it is intruſted with him as the head of the public-weal. R. 7 Co. 37. a. Nor, the penalty or benefit of a penal ſtatute, before it be recovered. 7 Co. 36. b. 37. a. Nor, any fine or forfeiture of a particular perſon, before he be convicted. Declared by the Stat. 1 W. & M. 2. that ſuch grant or promiſe is illegal and void.

Grantz, Is uſed for grandees, in the Par. Roll 6 Ed. 3. m. 5, 6.——Et les ditz Countz, Barons, & autre Grantz. &c.

Graſs-hearth, The graſing or turning up the earth with a plough; whence the cuſtomary ſervice for the inferior tenants of the manor of Amerſden in Oxfordſhire, to bring their ploughs and do one day's work for their lord, was called graſs-hearth or graſs-hurt: And we ſtill ſay the ſkin is graſed or ſlightly hurt, and a bullet graſes on any place, when it gently turns up the ſurface of what it ſtrikes upon. Paroch. Antiq. 496, 497.

Gree, (Fr Gre, i. e. Good liking or allowance) In our law ſignifies ſatisfaction; as to make gree to the parties, is to agree with, and ſatisfy them for an offence done. And where it is ſaid in our ſtatutes, that judgment ſhall be put in ſuſpence till gree is made to the King of his debt; it is taken for ſatisfaction. 1 R. 2. cap. 15. 25 Ed. 3. cap. 19.

Green Cloth, Of the King's Houſhold, ſo termed from the green cloth on the table, is a court of juſtice compoſed of the Lord Steward, Treaſure of the Houſhold, Comptroller, and other officers; to which is committed the government and overſight of the King's court, and the keeping of the peace within the verge, &c. See Counting-houſe.

Greenhew or Green-hue, Is all one with vert in foreſts, &c. Manwood, par. 2. cap. 6. num. 5.

Greenland Company. A joint ſtock of 40,000 l. was by ſtatute to be raiſed by ſubſcribers, who were incorporated: And the company to uſe the trade of catching whales, &c. into and from Greenland, and the Greenland ſeas; they may make by-laws for government, and of perſons employed in their ſhips, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 W. 3. cap. 17. But any perſons who will adventure to Greenland for whale-fiſhing, ſhall have all privileges granted to the Greenland Company, by 1 Ann. cap. 16. Any ſubjects may import whale-fins, oil, &c. of fiſh caught in the Greenland ſeas, without paying any cuſtoms, &c. Stat. 10 Geo. 1. cap. 16. And ſhips employed in the Greenland fiſhery are to be of ſuch burden, provided with boats, ſo many men, fiſhing-lines, harping irons, &c. and be licenſed to proceed; and on their return ſhall be paid 20 s. per tun bounty for whale fins, &c. imported. 6 Geo. 2. cap. 33. A further bounty, or allowance of 10 s. a tun is granted to this company, to be paid by the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, during war; and the ſeamen ſhall not be impreſſed from that ſervice, by 13 Geo. 2. cap. 28.

A ſecond bounty of 20 s. per tun given. 22 Geo. 2. c. 45. 28 Geo. 2. c. 20. No larger bounty than 400 tuns. 28 Geo. 2. c. 20. ſect. 6. Every ſhip employed in the fiſhery to have one apprentice for every fifty tuns burden. 28 Geo. 2. c. 20. ſect. 5. Bounty may be inſured. 28 Geo. 2. c. 20. ſect. 12.

Green-Silver. There is an ancient cuſtom within the manor of Writtel, in the county of Eſſex, that every tenant whoſe fore-door opens to Greenbury, ſhall pay a halfpenny yearly to the lord, by the name of green ſilver. The term ſilver, here, muſt mean rent.

Green-Wax. Is where eſtreats are delivered to the ſheriffs out of the Exchequer, under the ſeal of that court, made in green wax, to be levied in the ſeveral counties: this word is mentioned in the Stat. 43 Ed. 3 cap. 9. and 7 H. 4. cap. 3.

Greenwich Hoſpital. A duty is laid on all foreign-built ſhips for the relief of decayed ſeamen in Greenwich Hoſpital, &c. by Stat. 1 Jac. 2. cap. 18. And every ſeaman ſhall allow out of his wages 6 d. a month, for the better ſupport of the ſaid hoſpital: for which duty receivers are appointed, who may depute officers of the cuſtoms, &c. to collect the ſame, and examine on oath maſters of ſhips, &c. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 23, &c. 10 Ann. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 7.

Groom, Is the name of a ſervant in ſome inferior place. 33 Hen. 8. cap. 10. and is generally applied to ſervants in ſtables: But it hath a ſpecial ſignification, extending to Groom of the Chamber; Groom of the Stole, &c. which laſt is a great officer of the King's houſhold, whoſe precinct is properly the King's Bed-Chamber, where the Lord Chamberlain hath nothing to do; and ſtole ſignifies a robe of honour. Lex Conſtitutionis, p. 182. Vide Garcio.

Groom-Porter, An officer or ſuperintendant over the royal gaming-tables; and in Latin is writ Aulæ Regiæ janitor Primarius.

Groſs, (Groſſus) In groſs, abſolute, intire, not depending on another; as anciently a villein in groſs was ſuch a ſervile perſon as was not appendant or annexed to the lord or manor, and to go along with the tenure as appurtenant to it; but was like the other perſonal goods and chattels of his lord, at his lord's pleaſure and diſpoſal: ſo alſo advowſon in groſs differs from advowſon appendant, being diſtinct from the manor. Co. Lit. 120. See Black. Com. 2 V. 22.

Groſſe bois, (Fr. Gros bois, i. e. great wood) Signifies ſuch wood as by the Common law or cuſtom is reputed timber. 2 Inſt. 642.

Groſs, (common in, or Common at large,) is ſuch as is neither appendant nor appurtenant, to land, but is annexed to a man's perſon; being granted to him and his heirs by deed: or it may be claimed by preſcriptive right, as by parſon of a church, or the like corporation ſole. This is a ſeparate inheritance, entirely diſtinct from any landed property. Black. Com. 2 V. 34.

Groſs-weight, The whole weight of goods or merchandiſe, duſt and droſs mixed with them, and of the cheſt, bag, etc. out of which tare and tret are allowed. Merchant's Dict.

Grot, (Fr.) A den, cave, or hollow place in the ground; alſo a ſhady woody place, with ſprings of water. L. Fr. Dict.

Groundage, A cuſtom or tribute paid for the ſtanding of a ſhip in a port.

Grouſe, Are the red and black heath-game, for preſerving of which, no heath, furze or fern ſhall be burnt on any heaths, moors or other waſtes, between the 2d of February and 24th of June, by Stat. 4 and 5 W. and M. c. 23.

Growme. An engine to ſtretch woollen cloth after it is woven; mentioned 43 Ed. 3. c. 10.

Growth-halfpenny, Is a rate ſo called and paid in ſome places for the tithe of every fat beaſt, ox, or other unfruitful cattle. Clayton's Rep. 92.

Gruarii, (From the Fr. Gruyer) Signifies the principal officers of the foreſt in general.

Guard, (Fr. Garde, Lat. Cuſtodia) A cuſtody or care of defence. And ſometimes it is uſed for thoſe that attend upon the ſafety of the Prince, called the life-guard, &c. ſometimes ſuch as have the education and guardianſhip of infants; ſometimes for a writ touching wardſhip, as droit de gard, ejectione de gard, and raviſhment de gard. F. N. B. 139.

Guardian, (Fr. Gardein, Lat. Cuſtos Guardianus) Signifies him who hath the charge or cuſtody of any perſon or thing; but commonly he who hath the cuſtody and education of ſuch perſons as are not of ſufficient diſcretion to guide themſelves and their own affairs, as children and ideots, (uſually the former) being as largely extended in the Common law as tutor and curator among the civilians. Blount.

Under this head we may conſider,

I. The ſeveral kind of guardians, and how they are appointed.

II. Who may be guardian, and of the guardian's intereſt in the body and lands of the ward, and what he may lawfully do, ſo as to bind the infant.

III. Of the infant's remedy againſt the guardian, and of obliging him to account, &c.

I. Of the ſeveral kinds of guardians, and how they are appointed.

A guardian is either legitimus, teſtamentarius, datus, or cuſtumarius: he that is a legitimate or lawful guardian is ſo jure communi, or jure naturali; the firſt as guardian in chivalry, in fact, or in right; the other de jure naturali, as father or mother: A teſtamentary guardian was by the Common law; for the body of the minor was to remain with him who was appointed, till the age of fourteen; and as for his goods it might be longer, or as long as the teſtator appointed; but as to this matter there are ſeveral ſtatutes: Guardianus datus was by the father in his life-time, or by the Lord Chancellor after the death of the father; and where there is a guardianſhip by the Common law, the Lord Chancellor can order and intermeddle; but where by ſtatute, he cannot remove either the child, or the guardian: Guardianſhip by cuſtom, is of orphans by the cuſtom of London, and other cities and boroughs; and in copyhold manors, by the cuſtom it may belong the lord of the manor to be guardian himſelf, or to appoint one. 3 Salk. Rep. 176, 177.

The guardianſhips by the Common law, are guardians in chivalry; (taken away by ſtatute) guardians by nature, ſuch as the father or mother; guardians in ſocage, who are the next of blood, to whom the inheritance cannot deſcend, if the father does not order it otherwiſe; and guardian becauſe of nurture, when the father by will appoints one to be guardian of his child. Co. Lit. 18. 2 Inſt. 305. 3 Rep. 37.

The 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 8. provides under ſevere penalties, ſuch as fine and impriſonment for years, "That nobody ſhall take away any maid or woman child unmarried, being within the age of ſixteen years, out of or from the poſſeſſion, cuſtody or governance, and againſt the will of the father of ſuch maid or woman child, or of ſuch perſon or perſons to whom the father of ſuch maid or woman child by his laſt will and teſtament, or by any other act in his life-time, hath or ſhall appoint, aſſign, bequeath, give or grant, the order, keeping, education and governance of ſuch maid or woman child."

Guardianſhip by ſtatute, is by the 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. by which it is enacted, "That a father by deed in his life-time, or by will, may diſpoſe of the cuſtody of his child under twenty-one years of age, and not married at the time of his death, and whether then born, or in ventre ſa mere, during the minority, to any perſons, not Popiſh recuſants; who may maintain action of treſpaſs, &c. againſt unlawful takers away of ſuch children, and take into cuſtody their lands, &c." And by this ſtatute the father may appoint a guardian to his heir, for any time till he is twenty-one years old; and ſuch guardian ſhall have the like remedy for his ward, as the guardian in ſocage had at Common law. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 911. But if the father appoint no guardian to his child, the ordinary or ſpiritual court may appoint one for the perſonal eſtate until the age of fourteen: And as to his lands, there ſhall be a guardian in ſocage, &c. as heretofore. 2 Lev. 262.

Guardianſhip is a thing cogniſable by the temporal courts, where a deviſe is made of it, which courts are to judge whether the deviſe be purſuant to the ſtatute. 1 Vent. 207. A copyhold tenant is not within the Statute 12 Car. 2. c. 24. to diſpoſe of the cuſtody of his children; for it belongs to the lord or others, according to the cuſtom of the manor: but the lord of a manor hath no power by the Common law, without ſome particular cuſtom, to grant the guardianſhip of an infant copyholder. 3 Lev. 595. Lutw. 1190. A father or mother, without aſſignment, are guardians of women, children, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 P. & M. cap. 8. A female infant may be brought into court, and aſked whether ſhe be willing to ſtay with her guardian.

The huſband of a woman under age cannot diſavow a guardian made by the court for his wife. 1 Vent. 185. An infant, it is ſaid, cannot revoke the authority of the guardian: but the court may diſcharge one guardian, and aſſign another at their diſcretion; and the juſtices of Niſi prius, &c. may aſſign a new guardian. Palm. 252. Style 456. Noy 49. 1 Danv. Abr. 604. The court will aſſign a guardian to an infant to ſue, or defend actions, if the infant comes into court and deſires it: or a judge at his chambers, at the deſire of the infant, may aſſign a perſon named by him to be his guardian; but this laſt is no record until entered and filed by the clerk of the rules: 1 Lil. 656. 2 Leon. 238.

II. Who may be guardian, and of the guardian's intereſt in the body and lands of the ward, and what he may lawfully do, ſo as to bind the infant.

Where land deſcends of the part of the father, there the next of kin on the part of the mother ſhall have the guardianſhip; and ſo on the other ſide, and not ſuch a kinſman as may have any benefit by his death. Cro. Eliz. 825. Moor, caſ. 872. The eldeſt ſon of the half blood ſhall be guardian in ſocage, to a ſon by a ſecond venter; and the guardianſhip in ſocage continues till the minor attains the age of fourteen years, and then he may chuſe his guardian before a judge, at his chambers, or in court, or in the Chancery: alſo after the minor is come to the age of fourteen, he may ſue his guardian in ſocage to account as bailiff, &c. Cro. Jac. 219. Though a father is guardian by nature, yet a man may be guardian to an infant againſt his father, for prevention of waſte; which is a forfeiture of guardianſhip. Hard. 96.

If a woman hath iſſue a ſon by a former huſband, and marries a ſecond huſband, ſeiſed of ſocage lands, by whom ſhe has iſſue another ſon, and the huſband and wife die, leaving the ſecond ſon under fourteen, his brother of the half blood ſhall be guardian in ſocage, as next of kin, to whom the inheritance cannot deſcend. Cro. Eliz. 825. 2 And. 171. Moor 635. 2 Jon. 17.

An infant, ideot, lunatick, non compos, one blind and dumb, deaf and dumb, or leper removed, cannot be guardian in ſocage. Co. Lit 88 b.

It is clearly agreed, That the King, as pater patriæ, is univerſal guardian of all infants, ideots and lunaticks, who cannot take care of themſelves; and as this caſe cannot be exerciſed otherwiſe than by appointing them proper curators or commitees; it ſeems alſo agreed, that the King may, as he has done, delegate the authority to his Chancellor; therefore at this day, the court of Chancery is the only proper court, which hath juriſdiction in appointing and removing guardians, and in preventing them and others from abuſing their perſons or eſtates. 2 Inſt 14. 4 Co. 126. Beverley's caſe, and in Staundf. Præ. 37.

And as the court of Chancery is now inveſted with this authority, hence in every day's practice we find that court determining, as to the right of guardian ſhip, who is the next of kin, and who the moſt proper guardian; as alſo orders are made by that court on petition, or motion, for the proviſion of infants during any diſpute herein; as likewiſe guardians removed or compelled to give ſecurity; they and others puniſhed for abuſes committed on infants, and effectual care taken to prevent any abuſes intended them in their perſons or eſtates; all ſuch wrongs and injuries being reckoned a contempt of that court, it hath, by an eſtabliſhed juriſdiction, the protection of all perſons under natural diſabilities. 2 Mod 177.

Guardian in ſocage ſhall make no waſte, nor ſale of the inheritance, but keep it ſafely for the heir: and where there hath been ſome doubt of the ſufficiency of a guardian in ſocage, the Chancery hath obliged him to give ſecurity. 2 Mod 177. Alſo a guardian may be ordered to enter into ſecurity by recogniſance, not to ſuffer a female infant to marry whilſt in his cuſtody; and to permit other relations to viſit her, &c. 2 Lev. 128. And the court of Chancery will make ſuch guardian give ſecurity not to marry the infant without the court is firſt acquainted with it. 2 Chan. Rep. 237.

Before the act of 12 Car. 2. c. 24. Tenant in ſocage might have diſpoſed of his land, in truſt for the benefit of the heir; but it is ſaid he could not deviſe or diſpoſe of the guardianſhip or cuſtody of the heir from the next of kin to whom the land could not deſcend, becauſe the law gave the guardianſhip to ſuch next of kin. Keilw. 186. But now tenant in ſocage may nominate whom he pleaſes to have the cuſtody of the heir, and the land ſhall follow the guardianſhip, as an incident given by law to attend the cuſtody; and ſuch ſpecial guardian cannot aſſign the cuſtody by any act, the truſt being perſonal; nor ſhall it go to the executor or adminiſtrator of the guardian, but determines by his death. Vaugh. 180. Dyer. 189.

As the law hath inveſted guardians not with a bare authority only, but alſo with an intereſt till the guardianſhip ceaſes; ſo it hath provided ſeveral remedies for guardians againſt thoſe who violate that intereſt: at Common law there were remedies both droitural and poſſeſſory, to recover the guardianſhip. 2 Inſt. 90. 9 Co. 72.

A guardianſhip of a minor is an intereſt in the body and lands, &c. of one within age. Guardians to infants, appointed by the court to ſue, may acknowledge ſatiſfaction upon the record, for a debt recovered at law for the infant. Trin. 23 Car. B. R. A guardian in ſocage may keep courts, in the infant's manors, in his own name grant copies, &c. He is dominus pro tempore, and hath an intereſt in the lands. Cro. Jac. 91. Such guardian may let the land for years, and avow in his own name and right; and his leſſee for years may maintain ejectment: but he cannot preſent to an advowſon, for which he may not lawfully account; and the infant muſt preſent of whatſoever age. Cro. Jac. 98, 99. Though it is ſaid, if the infant be within the age of diſcretion, his guardian may preſent. 8 E. 2. 10. A guardian for nurture of the minor appointed by will, hath power to make leaſes at will only. Cro. Eliz. 678, 734. Guardians are to take the profits of the minor's lands, &c. to the uſe of the minor, and account for the ſame: they ought to ſell all moveables in a reaſonable time, and turn them into land or money, except the minor is near of age, and may want ſuch goods himſelf: and they ſhall pay intereſt for money in their hands, which might have been put out at intereſt; in which caſe it ſhall be preſumed the guardians made uſe of it themſelves. 3 Salk. 177.

III. Of the infant's remedy againſt the guardian, and of obliging him to account, &c.

At Common law, both a prohibition of waſte, and an action of waſte, lay againſt a guardian in chivalry and a guardian in ſocage, for a voluntary, but not for permiſſive waſte, or waſte done by a ſtranger. 2 Inſt. 305. By the Common law, guardians in ſocage are accountable to the infant, either when he comes to the age of fourteen years, or at any time after, as he thinks fit. Co. Lit. 87. But the guardian, on his account, ſhall have allowance of all reaſonable expences; and if he is robbed of the rents and profits of the land without his default or negligence, he ſhall be diſcharged thereof upon his account; for he is in the nature of a bailiff or ſervant to the infant, and undertakes no otherwiſe than for his diligence and fidelity. Co. Lit. 89. a.

If a guardian takes a bond for the arrears of rent, he thereby makes it his own debt, and ſhall be charged with it. 2 Chan. Rep. 97. Wall and Buckley. If a man during a perſon's infancy receives the profits of an infant's eſtate, and continues to do ſo for ſeveral years after the infant comes of age, before any entry is made on him; yet he ſhall account for the profits throughout, and not during the infancy only. Abr. Eq. 280. Yallop and Halworthy. A receiver to the guardian of an infant, who has had his account allowed him by the guardian, ſhall not be obliged to account over again to the infant when he comes of age. Preced. Chan. 535.

A guardian ſhall anſwer for what is loſt by his fraud, negligence or omiſſion; but not for any caſual events, as where the thing had been well but for ſuch an accident. Litt. 123. On accounting of guardians, they ſhall have allowance of coſts and expences; and if they are robbed, &c. without any default or negligence, they ſhall be diſcharged thereof. Co. Lit. 89. In guardianſhips of great eſtates, the guardians generally paſs their accounts yearly in the Chancery, for their better juſtification when the minor calls them to a general account at his full age. By ſtatute, guardians are to retain the lands till the heir comes of age, and then reſtore the ſame as fully ſtocked, &c. as received. 9 H. 3. cap. 3. They ſhall ſuſtain the land without deſtruction of any thing. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 21. And perſons, who as guardians hold over, without the conſent of the perſon next intitled, ſhall be adjudged treſpaſſers, and be accountable for profits, &c. Stat. 6 Ann. cap. 18. Action of account may be brought againſt the executors or adminiſtrators of a guardian, &c. Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16.

An election of a guardian by a minor.

KNOW all men by theſe preſents, That I A. B. ſon and heir of, &c. deceaſed, being now about the age of eighteen years, have elected and choſen, and by theſe preſents do elect and chuſe C. D. of, &c. to be guardian of my perſon and eſtate, until I ſhall attain the age of twenty-one years, and I do hereby promiſe to be ruled and governed by him in all things touching my welfare; and I do authoriſe and impower the ſaid C. Guardian de l'eſtemary, Is the guardian or warden of the Stannaries, or mines in the county of Cornwall, &c. 17 Car. 1. cap. 15.

Guardians de l'Eglis, Churchwardens, who are officers choſen in every pariſh to have the care and cuſtody of the church goods; and they may have an action for ſuch goods, and have divers powers for the benefit of the church. Stat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2.

Guardians of the Peace, Are thoſe that have the keeping of the peace; wardens or conſervators thereof. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. cap. 3.

Guardian of the Cinque Ports, Is a magiſtrate that hath the juriſdiction of the ports or havens, which are commonly called the Cinque Ports, who has there all the authority and juriſdiction the Admiral of England has in places not exempt: and Camden believes this Warden of the Cinque Ports was firſt erected among us in imitation of the Roman policy, to ſtrengthen the ſea-coaſts againſt enemies, &c. Camb. Br. 238.

Guardian of the Spiritualties The perſon to whom the ſpiritual juriſdiction of any dioceſe is committed, during the vacancy of the ſee, is called by this name. 25 H. 8. cap. 21. The archbiſhop is guardian of the ſpiritualties on the vacancy of any ſee within his province; but when the archiepiſcopal ſee is vacant, the dean and chapter of the archbiſhop's dioceſe are guardians of the ſpiritualties, viz. the ſpiritual juriſdiction of his province and dioceſe is committed to them. 2 Rol. Abr. 223. The guardian of the ſpiritualties it is ſaid may be either guardian in law, jure magiſtratus, as the archbiſhop is of any dioceſe in his province; or guardian by delegation, being he whom the archbiſhop or vicar general doth for the time appoint. 13 Eliz. cap. 12. And the guardian of the ſpiritualties hath all manner of eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction of the courts, power of granting licences and diſpenſations, probate of wills, &c. during the vacancy, and of admitting and inſtituting clerks preſented; but ſuch guardians cannot, as ſuch, conſecrate or ordain, or preſent to any benefices. Wood's Inſt. 25, 27.

Gueſt, (Sax Geſt. Fr. Giſt, a ſtage of reſt in a journey) A lodger or ſtranger in an inn, &c. A gueſt who hath a piece of plate ſet before him in an inn, may be guilty of felony, in fraudulently taking away the ſame. 1 Hawk. P.C. 90. And a gueſt having taken off the ſheets from his bed, with intent to ſteal them, carried them into another room, and was apprehended before he could get away; this was adjudged larceny. Ibid. 92. Lodgers ſtealing furniture from lodgings are guilty of felony by 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9. ſect. 5.

Action lies againſt an innkeeper, refuſing a gueſt lodging, &c. See Inn.

Guidage, (Guidagium) Is an old legal word, ſignifying that which is given for ſafe conduct through a ſtrange land, or unknown country. Eſt guidagium quod datur alicui, ut tuto conducatur per terram alterius. Conſuetud. Burgund. p. 119. 2 Inſt. 526.

Guild, (from the Sax. Guildan, to pay) Signifies a fraternity or company, becauſe every one was gildare, i. e. to pay ſomething toward the charge and ſupport of the company. The original of theſe guilds and fraternities is ſaid to be from the old Saxon law, by which neighbours entered into an aſſociation and became bound for each other, to bring forth him who committed any crime, or make ſatisfaction to the party injured, for which purpoſe they raiſed a ſum of money among themſelves, and put into a common ſtock, whereout a pecuniary compenſation was made according to the quality of the offence committed. From hence came our fraternities and guilds; and they were in uſe in this kingdom long before any formal licences were granted for them: though at this day they are a company combined together, with orders and laws made by themſelves, by the prince's licence.

Camd. Guildam Mercatoriam, or the Merchant's Guild, is a liberty or privilege granted to merchants, whereby they are enabled to hold certain pleas of land, &c. within their own precinct. 37 Ed. 3. 15 R. 2. And Guildhalls are the halls of thoſe ſocieties, where they meet and make laws, &c. for their better government. King Ed. 3. in the 14th year of his reign, granted licence to the men of Coventry to erect a Merchant's Guild, and alſo a fraternity of brethren and ſiſters, with a maſter or warden, and that they might make chantries, beſtow alms, do other works of piety, and conſtitute ordinances touching the ſame, &c. And King Hen. 4. in the 4th year of his reign, gave licence to found a Guild of the Holy-Croſs at Stratford upon Avon. Antiq. Warwickſh. 119, 522. Guild, or Gild, is alſo uſed for a tribute, or tax, an amercement, &c. 27 Ed. 3. 11 H. 6. 15 Car. 2. See Gilda Mercatoria.

Guild-Rents, Are rents payable to the crown, by any guild or fraternity; or ſuch rents as formerly belonged to religious Guilds, and came to the crown at the general diſſolution of monaſteries, being ordered to be ſold by the Stat. 22 Car. 2. cap. 6.

Guilder, Foreign coin: the German guilder is 3 s. 8 d. and the golden one in ſome parts of Germany 4 s. 9 d. In Portugal it paſſes for 5 s. but the Poland and Holland gelder is but 2 s. In Holland, merchants keep their accounts in guilders, &c.

Gule of Auguſt, (Gula Auguſti, alias Goule de Auguſt) Is the day of St. Peter ad Vincula, which is celebrated on the 1*ſt of Auguſt*, and called the Gule of Auguſt, from the Lat. Gula a throat, for this reaſon, (as pretended) that one Quirinus, a tribune, having a daughter that had a diſeaſe in her throat, went to Pope Alexander, (the ſixth from St. Peter,) and deſired of him to ſee the chains that St. Peter was chained with under Nero, which requeſt being granted, ſhe the ſaid daughter kiſſing the chains, was cured of her diſeaſe; whereupon the Pope inſtituted this feaſt in honour of St. Peter; and, as before, this day was termed only the calends of Auguſt, it was on this occaſion called indifferently either St. Peter's day ad Vincula, from what wrought the miracle, or the Gule of Auguſt, from that part of the virgin whereon it was wrought. Durand's Rationale Divinorum, lib. 7. cap. 19. It is mentioned F. N. B. 62. Plowd. 316. Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 30. 27 Ed. 3.

Guns. None may ſhoot in, or keep in his houſe any gun, hand-gun, &c. who hath not lands to the value of 100 l. a year, on pain of 10 l. Nor ſhall any perſon ſhoot in ſuch guns, under the length of one yard, or three quarters of a yard, under the like penalty: if any do ſo, one that hath 100 l. per ann. land, may ſeize the guns unlawfully kept and uſed; but then he muſt break them within twenty days, or ſhall forfeit 40 s. In foreſts, parks and chaſes, thoſe who have power from the King to take away guns, may retain the ſame. Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 6.

Gunpowder. It is lawful for all perſons, as well ſtrangers as natural-born ſubjects, to import any quantities of gunpowder or ſalt-petre, brimſtone, and other materials for the making thereof, and to make and ſell gunpowder, &c. Stat. 16 Car. 1. cap. 21. But no perſon ſhall keep more than 600 lb. weight of gunpowder, in any places in the cities of London and Weſtminſter, or the ſuburbs, &c. And perſons keeping more, not removing it on order of juſtices of peace, ſhall forfeit 20 s. for every hundred weight: gunpowder is to be carried in covered carriages, the barrels cloſe jointed, or in caſes, bags of leather, &c. 5 Geo. 1. c. 27

By a ſubſequent act, it is unlawful for any perſon to keep in London, &c. above 200 lb. weight of gunpowder at one time, beyond the ſpace of twenty-four hours, which incurs a forfeiture of the powder, or the value: and two juſtices may cauſe ſearches to be made, and the ſame to be ſeized and removed, &c. Perſons obſtructing the ſearch, incur the penalty of 5 l. Alſo none ſhall uſe iron or ſteel hammers, where gunpowder is, on pain of 20 s. 11 Geo. 1. cap. 23. Perſons who are no dealers therein are not to keep above 50 lb. of gunpowder in London and Weſtminſter, or if they deal in it, not more than two hundred weight longer than twenty-four hours, though under different roofs; or on the Thames, except in ſhips paſſing or detained, on pain of forfeiting all ſuch gunpowder, &c.

A juſtice of peace may iſſue his warrant to ſearch for dangerous quantities of powder, and break open any place, if there be occaſion, to ſeize the ſame; which may be removed out of the limits aforeſaid, and kept till determined in one of the courts, whether it be forfeited, &c. And if any perſons permit others to have gunpowder in places not belonging to the owners, they ſhall forfeit 1 s. for every pound. Stat. 15 Geo 2. cap. 32.

No gunpowder ſhall be put on board ſhips, above Blackwall in the river Thames, under 5 l. penalty for every 50 lb. weight, &c. by 5 Geo. 2. cap. 20. By the Stat. 22 Geo. 2. cap. 38. No perſon ſhall keep gunpowder for more than twenty-four hours, at one time, in greater quantities than 400 weight, in any houſe, &c. in or within 100 yards of any city, the ſuburbs thereof, or any market town; or within two miles of any of the King's palaces, or one mile of any of his magazines for powder, or more than 300 weight, in any other place whatſoever.

Upon information two juſtices may grant ſearch warrants, and if more found, it ſhall be forfeited; no greater quantity ſhall be carried at one time than 2500 weight in any land-carriage, and 5000 weight in any open veſſel; carriages to be covered, and barrels cloſely hooped. Any perſon employed in any ſtorehouſe where gunpowder is kept, or in conveying gunpowder from one place to another, wilfully committing any act whereby the gunpowder ſhall be in danger of taking fire, ſhall forfeit 5 s. for every 100 weight in ſuch ſtorehouſe; and in default of payment be committed for not exceeding ſix months. No penalty ſhall be incurred for keeping above three hundred weight of gunpowder, in any warehouſe already built for that purpoſe, unleſs the ſame be deemed dangerous.

To obtain an excluſive patent for the ſole making or importation of gunpowder or arms, or to hinder others from importing them, is a premunire by 16 Car. 1. c. 21. 1 Jac. 2. c. 8. Gunpowder, &c. ſhipped after prohibition, forfeited, 29 Geo. 2. c. 16. ſec. 2. Allowance on exportation of gunpowder continued to 29th of September 1771, 4 Geo. 3. c. 11.

Gurgites, Is uſed as a Latin word for weares: tres gurgites in aqua de Monew attachiantur per homines de groſſomonte. Black Book Hereford, f. 20. See Gorce.

Guti and Gotti, Engl. Goths, called ſometimes Jutæ, and by the Romans Getæ, is derived from the old word Jet, which ſignifies a Giant: they were one of thoſe three nations or people who left Germany, and came to inhabit this iſland. Leg. Edw. Confeſſ. cap. 35.

Gypſies. Formerly there were foreign perſons, calling themſelves Egyptians, or Gypſies, a ſtrange kind of commonwealth among themſelves of wandering impoſtors and jugglers. It is ſaid that when Sultan Selim conquered Egypt in the year 1517, ſeveral of the natives refuſed to ſubmit to the Turkiſh yoke, and diſperſed in ſmall parties all over the world, where their ſuppoſed ſkill in the black art gave them an univerſal reception, in that age of ſuperſtition and credulity. There are various laws againſt perſons pretending to be gypſies, and wandering about, &c. See 22 H. 8. c. 10. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 4. 5 El. c. 20. And ſee Black. Com. 4 V. 165, 6, 7.

Habeas Corpus, The great writ of Engliſh liberty, lies where one is indicted for any crime or treſpaſs before juſtices of peace, or in a court of any franchiſe, and being impriſoned for the ſame, hath offered ſufficient bail, but it is refuſed where bailable; he may then have this writ out of the King's Bench to remove himſelf thither, and anſwer the cauſe there. F. N. B. 250. Vide infra. This writ is alſo uſed to bring the body of a perſon into court, who is committed to any gaol, either in criminal or civil cauſes; and a habeas corpus will remove a perſon and cauſe from one court and priſon to another. See the Stat. 31 Car. 2. c. 2. There are ſeveral kinds of this writ.

1. The habeas corpus ad ſubjiciendum is that which iſſues in criminal caſes, and is deemed a prerogative writ, which the King may iſſue to any place, as he has a right to be informed of the ſtate and condition of the priſoner, and for what reaſons he is confined. It is alſo, in regard to the ſubject, deemed his writ of right; that is, ſuch an one as he is intitled to ex debito juſtitiæ, and is in nature of a writ of error to examine the legality of the commitment; therefore commands the day, the caption, and cauſe of detention to be returned. 2 Inſt. 55. 4 Inſt. 182. Cro. Jac. 543. 2 Rol. Abr. 69.

2. The habeas corpus ad faciendum & recipiendum iſſues only in civil caſes, and lies where a perſon is ſued, and in gaol, in ſome inferior juriſdiction, and is willing to have the cauſe determined in ſome ſuperior court, which hath juriſdiction over the matter; in this caſe the body is to be removed by habeas corpus, but the proceedings by certiorari. 3 Bac. Abr. 2.

3. There is likewiſe a writ of habeas corpus ad reſpondendum, where a perſon is confined in gaol for a cauſe of action accruing within ſome inferior court; and a third perſon hath alſo a cauſe of action againſt him; in which caſe he may have this writ in order to charge him in ſuch ſuperior court; for inferior courts being tied down to cauſes ariſing within their own juriſdiction, the party would be without remedy, unleſs allowed to ſue him in another court; but it ſeems, that regularly a perſon confined in B. R. cannot be removed to the C. B. by this writ, nor vice verſa; for in theſe caſes there can be no defect of juſtice, as theſe courts have conuſance as well of local, as tranſitory actions. Dyer 197. a. 249. pl. 84, 296, 307. 1 Mod. 235. Style Pract. Regiſt. 330.

4. There are alſo, beſides theſe, other writs of habeas corpus as a habeas corpus ad deliberandum & recipiendum, which lies to remove a perſon to the proper place or county, where he committed ſome criminal offence. 3 New Abr. 2, 3.

5. There is alſo a writ of habeas corpus ad ſatisfaciendum after a judgment; and on this writ the attorney for the plaintiff muſt endorſe the number roll of the judgment on the back of the writ. Style Regiſt. 331.

6. Habeas corpus upon a cepi, where the party is taken in execution in the court below.—So upon an attachment out of Chancery, and a cepi corpus returned by the ſheriff, the next ſtep is a habeas corpus; for the ſheriff having executed the command of the writ of attachment by taking the body, he cannot carry him out of the county without the King's writ.

7. There is alſo a writ of habeas corpus ad teſtificand', which is to remove a perſon in confinement, in order to give his teſtimony in ſome court of juſtice; for which vide Style 119, 126, 230. 3 Keb. 51. Comb. 17, 48. Of theſe ſeveral writs the moſt uſual in practice are—

The habeas corpus ad ſubjiciendum:—and

The habeas corpus ad faciendum & recipiendum.

With reſpect to the firſt it is to be conſidered,

1. By whom, and in what caſes, it is grantable.
2. What ſhall be a proper return of ſuch writ.
3. Of bailing, diſcharging, or remanding the priſoner.

1. By whom, and in what caſes, an habeas corpus is grantable.

The writ of habeas corpus was originally ordained by the Common law of the land, as a remedy for ſuch as were unjuſtly impriſoned, to procure their liberty; and it is a miſtaken notion that this writ is of a modern date, and introduced with the reign of King Charles II. But before the Stat. 31 Car. 2. c. 2. it is true it was difficult to be obtained, becauſe the judges, who had authority to iſſue it, pretended to have power either to grant or deny it; and the ſheriffs and gaolers, to whom the writ was directed, frequently put poor priſoners to the charges of a ſecond, and third habeas corpus, before they would yield obedience to the firſt; which being grievous to the people, the Stat. 31 Car. 2. c. 2. was enacted to prevent abuſes of this nature, and further our laws for the benefit of the liberty of the ſubject. Laws of Liberty, pag. 44, 45.

By the Stat. 31 Car. 2. c. 2. A perſon in priſon may have an habeas corpus from any judge, on complaint made and view of the copy of the warrant of commitment, (unleſs he be committed for treaſon or felony, eſpecially expreſſed in the warrant, or other offences or matters not bailable) which habeas corpus ſhall be returnable immediately; and upon certificate of the cauſe of commitment, the priſoner ſhall be diſcharged on bail to appear in the court of B. R. the next term, or at the next aſſiſes, &c. where the offence is cogniſable: and perſons committed for treaſon or felony, (eſpecially expreſſed in the warrant) on prayer in open court, the firſt week of the term, or day of ſeſſions, &c. are to be brought to trial; and if not indicted the next term, or ſeſſions after commitment, upon motion the laſt day of the term, &c. they ſhall be let out upon bail; except it appears upon oath, that the King's witneſſes are not ready; and if on prayer they are not indicted or tried the ſecond term after commitment, they ſhall be diſcharged. No perſons who ſhall be delivered upon an habeas corpus, ſhall be committed again for the ſame offence, other than by legal order and proceſs of ſuch court where they ſhall be bound to appear, or other court having juriſdiction of the cauſe; on pain of 500 l.

And if any perſon be in priſon, or in any officer's cuſtody, for any criminal matter, he ſhall not be removed by him into the cuſtody of any other officer but by habeas corpus, upon pain of incurring the penalty of 100 l. for the firſt offence, and 200 l. for the ſecond offence, and being diſabled toexecute h is office.

No perſon ſhall be ſent priſoner to Ireland, Scotland, or any place beyond the ſeas in the King's dominions; which will be falſe impriſonment, on which the priſoner may recover treble coſts, and not leſs than 500 l. damages, &c. and the party committing, or detaining him, alſo ſhall incur the penalty of a præmunire.

Judges denying a habeas corpus ſhall forfeit 500 l. And the officer refuſing to obey it, or to deliver a true copy of the commitment warrant, is liable to a forfeiture of 100 l. for the firſt offence, &c. Stat ibid. This is the ſubſtance of the habeas corpus act; which hath been ſuſpended ſeveral times in late reigns, on rebellions, &c.

It is clear, that both by the Common law, as alſo by the ſtatute, the Courts of Chancery and King's Bench have juriſdiction of awarding this writ of habeas corpus, and that without any privilege in the perſon for whom it is awarded; but it ſeems, that by the Common law the court of King's Bench could only have awarded it in term-time, but that the Chancery might have done it as well out of, as in term, becauſe that court is always open. 2 Inſt. 55. 4 Inſt. 290. 2 And. 297. 2 Jon. 13, 14, 17. Any of the courts at Weſtminſter may award it. See Vaugh. 155.

If the habeas corpus iſſues out of Chancery, and on the return thereof the Lord Chancellor finds that the party was illegally reſtrained of his liberty, he may diſcharge him, or if he finds it doubtful, he may bail him; but then it muſt be to appear in the court of King's Bench, for the Chancellor hath no power in criminal cauſes; or the chancellor may commit the party to the Fleet, and in term-time may propriis manibus deliver the record into the King's Bench, together with the body; and thereupon the court of King's bench may proceed to bail, diſcharge, or commit the priſoner. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P.C. 147. 2 Hawk. P.C 114-15.

We apprehend every ſubject impriſoned, is intitled to his habeas corpus, that the cauſe of his impriſonment may be inquired into, whether he is, or is not, intitled to be bailed. See the caſe of Mr. Wilkes, in Wilſ. Rep. par. 2. 154.

If a party be impriſoned againſt law, though he is intitled to a habeas corpus, yet he may have an action of falſe impriſonment, in which he ſhall recover damages in proportion to the injury done him. Fitz. Corpus cum Cauſa 2. 9 H. 6. 44. a. 2 Inſt. 55. 10 H. 7. 17. 5 Co 64. 11 Co. 98, 99.

If a huſband confine his wife, ſhe may have an habeas corpus; but the judges, on the return of it, cannot remove the wife from her huſband. 2 Lev 128.

If a perſon be in cuſtody, and alſo indicted for ſome offence in the inferior court, there muſt, beſides the habeas corpus to remove the body, be a certiorari to remove the record; for as the certiorari alone removes not the body, ſo the habeas corpus alone removes not the record itſelf, but only the priſoner with the cauſe of his commitment; ment; therefore, although upon the habeas corpus, and the return thereof, the court can judge of the ſufficiency or inſufficiency of the return and commitment, and bail or diſcharge, or remand the priſoner, as the caſe appears upon the return, yet they cannot upon the bare return of the habeas corpus give any judgment, without the record itſelf be removed by certiorari: but the ſame ſtands in the ſame force it did, though the return ſhould be adjudged inſufficient, and the party diſcharged thereupon of his impriſonment; and the court below may iſſue new proceſs upon the indictment. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 210, 211. 1 Salk. 352. Comb. 2.

If the Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, commit one to the marſhal by his warrant, he ought not to be brought to the bar by rule, but by habeas corpus. 1 Salk. 349.

Alſo by the habeas corpus act (31 Car. 2. cap. 2. par. 11.) it is enacted, and declared, "That an habeas corpus, according to the intent and true meaning of the act, may be directed and run into, any county palatine, the cinque ports, or other privileged places within the kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, or town of Berwick upon Tweed, and the iſles of Jerſey or Guernſey; any law, &c."

2. What ſhall be a proper return of an habeas corpus.

In extrajudicial commitments, the warrant of a commitment ought to be returned in hac verba on a habeas corpus: but when a man is committed by a court of record, it is in the nature of an execution for a contempt, and in ſuch caſe the warrant is never returned. 5 Mod. 156. The cauſe of impriſonment muſt be particularly ſet forth in the return of the habeas corpus, or it will not be good; for by this the court may judge of it, and with a paratum habeo, that they may either diſcharge, bail, or remand the priſoner. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 915. Cro. Jac. 543. If a commitment is without cauſe, or no cauſe is ſhewn, a priſoner may be delivered by habeas corpus. 1 Salk. 348.

It has been adjudged, that on a commitment by the houſe of commons, of perſons for contempt and breach of privilege, no court can deliver on a habeas corpus: but Holt Ch. J. was of a contrary opinion. 2 Salk. 404, 503. A writ of error may be allowed by the King in ſuch a caſe, &c. and it is not to be denied ex debito juſtitiæ; though it has been a doubt, whether any writ of error lay upon a judgment given on a habeas corpus. Ibid. A man may not be delivered from the commitment of a court of Oyer and Terminer, by habeas corpus, without writ of error: and where there appears to be good cauſe, and a defect only in the form of the commitment, he ought not to be diſcharged. 1 Salk. 348.

By the 31 Car. 2. cap. 2. ſect. 2. it is enacted, "That if any officer, &c. ſhall neglect, or refuſe to make returns, as by the act is directed or to bring the body of the priſoner, according to the command of the writ, or ſhall not, within within ſix hours after demand, deliver a true copy of the commitment, &c. he ſhall forfeit for the firſt offence 100*l.* for the ſecond offence 200*l.* and be made incapble to hold his office."

If any one, notwithſtanding the ſtatute, ſhould be wicked enough not to return an habeas corpus, you may ſue out an alias, if that is not returned ſue out a pluries, and on that not being returned, move the court for an attachment. F. N. B. 68. 11 H. 4. 86. 1 Mod. 195. 2 Lev. 128, 9. 5 Mod. 21. Perhaps the court would grant an attachment, for not obeying the firſt writ.

For a falſe return there is regularly no other remedy againſt the officer, than an action on the caſe at the ſuit of the party grieved, and an information or indictment at the ſuit of the King. 6 Mod. 90. 1 Salk 349. But no action lies until the return be filed. 1 Salk. 352.

As upon the return of the writ the court is to judge, whether the cauſe of the commitment and detainer be according to law, or againſt it; ſo the officer or party in whoſe cuſtody the priſoner is, muſt, according to the command of the writ, certify on the return thereof, the day, cauſe of caption and detainer. Vaugh. 137.

It ſeems to be agreed, that no one can in any caſe controvert the truth of the return to a habeas corpus, or plead or ſuggeſt any matter repugnant to it; yet it hath been holden, that a man may confeſs and avoid ſuch a return by admitting the truth of the matters contained in it, and ſuggeſting others not repugnant, which take off the effect of them. Cro. Eliz. 821. 5 Co. 71. b. 2 Hawk. P. C. 113.

It ſeems, that, before the return filed, any defect in form, or the want of an averment of a matter of fact, may be amended; but this muſt be at the peril of the officer, in the ſame manner as if the return were originally what it is after the amendment. 1 Mod. 102, 103.

But after the return is filed, it becomes a record of the court, and cannot be amended. 1 Mod. 102, 103.

3. Of bailing, diſcharging, or remanding the priſoner, brought up by habeas corpus.

Upon the return of the habeas corpus the priſoner is regularly to be diſcharged, bailed or remanded; but if it be doubtful which the court ought to do, it is ſaid that the priſoner may be bailed to appear de die in diem till the matter is determined. 5 Mod. 22. Style 16.

By the petition of right, (or 17 Car. 1. cap. 10.) the court muſt within three days after the return of the habeas corpus, either diſcharge, bail or remand the priſoner. But it ſeems that a commitment by the court of King's Bench to the Marſhalſea, is a remanding, being an impriſonment within the ſtatute. 5 Mod. 22. 3 New Abr. 14.

Alſo it hath been ruled, that the court of King's Bench may, after the return of the habeas corpus is filed, remand the priſoner to the ſame gaol from whence he came, and order him to be brought up from time to time, till they ſhall have determined whether it is proper to bail, diſcharge, or remand him abſolutely. 1 Vent. 330.

And tho' in doubtful caſes the court is to bail, or diſcharge the party on the return of the habeas corpus; yet if a perſon be convicted, and the conviction on the return of the habeas corpus appears only defective in point of form, it is at the election of the court either to diſcharge the party, or oblige him to bring his writ of error. 1 Salk. 348. 5 Mod. 19, 20.

If a perſon be committed by the admiralty in execution, he is not removeable by habeas corpus into B. R. to anſwer an action brought againſt him there; but it might be otherwiſe if an action had been before depending. 1 Salk. 351. Where there is an action in B. R. precedent to the King's ſuit, on which the party is out on bail, habeas corpus may be brought by the bail, &c. and the priſoner turned over; tho' this was greatly oppoſed in favour of the King's execution. Ibid. 353.

It remains now to treat of the habeas corpus ad faciendum & recipiendum, the nature of which hath been already explained, and it is further to be obſerved, That—No writ of habeas corpus, or other writ to remove a cauſe out of an inferior court, ſhall be allowed, except delivered to the judge of the court, before the jury to try the cauſe have appeared, and before any of them are ſworn. 43 Eliz. cap. 5. And writs to remove ſuits commenced in an inferior court of record; ſhall not be obeyed, unleſs delivered to the ſteward of the court before iſſue or demurrer joined, &c. And a ſuit ſhall never be removed again, after a procedendo allowed. 21 Jac. 1. c. 23. Nor ſhall any ſuit be removed where the thing in demand doth not exceed 5*l.* or where the freehold, inheritance, title of land, &c. are concerned. And judges are to proceed in ſuits in inferior courts laid not to exceed the ſum of 5*l.* although there may be actions againſt the defendant, wherein the plaintiff's demands may exceed that ſum, by Stat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 29.

If the ſteward of an inferior court proceeds after an habeas corpus delivered and allowed, the proceedings are void; and the court of B. R. will award a ſuperſedeas; and grant an attachment againſt the ſteward for the contempt. Cro. Car. 79, 296. A habeas corpus ſuſpends the power of the court below, ſo that if they proceed, it is void, and coram non judice. And on a habeas corpus, if the record be filed, no procedendo can go to the court below; but where a record below is not filed, or not returned, it may be granted. 1 Salk. 352.

A habeas corpus cum cauſa removes the body of the party for whom granted, and all the cauſes depending againſt him; and if upon the return thereof the officer doth not return all the cauſes, &c. it is an eſcape in him. 2 Lil. Abr. 2. A judge will not grant a habeas corpus in the vacation, for a priſoner to follow his ſuits; but the court may grant a ſpecial habeas corpus for a priſoner to be at his trial in the vacation-time. Ibid. 3. And the court may grant a habeas corpus to bring a priſoner, not in priſon on execution, out of priſon, to be a witneſs at a trial; though it is at the peril of the party ſuing out the writ, that the priſoner do not eſcape. Style 119. Trin. 1640. But no perſon ought to take out a habeas corpus for any one in priſon, without his conſent; except it be to turn him over to B. R. or charge him with an action in court. 2 Lil. A man brought into B. R. by habeas corpus, ſhall not be removed thence till he has anſwered there; he ſhall be detained until then, and after he may be removed. 1 Salk. 350.

A perſon is in cuſtody upon a criminal, and alſo on a civil matter, if he would move himſelf by habeas corpus, there ought to be but one habeas corpus of the crown ſide or plea ſide, and both cauſes are to be returned. Mod. Caſ. 133. If there be judgment againſt a defendant in the court of B. R. and another in C. B. on which he is in execution in the Fleet, he may have an habeas corpus to remove himſelf into B. R. where he ſhall be in cuſtody of the marſhal for both debts. Dyer 132.

Where an action is founded on the cuſtom of London, for a thing actionable there, and not elſewhere; if it be removed by habeas corpus, a procedendo ſhall be granted: but the declaration itſelf ought to be returned upon the habeas corpus, and then the court will ſee what was the cauſe, &c. For the ſpecial matter and all the proceedings are to be in the return in this caſe; as well as in an action on a by-law, to take notice thereof. Carth. 75, 76. Before a habeas corpus is returned and filed, it may be amended; but not afterwards. 2 Lil. Abr. 2.

A feme covert was arreſted in London, as a ſole trader, and diſcharged, by a judge of B. R. on habeas corpus, bail being put in to appear in B. R. The next term, on motion, the court granted a procedendo, affidavit of plaintiff's cauſe of action, &c. being made, for plaintiff could only proceed in London. Here, of courſe, there was not any declaration. Vide an excellent caſe, on the cuſtom of London, in this reſpect; Lavie and another aſſignees of Jane Cox a bankrupt, v. Phillips and others aſſignees of John Cox a bankrupt. 3 Bur. 1776. wherein the reaſon of the procedendo being granted, is fully diſcuſſed and determined.

A habeas corpus is grantable, without motion, to remove a perſon upon an arreſt; but not where committed for a crime. 1 Lev. 1. In ſuing out theſe writs in B. R. to remove a cauſe, &c. they are firſt to be carried to the other court to be allowed; and ſome few days after the delivery, the return muſt be called for, and ſpecial bail put in at a judge's chamber; which being done, within four days in term, and ſix days in the vacation, the cauſe is removed to the ſuperior court. Practic. Solic. 262. And if the defendant be actually a priſoner, he ſhall not be delivered from priſon till the bail on the habeas corpus be accepted, or juſtified. Ibid.

If a defendant arreſted cannot find bail, and would be removed to the King's Bench or Fleet priſon, a habeas corpus is to be ſued out; and they ſhall make out a return, and ſend an officer with the defendant to a judge's chamber, and there a committitur is made, whereupon the judge's tipſtaff takes the priſoner into cuſtody, and charges him in priſon; and he may agree with the marſhal or warden, for the liberty of the rules, &c. Practiſ. Attorn. Edit. 1. p. 124. When the defendant is in cuſtody of a bailiff, or in any other priſon, and would be turned over to the King's Bench, the practice is the ſame: the habeas corpus directed to the ſheriff of London and Middleſex is to be delivered, and he, after ſearch in his office for what writs he hath againſt the defendant will make return of them, and then the bailiff or keeper of the other priſon, who hath the defendant in cuſtody, is to carry him to a judge's chamber, where he will be turned over, ut ſupra. Ibid.

Habendum. In every deed or conveyance there are two principal parts, the premiſſes, and the habendum; the office of the firſt is to expreſs the name of the grantor and grantee, and the thing granted: and the habendum is to limit the eſtate, by which the general implication in the premiſſes may be qualified: as in a leaſe or grant to two perſons, if the habendum be to one for life, and the remainder to the other for life, this alters the general implication of the jointenancy, which would paſs by the premiſſes, if the habendum were not. 2 Rep. 55. And where things which lie in grant are conveyed to take effect, barely on delivery of the deed of grant without other ceremony; in ſuch caſe, if the habendum be for a leſs eſtate than in the premiſſes, or be repugnant to it, the habendum is void: but when a ceremony is requiſite to the perfection of an eſtate granted, and not a bare delivery only of the deed; and to the eſtate limited by the habendum, nothing is required to perfect it; there, tho' the habendum is of a leſs eſtate than the premiſſes, the habendum ſhall ſtand good, and qualify the eſtate granted in the premiſſes. 2 Rep. 23. 2 Nelſ. 920.

An habendum may not only qualify what is granted in the premiſſes; but it may alſo enlarge what is thus granted, or explain the premiſſes: though the habendum ſhall never introduce one who is a ſtranger to the premiſſes. 1 Jones 4. 3 Leon. 60. If a bargain and ſale be made without expreſſing to whom; although it were habendum to A. B. who is a party to the deed, it is not good; becauſe the habendum is only to limit an eſtate, and not to give any thing. Cro. Eliz. 585. 903, 2 Lil. 8. If one thing be granted in the premiſſes of a deed, habendum with another thing, which is not appendant, &c. this other thing ſhall not paſs. Hob. 161, 172. None can take by any deed, who is not named in the premiſſes: but though an eſtate limited by the habendum to a man that is no party, is void by way of eſtate; it may be good in remainder. Hob. 313. Godb. 51. It is ſaid, that an habendum from the day of the date, with reſpect to a freehold is void, becauſe in futuro. Denn on the demiſe of Warren v. Fearnſide, Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. fo. 176. Haberdaſhers. If any perſons work hats with foreign wool, and not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip to the trade, &c. they ſhall forfeit the goods and 5 l. And no perſon may dye any caps with bark, &c. but only with copperas and gall, or woad and madder. Stat. 8 Eliz. cap. 7. None ſhall make hats or felts, that hath not ſerved ſeven years in felt-making; nor retain any but journeymen who have lawſully ſerved; or have above two apprentices at once, and thoſe not for leſs than ſeven years time, &c. on pain of 5 l. a month: but hatmakers may employ their own children in the trade. 1 Jac. 1. cap. 17. And the maſters and wardens of Haberdaſhers in London, calling to them one of the company of Cappers, and another of the Hatmakers, and mayors, &c. of towns and corporations, may ſearch all hatters, and puniſh them that offend, by fines. Stat. ibid. To prevent the exportation of hats out of the plantations abroad, which may be ſeized, and offenders are liable to 500 l. penalty; and for regulating the trade of hat-making there, &c. See ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 22.

Habere facias Poſſeſſionem, Is a judicial writ that lies where one hath recovered a term for years in action of ejectione firmæ, to put him into poſſeſſion. F. N. B. 167. And one may have a new writ, if a former be not well executed. Mich. 21 Car. 1. B. R. A ſheriff delivered poſſeſſion in the morning, by virtue of an habere facias poſſeſſionem, and ſome time in the ſame day, after he was gone, the defendant turned the plaintiff out of poſſeſſion; it was held, that if he had been turned out immediately, or whilſt the ſheriff or his officers were there, an attachment might be granted againſt the defendant; for this had been a diſturbance in contempt of the execution; but it being ſeveral hours after the plaintiff was in poſſeſſion, the court doubted, but agreed to grant a new habere facias, &c. 1 Salk. 321. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 779.

If the ſheriff delivers poſſeſſion of more than is contained in the writ of habere facias poſſeſſionem, an action on the caſe will lie againſt him, or an aſſiſe for the lands. Style 238. The ſheriff cannot return upon this writ, that another is tenant of the land by right, but muſt execute the writ, for that will not come in iſſue between the demandant and him. 6 Rep. 52. See Ejectment.

Habere facias Seiſinam, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff, to give ſeiſin of a freehold eſtate recovered in the King's courts, by ejectione firmæ, or other action. Old Nat. Br. 154. The ſheriff may raiſe the poſſe comitatus in his aſſiſtance, to execute theſe writs: and where a houſe is recovered in a real action, or by ejectment, the ſheriff may break open the doors to deliver poſſeſſion and ſeiſin thereof; but he ought to ſignify the cauſe of his coming, and requeſt that the doors may be opened. 5 Rep. 91. This writ alſo iſſues ſometimes out of the records of a fine, to give the cogniſee ſeiſin of the land whereof the fine is levied. Weſt. Symb. par. 2. Ortelius's Index ad Theatr. verbo Aſiatici.

Hans Towns, In Germany, &c. ſo named, either becauſe they lay near the ſea, or from the Gothick Anſi, which is taken for thoſe who were the richeſt of the people; and from thence it is inferred, that theſe towns were the chiefeſt for trade or riches: or it may come from the German Hanſa, i. e. Societas; a company of merchants excelling others in trade. There were at firſt ſeven towns diſtinguiſhed by this name; afterwards they were ſeventy in number.

We ſhall give an abſtract of Dr. Robertſon's account, which is much more perfect. Towards the middle of the thirteenth century, the nations around the Baltick were extremely barbarous, and infeſted that ſea with their piracies: this obliged the cities of Lubeck and Hamburgh, ſoon after they began to open ſome trade with theſe people, to enter into a league of mutual defence. They derived ſuch advantages from this union, that other towns acceded to their confederacy, and in a ſhort time eighty of the moſt conſiderable cities ſcattered through thoſe vaſt countries which ſtretch from the bottom of the Baltick, to Cologne on the Rhine, joined in the famous Hanſeatic league, which became ſo formidable, that its alliance was courted, and its enmity dreaded by the greateſt monarchs. The members of this powerful aſſociation formed the firſt ſyſtematic plan of commerce, known in the middle ages, and conducted it by common laws enacted in their general aſſemblies. Hiſt. Emp. Char. V. 1 V. 79, 80. See Id. fo. 336.

Carts of hay, which ſtand to be ſold in the Hay-Market, are to pay 3 d. per load towards the paving and amending the ſtreet; and ſhall not ſtand loaden with hay after three o'clock in the afternoon, etc. on pain of forfeiting 5 s. Hay ſold in London, etc. between the firſt of June and the laſt of Auguſt, being new hay is to weigh 60 pounds a truſs; and old hay the reſt of the year 56 pounds, under the penalty of 1 s. 6 d. for every truſs offered to ſale, &c. Stat. 2 W. & M. ſt. 2. c. 8. ſect. 16, 17. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 17. ſect. 1. Hayward, (from the Fr. Haye, i. e. ſepes, & Garde, Cuſtodia) Is one who keeps a common herd of cattle of a town; and the reaſon of his being called Hayward may be, becauſe one part of his office is to ſee that they neither break nor crop the hedges of incloſed grounds, or for that he keeps the graſs from hurt and deſtruction. He is an officer appointed in the Lord's Court: And is to look to the fields, and impound cattle that do treſpaſs therein; to inſpect that no pound breaches be made, and if any be, to preſent them at the leet, &c. Kitch. 46. There may be a cuſtom in a manor, to have a ſurveyor of the fields or hayward, and for him to diſtrain cattle damage-feaſant. See Agillarius.

Hazard, Is an unlawful game at dice; and thoſe who play at it are called hazardors: And we read, Hazardor communis ludens ad falſos talos adjudicatur, quod per ſex dies in diverſis locis ponatur ſuper colliſtrigium. Int. Plac. Trin. 2 Hen. 4. Suſſex. 10.

Headborow, or Headborough, (from the Sax. Head, caput, & Borge, fidejuſſor) Signifies him who is head of the frank-pledge in boroughs; and who had a principal government within his own pledge; as he was called headborow, ſo he was alſo ſtiled borowhead, borſholder, thirdborough, tithingman, &c. according to the uſage and diverſity of ſpeech in ſeveral places. Lamb. Theſe headborows were the chief of the ten pledges; the other nine being denominated handborows, or inferior pledges: Headborows are now a kind of conſtables.

Headland, Is the upper part of ground left for the turning of the plough; whence the headway. Paroch. Antiq. 587.

Head-pence, Was an exaction of a certain ſum heretofore collected by the ſheriff of Northumberland of the inhabitants of that county, without any account therefore to be made to the King; which was aboliſhed by Stat. 23 H. 6. c. 7.

Head-Silver, Paid to lords of leets, See Common Fine.

Healfang or Halsfang, Is compounded of two Saxon words Hals, i. e. Collum, and Fang, capere, and ſignifies that puniſhment, qua alicui collum ſtringatur, (colleſtrigium). Sometimes it is taken for a pecuniary mulct, to commute for ſtanding in the pillory; payable to the King or Chief Lord. Leg. H. 1. cap. 11

Health, (Injuries to) Injuries affecting a man's health, are where by any unwholeſome practices of another a man ſuſtains any apparent damage in his vigour or conſtitution. As by ſelling him bad proviſions or wine; (1 Rol. Abr. 90.) by the exerciſe of a noiſome trade, which infects the air in his neighbourhood; (9 Rep. 57. Hutt. 135.) or by the neglect, or unſkilful management, of his phyſician, ſurgeon or apothecary. For it hath been ſolemnly reſolved, that mala praxis is a great miſdemeanor and offence at Common law, whether it be for curioſity and experiment, or by neglect; becauſe it breaks the truſt which the party had placed in his phyſician, and tends to his deſtruction. Ld. Raym. 214. Theſe are wrongs or injuries unaccompanied by force, for which there is a remedy in damages, by ſpecial action of treſpaſs on the caſe. Black. Com. 3 V. 122.

As to offences againſt the public health of the nation, there are various proviſions, as with reſpect to the plague. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 31. 26 Geo. 2. c. 6. 29 Geo. 2. c. 8. As to unwholſome proviſions. 51 Hen. 3. ſtat. 6. Ord. Propiſtor. c. 7. 12 Car. c. 25. ſect. 11.

Hearth-money, A tax formerly levied, but now aboliſhed. Vide Chimney-Money.

Hebber-men, Fiſhermen, or pochers below London Bridge, who fiſh for whitings, ſmelts, &c. commonly at ebbing water; mentioned in one of the articles of the Thames jury, at the court of the conſervator of the river Thames, printed anno 1632. And theſe perſons are puniſhable by ſtatute 4 H. 7. c. 15.

Hebbing-wears, Are wears or engines made or laid at ebbing water. 23 H. 8. c. 5.

Hebdomas, (Lat.) A week. See Week.

Hebdomadius, The week's man, canon or prebendary in the cathedral church, who hath the care of the choir, and the officers belonging to it, for his own week. Reg. Epiſc. Hereford. MS. See Ebdomary.

Heck, Is the name of an engine to take fiſh in the river Ouſe. 23 H. 8. c. 18.

Heccagium, Is ſuppoſed to be rent paid to the lord of the fee for liberty to uſe the engines called Hecks.

Heda, A ſmall haven, wharf, or landing place. Domeſd. See Hith.

Hedagium, Toll or cuſtomary duties paid at the hith or wharf, for the landing goods, &c. from which exemption was granted by the King to ſome particular perſons and ſocieties. Cartular. Abbat. de Radinges, MS. f. 7.

Hedge-bote, Is neceſſary ſtuff to make hedges, which the leſſee for years, &c. may of common right take in his ground leaſed. See Hay-bote.

Hedge-breakers. By the ſtatute 43 Eliz. cap. 7. Hedge-breakers, &c. ſhall pay ſuch damages as a juſtice of peace ſhall think fit; and if not able to pay the damages, ſhall be committed to the conſtable to be whipped. And conſtables, and others, may apprehend perſons ſuſpected of hedge-ſtealing, and carry them before a juſtice; where not giving a good account how they came by wood, &c. they are not only to make ſuch recompence as the juſtice of peace ſhall adjudge, but pay a ſum not exceeding 10 s. for the uſe of the poor, or be ſent to the houſe of correction for a month, by 15 Car. 2. c. 2. Perſons convicted of buying ſtolen wood, ſhall forfeit treble value to him from whom taken. Ibid.

Heir, (Hæres, ab Hæreditate) Is he ex juſtis nuptiis procreatus, who ſucceeds by deſcent to the lands, tenements and hereditaments, being an eſtate of inheritance. The eſtate muſt be fee, becauſe nothing paſſeth jure hæreditatis but fee; and by the Common law a man cannot be heir to goods and chattels: But the civilians call him hæredem, qui ex teſtamento ſuccedit in univerſum jus teſtatoris.

Under this head may be conſidered,

I. The ſeveral kinds of heirs.

II. Who may be heirs, what perſons are excluded from being heirs, and where the word heirs is neceſſary to create an inheritance.

III. Where the heir ſhall take advantage of the conditions, covenants, &c. of his anceſtor, what ſhall go to him, &c. and where the heir ſhall be liable to the debts and contracts of the anceſtor.

I. The ſeveral kinds of heirs.

Some writers have made a diſtinction of hæres ſanguinis, & hæreditatis; a man may be hæres ſanguinis to a father or anceſtor, and yet upon diſpleaſure, be defeated of his inheritance: And there is an ultimus hæres, being he to whom lands come by eſcheat, for want of lawful heir, &c. The lord of whom the lands are held, or the King. Bract. lib. 7. cap. 17. But the moſt uſual diviſion is, that of heir apparent, heir general, heir ſpecial, heir by cuſtom, and heir by deviſe, called hæres factus.

Heir apparent, Is one during the life-time of his anceſtor; till the anceſtor's death he is only heir apparent, or at law. Co. Lit. 8. Bonds and bargains with ſuch an heir, to have double or treble the money lent, after his father's death, &c. are ſet aſide in equity; but it is by paying what was lent bona fide, with intereſt, if the obligor applies for relief: though in caſe the obligee ſues, he ſhall not recover what was really lent; for that would be to aſſiſt fraud. 1 Vern. 141, 359. Where young heirs enter into any bond, Chancery relieves againſt it, without evidence of actual impoſition; becauſe there is a ſuppoſed diſtreſs, and preſumption of a liableneſs to be impoſed on. Barnardiſt. 481.

Heir general. The heir general or heir at Common law is he who after his father or anceſtor's death hath a right to, and is introduced into, all his lands, tenements and hereditaments. But he muſt be of the whole blood, not a baſtard, alien, &c.

None but the heir general, according to the courſe of the Common law, can be heir to a warranty, or ſue an appeal of the death of his anceſtor. Co. Lit. 14. a. Cro. Jac. 217, 218.

If a condition be annexed to Borough Engliſh or Gavel-kind lands, and the condition is broken, the heir at Common law ſhall enter; for the condition is a thing of new creation, and collateral to the land: But when the eldeſt ſon enters, the heir or heirs by cuſtom, ſhall enjoy the land; for by breach of the condition they are reſtored to their ancient eſtates. Cro. Eliz. 204. Plow. 28. Co. Lit. 11, 12.

Special heir, Is the iſſue in tail claiming per formam doni, and as the ſtatute de donis preſerves the eſtate to him, his anceſtor cannot grant or alien, nor make any rightful eſtate of freehold to another, but for term of his own life. Lit. ſect. 613.

Heir by cuſtom. A cuſtom in particular places varying the rules of deſcent at Common law is good; ſuch as the cuſtom of Gavel-kind, by which all the ſons ſhall inherit, and make but one heir to their anceſtor; but the general cuſtom of Gavel-kind lands extends to ſons only, but a ſpecial cuſtom, that if one brother dies without iſſue, all his brothers may inherit, is good. Co. Litt. 140.

Heir by deviſe, or hære factus, is only a deviſee of lands, being made ſo by the will of the teſtator, and has no other right or intereſt than the will gives him. 3 Co. 42. a.

It has been held in Chancery, that ſuch an heir ſhall have the aid of the perſonal eſtate in diſcharging the debts of the teſtator. 1 Vern. 36, 7.

But this muſt be underſtood of an hæres factus of the whole eſtate, who ſhall have the benefit of the perſonal eſtate, but a deviſee of particular lands ſhall not. Preced. Chanc. 3.

Likewiſe there is a lineal heir, as the ſon of a perſon and a collateral heir, as brother, &c. Yet a man can have no right heir, to take lands during his life. Dyer 99.

II. Who may be heir, what perſons are excluded from being heirs, and where the word heirs is neceſſary to create an inheritance.

The eldeſt ſon, after the death of his father, is at common law his heir, &c. And if there be grandfather, father, and ſon, and the father die before the grandfather, and after the grandfather dies ſeiſed; the land ſhall go to the ſon or daughter of the father, and not to any other children of the grandfather. Bro. 303. And this heir is called hæres jure repræſentationis, becauſe he doth repreſent his father's perſon: but if, in this caſe, the father die without any child; his next eldeſt brother ſhall have the land as heir, or, for want of a brother, it deſcends to the ſiſters of the father. Ibid. A man having iſſue only a daughter, dies, leaving his wife with child of a ſon, which is afterwards born; here the ſon after his birth is heir to the land, but till then the daughter is to have it. 9 H. 6. 23. Perk. 521.

There are ſome perſons who may not be heirs; as a baſtard born out of lawful wedlock; an alien, born out of the King's allegiance, tho' in wedlock; a man attainted of treaſon or felony, whoſe blood is corrupted; theſe laſt may not be heirs propter delictum; and an alien cannot be heir, propter defectum ſubjectionis; nor may one made denizen by letters patent; tho' it is otherwiſe of a perſon naturalized by act of parliament. Co. Lit. 8. 2 Danv. Abr. 552. A baſtard by continuance, may be heir againſt a ſtranger; and an hermaphrodite may be heir, and take according to that ſex which is moſt prevalent; but a monſter, who hath not human ſhape cannot be heir, although a perſon deformed may. Co. Lit. 7. 2 Danv. 553. Ideots and lunaticks, perſons excommunicate, attainted in premunire, outlaws in debt, &c. may be heirs. Ibid.

The word heir is not a good deſcription of a perſon in the life-time of the anceſtor; and an eldeſt ſon ſhall not take by the name of heir in the life-time of his father. 2 Leon. 70. A man cannot raiſe a fee-ſimple eſtate to his right heirs, by the name of heirs, as a purchaſe, by conveyance or otherwiſe; but in ſuch caſe the heir ſhall be in by deſcent: Fortior & potentior eſt diſpoſitio legis quam hominis. Hob. 30. 2 Lill. Abr. 11.

By the law of England, no perſon can take to himſelf an inheritance in fee-ſimple by deed, without the word heirs; but he may by deviſe: tho' in caſes where the word heir is wanting, it has been adjudged that if there were other words equivalent, and the intereſt in the thing granted paſſeth by the conſideration only, without any further ceremony in the law an eſtate in fee may paſs. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 928. In a deviſe by will, or exchange, &c. the word heirs is not neceſſary: but eſtates of inheritance which are otherwiſe conveyed, require it. Jenk. Cent. 196.

The word heir is nomen collectivum, and extends unto all heirs: And under heirs, the heirs of heirs are comprehended in infinitum; if lands are given to a man and his heirs, all his heirs are ſo totally in him, that he may give his lands to whom he will. Trin. 23 Jac. 1. Noy 56.

The heir is favoured by the Common law; and the anceſtor could not give away his lands by will from his heir at law, without the conſent of the heir, till the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 1. 2 Lill. 11. Hill. 23 Car. B. R. Dubious words in a will ſhall be conſtrued for the benefit of the heir; and not to diſinherit him: And the heir at law is preferred in Chancery in a doubtful caſe. Noy 185. Chanc. Rep. 7. Where lands were deviſed to the heirs of J. S. then living; it was held, that his eldeſt ſon ſhould have them, though in ſtrictneſs he was not heir during his father's life, but heir apparent: But this was by reaſon of the words then living, which make it a deſcription of the perſon. Preced. Chanc. 57.

III. Where the heir ſhall take advantage of the conditions, covenants, &c. of his anceſtor, what ſhall go to him, &c. and where the heir ſhall be liable to the debts and contracts of the anceſtor.

Conditions and covenants real, or ſuch as are annexed to eſtates, ſhall deſcend to the heir, and he alone ſhall take advantage of them. 43 Ed. 3. c. 4. 1 And. 55.

And this is not only where there are expreſs words, but alſo where there are none; for the law by implication reſerves the condition to the heir of the feoffor, &c. for being prejudiced by the diſpoſition, it is but reaſonable that he ſhould take the ſame advantage that his anceſtor whom he repreſents might. 1 Rol. Abr. 407, 472.

If a man ſeiſed of lands in right of his wife, makes a feoffment in fee upon condition, and dies, and after the condition is broken, the heir of the huſband ſhall enter; for though no right deſcended to him, yet the title of entry by force of the condition which was created upon the feoffment, and reſerved to the feoffor and his heirs, deſcended. 8 Co. 43. Co. Lit. 202. a. 336. b.

The heir ſhall take advantage of a nomine pœnæ, for being incident to the rent, it ſhall deſcend to the heir, being a ſecurity or penalty to engage the payment of the rent; therefore whoever has a right to the rent, ought in reaſon to have the penalty, which is to oblige the tenant to pay it. Co. Lit. 162. b.

If a man leaſes for years, and the leſſee covenants with the leſſor, his executors and adminiſtrators, to repair and leave it in good repair at the end of the term, and the leſſor dies, &c. his heir may have an action upon this covenant, for this is a covenant which runs with the land, and ſhall go to the heir, though he is not named; and it appears that it was intended to continue after the death of the leſſor, inaſmuch as his executors, &c. are named. 3 Lev. 92. Lougher ver. Williams. Skin. 305. S. C. cited.

If A. enfeoff B. upon condition, that if the heir of A. pays to B. &c. 20*s.* then he and his heirs may re-enter; this is a good condition, of which the heir of A. may take advantage, and yet A. himſelf never can. Co. Lit. 214. b.

Not only land, but rent not due at the death of the anceſtor leſſor, ſhall go to the heir; ſo corn ſown by a tenant for years, where his term expires before the corn is ripe; every thing faſtened to the freehold, timber-trees, deeds belonging to the inheritance; deer, conies, pigeons, fiſh, &c. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 927. An heir ſhall enforce the adminiſtrator to pay debts with perſonal eſtate, to preſerve the inheritance. Chanc. Rep. 280, 293. If an executor hath aſſets, he is compellable in equity to redeem a mortgage, for the benefit of the heir; and it is the ſame where the heir is charged in debt. Hard. 511. For the perſonal eſtate received the benefit. When the heir is ſued for the debt of his anceſtor, and pays it, he ſhall be reimburſed by the executor of the obligor, who hath perſonal aſſets. 1 Chanc. Rep. 74. But in action of debt brought upon a bond againſt an heir, it is no good plea for the heir to ſay, that the executors have aſſets in their hands. Dyer 204. For a creditor may ſue either heir or executor, and heirs and executors are both chargeable upon ſpecialties. If an heir hath aſſets, and the executor alſo, it is at the election of the obligee to have action of debt againſt the one, or the other; but he ſhall not charge them doubly. 2 Plowd. 433. If an heir hath made over lands fallen to him by deſcent, execution ſhall be had againſt him to the value of the land, &c. if it be not ſold bona fide before the action brought, in which caſe there is a ſaving by the Statute 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 14. And whether the heir hath lands by deſcent ſhall be tried and enquired of, with the value, by a jury, to make the heir anſwerable. 5 Mod. 122.

Where bound, &c.

As the heir at law is the proper and only perſon, who can take advantage of conditions, &c. annexed to the real eſtate; ſo he ſhall be bound by all ſuch conditions, &c. which run with the land, whether ſuch conditions were annexed to the eſtate by the original feoffor, grantor, or immediate anceſtor. 1 Rol. Abr. 421.

If a gift be made in tail on condition, that the donee ſhould not diſcontinue, and the donee hath iſſue two daughters, and one of them diſcontinues, the donor ſhall enter and evict them both, becauſe it was the original condition annexed to the whole eſtate, that no part of it ſhould be diſcontinued. Co. Lit. 165.

But note, that neither tenant in tail, nor his iſſue can be reſtrained from aliening by fine and recovery, though they may be reſtrained from aliening by feoffment, or other tortious act, which amounts to a diſcontinuance.

So where one deviſed lands to A. and the heirs male of his body, provided, that if he does attempt to alien, that then immediately his eſtate ſhall ceaſe, and B. ſhall enter, and A. makes a feoffment in fee, and thereupon B. enters; and it was adjudged againſt B. and that the condition was void, becauſe non conſtat what ſhall be adjudged an attempt, and how it ſhall be tried. 1 Vent. 321. 3 Keb. 787. Piers and Winn.

Alſo where a condition is annexed to the eſtate given to the heir, and which goes in abridgment and reſtraint thereof, the ſame ſhall in ſome caſes be conſtrued a limitation; for if it were a condition, nobody could take advantage of it but the heir. Dyer 316. 10 Co. 41. 1 Vent. 199.

As if a copyholder in Borough Engliſh ſurrenders to the uſe of his will, and after deviſes to his wife for life, remainder to his eldeſt ſon, paying 40*s.* to each of his brothers and ſiſters ,within two years after the death of his wife, &c. this is a limitation, and not a condition; for if it ſhould be a condition, it would extinguiſh in the heir, and there would be no remedy for the money. Cro. Eliz. 204. Wellok and Hammond 3. Co. 20. b. 2 Leon. 114. S. C. Vide farther as to the doctrine of the heir being bound, &c. Vaugh. 271. 2 Mod. 26. S. C. Cro. Eliz. 833, 919. Moor 644. pl. 891. Noy 51.

But wherever the anceſtor makes a conveyance or diſpoſition on condition, which goes in reſtraint and abridgment of the eſtate of the heir, he muſt have notice of it; for having a good title by deſcent, he is not obliged to take notice of ſuch condition at his peril, as others muſt do. 8 Co. France's caſe.

If the perſon of the anceſtor be bound in reſpect of his land, which deſcends to the heir, he ſhall be charged: as, if by a ſubſidy to be aſſeſſed upon every one having 20*s.* per annum, A. be charged and die; his heir ſhall pay it, for it runs with the land. R. Mo. 17.

Heir is nomen collectivum; and therefore, if a condition be, that if his heir does not pay ſuch a rent-charge, the eſtate ſhall go to B. if the heir of the heir does not pay, the condition is broken. R. Cro. Jac. 145.

It has been held, that the heir is never chargeable without an expreſs lien and aſſets; and even then, no longer than he hath aſſets, for he is not obliged to keep them till he is charged: But if he hath aſſets, he ought to plead truly, and confeſs them; otherwiſe judgment ſhall be given againſt him de terris propriis, for it is then his debt. Jones 88. 3 Salk. 179. When a man recovers againſt an heir, by default or verdict, on pleading riens per deſcent, a ſpecial judgment de terris deſcenſis, may be entered againſt the heir, and the plaintiff, (praying it) ſhall have all the lands by deſcent in execution: though if the judgment be general againſt the heir, without praying ſuch ſpecial judgment he can only have a moiety of the lands by elegit. Plowd. 439. 2 Leon. 16. Here the plaintiff may ſurmiſe, that the heir hath ſuch land by deſcent, and pray to have execution of all his land. Dyer 149. Rol. 72. The judgment and execution ſhall be general, unleſs the heir acknowledge the action, and ſhews that he hath ſo much by deſcent; but if he will not ſhew what he hath by deſcent, he loſes the benefit of the law. Mich. 1 W. & M. B. R. Cro. Eliz. 692.

If the heir, in caſe where the anceſtor hath bound himſelf and his heirs, have never ſo much land come to him by gift in tail, or conveyance of the father, and not by deſcent, he is not chargeable at all: and ſo it is for any eſtate but what is in fee-ſimple; as where lands are granted to J. S. and his heirs during the life of another, &c. the heir ſhall not be charged for this, no more than for the land entailed. 10 Rep. 98. No lands can be charged but fee-ſimple; therefore, in a ſuit againſt the heir, the judgment is only for the land deſcended, and not for other lands, &c. but where it is by his own fault, as by a falſe plea, or the like. Co. Lit. 102, 376.

A man binds himſelf and his heirs in an obligation, and hath lands and heirs on the part of the father, and the part of the mother; the heirs and lands of both, and not of one alone, muſt be charged in debt: and the plaintiff ſhall have ſeveral actions; and execution ſhall ſtay, till it may be had againſt both of them. 2 Rep. 25. Hob. 25. Alſo if one bind himſelf and his heirs, and leave land at Common law, and lands in gavelkind; the obligee muſt ſue all the heirs. Hob. 25. An heir ſued on a ſpecialty, ſhall have his age; and if one of the heirs be within age, the parol ſhall be ſtayed for all. Moor, cap. 203.

A collateral heir is chargeable for the debt of his anceſtor; but the declaration muſt be ſpecial, and he is to be charged as collateral heir, not as immediate heir; and if a ſon happens between, who dies, he muſt be ſaid uncle and heir of the ſon, who was heir of the debtor, &c. Cro. Car. 151. And a child born, though he lives but an hour, has the fee of lands veſted in him as heir. Hetl. 134. In a writ a man need not ſhew how he is heir; but he muſt in a declaration, &c. though it is only for form to ſet forth how a perſon is heir, becauſe it is not traverſable; and heir, or no heir, is iſſuable. Moor 885. If an heir ought to confeſs the debt on action brought againſt him, and the debt be not denied, it muſt be admitted. 1 Lutw. 442.

Debt againſt the heir, upon the bond of his anceſtor, is to be brought in the debet and detinet, becauſe the heir himſelf is bound; and not in the detinet only, though that is cured by verdict. Sid. 342. 1 Lev. 224. An heir is not bound by the bond of the anceſtor, unleſs he is expreſly bound: and if in a bond a man bind his heirs, but not himſelf, the bond is void. 2 Saund. 136. Cro. Jac. 570. Alſo a man ſhall never bind his heir to warranty, where he himſelf was not bound: if he make a feoffment in fee, and bind his heirs only to warranty, the feoffment is void, for the heir ſhall be bound to warranty in ſuch caſes only, where the anceſtor was bound, without which it cannot deſcend upon him. Co. Lit. 386. And warranties and eſtoppels ſhall deſcend upon the heir general, and not upon any ſpecial heir, &c. So that if a man convey land with warranty againſt him and his heirs, his heir on the mother's part ſhall not be vouched by this, ſo long as there is an heir on the father's part, &c. Hob. 24.

A grant of an annuity, muſt be for a man and his heirs, to bind the heir, although there be aſſets; and when he is named, the heir ſhall not be bound except there be aſſets. Co. Lit. 144. Where a perſon covenants with another to perform any act, if his heir be not named, he is not bound by it: but in covenants of others, that concern the inheritance, the heir ſhall have the benefit of them, though not named. 5 Rep. 8. 1 Rol. Abr. 520. An heir may enter for a condition broken, when the condition is annexed to lands, and take advantage of it; becauſe if there had been no condition, the land would have deſcended to him. And an heir may perform a condition, to ſave the land. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 929.

The heir ſhall not have money due on mortgages in fee, if he be not particularly named, but the executor; and if the day be paſt, although the heir be named, the executor ſhall have it. Co. Lit. 210. 2 Ventr. 348.

As to ſuing and being ſued.

It is clear, that the heir may bring any real action droitural, in right of his anceſtor, but cannot regularly bring any perſonal action, becauſe he has nothing to do with the aſſets, or perſonal contracts of his anceſtor. Co. Lit. 164. If an erroneous judgment be given againſt the anceſtor, by which he loſeth the lands, the heir may bring a writ of error. 1 Rol. Abr. 747. Dyer 90. Godb. 337. And if one hath lands on the part of his mother, and loſeth by erroneous judgment, and dies, the heir of the part of the mother ſhall have the writ of error. 1 Leon. 261. 2 Sid. 56. So the younger ſon, when intitled to the land by the cuſtom of Borough Engliſh, ſhall bring the writ of error, and not the heir at Common law, for this remedy deſcends with the land. Owen 68. 1 Leon. 261. 4 Leon. 5. adjudged; and ſee Bridgm. 71. So if there be an erroneous judgment againſt tenant in tail female, the iſſue female, and not the ſon, ſhall bring a writ of error. Dyer 90. 1 Leon. 261. 1 Rol. Abr. 747. See farther Dyer 89. Cro. Eliz. 469. 3 Lev. 36. And vide error (who ſhall bring it)

If J. S. binds himſelf and his heirs, in a bond, and thereupon judgment is obtained againſt J. S. and J. S. makes his will, and his heir at law executor, and dies, leaving lands which deſcended to his heir, yet he ſhall not have a writ of error as heir, for he is not privy to the judgment; and when an extent is made upon him, it is as tertenant, but after the lands are taken in execution, he may have a writ of error. Style 38, 39. per Roll. Becauſe he is prejudiced by the judgment, and by the reverſal will receive benefit.

The heir at law may, in right of his anceſtor, maintain an action of debt for rent reſerved on a leaſe, made by his anceſtor, (accrued after the death of the anceſtor) for the rent is part of the lands, and incident to the reverſion; but for arrears of rent incurred in the life-time of the anceſtor, neither the heir, nor the executor, could by the Common law maintain an action; for as to the heir, they were conſidered as part of the perſonal eſtate, and as to the executor, he could not repreſent his teſtator as to any contracts relating to the freehold and inheritance. 11 H. 6. 15. 19 H. 6. 41 Co. Lit. 162. a. But now, by the 32 H. 8. cap. 37. an executor may maintain an action of debt for ſuch arrears; for which ſee tit. Debt.

If a nobleman, knight, eſquire, &c. be buried in a church, and have his coat of arms, and pennons with his arms, and ſuch other enſigns of honour as belong to his degree, ſet up in the church, or if a grave-ſtone or tomb be laid or made, &c. for a monument of him; in this caſe, albeit the freehold of the church be in the parſon, and that theſe be annexed to the freehold, yet cannot the parſon, or any, take them, or deface them, but he is ſubject to the heir, and his heirs, in the honour and memory of whoſe anceſtor they were ſet up. Co. Lit. 18. b. For this, ſee 1 Rol. Abr. 625. Noy 104. Godbolt 200. Cro. Jac. 367. 2 Bulſt. 151.

Where the anceſtor binds himſelf, and his heirs, in an obligation, the obligee may ſue the heir, or executor, or the adminiſtrator of the executor, at his election, and may have execution of the land deſcended to the heir; for the Common law having allowed the action of debt againſt the heir, he could have no benefit by the action, unleſs he were permitted to have execution of the lands which deſcended to the heir. Plowd. 441. 3 Co. 12. a. Cro. Jac. 450. 1 And. 7.

But the body of the heir is protected, for it would be moſt unreaſonable to ſubject the heir to the payment of his anceſtor's debts, any farther than to the value of the aſſets deſcended. Dyer 81. pl. 62, 207. pl. 15. Moor pl. 203. Co. Lit. 103, 290.

Alſo the heir muſt be expreſly named, otherwiſe he is not chargeable, and the reaſon why the heir is not chargeable in this caſe, as the executor in caſe of a bond entred into by the teſtator, without being named, is this; by the Common law only the goods and chattels of the debtor, and the annual profits of the land as they aroſe, and not the land itſelf, were liable to execution for debt or damages, becauſe theſe being the ſecurity the creditor depended upon, they were liable in the hands of his repreſentative or executor, as well as in the hands of the debtor himſelf; hence it was, that the executor was bound by the debt of the teſtator, ſo far as he had chattels or aſſets, though he was not named in the contract; but the land was not liable to execution, becauſe it was preſerved from the perſonal contracts and engagements of the tenant, that he might be the better able to anſwer the feudal duties to the lord, which were the life and ſupport of government; therefore the land not being originally liable to the demand in the hands of the obligor, muſt be much leſs liable in the hands of the heir, who was not comprehended in the contract. 2 Inſt. 19. Plowd. 440. Hob. 60.

But if A. had granted, for him and his heirs, to B. and his heirs, ſuch a rent out of his lands; in this caſe, the heirs being comprehended in the contract, are bound to make good the grant, ſo far as they have aſſets by deſcent from the grantor; and this was allowed at Common law, becauſe the grantee of the rent had the land originally in view for his ſecurity; and by the grant itſelf having it in his power to diſtrain the land for the rent, it was equal to the heir, whether the land anſwer the rent by diſtreſs, or by an execution upon a judgment in a writ of annuity. 1 Rol. Abr. 226. Popham 87. Hob. 58. Dyer 344. b. Co. Lit. 144. b.

If the anceſtor bind himſelf in a ſtatute, recognizance &c. the heir is liable, not only as tertenant, but alſo as heir, otherwiſe he could not have his age; and cannot oblige a purchaſer, whether for valuable conſideration, or without, to contribute, but one heir may oblige another to contribute; as if a man ſeiſed of two acres, the one deſcendible, according to the courſe of the Common law, the other in Borough Engliſh, acknowledge a ſtatute, &c. the heir at common law ſhall oblige the Borough Engliſh heir to contribute: ſo one coparcener ſhall oblige the other to contribute; or if the conuzor had lands, ſome deſcendible to the heirs of the father, and ſome deſcendible on the heirs of the mother, the heir on the part of the father ſhall compel the heir on the part of the mother to contribute; & ſic vice verſa. 3 Co. 12. Sir William Herbert's caſe.

By the Common law, if the heir before an action brought againſt him had aliened the aſſets, the obligee was without any remedy; but if he only aliened, pending the writ, the lands, which he had by deſcent at the time of the original purchaſed, had been liable. Co. Lit. 102.

In conſequence of this doctrine, that the lien ſhall have relation to the time of the original purchaſed, it hath been adjudged, that if there had been two creditors to J. S. whoſe heir is bound, viz. A. and B. and A. files an original in C. B. and hath judgment thereon, Trin. Term. 2 Jac. 2. by default, and thereupon a general elegit iſſues againſt all the lands of the heir, and a moiety thereof is delivered to A B. on a bill filed in B. R. 1 & 2 Jac. 2. has a ſpecial judgment againſt the aſſets confeſſed by the heir, Trin. Term, 3 Jac. 2. though B.'s judgment be ſubſequent to A.'s, yet it appearing that his bill or original was filed before A.'s, the judgment ſhall have relation thereto, therefore he muſt be firſt ſatisfied. Carth. 245.

So it ſeems in the above caſe, that tho' A.'s judgment had been on an original actually filed before B.'s, that B. muſt have been preferred, becauſe his judgment was general againſt the heir, and the execution a general and common execution by elegit, and not againſt the aſſets only by way of extent; therefore ſuch a general judgment will not operate by way of relation to the original, but binds only, as in common caſes, from the time of the judgment given. Carth. 246. Per Cur'.

But now, in relief of creditors againſt the alienation of lands deſcended, &c. by the 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 14. it is enacted, "That in all caſes, where any heir at law ſhall be liable to pay the debt of his anceſtor, in regard of any lands, tenements or hereditaments deſcending to him, and ſhall ſell, alien, or make over the ſame, before any action brought or proceſs ſued out againſt him, that ſuch heir at law ſhall be anſwerable for ſuch debt or debts, in an action or actions of debt to the value of the ſaid land ſo by him ſold, aliened, or made over; in which caſes all creditors ſhall be preferred, as in actions againſt executors and adminiſtrators, and ſuch execution ſhall be taken out upon any judgment or judgments ſo obtained againſt ſuch heir to the value of the ſaid land, as if the ſame were his own proper debt or debts; ſaving that the lands, tenements and hereditaments bona fide aliened before the action brought, ſhall not be liable to ſuch execution."

But it is by the act provided, That where any action of debt upon any ſpecialty is brought againſt any heir, he may plead riens per diſcent at the time of the original writ brought, or the bill filed againſt him. And the plaintiff in ſuch action may reply, that he had lands, tenements or hereditaments from his anceſtor before the original writ brought, or the bill filed: and if, upon iſſue joined thereupon, it be found for the plaintiff, the jury ſhall inquire of the value of the lands, tenements or hereditaments ſo deſcended, and thereupon judgment ſhall be given, and execution ſhall be awarded as aforeſaid: but if judgment be given againſt ſuch heir, by confeſſion of the action without confeſſing the aſſets deſcended, or upon demurrer, or nihil dicit, it ſhall be for the debt and damages, without any writ to inquire of the lands, tenements or hereditaments ſo deſcended.

It is not improper to obſerve, that, before this act, if the anceſtor had deviſed away the lands, a creditor by ſpecialty had no remedy either againſt the heir, or deviſee. Abr. Eq. 149.

But now, to provide againſt that miſchief, it is by the ſame ſtatute enacted, "That all wills and teſtaments, limitations, diſpoſitions, or appointments, of or concerning any manors, meſſuages, lands, tenements or hereditaments, or of any rent, profit, term, or charge out of the ſame, whereof any perſon or perſons at the time of his, her, or their deceaſe ſhall be ſeiſed in fee-ſimple, poſſeſſion, reverſion or remainder, or have power to diſpoſe of the ſame by his, her, or their laſt wills or teſtaments, ſhall be deemed and taken (only as againſt ſuch creditor or creditors as aforeſaid, his, her, and their heirs, ſucceſſors, executors, adminiſtrators and aſſigns, and every of them,) to be fraudulent, and clearly, abſolutely, and utterly void, fruſtrate, and of none effect; (any pretence, colour, feigned or preſumed conſideration, or any other matter or thing to the contrary notwithſtanding.)"

And that ſuch creditors may be enabled to recover their debts, it is further enacted, "That, in the caſes before mentioned, every ſuch creditor may maintain an action of debt upon ſuch bonds and ſpecialties, againſt the heirs at law of ſuch obligors, and ſuch deviſees jointly, by virtue of this act; and ſuch deviſees ſhall be liable and chargeable for a falſe plea, in the ſame manner as any heir ſhould have been for falſe plea, or for not confeſſing the lands or tenements to him deſcended."

It is, however, by this act further provided, That where there is any limitation or appointment, deviſe or diſpoſition of any lands, &c. for the raiſing or payment of any real or juſt debt, or any portion or ſum of money, for any child, other than the heir at law, according to, or in purſuance of, any marriage contract, or agreement in writing bona fide made, before ſuch marriage, the ſame ſhall be in full force, and the lands, &c. ſhall be holden and enjoyed by ſuch perſons, and their heirs, executors, adminiſtrators and aſſigns, for whom the ſaid limitation, &c. was made, and by their truſtees, and their heirs, executors, adminiſtrators and aſſigns, for ſuch eſtate or intereſt, as ſhall be ſo limited, &c. until ſuch debt or debts, portion or portions ſhall be raiſed, paid and ſatisfied."

And it is further enacted, "That all and every deviſee and deviſees, made liable by that act, ſhall be liable and chargeable in the ſame manner as the heir at law, by force of the act, notwithſtanding the lands, tenements, and hereditaments to him or them deviſed, ſhall be aliened before the action brought."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it hath been holden, that though a man is prevented thereby from defeating his creditors by will, that yet any ſettlement or diſpoſition he ſhall make in his life-time of his lands, whether voluntary or not, will be good againſt bond creditors; for that was not provided againſt by the ſtatute, which only took care to ſecure ſuch creditors from any impoſition, which might be ſuppoſed in a man's laſt ſickneſs; but if he gave away his eſtate in his life-time, this prevented the deſcent of ſo much to the heir, conſequently took away their remedy againſt him, who was only liable in reſpect of the lands deſcended; and as a bond is no lien whatſoever on lands in the hands of the obligor, much leſs can it be ſo, when they are given away to a ſtranger. Abr. Eq. 149.

As to the manner of pleading and replying under this ſtatute, vide the caſe of Redſhaw and Heſther, Carth. 35. and 5 Mod. 122. S. C.

It ſeems that neither before, nor ſince, this ſtatute, the executor or adminiſtrator of the heir are liable; for the perſon of the heir is not chargeable, but with reſpect to the land; and if, before the ſtatute, the heir had aliened before action brought, he ſhould not be charged for the profits he received; which is evident from the plea of riens per diſcent the day of the writ purchaſed; much leſs could his executor, nor can he yet, unleſs ſome ſtatute make him ſo: for in executor is but in nature of a truſtee for the perſonalty, and not at all privy to the inheritance. Trin. 32 Car. 2. in C. B. adjudged. 3 New Abr. 28.

If there be judgment in debt againſt two, and one dies, a ſcire facias lies againſt the other alone, reciting the death, and he cannot plead that the heir of him who is dead has aſſets by deſcent, and demand judgment if he ought to be charged alone: for, at Common law, the charge upon a judgment being perſonal ſurvived, and the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. that gives the elegit, does not take away the remedy of the plaintiff at Common law, therefore the party may take out his execution which way he pleaſes; for the words of the ſtatute are ſit in electione: but if he ſhould, after the allowance of the writ, and revival of the judgment, take out an elegit to charge the land, the party may have remedy by ſuggeſtion, or elſe by audita querela. 1 Lev. 30. Raym. 26. 1 Keb. 92. S. C.

As to a ſequeſtration, and to ſhew that a decree ſhall have the ſame authority to bind the perſonal aſſets, as a judgment at law, and therefore ſhall go pari paſſu to be paid off and diſcharged, Vide 1 Vern. 143. 3 Lev. 355. 2 Vern. 37, 88-9.

With reſpect to aſſets, &c.

Where the anceſtor binds himſelf and his heirs, all his lands of freehold, and which deſcend in fee-ſimple, are aſſets by deſcent, and ſhall be liable, as far as they extend, to anſwer the anceſtor's obligations. See Bro. tit. Aſſets. Fit. tit. Aſſets. 1 Rol. Abr 269. tit. Aſſets. A reverſion after a leaſe for years made by the anceſtor is preſent aſſets, ſo that the heir cannot plead riens per diſcent in delay of execution of the rent and reverſion, tho' the plaintiff cannot have benefit of the reverſion till the leaſe be determined. 1 Salk. 354-5. Fareſt. 42. 2 Mod. 50—51. Hern's Plead. 320.

So a reverſion expectant upon the determination of an eſtate for life is quaſi aſſets, and ought to be pleaded ſpecially by the heir, and the plaintiff in ſuch caſe may take judgment of it cum acciderit. Carth. 129. per Holt. But a reverſion in fee expectant upon an eſtate tail is not aſſets, becauſe it lies in the will of the tenant in tail to dock and bar it at his pleaſure. 6 Co. 58. 1 Rol. Abr. 269.

If A. hath iſſue B. and C. and conveys lands to the uſe of himſelf for life, the remainder to B. in tail male, the remainder to his own right heirs, and A. dies, and the reverſion deſcends to B. his ſon, and B. dies ſeiſed, and the reverſion deſcends to his ſon, who dies without iſſue, ſo that the tail is ſpent, and C. enters, theſe lands ſhall be aſſets to anſwer the debt of his father. Carth. 127. 3 Lev. 286. 3 Mod. 223. S C.

The lands (as hath been obſerved) muſt deſcend to the heir; and therefore it was formerly held, that if he took by purchaſe, as if the teſtator deviſed them to him, paying ſo much, or if he deviſed lands to one of the two, and his heirs at law jointly, that thoſe lands were not aſſets; but if he deviſed one part to A. another to B. and another to his heir at law, this third part was aſſets. Cro. Eliz. 431. 2 Mod 286.

By the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries (29 Car. 2. c. 3.) it is enacted, That if lands come to the heir by reaſon of a ſpecial occupancy, they ſhall be chargeable in his hands as aſſets by deſcent, as in caſes of lands in fee-ſimple, and in caſe there be no ſpecial occupant thereof, it ſhall go to the executors or adminiſtrators of the party that had the eſtate thereof by virtue of the grant, and ſhall be aſſets in their hands. Alſo by the ſaid ſtatute, par. 10 & 11. where lands are ſettled in truſt, and deſcend in fee to the heir of ceſtuy que truſt, the ſame ſhall be aſſets in the ſame manner as lands in poſſeſſion, but he ſhall not, by reaſon of any plea or other matter, be chargeable to pay the condemnation out of his own eſtate. Vid. 2 Vern 248.

An equity of redemption of an inheritance is aſſets, for the heir having a right in equity, that ought in equity to be liable to ſatisfy a bond debt. 4 Chanc. Caſ. 148. Tenant in tail ſuffers a recovery to let in a mortgage of 500 years, then limits the land to the old uſes, and makes his will, and deviſes all his lands for the payment of his debts; the redemption was limited to him, his heirs and aſſigns; and the court thought that the equity of redemption of this mortgage, ſhould be aſſets to ſatisfy creditors, or a ſubſequent grantee of an annuity. Preced. Chanc. 39. Foſſet and Auſtin. A right without any eſtate in poſſeſſion, reverſion or remainder, is not aſſets till it be recovered and reduced into poſſeſſion. 6 Co 58. For more learning on this ſubject, ſee 14 *Vin. Heir-loome, (From the Sax. Heier, i. e. Hæres, & Leome, Membrum) Comprehends divers implements of houſhold, ſuch as the firſt beſt bed and other things, which by the cuſtom of ſome countries have belonged to a houſe for certain deſcents, and are never inventoried after the deceaſe of the owner as chattels, nor do they go to the executor, but accrue to the heir with the houſe itſelf by cuſtom, and not by the Common law: theſe are not deviſable by teſtament; for the law prefers the cuſtom before a deviſe, which takes not effect till after the death of the teſtator, and then they are veſted in the heir by the cuſtom. Co. Lit 18, 185. But ſale in a man's life-time might make it otherwiſe. The ancient jewels of the crown are heir-looms, and ſhall deſcend to the next ſucceſſor; and are not deviſable by will. Ibid 185. And heir-looms in general are ſaid to extend to all large houſhold implements; of which Spelman ſays thus: Omne utenſile robuſtius quod ab ædibus non facile revellitur, ideoque ex more quorundam locorum ad hæredem tranſit, tanquam membrum hæreditatis. And Sir *Edw. Herald, Heralt, or Herold, (Ital. heraldo, Fr. herault, quaſi herus altus) Signifies an officer at arms. Vergeſtan thinks it may be derived from two Dutch words, viz. Here, exercitus et Healt, pugil magnanimus; as if he ſhould be called the Champion of the Army: and the Romans called Heralds, feciales. Polydore, lib. 19. deſcribes them thus: Habent inſuper apparitores miniſtros, quos Heraldos dicunt, quorum præfectus Armorum Rex vocitatur; hii belli et pacis Nuncii; Ducibus, Comitibuſque a Rege factis inſignia aptant, ac eorum funera curant. The function of theſe officers, as now exerciſed with us, is to denounce war, proclaim peace, and to be employed by the King in martial meſſages: they are examiners and judges of gentlemens coat of arms, and conſervers of genealogies; and they marſhal the ſolemnities at the coronations, and funerals of princes, and other great men.

The three chief heralds, are called Kings at Arms; of which Garter is the principal, inſtituted by King Henry 5. whoſe office is to attend the Knights of the Garter at their ſolemnities, and to marſhal the funerals of the nobility: and King Edw 4. granted the office of King of Heralds to one Garter, cum feudis et proficuis ab antiquo, etc. The next is Clarencieux or Clarentius, ordained by Edward 4. who attaining the dukedom of Clarence by the death of George his brother, (whom he beheaded for aſpiring to the crown,) made the herald who belonged to that dukedom, a King at arms, and called him Clarencieux; his proper office is to marſhal and diſpoſe the funerals of all the leſſer nobility, knights and eſquires, thro' the realm, on the South ſide of the Trent. The third is Norroy, quaſi North Roy, whoſe office and buſineſs is the ſame on the North ſide of Trent, as Clarentius on the ſouth, which is intimated by his name, ſignifying the Northern King, or King at Arms of the North parts. Theſe three officers are diſtinguiſhed as follows, viz. Garter Rex Armorum Anglicorum indefinite; Clarencuieux, Rex Armorum partium Auſtralium: Norroy, Rex Armorum partium Borealium.

Beſides the Kings at Arms, there are ſix inferior heralds, according to their original, as they were created to attend Dukes and great Lords, in martial expeditions, i. e. York, Lancaſter, Cheſter, Windſor, Richmond and Somerſet; the four former inſtituted by King Edward 3. and the two latter by Edward 4. and Henry 8. To theſe, upon the coming of King George to the crown, on account of his Hanoverian dominions, a new Herald was made, called Hanover Herald; and another ſtiled Glouceſter, King at Arms. Anno 11 Geo. 1. And laſtly, to the ſuperior and inferior Heralds, are added four others, called Marſhals or Purſuivants at Arms, who commonly ſucceed in the places of ſuch Heralds as die, or are preferred; and they are blue-mantle, rouge-croſs, rouge-dragon, and portcullis; all equipped with proper enſigns, badges and diſtinctions.

The ancient Heralds have been made a corporation or college under the Earl Marſhal of England, with certain privileges by the Kings of this realm: Conceſſerunt, etc. Heraldi Armorum, et omnes alii Heraldi, proſecutores ſive Purſuivandi armorum, qui pro tempore fuerint, imperpetuum, ſint unum corpus corporatum, in re, facto, et nomine; *habeantque ſucceſſionem perpetuam, nec non quoddam ſigillum commune, &c. Herebannum, (Sax. Here, exercitus, & Ban edictum, mulcta) A mulct, for not going armed into the field, when called forth. Spelm. Under the feudal policy, every free man, was under an obligation to ſerve the ſtate. If, upon being ſummoned into the field, any freeman refuſed to obey, a full herebannum, i. e. A fine of ſixty crowns, was to be exacted from him, according to the law of the Franks. This fine was levied with ſuch rigor, that if any perſon was inſolvent, he was reduced to ſervitude, and continued in that ſtate until ſuch time as his labour ſhould amount to the value of the herebannum. The Emperor Lotharius rendered the penalty more ſevere, by confiſcating the goods of the perſon refuſing, and baniſhing him. Robertſon's Hiſt. Emp. Char. V. 1 V. 216, 217.

Hereditaments, (Hæreditamenta) Signify all ſuch immoveable things, whether corporeal or incorporeal, which a man may have to him and his heirs by way of inheritance; and which, if they are not otherwiſe deviſed, deſcend to him that is next heir, and fall not to the executor as chattels do. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 2. It is a word of very great extent, comprehending whatever may be inherited or come to the heir; be it real, perſonal or mixed, and tho' it is not holden, or lieth not in tenure. Co. Lit. 6. 16. And by the grant of hereditaments in conveyances, manors, houſes, and lands of all ſorts, rent, ſervices, advowſons, &c. paſs. Ibid. Hæreditamentum eſt omne quod jure hæreditario ad hæredem tranſeat. Coke.

Hereditary right. According to Blackſtone, the grand fundamental maxim upon which the jus coronæ, or right of ſucceſſion to the throne of theſe kingdoms, depends; he takes to be this, "That the crown is, by Common "law, and conſtitutional cuſtom, hereditary; and this "in a manner peculiar to itſelf: but that the right of "inheritance may from time to time be changed or "limited by act of parliament; under which limitations "the crown ſtill continues hereditary." Hereſy, (Hæreſis,) Among Proteſtants, is ſaid to be a falſe opinion repugnant to ſome point of doctrine clearly revealed in ſcripture, and either abſolutely eſſential to the Chriſtian faith, or at leaſt of moſt high importance. 1 Hawk. P. C. 3.

Anciently, under the general name of hereſy there have been comprehended three ſorts of crimes; 1. Apoſtacy, when a Chriſtian apoſtatizes to Paganiſm. 2. Witchcraft, 3. Formal hereſy, which ſeems to be an apoſtacy from the eſtabliſhed religion; for which, and the ſeveral ways of determining, puniſhing, and the difference between the Civil and Imperial laws, Popiſh canons, and the laws of England concerning hereſy, ſee a large account in 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 383 to 410.

It ſeems difficult preciſely to determine what error ſhall amount to hereſy, and what not; but the ſtatute 1 Eliz. cap. 1. which erected the high commiſſion court, having reſtrained it to ſuch as are either determined by ſcripture, or by one of the four firſt general councils, or by ſome other council, by expreſs words of ſcripture, or by parliament, with the aſſent of the convocation; theſe rules are at preſent generally thought the beſt directions concerning this matter. 1 Hawk. P. C. 3, 4.

By the Common law with us, the convocation of the clergy or provincial ſynod, might and frequently did proceed to the ſentencing of hereticks, and, when convicted, left them to the ſecular power, whereupon the writ of hæretico comburendo might iſſue. Bro. tit. Hereſy. 2 Rol. Abr. 226.

It is alſo agreed, that every biſhop may convict perſons of hereſy within his own dioceſe, and proceed by church cenſures againſt thoſe who ſhall be convicted; but it is ſaid, that no ſpiritual judge, who is not a biſhop, hath this power; and it hath been queſtioned, whether a conviction before the ordinary were a ſufficient foundation whereon to ground the writ de hæretico comburendo, as it is agreed that a conviction before the convocation was. F. N. B. 269. 12 Co. 56, 57. 3 Inſt. 40. Gibſ. Codex 401. 1 Hawk. P. C. 4. State Trials, Vol. 2. 275.

It ſeems agreed, that regularly the temporal courts have no conuſance of hereſy, either to determine what it is, or to puniſh the heretick as ſuch, but only as a diſturber of the public peace; that therefore, if a man be proceeded againſt as an heretick in the ſpiritual court, pro ſalute animæ, and think himſelf aggrieved, his proper remedy is to bring his appeal to a higher eccleſiaſtical court, and not to move for a prohibition, from a temporal one. 27 H. 8. 14. b. 5 Co. 58. Hob. 236.

Yet a temporal judge may incidentally take knowledge whether a tenet be heretical or not; as where one was committed by force of 2 H. 4. cap. 5, for ſaying, that he was not bound by the law of God to pay tithes to the curate; another for ſaying, that tho' he was excommunicated before men, yet he was not ſo before God; the temporal courts on an habeas corpus in the firſt caſe, and an action of falſe impriſonment in the other, adjudged neither of the points to be hereſy within that ſtatute, for the King's courts will examine all things which are ordained by ſtatute. 3 Inſt. 42. 1 Rol. Rep. 110. 2 Bulſt. 300.

Alſo in quare impedit, if the biſhop plead that he refuſed the clerk for hereſy, it ſeems that he muſt ſet forth the particular point, that it may appear to be heretical to the court wherein the action is brought. 5 Co. 58. 1 And. 191. 3 Leon. 199. 3 Lev. 314.

By the Common law, one convicted of hereſy, and refuſing to abjure it, or falling into it again after he abjured it, might be burnt by force of the writ de hæretico comburendo, which iſſued out of Chancery upon a certificate of ſuch conviction; but he forfeited neither lands nor goods, becauſe the proceedings againſt him were only pro ſalute animæ. F. N. B. 269. 3 Inſt. 43. Doctor and Student, lib. 2. cap. 29. 1 Hawk. P. C. 4. 5.

But at this day the ſaid writ de hæretico comburendo is aboliſhed by 29 Car. 2. cap. 9. and all old ſtatutes, that gave a power to arreſt or impriſon perſons for hereſy, or introduced any forfeiture on that account, are repealed; yet, by the Common law, an obſtinate heretick being excommunicate is ſtill liable to be impriſoned by force of the writ de excommunicato capiendo, till he make ſatisfaction to the church. 12 Co. 44. 1 Hawk. P. C. 5.

By the 9 & 10 W. 3. cap. 32. If any perſon, having been educated in or made profeſſion of the Chriſtian religion within this realm, ſhall be convicted of denying any of the Perſons in the Holy Trinity, &c. or of denying the truth of the Chriſtian religion, &c. he ſhall for the firſt offence be adjudged incapable of any office; for the ſecond diſabled to ſue any action, or to be a guardian, executor or adminiſtrator, or to take by any legacy or deed of gift, or to bear any office civil or military, or benefice eccleſiaſtical, for ever, and ſhall alſo ſuffer impriſonment for three years, without bail or mainpriſe. Heretick, (Hæreticus) Is one that adheres to and is convicted of hereſy, or that maintains any opinions or principles contrary to the Chriſtian religion: And a perſon is not an heretick by doing a thing condemned or forbidden by the goſpel; but by an obſtinate adherence to an opinion, oppoſite to ſome article of the Chriſtian faith. See Hæretico comburendo.

Heriot, (Heriotum) Is in the Sax. heregeat bellicus apparatus, derived from here, exercitus, an army, and geat, fuſus, effuſus, quaſi fuerit quid in exercitum erogatum: and ſignified originally a tribute given to the lord of a manor for his better preparation for war. By the laws of Canutus, at the death of the great men of this realm, ſo many horſes and arms, were to be paid as they were in their reſpective liſe-times obliged to keep for the King's ſervice. Spelm. Sir Edw. Coke makes heriot, or heregat, (from herus lord) the lord's beaſt: And it is now taken with us for the beſt beaſt, whether it be horſe, ox, or cow, that the tenant dies poſſeſſed of, due and payable to the lord of the manor; and in ſome manors, the beſt goods, piece of plate, &c. Kitch. 133. According to Blackſtone, heriots are agreed to be a Daniſh cuſtom. Com. 2 V. 97. and ſee ib. 422. See poſt.

We muſt obſerve, that there is

Heriot Service, and Heriot Cuſtom.

Heriot-ſervice is payable on the death of tenant in fee-ſimple; and heriot-cuſtom upon the death of tenant for life: when a tenant holds by ſervice to pay a heriot at the time of his death, which ſervice is expreſſed, and eſpecially reſerved in the deed of feoffment, this is heriot-ſervice; and where heriots have been cuſtomarily paid time out of mind, after the death of tenant for life, this is heriot cuſtom. Co. Lit. 185.

Heriots for cuſtom are commonly paid for copyhold eſtates: if an heriot is reſerved upon a leaſe, it is heriot-ſervice, and incident to the reverſion. Lutw. 1366, 1367 For a heriot goes with the reverſion, as well as rent; and the grantee of the reverſion ſhall have it. 2 Saund. 166.

Although an heriot reſerved upon a leaſe is called an heriot-ſervice; yet it is not like the caſe where a man holds land by the ſervice of paying an heriot, &c. becauſe where a heriot is reſerved on leaſe, the proper remedy is either a diſtreſs, or action of covenant grounded on the contract, for the leſſor cannot ſeize, as the lord of a manor may do, the beaſt of his tenant who holds of him by heriot-ſervice. Keilw. 82, 84. See Poſt.

There may be a covenant in leaſes for lives, &c. to render the beſt beaſt, or ſo much money for an heriot, at the election of the leſſor; in which caſe the leſſor muſt give notice which he will accept, before action may be brought for it, or a diſtreſs taken, &c. 2 Lill. Abr. 19.

For heriot-ſervice, the lord may diſtrain any beaſt belonging to the tenant on the land: Alſo it has been held, that the lord may diſtrain any man's beaſts which are upon the land, and retain them until an heriot is ſatisfied. Co. Lit. 185. Litt. Rep. 33. Cro. Car. 260. And if the tenant deviſeth away all his goods, &c. yet the lord ſhall have his heriot on the death of the tenant. Stat. 13 Eliz. cap. 5.

For heriot cuſtom, the lord is to ſeize, not diſtrain; and he may ſeize the beſt beaſt, &c. though out of the manor, or in the King's highway, becauſe he claims it as his proper goods, by the death of the tenant, which he may ſeize in any place where he finds it. Kitch. 267. 2 Inſt. 132. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 931. See Black. Com. 3 V. 15. Plowd. 96. Keilw. 84. 1 Salk. 356. Bro. tit. Heriot, 2, 3. Keilw. 82. And vide poſt, the end of this title.

Where a woman marries and dies, the lord ſhall have no heriot-cuſtom, becauſe a feme covert can have no goods to pay as a heriot. 2 Leon. 239. And when a heriot is to be paid by a certain life of his own goods, an aſſignee is not liable to pay the heriot; his goods not being the goods of ſuch life. Cro. Car. 313. 2 Nelſ. 932. If the lord purchaſe part of the tenancy, heriot-ſervice is extinguiſhed; but it is not ſo of heriot-cuſtom. 8 Rep. 105.

There is this difference between heriot and relief; heriot has been generally a perſonal, and relief always a predial ſervice.

It appears not only from Spelman's conjectures, but likewiſe from the laws themſelves of King Canutus, that the Danes were the firſt inventors of heriots, and that it was a political inſtitution of theirs, whereby the Daniſh tenants were to hold by military ſervice, and their arms and horſes at their deaths to revert to the public; and by that means putting the whole ſtrength and defence of the kingdom into their hands, committing only the affairs of agriculture, and the improvement of the nation to the Engliſh, though they thereby enjoyed greater freedom and immunities in their tenures than the Daniſh tenants. Spelm. 287.

As to the ſeveral kinds of heriots, ſome are due by cuſtom, ſome by tenure, and ſome by reſervation on deeds executed within time of memory; thoſe due by cuſtom, are the moſt frequent, and aroſe by the contract or agreement of the lord and tenant, in conſideration of ſome benefit or advantage accruing to the tenant, and for which an heriot, as the beſt beaſt, beſt piece of houſhold furniture, &c. became due, and belonged to the lord either on the death or alienation of the tenant, and which the lord may ſeize either within the manor or without at his election. Dyer 199. b. Bro. title Heriot 2, 3.

It hath been ſolemnly adjudged, that for an heriot-ſervice, or for a heriot reſerved by way of tenure, the lord may either ſeize or diſtrain; for when the tenant agrees that the lord ſhall on his death have the beſt beaſt, &c. the lord hath his election which beaſt he will take, and by ſeizing thereof reduces that to his poſſeſſion, wherein he had a property at the death of the tenant, without the concurring act of any other perſon; and it is not like the caſe where the leſſor reſerves 20 s. or a robe, for there the leſſee has his election which he will pay, and being to do the firſt act the lord cannot ſeize, but muſt diſtrain. Plow. 96. adjudged. Cro. Eliz. 589.

So it hath been ruled, that for a heriot cuſtom or ſervice the lord may ſeize as well in the manor as out; but if he diſtrain, it muſt be in the manor. 1 Salk. 356 per cur. 1 Show. 81. S. P. 3 Mod. 231. S. P. arguendo.

But it is ſaid, that this liberty muſt be underſtood to be annexed to ancient tenures, on which the lords had many privileges, and not to be extended to thoſe which are created within time of memory, upon particular reſervations. Highway, (Via Regia) Is a paſſage for the King's people, for which reaſon it is called the King's Highway.

Under this head we ſhall treat,

I. Of the various ſorts of highways, &c.
II. Of the right to, the claiming, and changing of ways.
III. Of repairs.
IV. Of the aſſeſſment for that purpoſe, and of day work.
V. Of nuſances, of various ſorts.
VI. Of proſecuting perſons, guilty of offences, relative to the highways, and of the general doctrine as to indictments, &c.
VII. Of turnpike roads.

I. Of the various ſorts of highways, &c.

It ſeems, that anciently there were but four highways in England, which were free and common to all the King's ſubjects, and through which they might paſs without any toll, unleſs there was a particular conſideration for it; all others, which we have at this day, are ſuppoſed to have been made through the grounds of private perſons, on a writ of ad quod damnum, &c. which being an injury to the owner of the ſoil, it is ſaid that they may preſcribe for toll without any ſpecial conſideration. 3 New Abr. 54. 1 Mod. 231. 2 Mod. 143.

There are (ſays Lord Coke) three kinds of ways: 1. A foot-way, called in Latin iter. 2. A pack and prime way, which is both a horſe and foot-way, called in Latin actus. 3. A cart-way, called in Latin via or aditus, which contains the other two and alſo a cart-way; and is called via regia, if it be common to all men; and communis ſtrata, if it belong only to ſome town or private perſon. Co. Lit. 56. a.

But, notwithſtanding theſe diſtinctions, it ſeems, that any of the ſaid ways which is common to all the King's ſubjects, whether it lead directly to a market-town or only from town to town, may properly be called a highway; that any ſuch cart-way may be called the King's highway; that a river common to all men may alſo be called a highway; and that nuſances in any of the ſaid ways are puniſhable by indictment; otherwiſe they would not be puniſhed at all: for they are not actionable unleſs they cauſe a ſpecial damage to ſome particular perſon; becauſe, if ſuch action would lie, a multiplicity of ſuits would enſue. But it ſeems, that a way to a pariſh-church, or to the common fields of a town, or to a village, which terminate there, may be called a private way, becauſe it belongs not to all the King's ſubjects, but only to the particular inhabitants of ſuch pariſh, houſe or village, each of which, as it ſeems, may have an action for a nuſance therein. Palm. 389. Cro. Eliz. 63, 664. 1 Vent. 189, 208. 3 Keb. 28. Co. Lit. 56. 6 Mod. 255. 1 Hawk. P. C. 201.

If paſſengers have uſed time out of mind, when the roads are bad, to go by outlets on the land adjoining to a highway in an open field, ſuch outlets are parcel of the highway; and therefore if they are ſown with corn, and the tract foundrous, the King's ſubjects may go upon the corn. 1 Rol. Abr. 390. Cro. Car. 366. S. C.

Though every highway is ſaid to be the King's, yet this muſt be underſtood ſo as that in every highway the King and his ſubjects may paſs and repaſs at their pleaſure. But the freehold, and all the profits, as trees, &c. belong to the lord of the ſoil, or to the owner of the lands on both ſides of the way. Alſo the lord or owner of the ſoil ſhall have an action of treſpaſs for digging the ground. But the lord of a rape, within which there are ten hundreds, may preſcribe to have all the trees growing within an highway within this rape, tho' the manor or ſoil adjoining belongs to another; for uſage to take the trees is a good mark of ownerſhip. 1 Rol. Abr. 392. 1 Brownl. 42. Keilw. 141.

II. Of the right to, claiming, and changing of highways, &c.

A man may have a way either by preſcription or grant, by reſervation, by implication, or by owelty of partition, and ſhall not in a cur claudend. be obliged to ſhew which way he claims it; but it will be ſufficient for him to alledge debet & ſolet, &c. but in a bar or replication he muſt ſhew his title preciſely. 1 Vent. 274. 2 Lev. 148. 3 Keb. 528, 531. St. John v. Moody. But he who preſcribes for a way, muſt ſhew in certain whether it is a foot, horſe, or cart way. Yel. 163. adjudged upon demurrer.

But it ſeems, that if a man hath a way for carriages from D. to Blackacre over my cloſe, and after he purchaſes land adjoining to Blackacre, he cannot uſe the ſaid way with carriages to the land adjoining, for then it may be very prejudicial to my cloſe; but it ſeems, if I will help myſelf, I muſt ſhew the ſpecial matter, and that he uſed it for the land adjoining. 1 Rol. Abr. 391.

A way muſt not be claimed as appendant or appurtenant to a houſe, becauſe it is only an eaſement, and no intereſt. Yelv. 159. But it may be quaſi appendant thereto, and as as ſuch paſs by grant thereof, Cro. Jac. 190.

A man may preſcribe for a way from his houſe thro' a certain cloſe, &c. to church, though he himſelf has lands next adjoining to his ſaid houſe, through which of neceſſity he muſt firſt paſs; for the general preſcription ſhall be applied only to the lands of others. Palm. 387, 388. 2 Rol. Rep. 397.

An ancient highway cannot be changed without an inquiſition found on a writ of ad quod damnum, that ſuch change will be no prejudice to the public; and it is ſaid, that if one change a highway without ſuch authority, he may ſtop the new way whenever he pleaſe; neither can the King's ſubjects, in an action brought againſt them for going over ſuch new way, juſtify generally as in a common highway, but ought to ſhew ſpecially, by way of excuſe, how the old way was obſtructed, and a new one ſet out; neither are the inhabitants bound to keep watch in ſuch new way, or repair it, or to make amends for a robbery committed in it. Cro. Car. 266. Vaugh. 341. Yelv. 141. 1 Hawk. P. C. 201-2.

But it hath been holden, that if a water, which hath been an ancient highway, by degrees changes its courſe, and goes over different ground from that whereon it uſed to run, yet the highway continues in the new channel in the ſame manner as in the old. 22 Aſſ. 93. 1 Rol. Abr. 390.

III. Of repairs.

By Common law, alſo by reaſon of incloſure, tenure, or preſcription. And, by Statute law.

Of Common right, the general charge of repairing highways lies on the occupiers of lanos in the pariſh wherein they lie; but is ſaid, that the tenants of the lands adjoining are bound to ſcour their ditches. 1 Rol. Abr. 39. March 26. 1 Vent. 90, 183. 8 Hen. 7. 5.

Alſo if a pariſh is part in one county, and part in another, and the highways in one county are out of repair, the whole pariſh ſhall contribute to the repair; but there may be an agreement between the inhabitants, that the one ſhall repair one parr, and the other the other; and ſuch agreement is good between themſelves, and for breach, the one may have action upon the caſe againſt the other; but in an indictment they ſhall take no advantage of theſe agreements, for as to the King they are equally liable. 1 Mod. 112. 1 Vent. 256. 3 Keb. 301. Alſo vide 1 Vent. 256. 1 Mod. 112. 3 Keb. 301.

A highway lying within a pariſh, the whole pariſh is of common right bound to repair it; except it appears that it ought to be repaired by ſome particular perſon either ratione tenuræ, or by preſcription. 1 Vent. 183. Style 163.

But though the pariſh be obliged of common right to repair the highways in it, yet it is certain, that particular perſons may be bound to repair the highway, by reaſon of incloſure or preſcription; as where the owner of lands not incloſed, next adjoining to the highway, incloſes his lands on both ſides of it; in which caſe he is bound to make a perfect good way, and ſhall not be excuſed by making it as good as it was before the incloſure, if it were then any way defective, becauſe by the incloſure he takes from the people the liberty of going over the lands adjoining to the common track. 1 Rol. Abr. 390. Cro. Car. 366. 1 Sid. 464.

Alſo it is ſaid, that if one incloſe land on one ſide, which hath anciently been incloſed on the other ſide, he ought to repair all the way; but that if there be no ſuch ancient incloſure on the other ſide, he ought to repair but half the way. 1 Sid. 464.

Therefore, if there be an old hedge time out of mind belonging to A. on the one ſide of the way, and B. having land lying on the other ſide, makes a new hedge, there B. ſhall be charged with the whole repair. 1 Sid. 464. 2 Keb. 665. 2 Saund. 157. But if A. makes a hedge on the one ſide of the way, and B. on the other, they ſhall be chargeable by moieties. 1 Sid. 464. 2 Keb. 665. But it ſeems clear, that wherever a perſon makes himſelf liable to repair a highway by reaſon of incloſure, that by throwing of it open again, he thereby frees himſelf from the burthen of any future reparation. 2 Saund. 160.

Particulars perſons may be bound to repair a highway by preſcription; and it is ſaid, that a corporation aggregate may be charged by a general preſcription, that it ought and hath uſed to do it, without ſhewing any conſideration in reſpect whereof they had uſed to do it, becauſe ſuch a corporation never dies, neither is it any plea, that they have done it out of charity; but it is ſaid, that ſuch a general preſcription is not ſufficient to charge a private perſon, becauſe no man is bound to do a thing which his anceſtors have done, unleſs it be for ſome ſpecial reaſon; as having lands deſcended to him holden by ſuch ſervice, &c. but it ſeems, that an indictment charging a tenant of lands in fee with having uſed of right to repair ſuch a way ratione tenuræ terræ ſuæ, without adding that his anceſtors, or thoſe whoſe eſtate he hath, have ſo done, is ſufficient, for it is implied. 27 Aſſ. 8. 27 Ed. 4. 38. Bro. Preſcription 49, 70. Keilw. 52. a. Latch. 206. 1 Hawk. P. C. 202-3.

And it ſeems certain in all thoſe caſes, whether a private perſon be bound to repair a highway by incloſure or preſcription, that the pariſh cannot take advantage of it on the general iſſue, but muſt plead it ſpecially; that therefore, if to an indictment againſt the pariſh, for not repairing a highway, they plead Not guilty, this ſhall be intended only that the ways are in repair, but does not go to the right of reparation. 1 Mod. 112. 3 Keb. 301. 1 Vent. 256.

At Common law it is ſaid, that all the country ought to make good the reparations of a highway, where no particular perſons are bound to do it; by reaſon the whole country have their eaſe and paſſage by the ſaid way. Co. Rep. 13. By the ancient Common law, villages are to repair their highways, and may be puniſhed for their decay; and if any do injure, or ſtraighten the highway, he is puniſhable in the King's Bench, or before juſtices of the peace in the Court Leet, &c. 27 Aſſ. 63. Cromp. Juriſd. 76.

By Statute law various proviſions are made, viz. the 7th of Geo. 3. c. 42. ſect. 1. (made to reduce into one act all the laws relative to the highways) directs, that annual liſts be made in September, of a certain number of perſons qualified to ſerve as ſurveyors of the highways, to be returned to the juſtices, at their ſpecial ſeſſions in October, who are to nominate ſuch a number to be ſurveyors, as they ſhall judge neceſſary, who are to hold the office for one year. On refuſal they forfeit 5 l. and others to be nominated.

The ſurveyor is to take a view of the highways at proper times, in reſpect of nuſances, &c. and give notice to the parties concerned to remove the ſame, who, if they do not, ſurveyor to employ his men to do it, the defaulters forfeiting according to direction of the act.

The ſurveyor is to make new ditches, drains, &c. where the old are inſufficient, and keep the ſame ſcoured, &c. with proper trunks, tunnels, platts, bridges or arches over the ſame, making ſatisfaction to the owners of lands, &c. where any damage is done. The ſurveyor is alſo to make cart-ways leading to market towns twenty feet wide at leaſt, and the horſe cauſeways three feet, and to keep the ſame in repair.

Two or more juſtices of peace, upon view, may order narrow roads to be widened to a ſufficient breadth, in which caſes the ſurveyor is to agree with the owner of the ſoil as to recompence; in default of ſuch agreement, the ſame to be aſſeſſed by a jury.

The ſurveyor is to make report of ſuch defective highways, bridges, &c. as ought to be repaired by particular perſons, to the juſtices, or two, or more, and notice to be given to the occupier. If not repaired in due time, the juſtices are to preſent the highways, ſo out of repair, together with the perſon or perſons, bodies politic or corporate, liable to repair, at the next general quarter ſeſſions.

The act alſo impowers juſtices of aſſiſe, and juſtices of peace, to make preſentments to the aſſiſes, or ſeſſions, of defective highways, cauſeways or bridges, or of any other defaults or offences againſt the act, and to aſſeſs ſuch fines as they ſhall think fit, ſaving to the perſons affected their lawful traverſe to ſuch preſentments.

The juſtices at their ſpecial ſeſſions may order thoſe roads to be firſt repaired that moſt want it. If the ſurveyors neglect their duty, two juſtices may hear complaint, and make ſuch order as they think fit.

The juſtices are to order proper direction poſts to be ſet up where ſeveral highways meet, and at the approaches to ſuch parts as are ſubject to deep or dangerous floods, and where neceſſary for guiding travellers in the beſt and ſafeſt tract; ſurveyor ſubject to a penalty for neglect of duty in this particular.

The ſurveyor is impowered to take materials for repair of the highways, from any neighbouring quarries, commons, waſtes, grounds, rivers, or brooks. And where ſufficient cannot be had from ſuch places, then from private grounds, making ſuch ſatisfaction to the owners, as ſhall be agreed upon, or otherwiſe as the juſtices ſhall direct.

By ſect. 22. of the act, particular directions are given for filling up, and ſtopping of holes made in digging for materials, under certain penalties on the ſurveyor.

By ſect. 32. The ſurveyor is to collect and pay over to the juſtices all rates, forfeitures, penalties and compoſitions.

IV. Of the aſſeſſment for repairs, and of day work.

By 7 Geo. 3. c. 42. ſect. 12. Where there is not ſufficient money in the hands of the ſurveyors, to pay owners of ſoil for damage done, in widening of roads, two juſtices, or quarter ſeſſions, may order an aſſeſſment, upon every occupier of lands and tenements, in the reſpective pariſhes, &c. where the highways lie; if aſſeſſment not paid in ten days after demand, it may be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods of the perſons aſſeſſed: provided that no ſuch aſſeſſment be made in any one year to exceed the rate of 6*d.* in the pound of the yearly value of the lands, &c. aſſeſſed.

By ſect. 21. The expences incurred by the ſurveyors, in doing various things, directed by the ſtatute, are to be reimburſed by a rate on the inhabitants, according to the rules preſcribed in the 43d of Eliz. intituled, "An act "for the Relief of the Poor."

By ſect. 23. Statute work in general is regulated. Every perſon keeping a team, draught, or plough, ſhall ſix days in the year furniſh a wain, cart or carriage, and other neceſſaries, and two able men with each. Thoſe occupying of lands, &c. of 50*l.* yearly value, the like. So for every 50*l. per annum* reſpectively, and one labourer for every 10*l.* over ſuch 50*l.* and leſs than 100*l.* &c. of the yearly value of 10*l.* and not of 50*l.* Not keeping a team, &c. one labourer, for every 10*l.* Under 10*l.* and not keeping a team, to go in perſon, or find a labourer. Power is alſo given to change carriages for men, where thought needful by the ſurveyor; or a certain ſum to be paid in lieu. Men ſent, to furniſh their own tools.

The ſurveyors are to give due notice to perſons liable to ſtatute work.

By ſect. 25. Perſons liable to perform ſtatute work may compound at ſuch rates as the juſtices ſhall appoint, not exceeding 6*s.* nor leſs than 3*s.* for each day; and other particular ſpecifications.

Sect. 26. Regulates the duty of the ſurveyor in giving notice of time and place of admitting perſons to compound, and regulates the changes, in the occupation of lands, &c. or new inhabitants.

By ſect. 27. it is provided, that perſons occupying lands, &c. not above 50*l. per annum* are not obliged to find or compound for more than one carriage; and a team or plough kept part of the year in one pariſh, and part in another, the duty to be performed where the perſon uſually reſides.

Sect. 28. Where compoſition made, a proportion is to be paid to the turnpike ſurveyor, if part of ſuch duty is to be performed on the turnpike roads.

If the juſtices at ſeſſions are ſatisfied that money raiſed by preceding means, &c. is not ſufficient, then, by ſect. 29. they are to make an aſſeſſment upon every occupier, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale.

But, by ſect. 30. it is provided it do not exceed 6*d.* in the pound in any one year.

All fines and forfeitures for not repairing the highways, or not appearing to indictments, are to be applied in repair of the highways.

V. Of nuſances, viz. by ſtopping highways, and other nuſances at Common law.—Of hedges, &c. near the highways.—Of drawing carriages with a greater number of cattle than allowed.—Of leaving empty carriages in the road, &c.

It is clearly agreed to bea nuſance to dig a ditch, or make a hedge a-croſs the highway, or to a erect a new gate, or to lay logs of timber in it, or generally to do any other act which will render it leſs commodious. Kitchin 34. 1 Hawk. P. C. 212. Alſo it is a nuſance for an heir, (and for which he may be indicted,) to continue an incroachment, or other nuſance to a highway begun by his anceſtor, becauſe ſuch continuance thereof amounts, in the judgment of law, to a new nuſance. 1 Hawk. P. C. 214. Alſo it is agreed, that it is no excuſe for him who lays logs in the highway, that he laid them only here and there, ſo that the people might have a paſſage through them by windings and turnings. 2 Rol. Abr. 137. 1 Hawk. P. C. 212.

It is a nuſance to ſuffer the highway to be incommoded by reaſon of the foulneſs, &c. of the adjoining ditches, or by boughs of trees hanging over it, &c And it is ſaid, that the owner of land next adjoining to the highway, ought of common right to ſcour his ditches; but that the owner of land next adjoining to ſuch land, is not bound by the Common law ſo to do without a ſpecial preſcription; alſo it is ſaid, that the owner of trees hanging over an highway, to the annoyance of travellers, is bound by the Common law to lop them; and it is clear that any other perſon may lop them, ſo far as to avoid the nuſance. 8 H. 7. 5. a. Kitch. 34. Dalt. cap. 26. 1 Hawk. P. C. 212, 213.

But it is no nuſance for an inhabitant of a town to unlade billets, &c. in the ſtreet before his houſe, by reaſon of the neceſſity of the caſe, unleſs he ſuffer them to continue there an unreaſonable time. 2 Rol. Abr. 137.

Any one may juſtify pulling down, or otherwiſe deſtroying a common nuſance, as a new gate or houſe erected in a highway; and it hath been of late holden, that there is no need, in pleading ſuch juſtification, to ſhew that as little damage was done as might be. 2 Rol. Abr. 144. Cro. Car. 184. 1 Jon. 221. 2 Salk. 458.

Though all nuſances are puniſhable by indictment with fine and impriſonment, it is ſaid, that one convicted of a nuſance to the highway, may be commanded by the judgment to remove it at his own coſts, &c. 2 Rol. Abr. 84. 1 Hawk. P. C. 200.

A gate erected in a highway is a common nuſance, becauſe it interrupts the people in that free and open paſſage, which they before enjoyed and were lawfully intitled to; but where ſuch a gate has continued time out of mind, it ſhall be intended that it was ſet up at firſt by conſent, on a compoſition with the owner of the land on the laying out the road, in which caſe the people had never any right to a freer paſſage than what they ſtill enjoy. 1 Hawk. 199.

By the Stat. 7 Geo. 3. c. 42. which we have before mentioned, viz. ſect. 3. No tree or buſh is to be allowed to grow, or ſtand within fifteen feet of the center of the highway, on forfeiture of 10*s.* by the owner. By ſect 4. The poſſeſſors of land next adjoining to the highway are to keep their hedges, ditches, drains, water-courſes, trunks, tunnels, plats and bridges, in proper order. And ſo as to occupiers of adjoining grounds, through which the water hath uſed to paſs from the highway, on forfeiture of 10*s.*

By ſect. 5. No ſtone or other matter is to be laid in the highway, or ſoil of ditches, to the obſtruction or prejudice thereof, on forfeiture of 10*s.*

By ſect. 6. Where any thing, (not tolerated by the act) ſhall be laid within fifteen feet of the center, the owner of the adjacent lands may remove and diſpoſe of the ſame to his own uſe.

Sect. 7. If the highway is wilfully obſtructed by carriages, or implements of huſbandry, the perſon offending ſhall forfeit 10*s.*

By ſect. 38. No waggon, the fellies of whoſe wheels are leſs than nine inches, ſhall be drawn with more than ſix horſes; nor car, leſs than nine inches, to be drawn with more than four; waggons of nine inches, with no more than eight horſes; cart of nine, with no more than five, on forfeiture of all horſes above the number, with the accoutrements, to the perſon ſeizing.

Sect. 39. Waggons ſhod with narrow tire, or ſet with roſe-headed nails, not to be drawn by more than three horſes, on forfeiture of the ſupernumerary.

Sect. 40. Excepts carriages drawing one ſtone or block of marble, or piece of metal or timber, ammunition or artillery for his Majeſty's ſervice.

By ſect. 42. Owners of carriages to have the owner's real name and place of abode painted on ſome conſpicuous part, in large letters, on penalty of 20*s.*

By ſect. 43. The driver of any cart or dray, riding thereon in any ſtreet or highway, without having ſome perſon on foot or on horſeback to guide the ſame (except carriages drawn by one horſe, or two horſes abreaſt, and conducted by ſome perſon holding the reins), and the driver of any carriage, who by negligence or miſbehaviour, ſhall damage or obſtruct perſons, or carriages, in paſſing, or who ſhall not make way for loaded carriages, forfeits, if not the owner, any ſum not exceeding 10*s.* if the owner, any ſum not exceeding 20*s.* or may be committed to the houſe of correction for any time not exceeding one month.

So far as to the act, on this ſubject, yet it is proper to inform the reader, that this ſtatute does not reſtrain the ſubject, who receives any injury by a driver, &c. of any carriage, from ſuing the owner thereof at Common law, or from puniſhing the driver for wilful offence, by indictment, as the nature of the caſe may require. But then the party proſecuting muſt waive the benefit of proceeding, under this ſtatute, in the ſummary way thereby preſcribed.

VI. Of proſecuting perſons guilty of offences relative to the highways.

A variety of puniſhments, with various modes of proceeding, have been inflicted and directed by ſeveral ſtatutes, but the ſeventh of Geo. 3. c. 42. having reduced the laws in general into one code, it is unneceſſary to take any farther notice of the preceding ſtatutes.—As to the doctrine of indictments on this ſubject, it may be of uſe to refer the reader to 1 Hawk. P. C. 218, 219, 220. and Stra. 849, 900.

We now proceed to the ſubſtance of 7 Geo. 3. c. 42. on this ſubject.

By ſect. 34. The pulling up, removing, or deſtroying, &c. the poſts, blocks, banks, &c. ſet up for ſecurity of horſe and foot cauſeways, or the parapets or battlements of bridges, mile-ſtones, or direction-poſts, incurs a penalty not exceeding 5*l.* nor leſs than 5*s.* on conviction by a juſtice of peace, or a commitment to the houſe of correction, to be whipped, and kept to hard labour, for any time not exceeding one month, nor leſs than ſeven days.

By ſect. 35. The ſurveyor, on neglect of duty in inſtances not otherwiſe provided for by the act, forfeits a ſum not exceeding 5*l.* nor leſs than 10*s.*

By ſect. 36. Juſtices of the peace are impowered to put in execution every part of the act.

By ſect. 46. Perſons forcibly oppoſing the execution of the act, or obſtructing the making a ſeizure or diſtreſs, or reſcuing cattle or other goods, and conſtables not duly executing the warrant or precept of any juſtice, forfeit a ſum not exceeding 10*l.* nor leſs than 40*s.* and, on nonpayment, may be committed for three months.

By ſect. 47. All penalties and forfeitures, and all coſts and charges, where not otherwiſe directed, are to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale, by warrant of a juſtice; one half to the uſe of the informer, the other to the roads; and for want of diſtreſs, the party to be committed.

By ſect. 48. Penalties or forfeitures may be ſued for, by the proſecutor or informer, either as before directed, or by action of debt, where the penalty is a pecuniary one, (declaring in a very general manner, as directed by the act), or by action of trover, where the penalty or forfeiture is an horſe, or other goods, and recovering, ſhall have double coſts.

[It may not be improper to obſerve, that there are very good opinions, againſt the general method of declaring in debt, directed by the act, and that a declaration, thus framed, could not be ſupported, on demurrer; for, the act creating a variety of offences, where the forfeiture is a pecuniary one, the defendant cannot be prepared to defend the charge, not knowing what may be given in evidence on the trial, i. e. what kind of offence may then be alledged againſt him. but ſuch declaration being directed by an act of parliament, it is a very doubtful point.]

By ſect. 49. No conviction is to be had but upon confeſſion of the party, or oath of a witneſs. And inhabitants deemed competent witneſſes.

By ſect. 51. Diſtreſs for money is not to be deemed unlawful, for default of form, in the proceedings; nor the party making it, to be deemed a treſpaſſer, ab initio, on account of any ſubſequent irregularity.

By ſect. 52. The plaintiff in any action for irregularity, &c. not to recover where tender of amends hath been made, before the action brought. And by this ſection the defendant is allowed to pay money into court before iſſue joined.

By ſect. 53. Perſons aggrieved, where there is not any other method of relief appointed, or injured by the incloſing any common highway, may appeal to the general quarter-ſeſſions; which court is to proceed in a ſummary way, award proper coſts, and the determination to be final.

The general doctrine as to indictments, &c. upon this ſubject, Mr. Serjeant Hawkins has laid down the following rules:

Firſt, That it is ſafe in every ſuch indictment to ſhew both the place from which, and alſo the place to which, the way ſuppoſed to be out of repair doth lead, yet exceptions, for want of ſuch certainty, have ſometimes been diſallowed; however it ſeems certain, That there is no neceſſity to ſhew that a highway leads to a market town, becauſe every highway leads from town to town. 1 Hawk. P. C. 219.

2dly, That it is neceſſary in every ſuch indictment expreſly to ſhew in what place the nuſance complained of was done; for which cauſe an indictment for ſtopping a way at D. leading from D. to C. is not good; for it is impoſſible that a way leading from D. ſhould be in D. and no other place is alledged. 1 Hawk. P. C. 219.

3dly, That every ſuch indictment ought alſo certainly to ſhew to what part of the highway the nuſance did extend, as by ſhewing how many feet in length, and how many feet in breadth it contained, or otherwiſe the defendant will neither know of the certainty of the charge, againſt which he is to make his defence, neither will the court be able from the record to judge of the greatneſs of the offence, in order to aſſeſs a fine anſwerable thereunto; and upon this ground it hath been adjudged, that an indictment for ſtopping a certain part of the Kings highway at K. is bad, for the incertainty thereof. Alſo it hath been reſolved, that the place wherein ſuch a nuſance is alledged, is not ſufficiently aſcertained in ſuch an indictment, by ſhewing that it contained ſo many feet in length, and ſo many in breadth, by eſtimation. 1 Hawk. 219, 220.

4thly, That every ſuch indictment muſt ſhew, that the way wherein a nuſance is alledged, is a common highway; for which cauſe it hath been reſolved, That an indictment for a nuſance to a horſeway, without adding that it was a highway, is bad; and upon the ſame ground it ſeemeth alſo, That an indictment for a nuſance to a common footway to the church of D. for all the pariſhioners of D. is not good; yet it ſeems, that if thoſe laſt words, viz. for all the pariſhioners of D. had been omitted, ſuch an indictment might be maintained. 1 Hawk. 220.

5thly, That it is not ſafe in an indictment againſt a common perſon for not repairing a highway, which he ought to have done in reſpect of the tenure of certain lands, barely to ſay that he was bound to repair it ratione tenuræ terræ, without adding ſuæ. Alſo it is ſaid, that in an indictment againſt a biſhop, &c. for not repairing a highway, in reſpect to certain lands, it ought to be ſhewn in what capacity he ought to repair it, becauſe otherwiſe it cannot be known in what capacity the proceſs is to be awarded againſt him. 1 Hawk. 220.

6thly, That in every ſuch indictment the fact alledged againſt the defendant muſt be expreſſed in ſuch proper terms, that it may clearly appear to the court to have been a nuſance; and for this cauſe it hath been reſolved, That a preſentment for diverting a highway is not good, becauſe a highway cannot be diverted, but muſt always continue in the ſame place where it was, howſoever it be obſtructed, and a new way made in another place. 1 Hawk. P. C. 220.

But it hath been reſolved, That an indictment againſt a man for ſtopping a highway in his own land, is good, without laying the offence done vi & armis. Alſo it is ſaid, That a preſentment that a highway in ſuch a place is decayed by the default of the inhabitants of ſuch a town, is good, without naming any perſon in certainty. But it hath been adjudged, that an indictment againſt particular perſons muſt ſpecially charge them every one; for which cauſe it hath been reſolved, that an indictment againſt ſeveral for not repairing their ſtreets, that they, & eorum uterque, did not repair them, is not good. 1 Hawk. P. C. 220.

Upon an indictment for not repairing a highway, if the defendant produce a certificate before trial, that the way is repaired, he ſhall be admitted to a fine: but after verdict, the certificate is too late, for then he muſt have a conſtat to the ſheriff, who ought to return that the way is repaired, becauſe the verdict, which is a record, muſt be anſwered by a record. Raym 215. And where the defendants, indicted for not repairing a common foot-way, confeſſed the indictment, and ſubmitted to a fine; it was held, that the matter was not ended by their being fined, but that writs of diſtringas ſhall be awarded in infinitum, till the court of B. R. is certified that the way is repaired, as it was when it was at beſt; but the defendants are not bound to put it in better repair than it has been time out of mind. 1 Salk. 358. If a defendant hath made a highway as good as it is capable of being made, it was ſaid, in an extraordinary caſe, this ſhall not diſcharge him, on an information againſt him; though it may be a mitigation of his fine. 3 Salk. 183. Alſo it is no excuſe for the inhabitants of a pariſh indicted at Common law, for not repairing the highways, that they have done the work required by ſtatute; for the ſtatutes are made in aid of the Common law: and when the ſtatute work is not ſufficient, rates and aſſeſſments are to be made. Dalt. c. 26.

It is ſaid, that if the right or title to repair ſuch ways come in queſtion, upon ſuggeſtion and affidavit made thereof, a certiorari may be had to remove the indictment into B. R.

A perſon may be indicted for not repairing a houſe ſtanding upon a highway which is ruinous, and like to fall down, to the danger of travellers, whatever be his tenure, which in ſuch caſe is not material. 1 Salk. 357.

If there be a common foot-way through a cloſe by preſcription, and the owner of the cloſe ploughs up the way, and ſows it, and lays thorns at the ſide of it, paſſengers may go over another foot-way in the ſame cloſe, without being treſpaſſers. Yelv. 142. And if a highway is not ſufficient, any paſſenger may break down the incloſure of it, and go over the land, and juſtify it till a ſufficient way is made. 3 Salk. 182.

Erecting a gate croſs a highway, tho' not locked, but opening and ſhutting at pleaſure, is eſteemed a nuſance; for it is not ſo free and eaſy a paſſage, as if there had been no gate: and the uſual way of redreſſing nuſances of this kind, is by indictment; but every perſon may remove the nuſance, by cutting or throwing it down, if there be occaſion ſo to do; and it hath been held, that tho' there are many gates croſs high ways, they muſt be anciently ſet up, and it ſhall be intended by licence from the King upon the writ ad quod damnum. Cro. Car. 184.

VII. Of turnpike roads.

The ſtatute of 7 Geo. 3. c. 40. hath reduced the general laws in being on this ſubject into one.—As the act is very long, and, in many particulars, conformable to that for the highways, we ſhall only give ſome general heads, and for further information refer to the ſtatute itſelf.

Sect. 1. Impowers truſtees to erect weighing engines, and ſpecifies the toll to be taken.

Sect. 2. Grants privileges to waggons, &c. rolling a ſurface of 16 inches.

Sect. 3. The previous regulations not to extend to carriages employed only in huſbandry.

Sect. 5. No compoſition for narrow wheels.

Sect. 6. Inflicts a penalty on perſons fraudulently unloading goods, before coming to a gate or weighing engine.

Sect. 7. Regulates the conſtruction of wheels within 20 miles of London.

Sect. 8. Broad four-wheel carriages may travel with eight horſes, two wheels with five. But no more. Narrow four wheels, with four horſes. Two wheels, three horſes. Forfeiture 20*s.* and ſupernumerary horſes.

Sect. 9. Penalty of 5*l.* on fraudulently taking off any horſe, or altering the diſtance of the wheels before coming to any gate.

Sect. 10. Driver travelling with more horſes than he paſſed thro' any gate with, guilty of a fraud.

Sect. 11. Where neceſſary, truſtees may allow broad wheeled waggons to be drawn up hills by 10 horſes, narrow by 6.

Sect. 12. Particular exemptions, drawing thro' deep ſnow or ice.

Sect. 13. Narrow wheeled waggons not to be drawn by horſes in pairs.

Sect. 14. Turning carriages out of turnpike roads to avoid tolls, incurs a forfeiture of one of the horſes.

Sect. 16. The driver of a waggon with wheels not duly conſtructed, or drawn by more horſes than authorized, may be apprehended, &c. and forfeits 5*l.*

Sect. 17. Drag-irons to be flat at the ſole, and of the breadth of the fellies.

Sect. 18. Owner's name and place of abode to be painted on the tilt, and if no tilt on the moſt conſpicuous part of waggons, &c. And the words Common Stage Waggon or Cart, as the caſe may be. Default in the former caſe, 5*l.* in the latter 40*s.*

As to toll, it is not neceſſary here to notice them, but refer to the act.

Sect. 23. Contains the exemption of certain carriages.

Sect. 27. Where two or more turnpike roads under ſeveral acts, within ſame pariſh, &c. and the ſtatute duty exceeds three days, the juſtices are to apportion the ſame.

Sect. 29. Inflicts a penalty of 40*s.* on perſons making ditches, &c. on any turnpike road not incloſed on both ſides within 30 feet of the centre, or turning their plough or harrow within 15.

Sect. 30. Direction-poſts to be ſet up, and mile-ſtones.

Sect. 31, Inflicts a penalty, on perſons pulling up poſts, deſtroying banks, mile-ſtones, &c.

Sect. 32. The ſame as to toll-gates, &c. and makes reſcuing offenders, felony, without benefit of clergy.

Sect. 33. Inhabitants of hundreds, where offences committed, to make full ſatisfaction.

Sect. 38. Fraudulent and colourable proſecutions and ſeiſures ſet up to favour offenders to be enquired into and ſet aſide.

Sect. 41. Truſtees abuſing or exceeding their power, in various inſtances ſpecified, the general quarter ſeſſions, may determine any complaint thereof in a ſummary way.

Sect. 47. Conſtables, ſurveyors, &c. neglecting their duty to forfeit 10 l.

Sect. 48. Seiſures, &c. (unleſs by warrant) to be delivered to the conſtable, till proof of the offence. If not made in ſix days, to be returned to the owner, and ſeizer to pay expences of keeping; but, on conviction, to be delivered to the party. If the party does not duly proſecute ſuch ſeizure, to forfeit 40*s.*

Sect. 49. All convictions to be on confeſſion, or oath of one witneſs. Inhabitants competent witneſſes.

Sect. 50. Inflicts a penalty on perſons oppoſing the execution of the act, in certain inſtances there ſpecified.

Sect. 51. Penalties, &c. not otherwiſe directed, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale.

Sect. 53. Proſecutors or informers at liberty to ſue either as the reſpective turnpike acts direct, or in courts of record, by action of debt, or trover, to have full coſts, on recovering.—But the action to be brought in one calendar month after the offence committed, of which ten days previous notice to be given.

Sect. 54. Diſtreſs for money not deemed unlawful, &c. for default of form in the proceedings, nor the party making it a treſpaſſer, ab initio, for any ſubſequent irregularity.

Sect. 55. Plaintiff in action for irregularity, not to recover where tender made before action.—And defendant may pay money into court, before iſſue joined.

Sect. 56. Perſons aggrieved may in general appeal to the general quarter ſeſſions.—The determination there final, and not removable by certiorari.

[Vide under Div. VI. an exception, where a right is in queſtion.]

Sect. 60. Any action to be brought for any thing done in purſuance of the act, to be commenced in three calendar months. Defendant may plead the general iſſue, and, if judgment for him, is intitled to treble coſts.

Highwaymen. A reward of 40 l. is given for the apprehending and taking of a highwayman, to be paid within a month after conviction, by the ſheriff of the county, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 8. Vide Robbery.

Homage, (Homagium) Is a French word derived from homo, becauſe, when the tenant does his ſervice to the Lord, he ſays, I become your man. Co. Lit. 64. In the original grants of lands and tenements by way of fee, the Lord did not only oblige his tenants to certain ſervices; but alſo took a ſubmiſſion with promiſe and oath, to be true to him as their lord and benefactor; and this ſubmiſſion, which is the moſt honourable, being from a freehold tenant, is called homage. 17 E. 2. ſt. 2. The Lord of the fee for which homage is due, takes homage of every tenant, as he comes to the land or fee: but women perform not homage but by their huſbands, as homage eſpecially relates to ſervice in war; and a corporation cannot do homage, which is perſonal, and they cannot appear but by attorney: alſo a biſhop or religious man, may not do homage, only fealty; but the archbiſhop of Canterbury does homage on his knees to our Kings at their coronation; and it is ſaid the biſhop of the Iſle of Man did homage to the Earl of Derby; though Fulbec reconciles this, when he ſays that a religious man may do homage, but may not ſay to his Lord, Ego devenio homo veſter, I become your man, becauſe he has profeſſed himſelf to be God's man, but he may ſay, I do unto you homage, and to you ſhall be faithful and loyal. Britton, cap. 68.

There is homage by ligeance.
Homage by reaſon of tenure—
And, homage anceſtrel.

Homage by ligeance is inherent and inſeparable to every ſubject. Homage by tenure is a ſervice made by tenants to their Lords according to their ſtatute; and homage anceſtrel, is where a man and his anceſtors have time out of mind held their land of the Lord by homage, and ſuch ſervice draws to it warranty from the Lord, and acquittal of all other ſervices to other Lords, &c. Bract. lib. 3. F. N. B. 269. Lit. Sect. 85. But, according to Sir Edw. Coke, there muſt be a double preſcription for homage anceſtrel, both in the blood of the Lord, and of the tenant; ſo that the ſame tenant, and his anceſtors, whoſe heir he is, is to hold the ſame land of the ſame Lord and his anceſtors, whoſe heir the Lord is, time out of memory, by homage, &c. and therefore there is but little land holden by homage anceſtrel. Co. Lit. 100. b. Tho' in the manor of Whitney in Herefordſhire, there was one Weſt who held lands by this tenure.

Homage tenure is incident to a freehold, and none ſhall do or receive homage, but ſuch as have eſtates in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, in their own right or right of another. Kitch. 131. Seiſin of homage is ſeiſin of fealty, and inferior ſervices, &c. And the Lord only ſhall take homage, and not the ſteward, whoſe power extends but to fealty. 4 Rep. 8. When a tenant makes his homage to the Lord, he is to be ungirt, and his head uncovered, and his Lord ſhall ſit, and he ſhall kneel, and hold his hands together between his Lord's hands, and ſay; I become your man from this day forward, for life, for member, and for worldly honour, and unto you ſhall be true and faithful, and bear you faith for the lands that I hold of you, (ſaving the faith that I owe to our Sovereign Lord the King:) And the Lord ſo ſitting ſhall kiſs the tenant, &c. 17 Ed. 3 Lit. Sect. 85. See Black. Com. 1 V. 367, 379. 2 V. 53, 91, 300. 4 V. 414.

Homage Jury, Is a jury in a Court-Baron, conſiſting of tenants that do homage to the Lord of the fee; and theſe by the Feodiſts are called pares curiæ: they enquire and make preſentment of defaults and deaths of tenants, admittances, and ſurrenders, in the Lord's court, &c. Kitch.

Homager, Is one that does or is bound to do homage to another.

Homeſoken, Homſoken, or Hamſoken, and Hamſoca, (from the Sax. ham, i. e. domus, habitatio, and ſocne, libertas, immunitas) Is by Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 23. thus defined: Homeſoken dicitur invaſio domus contra pacem Domini Regis, vel inſultus factus in domo extra pacem Domini. It appears by Raſtal, that in ancient times ſome men had an immunity to do this. Si quis hamſocan violaverit, jure Anglorum Regi emendet 5 libr. LL. Hamſoken eſt quod prior tenebit placita in curia ſua de his qui ingrediuntur domum vel curiam alicujus ad litigandum, vel furandum, vel quicquid aſportandum, vel aliquod aliud faciendum, contra voluntatem illius qui debet domum vel curiam. Ex. Reg. Priora. de Cokesford. See Hamſoken.

Homeſoken, Is alſo the privilege or freedom which every man hath in his houſe; and he who invades that freedom is properly ſaid facere homeſoken. This we take to be what we now call burglary, which is a crime of a very heinous nature, becauſe it is not only a breach of the King's peace, but a breach of that liberty which a man hath in his houſe, which (as we commonly ſay) ſhould be his caſtle, and therefore ought not to be invaded. Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 23, Du Cange.

It is alſo taken for an impunity to thoſe who commit this crime, viz. Homeſoken, hoc eſt, quietus eſſe de amerciamentis pro ingreſſu hoſpitii violenter & ſine licentia, & contra pacem Regis, & quod teneatis placita de hujuſmodi tranſgreſſione in curia veſtra. W. Thorn. p. 2030.

Homicide, (Homicidium,) Is the killing of a man, and is divided into voluntary and caſual: Homicide voluntary is that which is deliberate, and committed of a ſet purpoſe to kill; caſual is done by chance, without any intention to kill. Homicide voluntary is either with precedent malice, or without. The former is murder, and is a felonious killing through malice prepenſed of any perſon living in this realm, under the King's protection. Weſt par. 2. Symbol. tit. Indictments, ſect. 37, &c. uſque 51. where you may ſee divers ſubdiviſions of this matter. Offences againſt the life of a man come under the general name of homicide, which in our laws ſignifies the killing of a man, by a man. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66. Bracton, lib. 3. c. 4.

Homicide, properly ſo called, is either againſt a man's own life, (called ſelf-murder, or felo de ſe,) or the life of another. Homicide againſt the life of another either amounts to felony, or does not. That which amounts not to felony, is either juſtifiable, and cauſes no forfeiture at all, or excuſable, and cauſes the forfeiture of the party's goods. 1 Hawk. P. C. 67, 69.

Under this head we ſhall treat,

1. Of ſelf murder, or felo de ſe.
2. Of juſtifiable homicide.
3. Of excuſable homicide.
4. Of manſlaughter.
5. Of murder.

1. Of ſelf-murder, or felo de ſe.

In this, as well as all other felonies, the offender muſt be of the age of diſcretion, and compos mentis; and therefore, an infant killing himſelf under the age of diſcretion, or a lunatick during his lunacy, cannot be a felo de ſe. 1 Hawk. 67. Crom. 30. a. b. 31. a. H. P. C. 28. Dal. cap. 92. 3 Inſt. 54.

Our laws have always had ſuch an abhorrence of this crime, that not only he who kills himſelf with a deliberate and direct purpoſe of ſo doing, but alſo in ſome caſes he who maliciouſly attempts to kill another, and in purſuance of ſuch an attempt unwillingly kills himſelf, ſhall be adjudged in the eye of the law a felo de ſe; for wherever death is cauſed by any act done with a murderous intent, it makes the offender a murderer; 1 Hawk. P. C. 68. cites Dal. cap. 92. 44 E. 3. 44. 44 Aſſ. 55. Bro. Cor. 12, 14. Dalt. cap. 92.

Alſo vide S. P. C. 16. H. P. C. 28, 29. Pult. 119. b. Crom 28.

He who kills another upon his deſire or command, is in the judgment of the law as much a murderer, as if he had done it merely of his own head, and the perſon killed is not looked upon as a felo de ſe, inaſmuch as his aſſent was merely void, being againſt the law of God and man. 1 Hawk. P. C. 68. cites Keilw. 136. Moor 754.

As to what ſuch an offender, viz. a felo de ſe, ſhall forfeit, it ſeems clear, that he ſhall forfeit all chattels real or perſonal which he hath in his own right, and alſo all chattels real whereof he is poſſeſſed either jointly with his wife, or in her right; and alſo all bonds and other perſonal things in action, belonging ſolely to himſelf; and alſo all perſonal things in action, and, as ſome ſay, entire chattels in poſſeſſion to which he was intitled jointly with another, on any account except that of merchandize: But it is ſaid, that he ſhall forfeit a moiety only of ſuch joint chattels as may be ſevered, and nothing at all of what he was poſſeſſed of as executor or adminiſtrator. 1 Hawk. P. C. 68. cites many authorities.

However the blood of a felo de ſe is not corrupted, nor his lands of inheritance forfeited, nor his wife barred of her dower. 1 Hawk. P. C. 68. Plowd. Com. 261. b. 262. a.

Not any part of the perſonal eſtate is veſted in the King, before the ſelf-murder is found by ſome inquiſition; and conſequently the forfeiture thereof is ſaved by a pardon of the offence before ſuch finding. 1 Hawk. P. C. 68. 5 Co. 110. b. 3 Inſt. 54. 1 Saund. 362. 1 Sid. 150, 162. But if there be no ſuch pardon, the whole is forfeited immediately after ſuch inquiſition, from the time ſuch mortal wound was given, and all intermediate alienations are avoided. 1 Hawk. P. C. 68. Plowd. Com. 260. H. P. C. 29. 5 Co. 110. And ſuch inquiſitions ought to be by the coroner ſuper viſum corporis, if the body can be found, and an inquiſition ſo taken, as ſome ſay, cannot be traverſed. 1 Hawk. P. C. 68. H. P. C. 29. 3 Inſt. 55.

But if the body cannot be found, ſo that the coroner, who has authority only ſuper viſum corporis, cannot proceed, the inquiry may be by juſtices of peace, (who by their commiſſion have a general power to inquire of all felonies,) or in the King's Bench, if the felony were committed in the county where that court ſits; and ſuch inquiſitions are traverſable by the executor, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 69. 3 Inſt. 55. H. P. C. 29. 2 Lev. 141.

Alſo all inquiſitions of this offence being in the nature of indictments, ought particularly and certainly to ſet forth the circumſtances of the fact; and in the concluſion add, that the party in ſuch manner murdered himſelf. 1 Hawk. 69. 3 Lev. 140. 3 Mod. 100. 2 Lev. 152. Yet if it be full in ſubſtance, the coroner may be ſerved with a rule to amend a defect in form, 1 Hawk. 69. 1 Sid. 225, 259. 3 Mod. 101. 1 Keb. 907.

By the rubrick in the Common Prayer, before the burial office, (confirmed by ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4.) perſons who have laid violent hands upon themſelves, ſhall not have that office uſed at their interment.

2. Of juſtifiable homicidle.

1. It muſt be owing to ſome unavoidable neceſſity, to which the perſon who kills another muſt be reduced, without any manner of fault in himſelf. 1 Hawk. 69.

2. there muſt be no malice coloured under pretence of neceſſity, for wherever a perſon who kills another, acts in truth upon malice, and takes occaſion from the appearance of neceſſity to execute his revenge, he is guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. P. C. 69. 2 Rol. Rep. 120, 121. Kelynge 28. H. P. C. 38. Bract. lib. 3. cap. 4.

3. No one can plead a fact amounting to homicide ſe defendendo, or by miſadventure, but in ſuch a caſe the defendant muſt plead Not guilty, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence: And it is alſo agreed, that where a ſpecial fact, amounting to juſtifiable homicide, is found by the jury, the party is to be diſmiſſed, without being obliged to purchaſe any pardon, &c. 1 Hawk. 69.

Juſtifiable homicide is either of a public or private nature. That of a public nature is ſuch as is occaſioned by the due execution or advancement of public juſtice. That of a private nature is ſuch as happens in the juſt defence of a man's perſon, houſe, or goods. 1 Hawk. P. C. 70.

As to juſtifiable homicide in the due execution of public juſtice, the following rules muſt be obſerved:

1. The judgment, by virtue whereof any perſon is put to death, muſt be given by one who has juriſdiction in the cauſe; for otherwiſe both judge and officer may be guilty of felony. 1 Hawk. P. C. 70. Dalt. cap. 98. 10 Co. 76. 22 Ed. 4. 33. a. H. P. C. 35.

2. The judgment muſt be executed by the lawful officer. Indeed it was formerly held, that any one might as lawfully kill a perſon attainted of treaſon or felony, as a wolf or other wild beaſt; and anciently a perſon condemned in appeal of death, was delivered to the relations of the deceaſed in order to be executed by them. 1 Hawk. 70. 1 Inſt. 128. b. 2 Aſſ. pl. 3. S. P. C. 13. a. 11 H. 4. 12. a. Plowd. Com. 306. b. 3 Inſt. 131.

But at this day, as it ſeems agreed, if the judge, who gives the ſentence of death, and a fortiori, if any private perſon execute the ſame, or if the proper officer himſelf do it without a lawful command, they are guilty of felony. 1 Hawk. 70. 27. Aſſ. 41. Bro. Appeal. 69.

3. The execution muſt be purſuant to, and warranted by the judgment, otherwiſe it is without authority; and conſequently, if a ſheriff behead a man where it is no part of the ſentence to cut off the head, he is guilty of felony. 1 Hawk. 70. 35 H. 6. 57. b. Bro. Appeal, 5. S. P. C. 13. H. P. C. 36, 272.

Juſtifiable homicide in the due advancement of public juſtice, relates either to criminal or civil cauſes. As to the firſt, it may be juſtified in ſeveral caſes; as if a perſon having actually committed felony will not ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted, but ſtand on his own defence, or fly, ſo that he cannot poſſibly be apprehended alive by thoſe who purſue, whether private perſons or public officers, with or without a warrant from a magiſtrate, he may be lawfully ſlain by them. 1 Hawk. P. C. 70. 22 Aſſ. 55. Bro. Cor. 87, 89. S. P. C. 13. 3 Inſt. 221. Dalt. cap. 98. H. P. C. 36. Crom. 30.

If treſpaſſers in a foreſt, chaſe, park or warren, or any incloſed ground wherein deer are kept, will not render themſelves to the keepers, upon hue and cry made to ſtand to the King's peace, and fly from, or defend themſelves againſt them, they may be ſlain by force of the ſtatute de malefactoribus in parcis, and 4 Wil. & Mar. cap. 10. 1 Hawk. 71. S. P. C. 13. b. Crom. 30. b. Dyer. 326. pl. 3.

Homicide in the advancement of juſtice in civil cauſes may alſo be juſtified in ſome caſes: As where a ſheriff, &c. attempting to make a lawful arreſt in a civil action, or to retake one who has been arreſted and made his eſcape, is reſiſted by the party, and unavoidably kills him in the affray. 1 Hawk. P. C. 71. 1 Rol. Rep. 189. H. P. C. 37. 3 Inſt. 56. Crom. 24. a. Dalt. cap. 98. And in ſuch caſe the officer is not bound to give back, but may ſtand his ground and attack the party. 1 Hawk. P. C. 71. H. P. C. 31.

But no private perſon of his own authority can arreſt a man for a civil matter, as he may for felony, &c. 1 Hawk. 71. Crom. 30. b. Neither can the ſheriff himſelf lawfully kill thoſe who barely fly from the execution of any civil proceſs. 1 Hawk. 71. H. P. C. 37.

As to juſtifiable homicide of a private nature, in the juſt defence of a man's perſon, houſe or goods, it may happen either by the killing of a wrong-doer, or an innocent perſon in the making of ſuch defence. And firſt, the killing of a wrong-doer in the making of ſuch defence, may be juſtified in many caſes; as where a man kills one who aſſaults him in the highway to rob or murder him; or the owner of a houſe, or any of his ſervants, or lodgers, &c. kill one who attempts to burn it, or to commit therein murder, robbery, or other felony; or a woman kills one who attempts to raviſh her; or a ſervant coming ſuddenly and finding his maſter robbed and ſlain, falls upon the murderer immediately and kills him; for he does it in the height of his ſurpriſe, and under juſt apprehenſions of the like attempt upon himſelf; but in other circumſtances, he could not have juſtified the killing of ſuch an one, but ought to have apprehended him, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 71, 72. 24 H. 8. cap. 5. Dalt. cap. 98.

Neither ſhall a man in any caſe juſtify the killing another by a pretence of neceſſity, unleſs he were himſelf wholly without fault in bringing that neceſſity upon himſelf; for if a man, in defence of an injury done by himſelf, kill any perſon whatſoever, he is guilty of manſlaughter at leaſt; as where divers rioters wrongfully withhold a houſe by force, and kill thoſe who attack it from without, and endeavour to burn it. 1 Hawk. 72. Crom. 27. b. H. P. C. 56.

Neither can a man juſtify the killing another in defence of his houſe or goods, or even of his perſon, from a bare private treſpaſs; and therefore he that kills another, who, claiming a title to his houſe, attempts to enter it by force and ſhoots at it, (ſee poſt Div. 5. and qu. as to ſhooting ?) or that breaks open his windows in order to arreſt him, or that perſiſts in breaking his hedges after he is forbidden, is guilty of manſlaughter; and he who in his own defence kills another that aſſaults him in his houſe in the day-time, and plainly appears to intend to beat him only, he is guilty of homicide ſe defendendo, for which he forfeits his goods, but is pardoned of courſe; yet it ſeems, that a private perſon, and, a fortiori, an officer of juſtice, who happens unavoidably to kill another endeavouring to defend himſelf from or ſuppreſs dangerous rioters, may juſtify the fact, inaſmuch as he only does his duty in aid of public juſtice. 1 Hawk. 72. H. P. C. 40, 57. Cro. Car. 538. Dalt. cap. 98.

According to the opinion of Mr. Serjeant Hawkins (which we conceive is law) A perſon who without provocation is aſſaulted by another in any place whatſoever, in ſuch a manner as plainly ſhews an intent to murder him, as by diſcharging a piſtol, or puſhing at him with a drawn ſword, &c. may juſtify killing ſuch an aſſailant, as much as if he had attempted to rob him. 1 Hawk. 72. N. Bendlo 47. 1 And. 41. Crom. 27. b. 28. b. Dalt. cap. 98. S. P. C. 15. a. 3 Inſt. 57. Bacon 33. For other caſes, vide 1 Hawk. 73. Cro. Car. 338. March 5.

3 Of excuſable homicide.

Excuſable homicide is either per infortunium, or ſe defendendo. Homicide per infortunium, or by miſadventure, is where a man in doing a lawful act, without any intent of hurt, unfortunately chances to kill another; as, where a labourer being at work with a hatchet, the head thereof flies off, and kills one who ſtands by. 1 Hawk. P. C. 73. 6 Ed. 4. 7. b. Bro. Coro. 59, 148.

Where a third perſon whips a horſe on which a man is riding, whereupon he ſprings out, and runs over a child, and kills him; in which caſe the rider is guilty of homicide per infortunium, and he who gave the blow, of manſlaughter. 1 Hawk. 73. H. P. C. 58. 59.

Where a workman, having firſt given loud and timely warning to all perſons to ſtand clear, flings down a piece of timber from a private houſe ſtanding out of the road, and thereby kills one who happens to be underneath: But if any perſon fling down ſuch a piece of timber idly in play, or even a workman fling it down in the ſtreets of a town, where the danger is apparent in reſpect of the number of people continually paſſing by, he is guilty of manſlaughter. 1 Hawk. 73. Kelynge 40. Bract. lib. 3. c. 4. Dalt. cap. 96. H. P. C. 31. Bro. Coro. 229.

Where workmen throw ſtones, rubbiſh, or other things, from an houſe, in the ordinary courſe of their buſineſs, by which a perſon underneath happens to be killed; if they look out and give timely warning to thoſe below, it will be homicide by miſadventure; if without ſuch caution, it will amount to manſlaughter at leaſt; it was a lawful act, but done in an improper manner. It is ſaid by ſome, that if this be done in the ſtreets of London, or other populous towns, it will be manſlaughther notwithſtanding the caution abovementioned.

But this will admit of ſome limitation; if it be done early in the morning, when few or no people are ſtirring, and the ordinary caution is uſed, it ſeemeth that the party is excuſable. But when the ſtreets are full, that will not ſuffice; for in the hurry and noiſe of a crowded ſtreet, few people hear the warning, or ſufficiently attend to it. Foſter's Crown Law 262, 263.

Where a ſchoolmaſter in correcting his ſcholar, or a father his ſon, or a maſter his ſervant, or an officer, in whipping a criminal condemned to ſuch puniſhment, happens to occaſion his death; yet if ſuch perſons in their correction be ſo barbarous as to exceed all bounds of moderation, and thereby cauſe the party's death, they are guilty of manſlaughter at the leaſt; and if they make uſe of an inſtrument improper for correction, and apparently indangering the party's life, as an iron bar, or ſword, &c. or kick him to the ground, and then ſtamp on his belly and kill him, they are guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. 73, 74. Bract. lib. 1. cap. 4. H. P. C. 31. Crom. 28. b. Dalt. cap. 96. Keilw. 136. Kelynge 65. See 5 Mod. 287, 288, &c.

Where one lawfully uſing an innocent diverſion, as ſhooting at butts, or at a bird, &c. by the glancing of an arrow, or ſuch-like accident, kills another. 1 Hawk. 74. Keilw. 108. Bro. Cor. 148. See Kelynge 41.

Where a perſon happens to kill another in playing a match of foot-ball, wreſtling, or ſuch like ſports which are attended with no apparent danger of life, and intended only for the trial, exerciſe and improvement of the ſtrength, courage and activity of the parties. 1 Hawk. 74. Keilw. 108, 136. Crom. 29. a. 11 H. 7. 23. a.

Where one kills another in fighting at barriers or tilting by the King's command, which by the better opinion ſecures him from being guilty of felony by reaſon of any ſuch unfortunate accident. 1 Hawk. P. C. 74. 11 H. 7. 23. a. 3 Inſt. 160. Keilw. 108, 136.

But if a perſon kill another by ſhooting at a deer, &c. in a third perſon's park, in the doing whereof he is a treſpaſſer; or by ſhooting of a gun, or throwing ſtones in a city or highway, or other place where men uſually reſort, by throwing ſtones at another wantonly in play, which is a dangerous ſport, and has not the leaſt appearance of any good intent; or by doing any other ſuch idle action as cannot but indanger the bodily hurt of ſome one or other; or by tilting or playing at hand-ſword without the King's command; or by parrying with naked ſwords, covered with buttons at the points, or with ſwords in the ſcabbards, or ſuch like raſh ſports, which cannot be uſed without the manifeſt hazard of life, he is guilty of manſlaughter. 1 Hawk. 74. H. P. C. 31, 32, 58. Con. Hob. 134.

And if a man happen to kill another in the execution of a malicious and deliberate purpoſe to do him a perſonal hurt, by wounding or beating him; or in the wilful commiſſion of any unlawful act, which neceſſarily tends to raiſe tumults and quarrels, and conſequently cannot but be attended with the danger of perſonal hurt to ſome one or other; as by committing a riot, robbing a park, &c. he ſhall be adjudged guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. P. C. 74. H. P. C. 52, 57. Kelynge 117.

And a fortiori, he ſhall come under the ſame conſtruction, who, in the purſuance of a deliberate intention to commit a felony, chances to kill a man, as by ſhooting at tame fowl with an intent to ſteal them, &c. for ſuch perſons are by no means favoured, and they muſt at their peril take care of the conſequence of their actions; and it is a general rule, that wherever a man intending to commit one felony, happens to commit another, he is as much guilty as if he had intended the felony which he actually commits. 1 Hawk. P. C. 74. 3 Inſt. 56. Kelynge 117. H. P. C. 52.

If any one ſhoot at any wild fowl upon a tree, and the arrow killeth any reaſonable creature afar off, without any evil intent in him, this is by miſadventure; for it was not unlawful to ſhoot at the wild fowl: But if he had ſhot at a cock or a hen, or any tame fowl of another man's, and the arrow by miſchance had killed a man; if his intention was to ſteal the poultry (which muſt be collected from circumſtances) it will be murder by reaſon of that felonious intent; but if it was done wantonly, and without that intention, it will be barely manſlaughter. Foſt. 258, 9.

The rule before laid down ſuppoſeth, that the act from which death enſued, was malum in ſe. For if it was barely malum prohibitum, as ſhooting at game by a perſon not qualified by ſtatute-law to keep or uſe a gun for that purpoſe; the caſe of a perſon offending, will fall under the ſame rule as that of a qualified man. For the ſtatutes prohibiting the deſtruction of the game under certain penalties, will not, in a queſtion of this kind, enhance the accident beyond its intrinſick moment. Foſt. 259.

Neither ſhall he be adjudged guilty of a leſs crime who kills another, in doing ſuch a wilful act as ſhews him to be as dangerous as a wild beaſt, and an enemy to mankind in general; as by going deliberately with a horſe uſed to ſtrike, or diſcharging a gun among a multitude of people, or throwing a great ſtone or a piece of timber from a houſe into a ſtreet, through which he knows that many are paſſing; and it is no excuſe that he intended no harm to any one in particular, or that he meant to do it only for ſport, or to frighten the people, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 74. H. P. C. 32, 44. 3 Inſt. 57. Dalt. cap. 93, 97. 11 H. 7. 23. a. Bro. Coro. 229.

Homicide, ſe defendendo, or by ſelf-defence, ſeems to be where one who has no other poſſible means of preſerving his life from one who combats with him on a ſudden quarrel, or of defending his perſon from one who attempts to beat him, (eſpecially if ſuch attempt be made upon him in his own houſe) kills the perſon by whom he is reduced to ſuch an inevitable neceſſity. 1 Hawk. P. C. 74, 75. H. P. C. 40. S. P. C. 15.

And not only he who on an aſſault retreats to a wall, or ſome ſuch ſtreight, beyond which he can go no further before he kills the other, is adjudged by the law to act upon unavoidable neceſſity: But alſo he who being aſſaulted in ſuch a manner, and in ſuch a place, that he cannot go back without manifeſtly indangering his life, kills the other without retreating at all. 1 Hawk. 75. Bro. Coro. 125. 43 Aſſ. 31. 3 Inſt. 56. H. P. C. 41.

And notwithſtanding a perſon, who retreats from an aſſault to the wall, give the other divers wounds in his retreat, yet if he give him no mortal one till he get thither, aud then kill him, he is guilty of homicide ſe defendendo only. 1 Hawk. 75. H. P. C. 41. Crom. 28. S. P. C. 15. a.

And an officer who kills one that reſiſts him in the execution of his office, and even a private perſon that kills one who feloniouſly aſſaults him in the highway, may juſtify the fact without ever giving back at all. 1 Hawk. P. C. 75. H. P. C. 41. 3 Inſt. 56. Crom. 28. a.

According to ſome good opinions, even he who gives another the firſt blow on a ſudden quarrel, if he afterwards do what he can to avoid killing him, is not guilty of felony; yet ſuch a perſon ſeems to be too much favoured by this opinion, inaſmuch as the neceſſity to which he is at laſt reduced, was at the firſt owing to his own fault. And it is now agreed, that if a man ſtrike another upon malice prepenſe, and then fly to the wall, and there kill him in his own defence, he is guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. P. C. 75. S. P. C. 15. a. Crom. 28. a. Dalt. cap. 98. Kelynge 58. H. P. C. 42.

It ſeems clear, that neither of theſe homicides (except as aforeſaid) are felonies, becauſe they are not accompanied with a felonious intent, which is neceſſary in every felony. 1 Hawk. 75. 3 Inſt. 56. 2 Inſt. 149.

And from hence it ſeems plainly to follow, that they were never puniſhable with loſs of life: And the ſame alſo farther appears from the writ De odio & atia, by virtue whereof, if any perſon committed for killing another, were found guilty of either of theſe homicides, and no other crime, he might be bailed; and indeed it ſeems to be againſt natural juſtice to condemn a man to death, for what is owing rather to his misfortune than his fault. 1 Hawk. 75.

It is true indeed, that ſome of our beſt authors have argued from the ſtatute of Marlbridge, Ch. 26. which enacts, that murdrum de cætero non adjudicetur, ubi infortunium tantummodo adjudicatum eſt, &c. That before this ſtatute homicides by miſadventure, or ſe defendendo, were adjudged murder, and conſequently puniſhed by death. 1 Hawk. 75. 2 Inſt. 56. S. P. C. 16.

But to this it may be anſwered, that murder in thoſe days ſignified only the private killing of a man, by one who was neither ſeen nor heard by any witneſs, for which the offender, if found, was to be tried by ordeal, and if he could not be found, the town in which the fact was done, was to be amerced ſixty-ſix marks, unleſs it could be proved that the perſon killed was an Engliſhman: otherwiſe it was preſumed he was a Dane or Norman, who in thoſe days were often privately made away with by the Engliſh. And it being a doubt whether homicide by miſadventure, &c. were to be eſteemed murder in this ſenſe, it ſeems to have been the chief intent of the makers of this ſtatute to ſettle this queſtion. 1 Hawk. 75. Bract. 134. b. 135. a. Kelynge 121.

However it is certain, that notwithſtanding neither of theſe offences be felonies, yet a perſon guilty of them is not bailable by juſtices of peace, but muſt be committed till the next coming of the juſtices of eyre or gaol-delivery. 1 Hawk. 76. H. P. C. 98, 99. 2 Inſt. 315. Dalt. cap. 98. But they may be brought up by habeas corpus, before any of the twelve judges, and bailed.

Indeed, anciently a perſon committed for the death of a man, might ſue out the writ De odio & atia, which by Magna Charta 16. is grantable without fee; and if thereon, by an inqueſt taken by the ſheriff, he were found to have done the fact by miſadventure, or ſe defendendo, he might be mainpriſed by twelve men, upon the writ De ponendo in ballium. But ſuch writs and enquiries were taken away by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, 9. and 28 Ed. 3. 9. and though perhaps they were again revived by 42 Ed. 3. 1. which makes all ſtatutes contrary to Magna Charta void; yet at this day they ſeem to be obſolete, and, indeed, uſeleſs, inaſmuch as the party may probably be ſooner delivered in the uſual courſe, by the coming of the juſtices of gaol-delivery. 1 Hawk. 76. S. P. C. 77. g. 2 Inſt. 43, 315. 9 Co. 56. Co. Bail and Mainfrize, c. 10.

It is alſo agreed, that no one can excuſe the killing another, by ſetting forth in a ſpecial plea, that he did it by miſadventure, or ſe defendendo, but that he muſt plead Not guilty, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence. And that wherever a perſon is found guilty of ſuch homicide, either by a ſpecial indictment for the ſame, or by a verdict ſetting forth the circumſtances of the caſe on a general indictment of murder or homicide, he ſhall be diſcharged out of priſon upon bail, and forfeit his goods: But, that upon removing the record by certiorari into Chancery, he ſhall have his pardon of courſe, without ſtaying for any warrant from the King to that purpoſe. 1 Hawk. 76. 4 H. 7. 2. a. Keilw. 53. a. 108. b. 2 Inſt. 316. S. P. C. 15. b. 16. b. Dalt. cap. 96, 98. F. N. B. 246. C. H.

4. Of manſlaughter.

Homicide againſt the life of another, amounting to felony, is either with or without malice; that which is without malice is called manſlaughter, or ſometimes chancemedley, by which we underſtand ſuch killing as happens either on a ſudden quarrel, or in the commiſſion of an unlawful act, without any deliberate intention of doing any miſchief at all. 1 Hawk. 76. 3 Inſt. 55, 57. Dalt. cap. 94. H. P. C. 56, 57.

And from hence it follows, that there can be no acceſſaries to this offence before the fact, becauſe it muſt be done without premeditation. 1 Hawk. P. C. 76. H. P. C. 217. See diviſion Murder.

There is a particular kind of manſlaughter proper to be conſidered here, from which the benefit of clergy is taken away, by 1 Jac. 1. c. 8. "Where any perſon ſhall ſtab or thruſt any perſon or perſons that hath not then any weapon drawn, or that hath not then firſt ſtricken, the party which ſhall ſo ſtab or thruſt, ſo as the perſon or perſons ſo ſtabbed or thruſted, ſhall thereof die within the ſpace of ſix months then next following, although it cannot be proved that the ſame was done of malice forethought."

It is generally holden, that this ſtatute is but declarative of the Common law, and in the conſtruction thereof, the following points have been reſolved. 1 Hawk. 77. 1 Bulſt. 87. Kelynge 55.

1. That wherever a perſon who happens to kill another, was ſtruck by him in the quarrel before he gave the mortal wound, he is out of the ſtatute, though he himſelf gave the firſt blow. 1 Hawk. 77. 1 Jon. 240. See 3 Lev. 266.

2. That he who actually gives the ſtroke, and not any of thoſe who may be ſaid to do it by conſtruction of law, as being preſent, and aiding and abetting the fact, are within the ſtatute; from whence it follows, That if it cannot be proved by whom the ſtroke was given, none can be found guilty within the ſtatute. 1 Hawk. 77. H. P. C. 58. Aleyn 44.

3. That the killing of a man with a hammer, or ſuch like inſtrument, which cannot come properly under the words thruſt or ſtab, is not a killing within the ſtatute; but it ſeems that the diſcharging a piſtol, or throwing a pot, or other dangerous weapon at the party, is within the equity of the words, having a weapon drawn; for penal ſtatutes are conſtrued ſtrictly againſt the ſubject, and favourably and equitably for him. 1 Hawk. 77. 1 Jones 432. 3 Lev. 266.

4. That there is no need to lay the concluſion of the indictment contra formam ſtatuti, becauſe the ſtatute makes no new offence, but only takes away the privilege of clergy from an old one, and leaves it to the judgment of the common law; from whence it follows, that a perſon indicted on the ſtatute, may be found guilty of manſlaughter generally. Alſo from the ſame ground it hath been reſolved, That if an indictment lay, and a verdict alſo find, a fact to be contra formam ſtatuti, which cannot poſſibly be ſo, as if A. and B. aided and abetted C. contra formam ſtatuti, yet neither ſuch indictment nor verdict are void, but A. and B. ſhall be dealt with in the ſame manner as they ſhould have been, if theſe words contra formam ſtatuti had been wholly omitted, becauſe the ſubſtance of the indictment being found, they may be rejected as ſenſeleſs and ſurplus: And, a fortiori, therefore it is certain, that they ſhall do no hurt to an indictment or verdict containing a fact which may be within the ſtatute. 1 Hawk. 77. H. P. C. 58, 266. Allen 47. Cro. Jac. 283.

5. That, as theſe words, contra formam ſtatuti, do not vitiate an indictment which would be good without them; ſo alſo, they will not ſupply a defect in a vitious one, which does not ſpecially purſue the ſtatute. 1 Hawk. 77. H. P. C. 58.

5. Of murder.

Homicide againſt the life of another, amounting to felony with malice, is either murder or petit treaſon. And firſt of murder, which anciently ſignified only the private killing of a man, for which, by force of a law introduced by King Canutus for the preſervation of his Danes, the town or hundred where the fact was done, was to be amerced to the King, unleſs they could prove that the perſon ſlain were an Engliſhman, (which proof was called Engleſchire) or could procure the offender, &c. And in thoſe days, the open wilful killing of a man through anger or malice, &c. was not called murder, but voluntary homicide. 1 Hawk. 78. Bract. 134. b. 135. a. Kelynge 121, &c. Bract. 121. a.

But the law concerning Engleſchire having been aboliſhed by 14 Ed. 3. 4. the killing of an Engliſhman or foreigner through malice prepenſe, whether committed openly or ſecretly, was by degrees called murder; and 13 Rich. 2. 1. which reſtrains the King's pardon in certain caſes, does in the preamble, under the general name of murder, include all ſuch homicide as ſhall not be pardoned without ſpecial words; and in the body of the act expreſſes the ſame by murder, or killing by await, aſſault, or malice prepenſed. And doubtleſs the makers of 25 H. 8. cap. 1. which excluded all wilful murder of malice prepenſe from the benefit of clergy, intended to include open, as well as private, homicide within the word murder. 1 Hawk. 78. S. P. C. 18. b. 19. a.

By murder, therefore, at this day we underſtand, the wilful killing of any ſubject whatſoever, through malice forethought, whether the perſon ſlain be an Engliſhman or foreigner. 1 Hawk. 78.

Not only he who by a wound or blow, or by poiſoning, ſtrangling or famiſhing, &c. directly cauſes another's death, but alſo in many caſes, he who by wilfully and deliberately doing a thing which apparently endangers another's life, and thereby occaſions his death, ſhall be adjudged to kill him. 1 Hawk. 78. 3 Inſt. 48. H. P. C 53. Palm. 548. Vide examples in 1 Hawk. 78, 79. Crom. 24. b. Pult. 122. a. b. Dalt. cap. 93.

And in ſome caſes a man ſhall be ſaid, in the judgment of the law, to kill one who is in truth actually killed by another, or by himſelf; as where one by dureſs of impriſonment compels a man to accuſe an innocent perſon, who, on his evidence, is condemned and executed; or where one incites a madman to kill himſelf or another; or where one lays poiſon with an intent to kill one man, which was afterwards accidently taken by another who dies thereof. 1 Hawk. P. C. 79. S. P. C. 36. 3 Inſt. 91. Dalt. cap. 93. 1 Hawk. cap. 1. ſect. 7. Plowd. Com. 474.

Alſo he who wilfully neglects to prevent a miſchief, which he may and ought to provide againſt, is, as ſome have ſaid, in judgment of the law, the actual cauſe of the damage which enſues; and therefore if a man have an ox or horſe, which he knows to be miſchievous, by being uſed to gore or ſtrike at thoſe who came near them, and do not tie them up, but leave them to their liberty, and they afterwards kill a man, according to ſome opinions, the owner may be indicted, as having himſelf killed him; and this is agreeable to the Moſaical law. However, as it is agreed by all, ſuch a perſon is guilty of a very groſs miſdemeanor. 1 Hawk. 79. Fitz. Corone 311. S. P. C. 17. a. Crom. 24. b. Dalt. cap. 93. Pult. 122. b. H. P. C. 53. Exodus, c. 2. v. 29.

Alſo it is agreed, That no perſon ſhall be adjudged by any act whatever to kill another, who doth not die thereof within a year and a day after; in the computation whereof, the whole day on which the hurt was done ſhall be reckoned the firſt. 1 Hawk. P. C. 79. H. P. C. 55. Pult. 123. a. Dalt. cap. 93. S. P. C. 21. d.

But if a perſon hurt by another die thereof within a year and a day, it is no excuſe for the other, that he might have recovered, if he had not neglected to take care of himſelf. 1 Hawk. 79. 3 Inſt. 53. Kelynge 26. 1 Keb. 17.

As to the place where ſuch killing is within the conuſance of the law, it ſeems that the killing of one who is both wounded and dies out of the realm, or wounded out of the realm and dies here, cannot be determined at Common law, becauſe it cannot be tried by a jury of the neighbourhood where the fact was done. But it is agreed, that the death of one who is both wounded and dies beyond ſea, and it is ſaid by ſome, that the death of him who dies here of a wound given there, may be heard and determined before the conſtable and marſhal, according to the Civil law, if the King pleaſe to appoint a conſtable. And it ſeemeth alſo to be clear, that ſuch a fact being examined by the privy council, may by force of 33 H. 8. cap. 23. be tried (in relation to the principal offenders, but not as to the acceſſaries) before commiſſioners appointed by the King, in any county of England. 1 Hawk. 79. 3 Inſt. 48. 2 Inſt. 51. Co. Lit. 75. S. P. C. 65. a. Bro. Appeal 153. Cro. Car. 247. 1 And. 195. A commiſſion was iſſued, againſt captain Rocke for killing Mr. Ferguſon, at the cape of Good Hope.

A murder at ſea was anciently cogniſable only by the Civil law, but now by force of 27 H. 8. 4. and 28 H. 8. 15. it may be tried and determined before the King's Commiſſioners in any county of England, according to the courſe of the Common law; yet the death of one who is at land of a wound received at ſea, is neither determinable at Common law, nor by force of either of theſe ſtatutes: but it ſeems, that it may be tried by the conſtable and marſhal, or before the commiſſioners appointed in purſuance of the aforeſaid ſtatute of 33 H. 8. 23. 1 Hawk. 79. 3 Inſt. 48, 49. 1 Leon. 270. *H. And it is ſaid by ſome, that the death of one who died in one county, of a wound given in another, is not indictable at all at Common law, becauſe the offence was not complete in either county, and the jury could enquire only of what happened in their own county. But it hath been holden by others, That if the corps were carried into the county where the ſtroke was given, the whole might be enquired of by a jury of the ſame county. And it is agreed, that an appeal might be brought in either county, and the fact tried by a jury returned jointly from each. And at this day, by force of 2 & 3 Ed. 6. 24. the whole is triable by a jury of the county wherein the death ſhall happen, on an indictment found, or appeal brought, in the ſame county. 1 Hawk. 79, 80. 3 Inſt. 48, 49. *Bro. Alſo by force of 26 H. 8. cap. 6. a murder in Wales may be enquired of in an adjoining Engliſh county, but appeals muſt ſtill be brought in the proper county. 1 Hawk. 80. Cro. Car. 247. 1 Jon. 255. 1 Lev. 118. Latch 12, 118.

It is agreed, That the malicious killing of any perſon, whatſoever nation or religion he be of, or of whatſoever crime attainted, is murder. 1 Hawk. 80. 3 Inſt. 50.

And it was anciently holden, That the cauſing of an abortion by giving a potion to, or ſtriking a woman big with child, was murder: but, at this day, it is ſaid to be a great miſpriſion only, and not murder unleſs the child be born alive, and die thereof, in which caſe it ſeems clearly to be murder, notwithſtanding ſome opinions to the contrary. And in this reſpect alſo, the Common law ſeems to be agreeable to the Moſaical, which is as to the purpoſe thus expreſſed; "If men ſtrive and hurt a woman with child, ſo that her fruit depart from her, and yet no miſchief follow, he ſhall be ſurely puniſhed, according as the woman's huſband will lay upon him, and he ſhall pay as the judges determine; and if any miſchief follow, then thoſe ſhall give life for life." 1 Hawk. 80. Bract. 121. S. P. C. 21. Bro. Coro. 91. H. P. C. 53. 3 Inſt. 5. 3 Aſſ. 2. Bro. Coro. 68. Dalt. cap. 93. Exodus, cap. 21. v. 22, 23.

It ſeems alſo agreed, that where one counſels a woman to kill her child when it ſhall be born, who afterwards kills it in purſuance of ſuch advice, he is an acceſſary to the murder. 1 Hawk. 80. Dyer 186. 3 Inſt. 51.

As to what killing ſhall be adjudged of malice prepenſe or murder; it is to be obſerved, that any former deſign of doing miſchief may be called malice; and therefore that not ſuch killing only as proceeds from premeditated hatred or revenge againſt the perſon killed, but alſo in many other caſes, ſuch as is accompanied with thoſe circumſtances that ſhew the heart to be perverſly wicked, is adjudged to be of malice prepenſe or aforethought, and conſequently murder. 1 Hawk. 80. Kelynge 127. Stran. 766.

And according to this notion, it is thought proper to conſider, 1. Such murder as is occaſioned through any expreſs purpoſe to do ſome perſonal injury to him who is ſlain in particular; which ſeems to be moſt properly called expreſs malice. 2dly, Such as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, principally intended for ſome other purpoſe, and not to do a perſonal injury to him in particular who is ſlain, in which caſe the malice ſeems to be moſt properly ſaid to be implied. 1 Hawk. 80. Kelynge 129, 130.

As to murder in the firſt ſenſe, ſuch acts as ſhew a direct and deliberate intent to kill another, as poiſoning, ſtabbing, and ſuch like, are ſo clearly murder, that there are not any queſtions relating thereto worth explaining: but the caſes which have borne diſpute, have generally happened in the following inſtances. 1ſt, In duelling. 2dly, In killing another without any provocation, or but upon a ſlight one. 3dly, In killing one whom the perſon killing pretended to hurt in a leſs degree. 1 Hawk. 80.

As to the firſt inſtance of this kind, it ſeems agreed, that wherever two perſons in cool blood meet and fight on a precedent quarrel, and one of them is killed, the other is guilty of murder, and cannot help himſelf by alledging that he was firſt ſtruck by the deceaſed; or that he had often declined to meet him, and was prevailed upon to do it by his importunity; or that it was his only intent to vindicate his reputation, or that he meant not to kill, but only to diſarm his adverſary: For ſince he deliberately engaged in an act in defiance of the laws, he muſt at his peril abide the conſequences thereof. 1 Hawk. 80, 81. 1 Bulſt. 86, 87. 2 Bulſt. 147. Crom. 22. b. 1 Rol. Rep. 360. 3 Bulſt. 171. H. P. C. 48.

From hence it clearly follows, that if two perſons quarrel over night, and appoint to fight the next day; or quarrel in the morning, and agree to fight in the afternoon, or ſuch a conſiderable time after, by which, in common intendment, it muſt be preſumed that the blood was cooled, and then they meet and fight, and one kill the other, he is guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. 81. 3 Inſt. 51. H. P. C. 48. Kelynge 56. 1 Lev. 180.

And wherever it appears from the whole circumſtances of the caſe, that he who kills another on a ſudden quarrel was maſter of his temper at the time, he is guilty of murder; as if after the quarrel he fall into other diſcourſe, and talk calmly theren; or perhaps if he has ſo much conſideration as to ſay, that the place wherein the quarrel happens, is not convenient for fighting; or that if he ſhould fight at preſent, he ſhould have the diſadvantage by reaſon of the height of his ſhoes, &c. 1 Hawk. 81. Kelynge 56. 1 Sid. 177. 1 Lev. 180.

If A. on a quarrel with B. tell him that he will not ſtrike him, but that he will give B. a pot of ale to ſtrike him, and thereupon B. ſtrike, and A. kill him, he is guilty of murder; for he ſhall not elude the juſtice of the law by ſuch pretence to cover his malice. 1 Hawk. 81. H. P. C. 48.

In like manner, if B. challenge A. and A. refuſe to meet him; but, in order to evade the law, tells B. that he ſhall go the next day to ſuch a town about his buſineſs, and accordingly B. meet him the next day in the road to the ſame town, and aſſault him, whereupon they fight, and A. kills B. he is, in the opinion of Hawkins, guilty of murder, unleſs it appear by the whole circumſtances that he gave B. ſuch information accidentally, and not with a deſign to give him an opportunity of fighting. 1 Hawk. 81. Crom. 22. b. H. P. C. 48.

And at this day it ſeems to be ſettled, That if a man aſſault another with malice prepenſe, and after be driven by him to the wall, and kill him there in his own defence, he is guilty of murder in reſpect of his firſt intent. 1 Hawk. 81. Crom. 22. b. Dalt. cap. 93. H. P. C. 47. Kelynge 58. Mawgridge's caſe.

And it hath been adjudged, that even upon a ſudden quarrel, if a man be ſo far provoked by any bare words or geſtures of another, as to make a puſh at him with a ſword, or to ſtrike at him with any other ſuch weapon as manifeſtly indangers his life, before the other's ſword is drawn, and thereupon a fight enſue, and he who made ſuch aſſault kill the other, he is guilty of murder; becauſe that by aſſaulting the other in ſuch an outrageous manner, without giving him an opportunity to defend himſelf, he ſhewed that he intended not to fight with him, but to kill him, which violent revenge is no more excuſed by ſuch a ſlight provocation, than if there had been none at all. 1 Hawk. 81. Crom. 23. a. b. Dalt. cap. 93. Kelynge 61. Mawgridge's caſe.

But it is ſaid, that if he who draws upon another in a ſudden quarrel, make no paſs at him till his ſword is drawn, and then fight with him, he is guilty of manſlaughter only, becauſe that by neglecting the opportunity of killing the other, he was on his guard, and in a condition to defend himſelf, with like hazard to both, he ſhewed that his intent was not ſo much to kill, as to combat with the other, in compliance with thoſe common notions of honour, which prevailing over reaſon, during the time that a man is under the tranſports of a ſudden paſſion, ſo far mitigate his offence in fighting, that it ſhall not be adjudged to be of malice prepenſe. 1 Hawk. 81, 82. Kelyng 55, 61, 131. 2 Rol. Rep. 461.

And if two happen to fall out upon a ſudden, and preſently agree to fight, and each of them fetch a weapon, and go into the field, and there one kill the other, he is guilty of manſlaughter only, becauſe he did it in the heat of blood. 1 Hawk. 82. H. P. C. 48. 3 Inſt. 51.

And ſuch an indulgence is ſhewn to the frailties of human nature, that where two perſons, who have formerly fought on malice, are afterwards to all appearance reconciled, and fight again on a freſh quarrel, it ſhall not be preſumed that they were moved by the old grudge, unleſs it appear by the whole circumſtances of the fact. 1 Hawk. 82. Crom. 23. a. Dalt. cap. 93. H. P. C. 49. 1 Rol. Rep. 360.

But the law ſo far abhors all duelling in cold blood, that not only the principal who actually kills the other, but alſo his ſeconds are guilty of murder, whether they fought or not; and ſome have gone ſo far as to hold, that the ſeconds of the perſon killed are alſo equally guilty, in reſpect of that countenance which they give to their principals in the execution of their purpoſe, by accompanying them therein, and being ready to bear a part with them: but perhaps the contrary opinion is the more plauſible; for it ſeems too ſevere a conſtruction to make a man by ſuch reaſoning the murderer of his friend, to whom he was ſo far from intending any miſchief, that he was ready to hazard his own life in his quarrel. 1 Hawk. 82. H. P. C. 51. Dalt. cap. 93.

As to the ſecond inſtance of this kind, viz. ſuch murder as happens in killing another without any provocation, or but upon a ſlight one; it is to be obſerved, that wherever it appears that a man killed another, it ſhall be intended prima facie that he did it maliciouſly, unleſs he can make out the contrary, by ſhewing that he did it on a ſudden provocation, &c. 1 Hawk. 82. Kelynge 27.

Alſo it ſeems to be agreed, that no breach of a man's word or promiſe, no treſpaſs either to lands or goods, no affront by bare words or geſtures, however falſe or malicious it may be, and aggravated with the moſt provoking circumſtances, will excuſe him from being guilty of murder, who is ſo far tranſported thereby, as immediately to attack the perſon who offends him, in ſuch a manner as manifeſtly endangers his life, without giving him time to put himſelf upon his guard, if he kills him in purſuance of ſuch aſſault, whether the perſon ſlain did at all fight in his defence or not: for ſo baſe and cruel a revenge cannot have too ſevere a conſtruction. 1 Hawk. 82. Kelynge 131, 135. 2 Rol. Rep. 460, 461. Dalt. cap. 93. Cro. Eliz. 779. Noy 171. 1 Sid. 277. 1 Levinz. 180. Hob. 121. con. 1 Jon. 432. a.

But if a perſon ſo provoked had beaten the other only in ſuch a manner, that it might plainly appear that he meant not to kill, but only chaſtiſe him; or if he had reſtrained himſelf till the other had put himſelf on his guard, and then in fighting with him had killed him, he had been guilty of manſlaughter only. 1 Hawk. 82. Kelynge 55, 61, 131.

And of the like offence ſhall he be adjudged guilty, who ſeeing two perſons fighting together on a private quarrel, whether ſudden or malicious, takes part with one of them, and kills the other. 1 Hawk. 82. Kelynge 61, 136. Cro. Jac. 296. 12 Co. 87.

Neither can he be thought guilty of a greater crime, who finding a man in bed with his wife, or being actually ſtruck by him, or pulled by the noſe, or fillipped upon the forehead, immediately kills him; or who happens to kill another in a contention for the wall; or in the defence of his perſon from an unlawful arreſt; or in the defence of his houſe from thoſe who, claiming a title to it, attempt forcibly to enter it, and to that purpoſe ſhoot at it, &c. or in the defence of his poſſeſſion of a room in a public houſe, from thoſe who attempt to turn him out of it, and thereupon draw their ſwords upon him; in which caſe the killing the aſſailant hath been holden by ſome to be juſtifiable; but it is certain, that it can amount to no more than manſlaughter. 1 Hawk. 82, 83. H. P. C. 57. 3 Inſt. 55. Kelynge 51, 137. Crom. 27. a.

Nor was he judged criminal in a higher degree, who ſeeing his ſon's noſe bloody, and being told by him, that he had been beaten by ſuch a boy, ran three quarters of a mile, and having found the boy, beat him with a ſmall cudgel, whereof he afterwards died. 1 Hawk. 83. H. P. C. 48. Cro. Jac. 296. 12 Co. 87.

As to the third inſtance of the kind, viz. ſuch murder as happens in killing one whom the perſon killing intended to hurt in a leſs degree; as to which it is to be obſerved, that wherever a perſon in cool blood by way of revenge, unlawfully and deliberately beats another in ſuch a manner that he afterwards dies thereof, he is guilty of murder, however unwilling he might have been to have gone ſo far. 1 Hawk. 83. Kelyn. 119. Mawgridge's caſe. H. P. C. 49, 50, 51, 52.

Alſo it ſeems, that he who upon a ſudden provocation executeth his revenge in ſuch a cruel manner, as ſhews a cool and deliberate intent to do miſchief, is guilty of murder, if death enſue; as where the keeper of a park finding a boy ſtealing wood, tied him to a horſe's tail, and beat him, whereupon the horſe ran away with and killed him. 1 Hawk. 83. Cro. Car. 131. 1 Jon. 198. Palm. 545. H. P. C. 49.

As to the caſes where ſuch killing ſhall be adjudged murder, which happen in the execution of an unlawful action, principally intended for ſome other purpoſe, and not to do a perſonal injury to him in particular who happens to be ſlain, they are as follow. And firſt, Such killing as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, whereof the principal intention was to commit another felony; it ſeems agreed, that wherever a man happens to kill another in the execution of a deliberate purpoſe to commit any felony, he is guilty of murder; as where a perſon ſhooting at tame fowl, with an intent to ſteal them, accidentally kills a man; or where one ſets upon a man to rob him, and kills him in making reſiſtance; or where a perſon ſhooting at, or fighting with one man with a deſign to murder him, miſſes him, and kills another. 1 Hawk 83. Kelynge 117. H. P. C. 46. 50. Dalt. cap. 93. Moore 87.

And not only in ſuch caſes, where the very act of a perſon having ſuch a felonious intent, is the immediate cauſe of a third perſon's death, but alſo where it any way occaſionally cauſes ſuch a misfortune, it makes him guilty of murder; and ſuch was the caſe of the huſband, who gave a poiſoned apple to his wife, who eat not enough of it to kill her, but innocently, and againſt the huſband's will and perſuaſion, gave part of it to a child who died thereof; ſuch alſo was the caſe of the wife who mixed ratſbane in a potion ſent by an apothecary to her huſband, which did not kill him, but afterwards killed the apothecary, who to vindicate his reputation taſted it himſelf, having firſt ſtirred it about. Neither is it material in this caſe, that the ſtirring of the potion might make the operation of the poiſon more forcible than otherwiſe it would have been; for inaſmuch as ſuch a murderous intention, which of itſelf perhaps in ſtrictneſs might juſtly be made puniſhable with death, proves now in the event the cauſe of the King's loſing a ſubject, it ſhall be as ſeverely puniſhed as if it had had the intended effect, the miſſing whereof is not owing to any want of malice, but of power. 1 Hawk. 84. Plow. Com | 474. 9 Co. 91.

But if one happened to be poiſoned by ratſbane laid in order to deſtroy vermine, the perſon by whom he is ſo killed, is guilty of homicide per infortunium only, becauſe his intentions were wholly innocent. Ibid.

Alſo if a third perſon accidentally happen to be killed by one engaged in a combat with another upon a ſudden quarrel, it ſeems that he who kills him is guilty of manſlaughter only; but it hath been adjudged, that if a juſtice of peace, conſtable or watchman, or even a private perſon be killed in the endeavouring to part thoſe whom he ſees fighting, the perſon by whom he is killed, is guilty of murder; and that he cannot excuſe himſelf by alledging that what he did was in a ſudden affray in the heat of blood, and through the violence of paſſion; for he who carries his reſentment ſo high as not only to execute his revenge againſt thoſe who have affronted him, but even againſt ſuch as have no otherwiſe offended him but by doing their duty, and endeavouring to reſtrain him from breaking through his, ſhews ſuch an obſtinate contempt of the law, that he is no more to be favoured than if he had acted in cool blood. 1 Hawk. 84. H. P. C. 45, 50. 3 Inſt. 52. Dalt. cap. 93. Savil 67. Kelynge 66. 22 Aſſ. 71. 4 Co. 40. b. 9 Co. 68. Crom. 25. a. b.

Yet it hath been reſolved, that if the third perſon ſlain in ſuch a ſudden affray, do not give notice for what purpoſe he comes, by commanding the parties in the King's name to keep the peace, or otherwiſe manifeſtly ſhewing his intention to be not to take part in the quarrel, but to appeaſe it, he who kills him is guilty of manſlaughter only, for he might ſuſpect that he came to ſide with his adverſary. 1 Hawk. 84. Kelynge 66.

As to the ſecond inſtance of this kind, viz. ſuch killing as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, where the principal deſign is to commit a bare breach of the peace, not intended againſt the perſon of him who happens to be ſlain; it ſeems clear, that where divers perſons reſolving generally to reſiſt all oppoſers in the commiſſion of any ſuch breach of the peace, and to execute it in ſuch a manner as naturally tends to raiſe tumults and affrays, as by committing a violent diſſeiſin with great numbers of people, hunting in a park, &c. and in ſo doing happen to kill a man, they are all guilty of murder; for they muſt at their peril abide the event of their actions, who wilfully engage in ſuch bold diſturbances of the public qeace, in open oppoſition to and defiance of the juſtice of the nation. 1 Hawk. 84. Savil 67. Moore 86. Palm. 35. Crom. 24. b. 25. a. H. P. C. 47. 5 Mod. 285. Dyer 128. pl. 60. S. P. C. 17. b.

Yet where divers rioters, having forcible poſſeſſion of a houſe afterwards killed the perſon whom they had ejected, as he was endeavouring in the night forcibly to regain the poſſeſſion, and to fire the houſe, they were adjudged guilty of manſlaughter only, notwithſtanding they did the fact in maintenance of a deliberate injury, perhaps for this reaſon, becauſe the perſon ſlain was ſo much in fault himſelf. 1 Hawk. 85. Crom. 28. b. H. P. C. 56.

But if in ſuch, or any other quarrel, whether it were ſudden or premeditated, a juſtice of peace, conſtable or watchman, or even a private perſon, be ſlain in endeavouring to keep the peace, and ſuppreſs the affray, he who kills him is guilty of murder; for notwithſtanding it was not his primary intention to commit a felony, yet inaſmuch as he perſiſts in a leſs offence with ſo much obſtinacy as to go on in it to the hazard of the lives of thoſe who no otherwiſe offend him, but by doing their duty in maintenance of the law, which therefore affords them its more immediate protection, he ſeems to be in this reſpect equally criminal, as if his intention had been to commit a felony. 1 Hawk. 85. H. P. C. 45. Dalt. cap. 93. 3 Inſt. 52. Kelyn. 66. 22 Aſſ. 71. 4 Co. 40. b. 9 Co. 68. Crom. 25. See ſupra.

As to the third inſtance of this kind, viz. ſuch killing, as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, the principal motive whereof was to aſſiſt a third perſon; it ſeems clear, that if a maſter maliciouſly intending to kill another take his ſervants with him, without acquainting them with his purpoſe, and meet his adverſary and fight with him, and the ſervants ſeeing their maſter engaged take part with him, and kill the other, they are guilty of manſlaughter only, but the maſter of murder. Pl. Com. 100, 101. a. Crom. 23. Dalt. cap. 93. H. P. C. 51, 52.

And therefore it follows à fortiori, that if a man's ſervant or friend, or even a ſtranger, coming ſuddenly, ſee him fighting with another and ſide with him, and kill the other; or ſeeing his ſword broken ſend him another, wherewith he kills the other, he is guilty of manſlaughter only. 1 Hawk. 85. Crom. 26. b. H. P. C. 57. Dalt. cap. 94. 1 Roll. Rep. 407, 408. 3 Bulſt. 206. H. P. C. 52.

Yet in this very caſe, if the perſon killed were a bailiff, or other officer of juſtice, reſiſted by the maſter, &c. in due execution of his duty, ſuch friend or ſervant, &c. are guilty of murder, whether they knew the perſon ſlain were an officer or not. 1 Hawk. 85. Kelynge 67, 86, 87.

But perhaps it may be objected, that in this laſt caſe there ſeems to be no more malice than in the former; and ſuch third perſon being wholly ignorant that the party killed was an officer, ſeems to be no more in fault than if he had been a private perſon. 1 Hawk. 85.

To this it may be anſwered, that all fighting is highly unlawful, and that he who on a ſudden ſeeing perſons engaged in it, is ſo far from endeavouring to part them, as every good ſubject ought, that he takes part with one ſide, and fights in the quarrel, without knowing the cauſe of it, ſhews a high contempt of the laws, and a readineſs to break through them on a ſmall occaſion, and muſt at his peril take heed what he does; and conſequently might perhaps in ſtrict juſtice be adjudged in the foregoing caſes to act with malice, which doth not always ſignify a particular ill-will againſt the perſon killed, as appears by many of the above-mentioned caſes; and tho' ſuch perſon be favoured in reſpect of the ſuddenneſs of the occaſion where both the quarrel and the perſons are private, yet he muſt not expect ſuch indulgence, where the fight, in which he ſo raſhly engages, was begun in oppoſition to the juſtice of the nation, and a perſon happens to be killed thereby who engaged in maintenance thereof, and on that account is under its more particular care; and it may be juſtly challenged, that his oppoſers be made examples to deter others from joining in ſuch unwarrantable quarrels. 1 Hawk. 85, 86. 1 Sid. 160. Noy 50. Plow. Com. 100.

But if a man ſeeing another arreſted and reſtrained from his liberty, under colour of a preſs-warrent or civil proceſs, &c. by thoſe who in truth have no ſuch authority, happen to kill ſuch treſpaſſers in reſcuing the perſon oppreſſed, he ſhall be adjudged guilty of manſlaughter only, notwithſtanding the injured perſon ſubmitted to them, and endeavoured not to reſcue himſelf, and the perſon who reſcued him, did not know that he was illegally arreſted; for ſince in the event it appears, that the perſons ſlain were treſpaſſers, covering their violence with a ſhew of juſtice, he who kills them is indulged by the law, which in theſe caſes judges by the event, which thoſe who engage in ſuch unlawful actions muſt abide at their peril. 1 Hawk. 86. Kelynge 66, 137. Crom. 27. a. Dent's caſe.

As to the fourth inſtance of this kind, viz. ſuch killing as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, whereof the direct deſign was to eſcape from an arreſt, it ſeems to be agreed that whoever kills a ſheriff, or any of his officers, in the lawful execution of a civil proceſs, as on arreſting a perſon upon a capias, &c. is guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. 86. Dalt. cap. 93. H. P. C. 45. Crom. 24. a.

Neither is it any excuſe to ſuch a perſon, that the proceſs was erroneous, (for it is not void by being ſo,) or that the arreſt was in the night, or that the officer did not tell him for what cauſe he arreſted him, and out of what court, (which is not neceſſary when prevented by the party's reſiſtance); or that the the officer did not ſhew his warrant, which he is not bound to do at all, if he be a bailiff commonly known, nor without a demand, if he be a ſpecial one. 9 Co. 66, 68. Cro. Jac. 280, 486. 6 Co. 68. b. 69. a.

Yet the killing of an officer in ſome caſes will be manſlaughter only; as, where the warrant by which he acts gives him no authority to arreſt the party; as where a bailiff arreſts J. S. a baronet, who never was knighted, by force of a warrant to arreſt J. S. knight. 1 Hawk. 86. Cro. Car. 372. 1 Jon. 346. 12 Co. 49.

Where a good warrant is executed in an unlawful manner; as if a bailiff be killed in breaking open a door or window to arreſt a man; or perhaps if he arreſt one on a Sunday ſince 29 Car. 2. cap. 7. by which all ſuch arreſts are made unlawful. H. P. C. 46.

As to the fifth inſtance of this kind, viz. ſuch killing as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, whereof the principal purpoſe was to uſurp an illegal authority; it ſeems clear, that if perſons take upon them to put others to death, either by virtue of a new commiſſion wholly unknown to our laws, or by virtue of an unknown juriſdiction, which clearly extends not to caſes of this nature; as if the court of Common Pleas cauſe a man to be executed for treaſon or felony; or the Court Martial, in time of peace, put a man to death by the martial law, both the judges and officers are guilty of murder. 1 Haw. 86. H. P. C. 46.

But where perſons act by virtue of a commiſſion, which, if it were ſtrictly regular, would undoubtedly give them full authority, but happens to be defective only in ſome point of form, it ſeems that they are no way criminal.

As to the ſixth inſtance of this kind, viz. ſuch killing as happens in the execution of an unlawful action, where no miſchief was intended at all, it is ſaid, that if a perſon happen to occaſion the death of another, in doing any idle, wanton action, which cannot but be attended with the manifeſt danger of ſome other; as by riding with a horſe known to be uſed to kick among a multitude of people, by which he means no more than to divert himſelf by putting them into a fright, he is guilty of murder. 1 Hawk. 87.

Alſo it has been anciently holden, that if a perſon not duly authorized to be a phyſician or ſurgeon, undertake a cure, and the patient die under his hand, he is guilty of felony; but in as much as the books wherein this opinion is holden. were written before the ſtatute of 23 H. 8, c. 1. which firſt excluded ſuch felonious killing, as may be called wilful murder of malice prepenſe, from the benefit of clergy, it may be well queſtioned, whether ſuch killing ſhall be ſaid to be of malice prepenſe, within the intent of that ſtatute; however, it is certainly highly raſh and preſumptuous for unſkilful perſons to undertake matters of this nature; and indeed the law cannot be well too ſevere in this caſe, in order to deter ignorant people from endeavouring to get a livelihood by ſuch practice, which cannot be followed without the manifeſt hazard of the lives of thoſe who have to do with them: but ſurely the charitable endeavours of thoſe gentlemen who ſtudy to qualify themſelves to give advice of this kind, in order to aſſiſt their poor neighbours, can by no means deſerve ſo ſevere a conſtruction from their happening to fall into ſome miſtakes in their preſcriptions, from which the moſt learned and experienced cannot always be ſecure. 1 Haw. 87. S. P. C. 16. b. Pult. 32. b. Crom. 27. 43 Ed. 3. 33. b. Fitz. Coron. 163. See Dalt. cap. 93.

The principal in murder is ouſted of clergy in all caſes, and the acceſſary before is alſo ouſted of clergy in all caſes, but the acceſſary after is in no caſe ouſted of clergy. 2 Hale's H. 344.

By ſtat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 12. ſect. 13. All wilful killing by poiſoning of any perſon, ſhall be adjudged wilful murder of malice prepenſed.

Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 27. ſect. 2. If any woman be delivered of an iſſue, which being born alive ſhould be a baſtard, and ſhe endeavours privately, either by drowning, or ſecret burying thereof, or any other way, ſo to conceal the death thereof, as that it may not come to light whether it were born alive or not; the ſaid mother ſhall ſuffer death as in caſe of murder, except ſuch mother can make proof by one witneſs that the child was born dead.

Continued indefinitely by 3 Car. 1. cap. 4. and 16 Car. 1. cap. 4.

Stat. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 21. Where any perſon ſhall be feloniouſly ſtricken or poiſoned upon the ſea, or at any place out of England, and ſhall die of the ſame in England; or where any perſon ſhall be feloniouſly ſtricken or poiſoned within England, and ſhall die of ſuch ſtroke or poiſoning upon the ſea, or out of England, an indictment thereof found by jurors of the county in England, in which ſuch death, ſtroke or poiſoning ſhall happen, whether it be found before any coroner upon view of ſuch dead body, or before juſtices of peace, or other juſtices who ſhall have authority to inquire of murders, ſhall be as effectual, as well againſt the principals as the acceſſories, as if ſuch ſtroke or poiſoning and death, and the offence of ſuch acceſſories, had happened in the ſame county: and every ſuch offender ſhall have the like defences (except challenges for the hundred) as if ſuch ſtroke or poiſoning and death, and the like offence of ſuch acceſſories, had happened in the ſame county where ſuch indictment ſhall be found.

By ſtat. 25 Geo. 2. cap. 37. ſect. 1. All perſons found guilty of wilful murder, ſhall be executed according to law, on the day next but one after ſentence paſſed, unleſs the ſame happen to be Sunday, and in that caſe on the Monday following.

And by the ſame ſtatute a variety of other proviſions are made relative to perſons convicted of murder, unneceſſary here to particularize; therefore we refer to the act.

At a meeting of the judges to conſider of this act, there was ſome doubt whether hanging in chains might ever be made part of the ſentence; but on debate it was agreed by nine judges, that in all caſes within the act, the judgment for diſſecting and anatomizing only ſhould be part of the ſentence: and if it ſhould be thought adviſeable, the judge might afterwards direct the hanging in chains by ſpecial order to the ſheriff, purſuant to the power given by the act. Foſter's Crown Law 107.

Hominatio. Domeſday, tit. Northampton Sockmanni de Riſden,——Idcirco epiſcopus clamat Hominationem eorum. It ſignifies the muſtering of men; alſo the doing of homage. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Homine capto in Withernamium, Is a writ to take him that hath taken any bondman or woman, and led him out of the country, ſo that he or ſhe cannot be replevied according to law. Reg. Orig. fol. 79. See Withernam.

Homine Eligendo ad cuſtodiendam peciam ſigilli pro mercatoribus editi, Is a writ directed to a corporation, for the choice of a new perſon to keep one part of the ſeal appointed for ſtatutes merchant, when a former is dead, according to the ſtatute of Acton Burnel. Reg. Orig. 178

Homine replegiando, Is a writ to bail a man out of priſon: in what caſes it lies, ſee F. N. B. fol. 6. Reg. Orig. fol. 77.

It may not be improper to obſerve, that it lies where a perſon is in priſon, not by ſpecial commandment of the King, or his judges, or for any crime or cauſe irrepleviſable, directed to the ſheriff to cauſe him to be replevied: and if the ſheriff return on a homine replegiando, that the defendant hath eſloined the plaintiff's body, ſo that the cannot deliver him; then the plaintiff ſhall have a capias in withernam to take deſendant's body, and keep it quouſque, &c. And if the ſheriff return non eſt inventus on that writ againſt the body, the plaintiff ſhall have a capias againſt the defendant's goods, &c. F. N. B. 66. New Nat. Br. 151, 152. Where one man takes away ſecretly, or keeps in his cuſtody another man againſt his will, upon oath made thereof, and a petition to the Lord Chancellor, he will grant a writ of replegiari facias, with an alias and pluries, upon which the ſheriff returns an elongatus, and thereupon iſſues out a capias in withernam: and when the party is taken, the ſheriff cannot take bail for him; but the court where the writ is returnable may, if they think fit, grant a habeas corpus to the ſheriff to bring him into court and bail him, or remand him. 2 Lill. 23.

In a homine replegiando it hath been adjudged, that it doth not differ from a common replevin, on which the ſheriff muſt return a deliberari feci, or an excuſe why he doth not: that where he cannot make deliverance, if he return an elongatus, the defendant is not concluded by that return to plead non cepit; and after the return of an elongatus, and a capias in withernam, if the defendant pleads this plea, he ſhall be bailed, for the withernam is no execution: and after a defendant is bailed upon the capias in withernam, there may be a new withernam againſt him. 2 Salk. 381. And it was held, that in a homine replegiando after an elongatus returned, if the defendant comes in gratis, and calls for a declaration, and pleads non cepit, he ſhall not be obliged to give bail; but if he come in upon the return of the capias, he muſt give bail, and ſhall not be admitted to it till he call for a declaration, and plead non cepit. Ibid.

The ſheriff returned an elongavit in a homine replegiando, and then a capias in withernam went forth; afterwards the defendant, having entered an appearance, moved for a ſuperſedeas to the withernam, and offered to plead non cepit; which was oppoſed, unleſs he would give bail to deliver the perſon, in caſe the iſſue was found againſt him: though it was ruled, that if any property had been pleaded in the party, then the defendant ought to give bail to deliver him; but he ſays he hath not the perſon, and therefore non cepit is a proper plea, and he ſhall put in bail to appear de die in diem. 4 Mod. 183. In this caſe the defendant ſhall not be compelled to gage deliverance; and a ſuperſedeas was granted to the withernam. 5 W. & M.

A homine replegiando cannot be brought either by the wife herſelf, or by her prochein amy againſt her huſband; and the nature and proceedings in the writ ſhew it to be ſo. Paſch. 1718. Ch. Prec. 492.

This writ is now ſeldom uſed to deliver a perſon out of cuſtody, by having the cauſe enquired into, and bail accepted, cepted, if bailable, or the perſon diſcharged, without bail, if unlawfully impriſoned, it is uſual to ſue an habeas corpus, out of one of the courts of Weſtminſter, returnable in court, in term time, or before one of the judges in vacation.

Hoſpitality. The reader will not be diſpleaſed with the following extract from the learned Dr. Robertſon, on this ſubject.

Speaking of the middle ages, he ſays, "Among people whoſe manners are ſimple, and who are ſeldom "viſited by ſtrangers, hoſpitality is a virtue of the firſt "rank. This duty of hoſpitality was ſo neceſſary in that "ſtate of ſociety which took place during the middle "ages, that it was not conſidered as one of thoſe virtues "which men may practice or not, according to the temper of their minds, and the generoſity of their hearts. "Hoſpitality was enforced by ſtatutes, and thoſe who "neglected the duty were liable to puniſhment." The "laws of the Slavi ordained that the moveables of an inhoſpitable perſon ſhould be confiſcated and his houſe "burnt. They were even ſo ſolicitious for the entertainment of ſtrangers, that they permitted the landlord to "ſteal for the ſupport of his gueſt." Hiſt. Emp. Char. V. 1 V. 326.

Hoſpitallers, (Hoſpitalarii) Were the knights of a religious order, ſo called, becauſe they built an hoſpital at Jeruſalem, wherein pilgrims were received. To theſe Pope Clement the fifth transferred the templars, which order, by a council held at Vienne in France, he ſuppreſſed, for their many and great offences. The inſtitution of their order was firſt allowed by Pope Gelaſus the Second, anno 1118. and confirmed here by parliament, and had many privileges granted them, as immunities from payment of tithes, &c. Their privileges are reſerved to them by Magna Charta, cap. 37. and the right of the King's ſubjects vindicated from the uſurpation of their juriſdiction, by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 43. Their chief abode is now in Malta, an iſland given them by the Emperor Charles the Fifth, after they were driven from Rhodes by Solyman the Magnificent, Emperor of the Turks; and for that they are now called Knights of Malta. They are mentioned 13 Ed. 1. cap. 43. and 9 Hen. 3. c. 37. Tho. Walſingham in Hiſt. Ed. 2. and Stow's Annals, ibid. All the lands and goods of theſe knights here in England were given to the King, by 32 Hen. 8. c. 34. See Mon. Angl. 2 par. fol. 489.

Hoſpitals, are aggregate, in which the maſter, or warden and his brethren have the eſtate of inheritance; or ſole, in which the maſter, &c. only has the eſtate in him, and the brethren, or ſiſters, having college, and common ſeal in them, muſt conſent, or the maſter alone has the eſtate not having college, or common ſeal. Co. Lit. 342. a.

So hoſpitals are eligible, donative, or preſentative. Ibid.

The maſter of the hoſpital, who has college, and common ſeal, may have a writ of right; for the right, and inheritance is in him. If he has no college, or common ſeal, he may have a juris utrum. Co. Lit. 341. b. 342. a.

Any perſon ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee-ſimple may by deed inrolled in Chancery erect and found an hoſpital for the ſuſtenance and relief of the poor, to continue for ever; and place ſuch heads, &c. therein as he ſhall think fit: and ſuch hoſpital ſhall be incorporated, and ſubject to ſuch viſitors, &c. as the founder ſhall nominate; alſo ſuch corporations have power to take and purchaſe lands not exceeding 200 l. per Annum, ſo as the ſame be not holden of the King, &c. and to make leaſes for twenty-one years, reſerving the accuſtomed yearly rent: but no hoſpital is to be erected unleſs upon the foundation it be endowed with lands or hereditaments of the clear yearly value of 10 l. per Annum. Stat. 39 Eliz. cap. 5.

It has been adjudged upon this ſtatute, that if lands given to an hoſpital be at the time of the foundation or endowment of the yearly value of 200*l.* or under, and afterwards they become of greater value by good huſbandry, accidents, &c. they ſhall continue good to be enjoyed by the hoſpital, although they be above the yearly value of 200*l.* And goods and chattels (real or perſonal) may be taken of what value ſoever. 2 Inſt. 722. And if one give his land then worth 10 l. a year to maintain poor, &c. and the land after comes to be worth 100*l.* a year, it muſt all of it be employed to increaſe their maintenance, and none of it may be converted to private uſe. 8 Rep. 130.

If a deviſe be to the poor people maintained in the hoſpital of St. Laurence in Reading, &c. (where the mayor and burgeſſes capable to take in mortmain, do govern the hoſpital) albeit the poor, not being a corporation, are not capable by that name to take; yet the deviſe is good, and commiſſioners appointed to enquire into lands given to hoſpitals, &c. may order him that hath the land to aſſure it to the mayor and burgeſſes for the maintenance of the hoſpital. 43 Eliz. c. 4.

A gift muſt be to the poor, and not to the aged or impotent of ſuch a pariſh, without expreſſing their poverty; for poverty is the principal circumſtance to bring the gift within the ſtatute of 43 Eliz. c. 4. Although at Common law a corporation may be of an hoſpital, that is in poteſtate of certain perſons to be governors of the hoſpital and not of the perſons placed therein: the ſafeſt way upon the act 39 Eliz. c. 5. is firſt to prepare the hoſpital, and to place the poor therein, and to incorporate the perſons therein placed; and after the incorporation to convey the lands, tenements, &c. to the ſaid corporation, by bargain and ſale, or otherwiſe, between the founder of the one part, and the maſter and brethren, &c. of the other part, in conſideration of 5 s. in hand paid by the maſter of the ſaid hoſpital, &c. 2 Inſt. 724, 725. And the founder cannot erect an hoſpital for years, lives or any other limited time, but it muſt be for ever, according to the ſtat. 39 Eliz. c. 5. which ſtatute for erecting of hoſpitals is made perpetual by 21 Jac. 1. c. 1. See 10 Rep. 17, 34.

By 39 Eliz. c. 6. and 43 Eliz. c. 4. Commiſſions may be awarded to certain perſons to enquire of lands or goods given to hoſpitals; and the Lord Chancellor is empowered to iſſue commiſſions to commiſſioners for enquiring by a jury, of all grants, abuſes, breaches of truſt, &c. of lands given to charitable uſes, who may make orders and decrees concerning the ſame, and the due application thereof; and the commiſſioners are to decree, that recompence be made for fraud and breaches of truſt, &c. ſo as their orders and decrees be certified into the Chancery; and the Lord Chancellor ſhall take order for the execution of the ſaid judgments and decrees, and after certificate may examine into, annul, or alter them agreeable to equity, on juſt complaint: but this does not extend to lands given to any college or hall in the univerſities, &c. nor to any hoſpital over which ſpecial governors are appointed by the founders; and it ſhall not be prejudicial to the juriſdiction of the biſhop or ordinary, as to his power of inquiry into and reforming abuſes of hoſpitals, by virtue of the ſtat. 2 Hen. 5. c. 1, &c.

Theſe commiſſioners may order houſes to be repaired, by thoſe who receive the rents; ſee that the lands be let at the utmoſt rent; and on any tenant's committing waſte, by cutting down and ſale of timber, they may decree ſatisfaction, and that the leaſe ſhall be void. Hil. 11 Car. Where money is kept back, and not paid, or paid where it ſhould not, they have power to order the payment of it to the right uſe: and if money is detained in the hands of executors, &c. any great length of time, they may decree the money to be paid with damages for detaining it. Duke Read. 123. See 4 Rep. 104.

The hoſpital of St. Croſs near Wincheſter, and ſeveral other large hoſpitals, were anciently founded by particular ſtatutes, or acts of parliament. And King Charles the Firſt granted to the mayor and commonalty of London the keeping of Bethlem Hoſpital, and the manors and lands belonging to it. Chart. K. Char. 1. Alſo there is now an hoſpital in London for foundling children, under the care of governors and guardians, who may purchaſe lands or tenements to the value of 4000 l. a year: and they are to receive as many ſuch children, as they think fit, which may be brought to the hoſpital and ſhall there be bred up and employed, or placed apprentice to any trade, or the ſea ſervice, the males till the age of twenty-four, and the females till twenty-one. They may likewiſe be let out or hired, &c. 13 Geo. 2. cap. 29. Hotchpot, (In partem poſitio) Is a word brought from the Fr. hotchepot, uſed for a confuſed mingling of divers things together, and among the Dutch it ſignifies fleſh cut into pieces, and ſodden with herbs or roots; but by a metaphor it is a blending or mixing of lands given in marriage, with other lands in fee falling by deſcent: as if a man ſeiſed of thirty acres of land in fee, hath iſſue only two daughters, and he gives with one of them ten acres in marriage to the man that marries her; and dies ſeiſed of the other twenty acres: now ſhe that is thus married, to gain her ſhare of the reſt of the land, muſt put her part given in marriage in hotchpot, i. e. ſhe muſt refuſe to take the ſole profits thereof, and cauſe her land to be mingled with the other; ſo that an equal diviſion may be made of the whole between her and her ſiſter, as if none had been given to her; and thus for her ten acres ſhe ſhall have fifteen, otherwiſe her ſiſter will have the twenty acres of which her father died ſeiſed. Lit. 55. Co. Lit. lib. 3. cap. 12.

This ſeems to be a right of waiving a proviſion, made for a child in a man's life-time, at his death, though as it depends upon frank-marriage, and gifts of lands therein, it now ſeldom happens.

But there is a bringing of money into hotchpot, upon the clauſes and within the intent of the act of parliament for diſtribution of inteſtates eſtates, 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. ſtat. 2. Where a certain ſum is to be raiſed, and paid to a daughter for her portion, by a marriage ſettlement; this has been decreed to be an advancement by the father in his life-time, within the meaning of the ſtatute, though future and contingent; and if the daughter would have any further ſhare of her father's perſonal eſtate, ſhe muſt bring this money into hotchpot; and ſhall not have both the one and the other. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 253. See 2 Vern. 638.

By the cuſtom of London, there is likewiſe a term of hotchpot, where the children of a freeman are to have an equal ſhare of one third part of his perſonal eſtate, after his death. Preced. Canc. 3.

There is alſo in the Civil law collatio bonorum anſwerable to this, whereby if a child advanced by the father, do after his father's deceaſe challenge a child's part with the reſt he muſt caſt in all that he had formerly received, and then take out an equal ſhare with the others. Cowell. See farther Britton, c. 72. Lit. ſect. 267, 268. *Black. Several things have been reſolved on the ſubject, as to the protection a man's houſe affords him, as,

1. That every man's houſe is as his caſtle, as well to defend him againſt injuries as for his repoſe.

2. Upon recovery in any real action or ejectment, the ſheriff may break the houſe and deliver ſeiſin, &c. to the plaintiff, the writ being habere facias ſeiſinam or poſſeſſionem; and after judgment it is not the houſe of the defendant in right and judgment of law.

3. In all caſes, where the King is party, the ſheriff (if no door be open) may break the party's houſe to take him, or to execute other proceſs of the King, if he cannot otherwiſe enter; but he ought firſt to ſignify the cauſe of his coming, and requeſt the door to be opened; and this appears by the ſtatute Weſtm. 1. 17. which is only in affirmance of the Common law; and without default in the owner, the law will not ſuffer a houſe to be broken.

4. In all caſes, when the door is open, the ſheriff may enter and make execution at the ſuit of any ſubject, either of body or goods; but otherwiſe where the door is ſhut, there he cannot break it to execute proceſs at the ſuit of a ſubject.

5. Though a houſe is a caſtle for the owner himſelf and his family and his own goods, &c. yet it is no protection for a ſtranger flying thither, or the goods of ſuch an one, to prevent lawful execution; and therefore in ſuch caſe, after requeſt to enter, and denial, the ſheriff may break the houſe. 5 Rep. 91. a. to 93. a. Mich. 2 *Jac.
